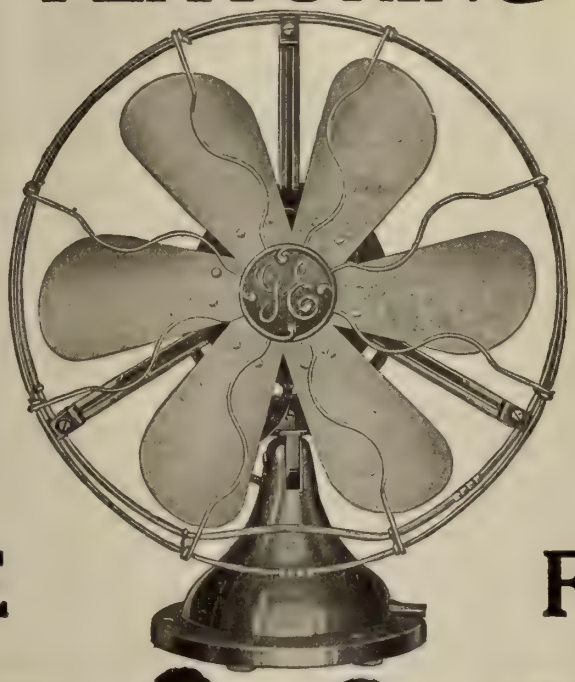
FEATURING



Air changed every minute

Coming—Cool waves on hot days

G-E Fans

Yes—G-E Fans are a big feature on hot days as far as box office receipts go. The cool house is the big house.

When buying Fans look for those with the G-E monogram in the center; there is over twenty years' experience in Fan Building behind it. Insist on G-E Fans—those that will be just as good five or six years hence as they are to-day—the quiet-running fans that need no more attention than oiling once a year.

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

THIS is one big opportunity for State Rights buyers. A great big smashing Broadway success—now offered for a genuine clean-up in a few remaining unsold states. A wonderfully daring play, done in a great, big daring way—sensational yet dignified, dealing plainly with the premeditated destruction of the unborn. Pronounced "Humanity's most powerful weapon against insidious crime." A marvelous production with a brilliant cast, headed by

TYRONE POWER

This super-picture created a sensation on Broadway. It was endorsed by Press and Public, and warmly recommended by Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, Superior Paulist Father John J. Hughes, the Rev. Thos. A. Daly and many other prominent clergymen, educators, physicians and others. Produced by

LOIS WEBER and PHILLIPS SMALLEY

it ranks highest among recent moving picture productions. State Rights are going fast. Territory already sold includes California, Arizona, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Florida, Texas, Arkansas, District of Columbia, Ohio, Washington, Illinois, Maryland, New Jersey, Delaware and Virginia. Wise buyers will speak quick. All communications given immediate attention in the order of their receipt. Direct all communications to the STATE RIGHTS DEPARTMENT of the

REEL AMMUNITION

UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

Vol. I WEDNESDAY, MAY 5, 1916 Nos. 5-6

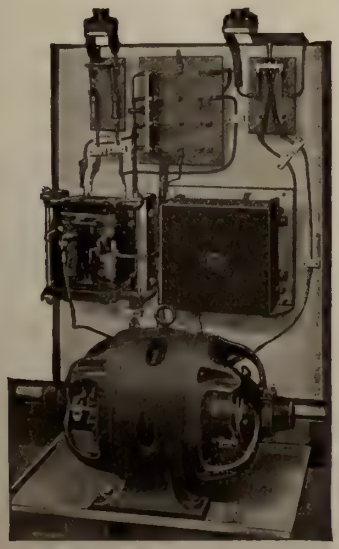
AN APOLOGY

To our many exhibitors who attended the Powers Theatre, Wednesday afternoon, at 2:00 P. M., to review the first episode of "Peg o' the Ring," the Universal all-star serial, the undersigned offers a humble apology for the numerous stops which were necessitated during the first reel. We feel mighty bad over it, even now after it is past, and beg the pardon of one and all who were compelled to look at a blank screen. For the injustice to all parties concerned, we wish to state these numerous stops were in no way caused through the fault of the films. Mr. Van Duzee, the general manager of the exposition, can explain very readily the whys and wherefores. Again we apologize and offer our regrets.

Editor-in-Chief

Everybody is having a good time at the Armory. The wise ones have booked Peg o' the Ring.

Richardson Says:



50 Ampere Wagner White Light Converter Equipment as installed in Theatre Booth

"The very foundation of the projection of pictures, either moving or otherwise, is light."

What kind of light are you using? Good films will never fill empty seats if they are badly projected. We want every theatre manager, owner, and operator to know what the WHITE LIGHT CONVERTER has done for others, and what it can do for them.

OUR FORESIGHT MEANT YOUR PROTECTION!!

Ten days after the outbreak of war we received the largest stock of French-made condensers ever shipped into this country

That's why we are able to offer you now

THE KLEINE WHITE LABEL CONDENSER

at before-war-time prices. Foreign factories formerly engaged in the manufacture of optical goods for the entire world now devote their sole energies to war merchandise for their own countries, thus making possible the distribution of inferior, cheaply made and costly-in-the-long-run-domestic substitutes.

KLEINE WHITE LABEL CONDENSERS are ground from pure optical glass. They do not discolor—no green, pink or purple effects after a brief use. They are the only satisfactory condensers on the American market today. If you are not using them you are not obtaining maximum results from your projection equipment.

PRICES:

Protect Your Audience

From a purely business viewpoint, you can make no better investment than to equip your theatre with J-M Fire Extinguishers.

It is sight evidence to your audience that you are using the best to protect them and their sense of safety is the best "call again" invitation you can use. It works right back to the box office.

When you choose a fire extinguisher be sure it includes all the features listed below.

Be sure it's a

J-M FIRE EXTINGUISHER

the most efficient fire fighter you can install.

Read This Feature List

1. A few seconds' easy pumping creates sufficient pressure to empty the contents.
2. Sealed at nozzle, which gives sight evidence that extinguisher is ready for instant action.
3. Carries a steady stream reaching 30 feet.
4. A non-conducting liquid that will extinguish film, electrical, gasoline or oil fires. Harmless to curtains, skin or fabric.

Labeled by the Underwriters' Laboratories and included in the list of approved fire appliances issued by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Install a J-M Extinguisher at accessible points ready for instant action.

Be sure to use J-M Liquid when you recharge your fire extinguisher. It is the only positive assurance of retaining the original efficiency of the J-M Fire Extinguisher. It is non-deteriorating. Sold in one quart cans.

RICHARDSON'S

MOTION PICTURE

HANDBOOK

Published by

THE CHALMERS

Publishing Co.

The third and latest edition of this valuable work has just come from the presses.

It is bigger, better, and more helpful than have been either of its predecessors by the same able author.

In daily touch with practical operators throughout the country by reason of his connection with THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, in which his PROJECTION DEPARTMENT is featured, Mr. Richardson is especially well qualified to deal with the problems which are constantly confronting the motion picture mechanics upon whose skill the industry depends so largely for its healthy growth.

RICHARDSON'S MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK is a carefully prepared guide to perfect projection.

It is an invaluable help to every single individual in the trade who has to do with the mechanical handling of motion picture film.

There are more than 400 Pages of Text and the illustrations—of which there are many—have been especially devised for this particular publication.

My Dream Has Come True

Years ago when the motion picture industry was a teething infant—

I dreamed about a factory where the supreme degree of film quality was the paramount issue.

We have such a factory, the new home of perfect developing and printing.

I dreamed about a studio, completely appointed, where perfect illumination secured maximum light values.

We have such a studio, and it will soon be available to you at reasonable rental rates.

I dreamed about the combination of such a factory with such a studio, so that one could completely serve the motion picture trade.

We will operate our studio in conjunction with our factory, thus securing the highest degree of efficiency.

I dreamed about an organization of film experts, men trained to the minute; scientifically managed—a capable, experienced, thinking unit, operated to efficiently and sufficiently serve.

We have the ideal organization—actively and completely at your service.

With guaranteed film quality and adequate studio facilities, we have everything to offer you. And, everything we have to offer is properly priced and honestly delivered.

Why Eve Ate the Apple!

When Eve plucked the fruit of the tree of knowledge, it wasn't because she particularly fancied the apple. She was driven by a soul consuming curiosity.

When the new born babe first reaches out for the moon, it is governed by the same primal instinct.

Curiosity was the fundamental law of life that impelled the first fish to flip its fins until it could soar the air and walk the land.

Its restless, irresistible demand drove man to explore the ends of the earth, to read the mysteries of the sky and sea and land. It has held him from the cradle to his last sleep, when he wonders of the mysteries beyond. It is responsible for science, for art, for civilization itself.

It is this appeal to the same fundamental element in human nature that swept the world off its feet when Conan Doyle's famous detective stories appeared.

William Gillette added to the fascination of Sherlock Holmes by creating a being that feels, that acts, that lives. Through his genius in dramatic art Essanay has produced a photoplay that throbs with the fire of action, that enthralls, as the mysteries of its plot unfold. It bears the stamp of the fundamental that carries universal appeal.

Sherlock Holmes, with William Gillette, is released in seven acts through V. L. S. E.

A Smashing Success Everywhere!

Unusual in theme—unusual and original in production—unusually strong in cast and written around the most unusual atmosphere ever used in a serial—that of the circus ring, the big top, the sawdust arena—fascinating to young and old alike—

"Peg O' The Ring"

is today the biggest and most successful serial ever produced. Produced on a scale more lavish than any other serial—filled with the genuine thrills of circus life, love and adventure—some daring—staged in under the canvas—presenting the highest class performers in real and regular circus acts—together with the most popular serial stars of the day—

A Quarter of a Million Dollar Attraction that Means 14 Weeks of Capacity Houses

PUTTING such a costly feature production extraordinary as the Famous DORSEY EXPEDITION PICTURES on the regular UNIVERSAL PROGRAM (at not one cent extra cost to regular Universal Program users), sets an entirely new and wonderful precedent in moving picture history.

Had any other film concern in the world presented such a colossal attraction as the famous DORSEY EXPEDITION PICTURES, they would yowl their heads off in advertising—hire a few extra press agents, boost it to the skies, and then ask exorbitant prices for the feature.

To be honest with you, any film concern would be justified in doing exactly what we describe, for no matter what price Exhibitors paid for the famous DORSEY Pictures, both Exhibitor and patrons would be getting their full money's worth.

The Latest and Greatest

in

"Pirates of The Air"

The comedy films supreme! That's the verdict of the fans. L-KO'S do not depend upon some alleged funny man's idea of clowning for their popularity. Funny and ridiculous situations are provided. Props that cost a fortune are placed at the disposal of the best comedy directors in the world.

Alice Howell has made a reputation for herself—found favor with the fans because not only is her every move a scream—but she has nerve and wit and cleverness that enable her to do stunts that would scare the average acrobatic comedian.

"Pirates of the Air" is PIE for Alice. She is in her element and in the centre of the stage where the fans want to see her all the time.

Up in the air on an airship—dropping from one aeroplane to another in midair; dropping bombs on the police patrol—sailing through space with an umbrella for a parachute—these are a few of the incidents that will pack your house and send your patrons away happy.

Don't forget the special paper ready for this great comedy. Don't forget to boost it for all you are worth. It will make one grand feature for a special comedy night. Don't forget that Alice Howell is featured and that this is a most extraordinary comedy. Wire or write for booking today.

P. S.—Don't forget that this is released on the regular Universal Program.

"The Three Godfathers"
The most wonderful outdoors picture ever produced from the great Saturday Evening Post Story by Peter B. Kyne. With a remarkably strong cast including
Harry D. Carey & Stella Razeto
Directed by Ed J. Le Saint.

GEORGE Horace Lorimer, noted editor of the Saturday Evening Post, says: "The Three Godfathers," by Peter B. Kyne, is one of the strongest, most human stories that ever appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

That's why it was adapted for the screen and produced as a BLUEBIRD Photoplay. The power of this appealing play leads you through every human emotion. It is a living expression of an unusual episode of human life.

It is a BLUEBIRD—it must be good.

BROADENING THE GAP

A photoplay is a combination of story, direction, acting and photography.

A perfect photoplay is a delicate synchronization—blending together—of these ingredients.

Sometimes in the telling of a good story photography is slighted; sometimes the acting fails to reach the heights of the direction.

Far and wide one producing firm has gained an enviable reputation for the sureness with which it builds together the delicate structure called a photoplay.

Lasky photoplays have been termed the "highest standard of photographic drama." The guarantee of Lasky on a photoplay is as consistently sound as the mechanical perfection of a timepiece marked, "Swiss movement."

Those responsible for Lasky leadership are not simply satisfied to lead, —the effort is to broaden the gap.

Chapter 4 A Whirlwind Production!

Beginning June 12th, these big Chapter Four scenes of "The Secret of the Submarine" will be shown—the plot of the spies in the bomb maker's house—the capture of Cleo and her imprisonment—Chatterton's struggle to save her—the destruction of the mysterious house and unknown fate of all inside.

CIAL FEATURE

TOUNDS!

"The Secret of the Submarine" is full of furious action— amazes with its stupendous surprises — swiftly runs the whole gamut of Intense Dramatic Situations, Desperate and Deadly Struggles, Sensational Thrills and Sudden Changes. Enormous attendances are following this serial — stampeding theatres at the showing of every chapter! There's the continuous effort of Lieut. Hope, Cleo, Mahlin, Olga and Morton to win the "secret" — all backed by powerful but conflicting influences. There's the intrigue constantly developing, the double mystery, the succession of smashing sensations that make the big crowds cheer!!

American Film Company, Inc., presents

Directed by George Sargent

The Film Novel of the Hour!

In Chapter Four the rapid fire of electrifying adventures fairly staggers the onlooker! Brilliant photography and great settings bring out with a big "punch" the bitter clash of the foreign spies and the Americans—climaxed with a tremendous bomb explosion! Thomas Chatterton and Juanita Hansen act with remarkable power — triumph constantly— show wonderful realism. These are supreme film scenes.

Powell's Novelization In Over 1000 Newspapers

Think of the enormous interest created by over one thousand newspapers now publishing serially E. Alexander Powell's great novelization of "The Secret of the Submarine"! Millions of people, reading the story, want to see the motion pictures. Powell's narrative is intensely interesting, bristles with exciting descriptions and thrilling adventures. Here are some of the leading newspapers running "The Secret of the Submarine:"

New York World, Philadelphia Inquirer, Baltimore American, Buffalo Courier, Pittsburgh Gazette Times, San Francisco Chronicle, Los Angeles Record, Indianapolis Star, Milwaukee Journal, Cleveland Leader, Dallas Journal, Omaha Bee

And 1,000 Others

Big Profits for Exhibitors!

"The Secret of the Submarine" means tremendous crowds at your theatre—continuous capacity—an over-worked cash drawer, with good money pouring in constantly. Every chapter is a tenstrike. There are fifteen two-act chapters in all—fifteen weeks of big business, of real money-making. This great serial is the motion picture triumph produced by men who made fortunes with "The Diamond From The Sky" and "The Girl and the Game"! Act today. Book this winner. Wire your reservation now—no obligation involved. Make the big crowds come!

WHAT THE CRITICS SAY OF

HER HUSBAND'S WIFE

AN IVAN PRODUCTION

WRITTEN AND DIRECTED BY IVAN ABRAMSON

EDWARD WEITZEL IN
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD (June 10th)

Familiarity with Mr. Abramson's work teaches that the writer of "Her Husband's Wife" deals only in serious dramatic material, preferably that which contains plenty of popular punch. His latest photoplay has several lively goes with the Seventh Commandment, and, incidentally, hits the spectator a wallop between the eyes, when the present Mrs. James Gates is introduced to the first Mrs. James Gates, and the fact is brought out that the two ladies are mother and daughter. Although floored, for the instant, by such a situation, one is bound to sit up and take notice by what follows. And the road to this dramatic knockout is not bathed in sunlight and strewn with roses. . . .

Food aplenty in such a story for moral reflection . . . On its artistic side, the picture has rapidity of action, clear-cut character drawing, and holds to the main thread of its plot with gratifying constancy. A well-balanced cast has been intrusted with the acting.

OSCAR COOPER IN MOTION PICTURE NEWS (June 10th)

This is an straight-out sex drama handled in Ivan Abramson's direct, frank and generally logical manner. Mr. Abramson is absolutely remorseless in his punishment of brutality, lust, dissipation and faithlessness. He succeeds also in making the action of his picture move at top speed, holding the interest throughout.

He has provided a thoroughly effective ending, wherein a vampire . . . is confronted with the fact that her own daughter married the man whom the vampire had divorced.

Mr. Abramson's direct methods also lead him to show the vampire in various stages . . . from the time when she posed in the altogether for her first lover . . . until she is lying dead . . . The scenes are nothing if not frank.

A cast headed by Sally Crute, as the vampire; Mignon Anderson, as the daughter, and Augustus Phillips as the chief husband, interprets the story, under Mr. Abramson's direction, and give uniformly good performances.

The settings, photography and lighting are fully up to the standard of other Ivan productions.

Facts and Comments

AN ESTEEMED contemporary speaks of the "impenetrable silence" maintained for a long time by the advocates of censorship within the ranks of the industry. If that admirable silence had been continued but a little longer the Smith-Hughes Bill might never have emerged from the committee which had it in its keeping.

AGAIN we commend to exhibitors throughout the country the splendid and highly constructive work done by the Ohio exhibitors under the leadership of Charles Megown of Cleveland. The Ohio exhibitors have succeeded in enlisting the co-operation of the women in their fight against legalized censorship. Women, well-intentioned and justly solicitous for the welfare of the child, have been used by designing politicians who are for censorship only because censorship means a fat job and glorious opportunity for "graft." Women are disposed to be fair and have often arrayed themselves on the side of the fanatics and politicians merely because they had never studied the other side. When properly informed their innate sense of fair play has generally led them to see the folly of legalized censorship.

A WELL-KNOWN British film man writes to THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD to let its readers know of the great evils of overproduction and over-importation in Great Britain. "Unless," he writes, "the releases are greatly reduced in England I can assure you the market will get into a deplorable condition before very long. As it is one can only book a picture in September and October, not before. The showman is getting pictures at his own price."

FILM men, meaning exhibitors as well as producers, are watching with great interest the many recent attempts to put ten and twelve reel pictures into the market in direct competition with the so-called legitimate attractions. Does the future of the motion picture lie along these lines? Does the production of huge lengths hold out the biggest profits both for producer and exhibitor? Many film men believe that these monster films are altogether exceptional and in the nature of things always must be. In no field is overproduction more fatal than in this field. These huge productions depend primarily, if not exclusively, upon the big theaters. Have we enough such theaters to absorb a quantity of these ten and twelve reelers?

WE NOTICE, not without alarm, the return of the Wild West drama with B'Gosh trimmings. Subtitles are appearing, couched in the supposed frontier dialect. We have noticed the recurrence of such old-timers as "Thar" and "Gal" and "Hoss." Is it time to prepare for the worst? Maybe the "Sheriff" and the "Half-breed" and the "Outlaw" are lurking in ambush Let's make our protest right now.

FROM time to time THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD is urged to say something hard about the many imitators it has. While we appreciate the good will of our correspondents we cannot get ourselves to share in their fervent indignation. Only the successful publication is imitated, the failures are unnoticed, unwept, unhonored and unsung.

THE Governor of Maryland has announced the appointment of the motion picture censors. Two of them are busy politicians and the third, a woman, is the relative of a prominent political appointee. The Maryland press seems to think that the appointees will be too busy to give much of their time to the censoring of motion pictures. Says the Baltimore "News": . . . "Such selections for the work (of censoring motion pictures) can be commended only upon the ground that a good many persons believe there is a lot of nonsense about the law and perhaps the less done under it the better for all concerned." The press of Maryland evidently views censorship as a species of folly. Rumor has it that the one man who expected to become a censor and who was responsible for the passage of the law has been left out in the cold. He is spending much of his time in studying examples of the irony of fate. May we suggest Dante's Purgatory as edifying and perhaps consoling literature on the subject?

An Eclipse of the Screen

By W. Stephen Bush.

IT IS a common observation among theatergoers and critics that there has not been a theatrical season in years offering such splendid and high-grade entertainment as is now enjoyed by the patrons of the speaking-stage in this city. There is wonderful variety, consisting of farce, of comedy, of drama, of Shakespearean classics, of problem plays, of musical productions and in small spots even of tolerable vaudeville. It cannot truthfully be said that the screen is parallelling this success just now. This uniform high quality on the speaking stage may be but a passing phenomenon and the eclipse of the motion picture may be but temporary. There is an awful temptation to moralize and to draw lessons, but we will resist it for the present at any rate. My present intention is rather to draw a happy inference from one of the most successful of the plays on the New York stage even at the risk of advertising that play without regard for the feelings of the advertising department. It's a case where the end must justify the means.

Now then, have you seen the play "Justice"? I will not describe it in detail; for my purpose it is enough to tell you that the play shows the utter folly and inhumanity of making a mental torture chamber out of a modern prison. The keystone of the play, the one scene on which its success depends, passes without a single spoken word. It portrays the rapid overturning of reason as a result of solitary confinement. It only lasts about five or six minutes, and we are hurried through the different stages, ranging from the prisoner's futile efforts to remain calm and self-possessed to the complete breaking up of his mental self-control. It is a wonderful exhibition, not of pantomime, but of the art of expression which scorns the use of words. I only wished some of the so-called high-brows who define motion picture acting as pantomime had been sitting alongside of me. There was soul behind this acting of the tortured prisoner. Compared to such histrionic skill of the highest order the pantomime is mere physical exercise. This brings up to the question of who the actor is. The answer is fraught with significance. It's a man who has done good work both for the speaking and the silent stage—John Barrymore. Great as are this man's natural gifts I doubt whether he could have done justice to the strongest scene in the play without his camera experience.

There is such a thing as screen drama, and it is drama in its strictest definition. It does seem, however, that the screen drama is not as yet fully developed, that it requires the services of the best and most gifted of minds, that it stands in need of specialization and that its rules and requirements and its rewards and its penalties are different from those of the speaking stage and wholly in a class by themselves.

Just at present we are passing through a peculiar period. All of us from the smallest exhibitor to the biggest producer feel that the artistic element in our industry is capable of far greater development than it has yet attained. I remember that the public in 1911 and in 1912 was ready for high-class efforts on the screen long before the producers and exhibitors themselves realized the fact. The public is always on the alert for the best, and the feeling that bigger things remain to be done in the realm of the screen drama is strong, however ill defined it may appear.

One of the most successful producers has said that we seem to have come to a standstill. There is a lot of revamping of old things, there is the ancient melodramatic material hashed up in new ways, but vim and originality, daring and the right kind of sensationalism are today conspicuously absent from the screen. Whatever the men in the other arts may do in the way of making a pillow out of their laurels there is no such relaxation possible in the motion picture art. It needs the sweat of the genius no less than the sweat of the brow.

The Chicago Convention

By W. Stephen Bush.

WHEREVER exhibitors meet the prediction is freely made that the coming national convention of the League will by far exceed any other ever held in point of numbers. No convention has ever aroused even a tithe of the interest displayed in the Chicago event. Many and varied are the factors which contribute to this result.

In the first place the spirit of organization has had an extraordinary revival in the exhibiting ranks. No one who has been without personal experience can even faintly understand the difficulty of getting exhibitors to unite and to act in a spirit of intelligent co-operation. The Moving Picture World has surely tried to do its proper share to promote a strong exhibitors' organization. The present revival of the organizing spirit no doubt is in some measure at least due to the constant urgings in these columns.

The Moving Picture World believes in exhibitors' organizations simply because, in its opinion, such organizations are helpful to the entire industry. They promote a spirit of individual and collective responsibility. They make or ought to make for better standards in taste and in ethics, for greater freedom of choice and for greater strength in fighting the enemies of the motion picture. Exhibitors' organizations can do wonders in opposing the wrong sort of men in their ranks, in insisting on better and more progressive methods of showmanship and in stimulating every kind of constructive endeavor. Next to the efforts of The Moving Picture World in keeping the light of organization bright and steady the most potent factor in reviving the spirit of organization has been the success which has attended organization. In more than one city organization has saved exhibitors from losses and from the black shadow of defeat. The question of a living price of admission has been solved both to the satisfaction of the exhibitor and the public.

The greatest and most compelling cause of the new spirit of organization, however, lies in the fact that our industry is undergoing profound changes and in consequence of these changes the exhibitors will find themselves obliged to meet new conditions and to rely far more than in the past upon their own initiative and upon their own abilities. In this country the exhibitor has never been called into the councils of the industry. There has not been, as in England and France, a film parliament in which the exhibitor has ever found adequate representation. Intuitively the exhibitors feel that they will be able to meet new conditions much better when united and animated by a common purpose. There are many difficult problems for the exhibitor to meet and he feels that he will be better able to meet them after he is thoroughly organized on a national basis. There is a good deal being said about a "Bureau of Information, Advice and Assistance" which is to be established by the organized exhibitor with headquarters in New York City.

We hope that the convention which will meet in Chicago on July 11th will not only be attended by a large and thoroughly representative gathering, but that its work will be productive of much practical good; that it will be both constructive and progressive, and above all things that it will aid to a sound self-sustaining financial basis.

Story Scarcity

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

REMARKABLE interview is that given by Jesse L. Lasky to a reporter of the New York Sun last week. A great weakness in motion picture production is freely disclosed, though many other producers have been shy about letting the truth be known, and there is a ring of sincerity about Mr. Lasky's utterances, clearly manifest throughout his argument, which entitles them to serious consideration. He is the first of the big producers to lay the present situation bare without the slightest attempt at disguise or concealment, and the only one to penetrate the Achilles Heel of the business at one shot.

After deploring our recent lack of progress in a new and beautiful art, he attempts to get at the cause. He can not find that it lays in a dearth of good screen interpreters. He lauds both those who have grown up in the art and those who have come to it with reputations established in a sister art. I am in strong accord with him, if his general meaning is that actors and actresses are not only responding splendidly to their opportunities, but that they often carry mediocre plays on their shoulders to a measure of success.

He speaks in high terms of men engaged in the scientific departments and appears to feel no uneasiness over the progress being made by scenic artists and art directors. He finds that directors are improving, are striving and doing their best with the material given them to visualize, and, after summing up, after eliminating those not responsible for this dull period in the new art, he asks, "Why is it not advancing? The answer is in Shakespeare's famous line," thereupon quoting it, "The play's the thing."

The Immortal Bard had a way of solving complicated problems in a manner so simple that we have come to quote him freely on many subjects without examining the depth of thought behind his plain statements. The play for him was a medium, just as the pictured story is a medium, and it requires no ability to fall in love with a medium of expressing something, especially when that medium is in itself fascinating as an art of expression. When genius has something to express through moving pictures, or through a stage play, the story itself ranks first, not its interpreters, not those who direct its movement.

"I'll have these players play something." "I'll have grounds more relative than this," says Shakespeare through the Prince of Denmark, following with "The play's the thing," the instrument through which he intends to entrap the conscience of a king. No one more profoundly realized that the player can only improve in measure to his opportunity. "What would he do had he the motive and the cue for passion that I have?" No one more profoundly realized that the player would do a thousand times better with a vital story than with a tragedy of Euripides, "What is Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba?"

Where are our vital stories for the screen, not the outworn "Hecubas" we are patching up and reflecting, but those suited to the new medium, to the place where we dwell, to the time in which we are living? "Our dramatists," says Mr. Lasky plainly, "novelists, scenarioists, are not delivering real plays, living, breathing, human-interest stories worthy of the name." They are, he declares, rarely worth the effort made to present them on the screen, an effort nobly made in many instances by capable interpreters and capable directors.

Mr. Lasky continues with a fearless statement:

"Therefore, I say the motion picture dramatic art is at a standstill as far as real progress is concerned on account of the poorly constructed, quickly conceived stories it is receiving from the majority of writers who are writing for the screen. If the motion picture drama is to progress and strengthen the marvelous hold it already has on the affections of the public as a form of amusement it will need better stories, far better stories than it has been receiving of late. The situation is critical."

The better class of exhibitors is in accord; the public is in accord—wherein lies the remedy? Mr. Lasky does not mince words in saying that the need for better plays is paramount. It is above all other considerations as regard to importance. As to how this need should be met I can only speak from the point of view of one who has written a large number of stories for the screen and without a dissenting voice among other authors I have met in our organizations and in private life.

The modern, up-to-date, working scenario, not a synopsis, but a complete expression of the author's idea through interpretive action, revelation and pictural effect, a plan so well devised and well revised as to enable the director to put it into working with system and economy on short notice calls for creative talent quite as high as that shown in the novel, or in the stage drama, and a craftsmanship so peculiar that it seems to discourage the very ones who are best equipped by nature and experience to master its difficulties. On the other hand, from authors not equipped by nature and experience to apply creative and constructive imagination to the scenario, producers may well look in vain for any improvement on what has been done.

By Mr. Lasky's own process of elimination we can not look for great improvement except through the author who has mastered the new craft, and he must be a veritable artist besides. From him must come the spiritual element of thought and passion, an awakening of new moods, or a stirring of fresh and vigorous train of ideas. He must be familiar enough with the routine of expert composition to know where he can most effectively begin his story, how he can prepare for a continuous adventure so as to give character to principals without losing interest, how to arouse curiosity so as to sustain attention during explanatory and preparatory scenes, how to hold expectation with gradually increasing intensity, how to avoid what is devoid of versimilitude, how to write a logical brief from beginning to end, and how to end with consistency and yet with some form of compensation which shall satisfy a mixed audience.

The producer is asking something of an author.

Not weeks, but months, are required to write a fine scenario. And while the author has carefully in mind all that makes for strength of structure and clarity of exposition, he must remember that his medium is one of picture effect. He must open a golden door to new and delightful fields at which the imagination has hitherto knocked in vain and reveal them through fascinating sweetness of suggestion. He must originate new problems and answer them himself in a plausible and convincing manner. To mirror man in his infinite variety, to understand the relation of Beauty and Truth, to grasp the ethical effect of art upon culture, to stir a mixed audience with views of a pulsing human heart a tormented human brain requires genius.

Women Oppose Censorship

Go on Record Against All Kinds of Political Meddling With Pictures—Ask for Children's Subjects.

By Betty Shannon.

AT THE closing meeting of its ten-day session in New York City last Thursday, the General Federation of Women's Clubs went on record as opposed to legal censorship and instituted a definite course of constructive action for the coming two years which will mean much for motion pictures for children. At this meeting, Miss Helen Varick Boswell, chairman of the Educational Department of the General Federation, read the report of the work of her own and the Civics and Drama divisions of the Federation during the session in behalf of the picture situation. The acceptance of her report on the part of the large body of 2,500 delegates from every section of the country and the thousands of visiting clubwomen gave the backing of the federated organizations to the sentiment expressed. Now, politicians will find no plea for Federal Censorship or of State Censorship in the statement that the mothers of the country want either. The mothers themselves, through their clubs, have expressed their disapproval of the political domination of picture control.

After the big motion picture conference held jointly by the Educational, Civics and Drama Committees on Saturday afternoon, May 27, at which Mary Gray Peck spoke for the women, John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, spoke for the producer and Orrin G. Cocks for the National Board of Review, the work of the committees was concentrated in daily smaller conferences. Mrs. Dexter Thurber of Bristol, R. I., a woman who has successfully worked out children's matinees in Providence, was appointed chairman of these meetings by Mrs. Charles W. Cartwright of Minneapolis, Minn., chairman of the Drama Department.

Women from many states came to discuss the making of a demand for better films, and especially a demand for children's films. On Wednesday a committee composed of Mrs. Thurber, Miss Genevieve Cline of Cleveland, O., Miss Louise Connolly, the educational expert of the Newark, N. J., Public Library; Miss Helen Duey of the Woman's Home Companion, and Miss Harriet Vittum of Chicago, Ill., were appointed to make a survey of the field which might be presented to the General Federation. The following report, which is the one given by Miss Boswell at the closing meeting of the session, is that survey:

Daily consultations under the direction of the departments of Civics, Education and a sub-committee on the Drama resulted in a most comprehensive survey of the motion picture situation from a national standpoint. A symposium of opinions has been gathered, not from theory, but from the actual experiences of workers engaged in studying and working out constructive methods. These findings developed that too much emphasis has been placed upon the evil side of motion pictures and demonstrated the necessity for a positive, constructive policy to minimize the harm and emphasize the good.

The consensus of opinion was that the motion picture must be recognized for the present as a commercial amusement rather than an educational or philanthropic medium.

That a reason for a national demand for better conditions is evident.

That this demand is based upon the peculiar danger to the adolescent of a large percentage of the films now being shown upon the screen.

That believing in the strength of concerted action and co-operation as opposed to antagonism, there is a great opportunity for a better understanding between the club women of the country and the motion picture producers as to the immediate needs of the boys and girls.

That a workable plan of procedure now in operation in many communities involves a special program for boys and girls; that this plan is being extended to include the family program.

That this play now operates through local groups working with their local exhibitors and exchanges involving the support of every club woman in the community.

That the development of the plan on a national scope necessitates a central committee to work directly with the producers.

In compliance with the suggestion in the above report that a permanent committee be appointed by the Federation to co-operate directly with motion picture producers in this movement whereby clubwomen hope to secure the sort of films they want their children to see, Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles of California, the incoming president of the Federation, and her board of directors appointed Mrs. Charles W. Cartwright of the Drama Department, Miss Helen Varick Boswell of the Educational Department, Mrs. George Zimmerman of the Civics Department, Miss Louise Connolly and Mrs. Dexter Thurber as a special committee on motion pictures from the General Federation to make a close and scientific view of the picture industry from every angle for the next two years and to bring the work of the women's clubs and the producers of motion pictures together.

Further evidence of the intense interest directed foward the motion picture by the great body of women is given in the resolution adopted by the board, which is known as resolution five, it being the fifth in all the number of important actions taken by the board. The resolution follows:

Inasmuch as the motion picture has become a potent and seemingly important factor in our national life, commercially, educationally and morally, and in accordance with the recommendations of our General Federation President adopted by this convention, be it resolved that the General Federation of Women's Clubs undertake a country-wide survey of motion picture entertainment and that it ask club women to form local censorship committees among themselves in the interest of motion picture entertainment; also be it resolved that the Board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs appoint a committee to co-operate with manufacturers of films to secure a higher moral standard of general productions and a larger supply of proper and appropriate films for children.

Although in its fifth resolution, the General Federation of Women's Clubs asks for local censorship boards, the word "censorship" in this case means constructive endeavor rather than destructive. It means practically the word "review," the leaders of the women's clubs being unanimous in their belief that better pictures can only be secured through an encouragement backed by box office receipts when good pictures are shown.

Perhaps the hottest and most keenly debated question which came up before the entire convention was that of motion pictures. Not only were motion picture conferences left to the regular meetings devoted only to them. A discussion which lasted for several hours followed the talk of Dr. Cranston Brenton, president of the National Board of Review, at the big Civics conference at the Hotel Astor on Monday afternoon, May 29.

Dr. Brenton expressed his great belief in the motion picture as educational, moral and entertainment power, and sketched the growth of the industry. He asked the women to realize their own responsibility in determining what the demand for motion pictures shall be. He told the history of the national board. He gave a history of the rise of this present unrest and demand for censorship, which comes from a desire to protect the adolescent child, and expressed his disapproval of legal censorship.

Dr. Brenton's views of censorship controlled by the state or nation roused a great storm of discussion from women all over the country, proving, eventually, that the majority of women do not favor this method of expressing public approval or disapproval of pictures.

On Tuesday at noon at the press luncheon given at the McAlpin Hotel, Bainbridge Colby appeared on the program. The Motion Picture Board of Trade entertained at one table.

On Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the upper drill room of the Seventh Regiment Armory, Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree's first motion picture, "Macbeth," was shown following a talk by Frank Lascelles, Pageantry Master of the Durbar in India, on "Pageantry." Sir Herbert himself appeared after the picture was shown.

On Thursday evening at 7 o'clock in the armory, Mr. Lascelles and Miss Helen Varick Boswell announced the organization of a national society for patrons of the motion pictures called "The Photoplay League," to which every one is asked to subscribe. The offices will be found in the Ritz Carlton Hotel in New York City.

The final meeting devoted to the motion picture art, was held on Saturday morning, June 3, at the Astor. Mrs. Charles W. Cartwright presided and had read again the report of the survey committee, which was given at the last meeting of the General Federation. The report was taken up clause by clause by various speakers.

The most illuminating talk, perhaps, was that given by Miss Louise Connolly of Newark, N. J., herself an expert on adolescent psychology, in explanation of the clause that the national demand for better pictures is based upon the peculiar danger to the adolescent child of a large percentage of the films now being displayed upon the screen.

Miss Connolly suggested that almost nothing is known by adults about the adolescent mind, the girls and boys of the years between eleven or twelve and eighteen being very well able to keep the real workings of their minds from those who attempt to pry into them.

"Up to ten or twelve years of age, the child pays little attention to adults or to the adult world in which he is eventually to live," said Miss Connolly. "With the beginning of adolescence they begin to notice the actions of adults, but they do not understand the 'whys,' the causal relations of things. They do not understand the world which is going to be theirs. They work up the relations between things slowly. In reading, they have to dig hard to learn these things. But a work of art, such as a motion picture play, suddenly puts things into their true relation before their eyes. The child is suddenly given a system. It is necessary for the child to focus all of its attention through its eyes on the screen. It is receiving many impressions through only one sense—that of sight. Therefore, the photoplay must be violently dramatic."

During the two years before the next biennial meeting of the Federation Miss Connolly will go deeply into the subject of the photoplay and the adolescent child.

Mrs. Dexter Thurber, Miss Genevieve Cline of Cleveland, Miss Helen Duey, Mr. Frank Lascelles, Mrs. Dessez and Mrs. Edith Dunham Foster of Boston appeared on the program.

"We feel that the Federation has made possible the following out of a plan which will make a great change for the better in motion pictures," said Mrs. Cartwright, chairman of the new committee at the close of the meeting Saturday. "There should be a well defined division, we feel, between motion pictures as a purely educational force, to be used in connection with the schools, and motion pictures as an amusement. We choose to focus our attention on them as an amusement. There is no doubt that they are the most tremendous entertaining power of the present generation. We feel that, since the children of the nation are being so perceptibly drawn to the picture and since their lives are being so surely affected by what they see, it is most important that they see things which will make them better citizens. That is why the mothers of the nation are so tremendously interested in the pictures.

"The producers who have kindly co-operated with us during the convention have made it clear that they are willing to give us what we will create a demand for. We want to get the women of the nation, not so much put their ban on the poor pictures as to put their seal of approval and concentrate their efforts on the good ones."

Miss Boswell and Mrs. Zimmerman, also on the new committee, were of the opinion that so new an art as the pictures needs time to reach its proper level.

Mrs. Thurber is especially interested in the children's program, and Miss Connolly will work along special lines of child psychology.

Colby Talks to Clubwomen

Lawyer Appeals for Their Support Against All Forms of Legalized Censorship.

BAINBRIDGE COLBY, who as the representative of William R. Hearst, has delivered telling arguments at Congressional and legislative censorship hearings, talked to 300 members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at a luncheon in the Hotel McAlpin on the afternoon of Memorial Day. Mr. Colby's subject was "Film Censorship." The speaker brought with him his best brand of oratory—doubly effective by reason of its simplicity, directness and clarity. He described the beginnings of censorship and told in forceful manner why it should not be extended to the motion picture. At the close of his speech, which was heartily applauded, he was thanked by Mrs. Thomas J. Vivian, the toastmistress, who also called attention to the fact that the floral table decorations were provided by the Motion Picture Board of Trade.

The luncheon was given by the local biennial press bureau to the press department of the General Federation. As guests of honor were Mrs. Grace Julian Clarke of Indianapolis, chairman of the national press department, and her associate chairman of the forty-nine State Federations.

"We recognize the fact that your attitude on the censorship question is based upon what you think is right," said Mr. Colby to his distinguished auditors. "We recognize that it is formed, that it will be formed, from such reflection and information as you can get. We are anxious to have the moral, the practical, the political, the personal reinforcement of your confidence and your support in positions that we deem to be right.

"This idea of censorship presents two very important aspects. One is the legal, the other the artistic. There are some remedies that are more injurious than the things said to be redressed by the remedies. Let me illustrate just what I mean. Some months ago a brokerage firm was convicted of a crime against the penal laws. The Supreme Court of the United States has just rendered a decision setting aside the conviction because the officers of the law allowed their zeal to outrun their discretion. While it was right to seize records and utilize them in the conviction the Supreme Court said the methods used by the officers of the law constituted a greater crime and menace to society than did the original crime.

"I cheerfully and frankly admit that there are some pictures shown on the screen that are a disgrace to our civilization, but the way to cure them is to score the evil. Ninety-nine per cent. of the business, however, is clean.

"I sincerely trust that I have said enough to kindle your interest, to turn your minds into serious channels on this subject," said Mr. Colby at the end of a twenty-minute address. "There are statutes in every state against indecencies or immoralities tending to corrupt morals. There has been but one complaint against a motion picture film in this city, and that was followed by prompt indictment and conviction. Anything you see that shocks your sense of right or decency or propriety you can bring to the attention of the prosecuting officer and it becomes his duty to investigate. Then the process is set in motion whereby no guilty man can escape. Let us see that the law against indecency and impropriety is exercised."

Maryland Censors Appointed

Governor Harrington's Choice Do Not Receive Popular Endorsement—Law Becomes Operative June 28.

GOVERNOR Harrington of Maryland has at last broken the suspense in regard to the appointments for the three members for the Motion Picture Censor Board. The names of the people who have been slated to fill the positions were given out on Monday night, May 29. The term of office is three years and the salary of each member of the board is $2,400 a year.

The following are the members of the board which became operative on June 28: William F. Stone, former Collector of the Port, who is a Republican leader in Baltimore. He will be the minority representative on the board. Mrs. Thomas P. Harrison of Baltimore, who is a sister-in-law of Attorney General Albert C. Ritchie. She will be classed as a Democrat. Charles E. Harper of Salisbury, and formerly Mayor of that town. He is also a Democrat.

While it is known that Mrs. Harrison's name was slated for this post several weeks ago, the Governor had a long list of names before him of those who wished to be named for the positions. Mr. Stone's appointment was a big surprise to all and in an editorial the Baltimore News says in part:

"The News would commend Mr. William F. Stone's selection for a good many positions of trust and importance. He is quite an efficient man. * * * But up to the present moment nothing Mr. Stone has done or left undone would suggest he was either fitted by training, experience and study or by natural predilection to be a censor of moving pictures.

"Somebody said in the course of the discussion of the censorship bill that properly to perform the duty would require all of a man's time. * * * If the duties of the position have not been misrepresented, we stand ready to wager. * * * that neither he nor his confrere from Salisbury is going to do the amount of censoring the law anticipates shall be done.

"Such selections for the work can be commended, therefore, only upon the ground that a good many persons believe there is a lot of nonsense about the law and perhaps the less done under it the better for all concerned."

EDISON REISSUES.

A number of reissues of pictures that made highly favorable impressions when they first were shown will be released by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., through the General Film Company, during June. They will be released at the rate of two each week, a three-reel drama each Tuesday and a single-reel or two split-reel subjects each Wednesday. Notable among the Edison June releases are "The Stoning" and "The Southerners," plays that made such decided hits when first released that repeated requests for reissues have been made.

The schedule of reissues for June is as follows: Tuesday, June 6, "The Stoning," drama, 3,000 feet; Wednesday, June 7, "Love's Labor Lost," cartoon, and "Camping With the Blackfeet," scenic; Tuesday, June 13, "The Man in the Street," drama, 3,000 feet; Wednesday, June 14, "The Charge of the Light Brigade," 1,000 feet; Tuesday, June 20, "Out of the Ruins" drama, 3,000 feet; Wednesday, June 21, "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," juvenile, 1,000 feet; Tuesday, June 27, "The Southerners," drama, 3,000 feet.

IMPERSONATED FORD STERLING—"PINCHED."

A man who represented himself to be Ford Sterling, the well known Triangle player, was arrested in Charlotte, N. C., on the complaint of several merchants who had lent the man money on his representations and then became suspicious of him. The man finally admitted that his name was Richard Sterling and he was not the popular screen favorite who, at the time the stranger was collecting on the strength of his name, was working daily in the studio at Los Angeles.

Censors Get Setback

Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas Reverses Ruling as "Arbitrary and Oppressive."

FOLLOWING closely upon the order of the highest courts of Pennsylvania prohibiting the lower courts from overruling the decisions of the State Board of Censors, unless such decisions were clearly an abuse of discretion—in other words, unless these decisions were such with which no reasonable man could concur—the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas No. 4 last week handed down a ruling reversing the action of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors in demanding a series of eliminations in the Lubin-V-L-S-E feature, "Dollars and the Woman."

The opinion is regarded in film circles generally as a most important victory not only for the Lubin and V-L-S-E companies, but for moving picture interests as a whole, because it offers the first hope of any restraint upon the actions of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors, since the ruling of the Supreme Court, giving them seemingly unlimited power, went into effect. Ever since that decision was handed down, the interests of the film industry in Pennsylvania have been hopelessly submerged under the high-handed oppression and apparently uncheckable domination of the state censors.

As bad as conditions were prior to the bestowal of this added power upon the Pennsylvania Board of Censors, they immediately partook of a despotism as imperious as that of any which it is possible to conceive; for, by the ruling of the Supreme Court, the film interests were seemingly completely deprived of obtaining any justice from the lower courts, if there was any room for belief that any reasonable man might agree with the findings of the censors. This meant that whether the lower courts agreed with the findings or whether they didn't, if they had reason to think that some sane member of the community might find reason in the action of the Board of Censors, they were powerless to alter that action. Pictures were slashed right and left, and there began in the state a perfect orgy of censorship from which, by reason of the conditions imposed by the higher courts, there seemed no relief for the moving picture manufacturer.

In the decision, which is a sweeping condemnation of the censors and a most complete vindication of this production, the court holds that the board "abused its discretion and acted arbitrarily and oppressively." The opinion of the court in full, which is important as a precedent in other appeals of like nature, follows:

The Lubin Manufacturing Company has prepared for the purpose of sale and public exhibition, by means of the cinematograph, a series of pictures presenting the scenes of a drama known as "Dollars and the Woman." In obedience to the act of May 15, 1915, P. L. 534, these pictures were submitted for censorship to the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors. Upon examination by it, they were condemned. A re-examination by two members of the board resulted in their being approved conditionally. The condition on which this approval is predicated is that certain scenes and certain so-called subtitles explanatory of the progress of the plot of the play shall be cut out and that certain other subtitles suggested by the censors shall be introduced on the films that contain the pictures. Unless that condition is complied with, the whole series is condemned as tending, in the judgment of the board, to debase or corrupt morals. The matter comes before the court upon the appeal of the manufacturer from this action of the censors.

Except in certain cases, enumerated in the act above referred to, it is the duty of the Board of Censors to examine all moving picture films, reels or stereopticon views intended to be exhibited or used in this state and to disapprove such as are sacriligious, obscene, indecent or immoral and such as tend in the judgment of the board to debase or corrupt morals. They are required to set forth in their records the ground of their condemnation in cases where their approval is withheld. It is unlawful to dispose of, exhibit or use any motion picture film or reel which has not been approved by the board.

The Court's jurisdiction in such matters rests on the grant by Section 26 of the act of May 15, 1915, to such parties as may submit films to the censors and be aggrieved by the order of that body of the right of appeal from the decision of the Board to the Court of Common Pleas of the proper county.

It was settled by the decision of the Supreme Court in the matter of the Appeal of the Franklin Film Manufacturing Company, not yet reported, that the power of the Court of Common Pleas extends only to the correction of such orders made by the Board of Censors as may be arbitrary or oppressive. The Court may reverse the action of the Censors when they have been guilty of an abuse of the discretion vested in them by law, but not merely because it differs with their views upon questions of taste or even because it regards the objections raised by the Censors to the pictures disapproved as "minute and far fetched" or "without merit." The proper subject of inquiry in this case, therefore, is whether or not the Censors in insisting on changes in the appellant's cinematograph representation of "Dollars and the Woman" have abused their discretion and authority.

By discretion is meant the power to discriminate and determine what, under existing circumstances, is right and proper. The lawful exercise of discretion involves a fair consideration of all peculiar features of the particular question to the disposition of which is to be applied. It excludes not only the play of fancy or caprice, but also servile adherence to a hard and fast general rule.

At the hearing of the appeal every possible effort was made to reach a solution of the question it involves by means of the ordinary methods of proof. These, however, were inadequate, and in order to comprehend the matter before them, the members of the court, with the consent of both parties to the controversy, personally viewed, at the factory of the appellant, an exhibition of the pictures upon which the Censors had passed. This course finds its warrant in the opinion of the Supreme Court, per Von Moschzisker, J., in the case above mentioned.

The argument of the play reproduced in this series of pictures is given by the appellant in its application for their examination by the Censors in the following words:

"Description."

Madge Hilyer borrows $250 from Crewe, a former lover, in order that her husband may proceed West to sell a smelting device. His plans fail and he becomes porter in a hotel. A child is born to Madge, and the hospital expenses are secretly paid by Crewe. When Hilyer returns home successful and discovers this, he decides to leave her. But they become reconciled through baby love and explanation of Crewe's true relations.

This summary outlines the story of the play in the most general manner and fails to give an adequate or just idea of the plot or the method of its treatment. It is referred to, however, as in some degree explanatory of the criticisms of the board. It may not be amiss to observe in passing that in the opinion of the Court, an inspection of these pictures cannot fail to convince any unbiased mind of the purity of the underlying motive of the story that they illustrate and satisfy it that the tender pathos of the plot absolutely precludes the impressions and suggestions imputed by the Censors to the features that they have condemned.

The requirements imposed by the Censors as a condition precedent to their approval of the appellant's pictures are expressed by them as follows:

No. 1. A—Eliminate subtitle "Soon it must be enough for three."
No. 2. A—Eliminate scene showing thief cutting handbag from woman's arm. This means that view of shears, etc., is to be entirely removed.
No. 3. B—Eliminate subtitle "Myself."
No. 4. C—Eliminate subtitle "Could you not leave me even my memories?
No. 5. D—Eliminate subtitle "Only a beast could think I meant such a thing," etc.
No. 6. E—Eliminate subtitle "I'll never forgive your insult."
No. 7. F—Eliminate subtitle "Shame."
No. 8. G—Eliminate subtitle "Telephone the Mother's Hospital for an ambulance."
No. 9. H—Insert subtitle to indicate reason for woman's fall to floor is other than approaching maternity.
No. 10. A—Eliminate all views of woman with baby and of baby in hospital, also as they come from hospital, in street car and in home.
No 11. B—Eliminate telegram "You have a twelve pound boy, etc.
No. 12—Insert subtitle when baby appears in this reel in mother's arms to indicate its birth.
No. 13. A—Eliminate subtitle "Men of Crewe's type don't spend money on a woman unless——"
No. 14. B—Eliminate subtitle "Unless she pays."

The appellant is willing to comply with the wishes of the Board as embodied in the second requirement above set forth. So far as the appeal relates thereto, it is withdrawn.

The reasons advanced by the Censors in support of the remaining criticisms of the pictures are as follows:

(a) That some of the pictures "exhibit the process of human reproduction."
(b) That others "exhibit the processes of a lying-in hospital."
(c) That "the wife is shown for the distance of 1,000 feet in a state of pregnancy."
(d) That the wife in shown in travail.
(e) That certain subtitles indicate that the woman is in a pregnant condition.
(f) That certain subtitles indicate that an improper proposal has been made to her.
(g) That the pictures "break down every barrier that exists between boys and girls."
(h) That they "show the private relationships of a family."
(i) That the accusation that the wife's hospital bills were paid by an outsider suggests an immoral idea.

With respect to reasons (a), (b), (c), (d), (g) and (h) it suffices to say that none of these objections in the sense in which they are pressed have any foundation whatever in fact. The other objections relate to scenes or titles which when taken with their context appear to the Court to have no immoral bearing or corrupting effect.

Although this was specifically denied from the witness stand by one of the censors, a careful study of the testimony aided by a personal view of the pictures under discussion has convinced the Court that in condemning the features whose elimination from them has been directed the Board acted on the theory that all references to such matters as motherhood, birth or the sex relations between man and woman are necessarily productive of lewd and evil thoughts, and that any reference to "things not usually spoken of with great freedom" is debasing and will probably conduce to immorality. Such a proposition is, of course, altogether too broad. Its adoption as the basis of a hard and fast rule of condemnation is manifestly unreasonable and absurd. In applying a rule so established to the scenes and subtitles whose elimination the Censors have ordered in this case the Board palpably erred.

Upon the whole evidence before it the Court is of the opinion (and so finds) that in deciding the questions indicated by its elimination requirements (excepting the second) the Board abused its discretion and acted arbitrarily and oppressively. For this reason, the appeal (so far as it has not been withdrawn) is sustained; and the order of the Board of Censors, so far as it involves the condemnation or disapproval of the moving picture films above-mentioned for default of compliance with any of its requirements except the second is reversed.

E. W. SWEIGERT, BRIDEGROOM.

E. W. Sweigert, Exchange Manager of the International Film Service, Inc., at Philadelphia, dropped into the main office on Saturday and announced his forthcoming marriage to Miss Majorie E. Hall, also of the Quaker City. June 7th is the date set for Mr. Sweigert's benedictine debut.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

CENSORSHIP TO FORE IN CHICAGO.

It Will Be One of the Most Important Subjects Discussed at Coming Convention—Notable Picture Stars to Be at the Exposition.

THE National Convention of the M. P. E. L. of America, held in Chicago, 1912, at the La Salle Hotel, was attended by 300 delegates. At the coming National Exposition and Convention, to be held at the Coliseum from July 10 to 18, it is expected over 1,000 exhibitors will be present. Some of these will come from far-off Australia and the Philippines, and also from Alaska.

A daily program will be the rule at the exposition at the Coliseum and many special events have been arranged for, including the appearance of notable moving picture stars. The names of several of these will create a sensation when they are announced.

The exposition committee announces that space is selling fast and that the Coliseum will present a magnificent appearance on the opening night, July 12. The date of the opening of the national exposition must not be confounded with the date of the opening of the national convention; the latter opens July 10 and the former on July 12.

Censorship will be one of the most important subjects discussed at the coming convention. Already this theme has been debated at meetings of exhibitors all over the country, and a resolution embodying the consensus of opinion of the exhibitors of the United States and Canada cannot fail, after its passage, to have great weight with the people generally.

Harry Hyman, an active member of the press, entertainment and exposition committee, recently attended the Elks' States Convention at Danville, Ill., and he did some good work on the side while there in the interest of the coming exposition and convention. He visited the owners of the Central theater, the Fisher, Lyric, Habit, Colonial, Olympic and Majestic, and presented each with a handsome colored slide, with the request that it be shown on their screens up until the time of the convention and exposition. These slides are being distributed throughout the entire country, and exhibitors everywhere are requested to show them and aid in advertising the big event.

The Chicago hotels are already preparing to handle a great number of visitors during the period of the exposition and convention. Sam Spedon, Vitagraph's popular representative, will be in charge of the official special convention train from New York. It is reported Mr. Spedon will have his hands full in taking care of the reservations. It is his intention to pick up as many exhibitors on the way as is possible, and, if conditions warrant it, he will put on another section to take care of the overflow.

KEYSTONE EXHIBITORS ELECT OFFICERS.

Also Further Arrangements for Annual State Convention and Exposition, Beginning June 26.

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, Inc., held its election of officers and directors for the ensuing year at its regular meeting June 1 in the League headquarters, Penn avenue and Ninth street, Pittsburgh. The meeting was well attended and many matters of importance were taken up, including the rounding out of plans for the coming Pennsylvania State Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America in this city. The retiring president, G. W. Sahner, acted as chairman.

The result of the election was: President, A. J. Barthell; vice president, Fred N. Smith; secretary, James Delves; treasurer, I. W. Shearer; board of directors, I. W. Shearer, James Delves, A. J. Barthell, Frederick J. Herrington, G. W. Sahner, Sol Oppenheimer, Christ Vollmer, Henry Polk and Oliver McKee. The yearly report of the treasurer was submitted, and the figures showed the financial affairs of the League to be in satisfactory shape.

The local committee on arrangements, of which G. W. Sahner is chairman, for the annual state convention and exposition, to be held in the Moose Temple, Pittsburgh, on June 26, 27 and 28, reported all details being rapidly completed, and that indications are it will be the largest and most successful gathering in the history of the organization. Secretary Delves stated that nearly all of the exhibit space, comprising about 6,000 feet, has already been contracted for. He read letters from Cleveland, Youngstown, Wheeling, and other cities in neighboring states, assuring him of delegations to the convention from those sections.

As a special feature of the gathering the League has taken advantage of the Moving Picture World's tour of F. H. Richardson to have him speak here on the last day of the convention, June 28, on the subject of projection. Negotiations are under way with the manufacturers and the Motion Picture Board of Trade for several leading stars to be present at the convention. On June 11 National President Herrington and Secretary Delves expect to leave for New York City, where they will remain about a week, and expect to attend the luncheon to be given by the Board of Trade at Delmonico's June 16.

IOWA EXHIBITORS MEET.

Children's Matinee Endorsed—Officers Elected and Delegates Chosen for Chicago Convention.

SPECIAL matinees, one afternoon a week, for children were endorsed at the fourth annual convention of League of Motion Picture Exhibitors, held at the Auditorium, Des Moines, Ia., May 23-24. In working out the plan in Des Moines the members of the Des Moines Screen Club will co-operate with the mothers' clubs in selecting programs. Mrs. A. W. Brett and Mrs. Hewitt of Des Moines appeared before the meeting to urge these special shows.

A. H. Blank of the Garden theater of Des Moines was elected president of the league. Other officers chosen were: First Vice-president, W. D. Ingledue, Marshalltown; second vice-president, H. De Baggio, Colfax; secretary-treasurer, J. C. Collins, Des Moines; executive committee, A. Frankel, Casino theater, Des Moines; J. H. Heffner, Mason City, and A. J. Diebold.

Retiring President Diebold was elected national vice-president from Iowa.

Delegates to the national convention in July at Chicago will be Abe Frankel of Des Moines, Fred Yount of Dubuque, W. D. Ingledue of Marshalltown, Thomas A. Brown of Iowa City, J. E. Bryant of Waterloo, J. M. Heffner of Mason City, N. J. Cook of Walcott, F. B. Lemon of Newton and S. E. Greenbaum of Davenport.

The social feature of the convention was the ball given at the Auditorium by the Des Moines Screen Club.

CHANGES IN THE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE.

The Theater Managers and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of St. Louis has again established headquarters at Room 312, Benoist Building, the offices that were used when the organization was first effected. The meetings were held at the Majestic Theater at Tenth and Franklin avenues for a few months, but it was decided that the Benoist Building was a better location, and the headquaraters were moved back there. Things are flourishing with the association, and a much larger attendance is reported at the meetings.

At a recent election an entirely new board of officers were installed. John Gentner, one of the original movers for an exhibitors' league, and the first president of the body, is again its executive. D. T. Williams, of the Ashland theater, is financial secretary. Joe Mogler, of the Mogler theater and airdrome at Ninth and Bremen avenue, is treasurer. All of the old officers are on the executive board, harmony prevails, and much good is being done for the upbuilding of the organization.

BROOKLYN EXHIBITORS MEET.

Lee A. Ochs Indorsed for Presidency of the National Organization.

THE Associated Exhibitors of Brooklyn held an important meeting on the night of Thursday, June 1, in its usual gathering place, the Triangle theater. The meeting, which was presided over by President M. J. Manheimer, was exceptionally well attended. One of the invited guests was State President Lee A. Ochs, who issued the charter to the organization. A committee was appointed to take up the question of the high prices for electricity with the Public Service Commission. The following men were elected as delegates to the National Convention at Chicago: M. J. Manheimer, Benjamin Title, Louis Levine and William Brandt.

Upon Mr. Title's motion it was unanimously resolved to indorse the candidacy of Lee A. Ochs for National President. Mr. Ochs was heartily commended by several speakers, who called attention to the great services he had rendered to the cause of organization in the city and state of New York.

Two committees were appointed with power to take up certain grievances with two large film corporations.

A number of committees reported on the co-operative plan of purchasing material and booking. A considerable amount of money will be saved by the co-operative purchase plan.

Horsley Productions

Two Noteworthy Subjects Scheduled for the Week of June 24.

A PLAY within a play, highly dramatic, yet with sufficient comedy running through it to satisfy the most fastidious, produced by a capable and well-balanced cast headed by the eminent star, Crane Wilbur, will be notable among the Horsley-Mutual releases for the week of June 24, as a five-reel Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, is "The Wasted Years."

Mr. Wilbur, who is also the author of this play, is seen in an entirely different role than in previous Horsley productions, in the character of an aged being, which gives him ample scope for the utilization of his dramatic talent. Such is his character as he watches the play of "Youth," to look back over the years he has wasted.

On the other hand he is also seen as a young and innocent country youth who falls heir to considerable wealth and casting aside the simple and quiet life of the village of his boyhood, enters a life of romance and adventure to fall victim to a woman of the world.

Mae Gaston, who has been seen in numerous productions from the Horsley studios, is once more the leading feminine support of Mr. Wilbur, and it is said that in the role of a dainty "flower" of the country, she has added more laurels to her name.

Jessie Burnett, a new addition to the Wilbur company shoulders the character of the "worldly woman" and John Oaker, the dashing young juvenile, departs from his usual line to work opposite Miss Burnett, as one of the chief tools to be instrumental in the downfall of the youth.

Three youngsters are also in the supporting cast, they being Thelma Salter, Thelma Burns and George Harris. Little Miss Salter is one of the best known child actresses of the silent drama and her work in "The Wasted Years" is said to be excellent.

Others who are prominent throughout the five reels are Joseph Hazelton, who has established a reputation for his character acting, and M. D. Moran, who is familiar to theatergoers. Many elaborate scenes are included in this drama which was staged under the direction of Robert B. Broad well. June 22 is the release date.

"Jerry's Elopement," a one-reel Cub Comedy, starring George Ovey in his famous character of Jerry, will be the second Horsley production released by Mutual the same week.

Director Milton H. Fahrney has provided Ovey with a rather different vehicle in this release, many of the very laughable situations being new to the screen. For the first time in many moons Jerry at last comes out on top, but only after traveling a very rocky road.

The entire strength of the Cub Comedy supports Mr. Ovey, the greater amount of the action falling to Miss Claire Alexander, George George, Louis FitzRoy and Janet Sully. Others in the cast are Jefferson Osborne, Ray Lincoln Robert Kenyon, Joseph NonMeter, Harry Jackson and Arthur Mund.

The wind-up of Horsley-Mutuals for the last week of June is a thrilling and picturesque Centaur feature, "A Siren of the Jungle," from the pen of Theodosia Harris and is an excellent vehicle for the co-stars, Margaret Gibson and William Clifford.

According to advance word this is the best picture in which the famous Bostock animals have been utilized, and work is said to be spectacular.

Miss Gibson portrays a rather different role than heretofore and the same is said of Mr. Clifford. The supporting cast is a strong one with such well-known players as Frederick Montague, Harris Ingraham and Claude Lampman Director Charles Swickard supervised the filming of the production.

What is a Picture Machine

According to the High Court of the United States Customs Department It's a "Lens Mounting and Frame."

THE status of moving picture machines was fixed June 1 when the United States Court of Customs Appeals reached the conclusion that, in the absence of any specific provision in the law for such articles, they became dutiable at 25 per cent. under paragraph 94 as "frames and mountings for projection lenses."

While the American Express Company appeared as the protestant of record, it was understood that the actual importers were Pathe Freres, of this city and Paris, the merchandise in controversy being described on the invoices as "Pathescopes." Collector Malone held that the machines were dutiable at 30 per cent. as "frames for optical instruments." This view was not approved by the Board of General Appraisers, which reversed the Collector and ordered the "movies" admitted at the 25 per cent. rate. The Government then appealed to the court.

The importers, in addition to the claim under the projection lenses' paragraph, raised the point that the articles might come under the manufactured metal article provision calling for a custom tax of 20 per cent., but neither the board nor the court considered this claim.

Ella Hall a Bluebird

FOR a long time Ella Hall has been appearing in all sorts of roles and whether she has been a little boy, a blushing bride, a tiny girl or just a hoydenish engenue, she has increased her following with her every appearance on the screen. Since the Bluebird program was introduced the first of the year, Miss Hall has been steadily enhancing her value not alone to her employers, but to herself—and now she has reached the coveted place of screen stardom which she so justly merits.

Ella Hall.

In "Secret Love," she actually divided the honors with Helen Ware, who was the star. Miss Hall's role gained such prominence in the criticisms of the early Bluebird, not alone from the trade press, but from critics of the daily papers wherever the feature was shown, that General Manager M. H. Hoffman decided that it would be well to build a new star with the new series of features. So it was in "The Crippled Hand" she was given a half taste of stardom, dividing the honors with Bob Leonard.

Now comes the announcement that she will take her place as a lone star on the Bluebird program, with regular appearances in pieces suited to her style. In "Ambrosia," to be released July 10, Miss Hall will have a role that is sure to bring her into immediate popularity with devotees of Bluebirds, and arrangements have been made for other plays that will further increase her vogue with the public.

"That Universal Program"

A Red Feather Five Reel Drama is the Big Feature of Week of June 12—Other Good Numbers.

THE outstanding feature of the Universal program for the week of June 12 is the five-reel Red Feather photoplay "What Love Can Do," in which Adele Farrington plays the principal role, that of a successful author who is determined to live her life as she sees fit regardless of the conventions of society. On the same day, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Betty Compson cavort about in the Nestor comedy, "Their Awful Predicament."

On Tuesday, June 13, J. Warren Kerrigan is the feature in the Gold Seal three-reel mountain drama, "The Melody of Love," in which Nell Shipman also appears. The Imp comedy, "Her Wonderful Secret" with Harry Benham and Edith Roberts is released on the same day.

"How Stars Are Made," a two-reel L-KO comedy leads off the program on June 14 with Alice Howard and Ray Griffith supplying the fun. Number 24 of the Universal Animated Weekly is followed by Cleo Madison in the Rex drama, "When the Wolf Howls," in which she is supported by William Mong.

On June 15 the feature of the day will be the Laemmle two-reel society drama, "Her Soul's Song," with Emory Johnstone and Dorothy Davenport in the principal roles. "Betty's Hobo," a comedy drama in which Thomas Jefferson, son of the late Joseph Jefferson, and the child actress, Zoe Bech, is also released on the same day together with a Powers split reel which includes "Professor Wiseguy's Trip to the Moon," a comic cartoon and "Little Journeys in Scenic Japan," an educational travel novelty.

Hobart Henley and Irene Hunt co-star in "The Devil's Image," a two-reel Imp society drama, on June 16, and on the same day's program Albert MacQuarrie will be seen in the Victor comedy, "The Golden Boot," followed by Neal Burns, Betty Compson and Ethel Lynn in the Nestor comedy, "Almost a Widow."

Daredevil Marie Walcamp and Lee Hill have worked for several weeks past in a sensational railroad thriller "A Railroad Bandit," which will be released on June 17 under the Bison brand. On the same day Gale Henry and William Franey furnish the fun in a Joker comedy entitled, "Love Quarantined."

Ben Wilson is featured in "The Finer Metal," a two-reel domestic drama which will be released under the Rex brand on June 18. Dorothy Phillips plays opposite Mr. Wilson. Two comedies are released on the same day, "A Romance at Random," and "A College Boomerang," a Laemmle comedy with Rupert Julian and Elsie Jane Wilson in the cast, and "A College Boomerang," an Imp comedy in which Harry Benham and Edith Roberts play the principal roles.

During the week of June 12 the seventh episode of "The Adventures of Peg O' the Ring," with Francis Ford and Crace Cunard furnishing the excitement, will be released. Announcement is also made that King Baggot will appear in "The Man from Nowhere," a five-reel Red Feather feature on June 19 and Val Paul, Myrtle Gonzalez and Fred Church in another five-reel Red Feather, "It Happened in Honolulu" on June 26.

Lasky's Summer Program

Numerous Stars Will Be Extremely Busy on Big Productions at Los Angeles Studio.

THE studios of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company at Hollywood, Calif., will hum with activity this summer, as the big producing firm is entering on a period of unusually interesting accomplishments. Well known stars of the stage and screen will appear in forthcoming productions from the Lasky studio on the Paramount Program. Coincident comes the announcement that Miss Fannie Ward has placed her name to a new contract for a period of two years. Few artists who have forsaken the stage for the screen have won such success in the new medium as that which has fallen to Miss Ward. Recently in New York she had the unique experience of attending a meeting of the Theater Club in the ballroom of the Hotel Astor as the principal guest and watching with an audience of 2,500 women gathered from all over the United States a screen presentation of her photoplay, "The Cheat."

Miss Ward is the star in the photoplay, "The Gutter Magdalene," which will be shown for the first time in June. The Lasky company also will present during the summer months elaborate feature plays in which Victor Moore, Cleo Ridgely and Wallace Reid and Blanche Sweet will appear as the stars.

Victor Moore's production is entitled, "The Clown," and was written for him by Marion Fairfax and produced by William C. DeMille. Miss Ridgely and Mr. Reid, who were co-stars in "The Golden Chance," "The Love Mask" and other photoplays, will appear in "The Selfish Woman," by Hector Turnbull, and Blanche Sweet will be the star in "The Dupe," by the same author.

Recently additions at the Lasky studio were completed making it, it is said, one of the finest equipped photoplay establishments in the world.

SELIG'S TOM MIX SERIES STARTS JULY 8.

The Tom Mix series of Western comedies will start in General Film regular service with "Some Duel," to be released Saturday, July 8. A Tom Mix comedy will be released every Saturday thereafter. These comedies are of the highest standard in every respect, carry logical plots and are crowded with daring action, such as only Tom Mix and Victoria Forde can supply. They will put the punch into any picture program.

THE VIKING FILM COMPANY.

One of the recent producing organizations is named the Viking Film Company, Inc. It is capitalized at $100,000 with a New York state charter and has offices on the tenth floor of the Candler Building. The new company proposes to make the better class of subjects and expects to have its first picture completed by the middle of June.

DeGRASSE HAS NEW FIVE-REELER.

"By Fate's Decree" is the title of a five-reel feature film play, written by Stuart Paton, one of the Universal City directors, which is being picturized by Director Joseph De Grasse. The featured leads will be played by Dorothy Phillips and Lon Chaney, with a strong supporting cast of the Universal stock company.

STAR THEATER, DENISON, TEXAS.

L. M. Ridout's House Strong in Popular Favor—Uses Style K Wurlitzer Organ—Seats 600.

DENISON, Texas, can boast of an up-to-date photoplay house in the Star. It is constructed of steel, concrete, brick and other fire-resisting material, and has a seating capacity of 600. L. M. Ridout, the proprietor and manager of the Star, did not see how many chairs he could get in a certain given space, but placed each row of seats at a respectable distance from the other, and the result is that no difficulty is experienced on the part of those seated to let a newcomer get past to a vacant seat. This is one of the many features to be found in the Star. Another is the beautiful rest rooms for women and the commodious smoking rooms for men. These are tastily and appropriately furnished. There are a number of boxes, which can be used as party boxes.

The operating room at the Star would be a credit to a large motion picture theater in a big city. It is spacious, well equipped, and is constructed of reinforced concrete. The steel doors and windows of this section of the theater automatically shut when the fusible cords which hold them open melt when the temperature increases over a certain degree. In this case it can readily be seen that should a fire occur it would be confined to the operating room. There is a large vent flue which leads from the operating room to the roof of the theater, and this carries off all the heat and odors which may be generated by the projection apparatus.

The interior of the Star is artistically decorated in red, gold and cream, and neutralized colors. Ventilation is obtained by twelve ventilators situated in the ceiling and by a draught panel with a big suction fan in it which is located near the floor. The auditorium is plentifully supplied with large exits with doors which open automatically. Should the management at any time desire to put on road shows it could easily do so, for the Star is equipped with a stage large enough to accommodate any size road production. It is also supplied with a half dozen sets of scenery, electrical effects, and a number of dressing rooms.

Mr. Ridout is always studying the wants and desires of his big patronage, and as a result of his conscientiousness he is meeting with very big success. Each show is made up of high-class, clean subjects, and the music is furnished by a style K Wurlitzer piano with pipe organ and orchestra attachments. The Star is known as "The Home of Good Motion Pictures."

"I do not believe a man can be a successful exhibitor without its assistance," says Mr. Ridout in speaking in complimentary terms of the Moving Picture World; "it is interesting and instructive."

MAJESTIC THEATER, EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL.

Nearly seven years ago H. G. Redmon, who is now the proprietor of the beautiful Majestic theater, East St. Louis, Ill., opened in that city a rather small moving picture theater known as the Lyric. He made a careful study of the exhibition business from the start, and from time to time as his patronage increased and as the industry in general became more fixed in public opinion, Mr. Redmon made the necessary changes in the Lyric in order to bring it up-to-date for that time. Finally, through the giving of good entertainment, the patronage of the old Lyric became so large that Mr. Redmon opened the Majestic and disposed of his first theater.

The Majestic has a seating capacity of 1,500 persons. It is a pretty structure, and has all the comforts and conveniences of some of the bigger theaters in bigger cities. The Majestic is exclusively a feature house, and shows Paramount and Triangle productions. The theater is opened at 9 a. m. and shows are given until 11 p. m. A seven-piece orchestra is used. The Paramount program is shown on

Majestic Theater, East St. Louis, Ill.

Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of each week, while Triangle pictures make up the program for Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The weekly advertising bill of the Majestic is quite heavy, and this department is in charge of John Choate, an experienced advertising man.

NEW STRAND, TRINIDAD, COLO.

Recently there was opened in Trinidad, Colo., the New Strand theater, by Jack Nash. As the illustration accompanying this story shows, the exterior is tastefully decorated in Gothic design. To the left of the entrance is the spacious and well appointed office of the manager. The interior is artistically decorated in red and gold. The draperies and carpets are of a beautiful red hue.

The New Strand has a seating capacity close on to 600. One hundred of these are opera chairs located in the loges where smoking is permitted. Mr. Nash, who is thoroughly familiar with practically all branches of the industry, spared neither time nor expense in giving the population of Trinidad a moving picture theater of which to be proud. That he has succeeded in this is evidenced by the large number of complimentary remarks that he is constantly receiving from his patrons and his many friends in and out of the trade. His constantly big patronage has repaid him many times for the lavish expenditure in erecting such an attractive and comfortable photoplay palace. There is an atmosphere of the conservatory pervading the auditorium, for Mr. Nash, who is a lover of flowers, has used a large number of artificial, cut and pot flowers in the decorative scheme. This adds considerably to the happy and homelike appearance of the interior.

REX THEATER, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Leichter and Selleck Take Over Photoplay House—Remodel It Thoroughly—Original Advertising Methods Give Structure Distinctive Character.

THE Rex theater, Polk and Washington streets, San Francisco, Cal., offers a splendid illustration of what can be accomplished with a small house in these days of large theaters and long programs when the business is given intelligent attention. This theater is located in the heart of the Nob Hill section, surrounded by splendid apartment houses and private homes, just past the busiest part of the Polk street business district. It is not without competition, for within a half a dozen blocks there are fully as many moving picture houses, several of larger capacity than the Rex, though none are more advantageously located.

This theater was taken over by Mark M. Leichter and Harry Selleck early in 1916, and since then has been renovated throughout and presents a greatly improved appearance over the old house. The building it occupies is of frame construction, but the house is very comfortable, with ample ventilation, and the decorations are neat and cheery. It has a seating capacity of 400 and is regarded as being one of the safest houses of its kind in the city, there being seven exits, making it possible to empty it on very short notice should occasion arise.

When the new owners took over this theater it was at once apparent that to be successful it would be necessary to adopt methods different from those followed by most exhibitors. But little transient business could be expected and the neighborhood clientele was of a class that had been the despair of many exhibitors. It was early decided that high-grade feature attractions were all that would be acceptable and the program, which is changed three times a week, is made up largely of Metro, World and Fox offerings, with the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial. Music is furnished by a recently installed player-piano and this is being made quite a feature of the house.

From the beginning Messrs. Lichter & Selleck have endeavored to be original, and, small as it is, this house has taken on a distinctive character that has made it well known far beyond the boundaries of the Polk street district, and it is this distinctive feature that makes it of special interest.

One of the first steps taken by this enterprising firm was the selection of a trade mark, which has since been registered, this consisting of a monogram made up of the letters L and S and called the sign of quality, service and refinement in photoplays. All of the slides shown in the Rex theater are uniform in character and each feature the trade mark. Each film shown has a leader showing the trade mark and the announcement that Leichter & Selleck present such and such a production. Every bit of advertising matter, and a great deal of it is used, bears the trade mark, until the sign has become widely known.

This concern is a strong believer in the use of a mailing list, and mails five hundred advance programs a week to patrons who have signified their desire to receive such advance notices. Some of the advertising sent out is very appropriate and illustrates the thought that is bestowed upon this end of the business. When "The Yellow Passport" was booked the program which was printed on yellow paper and forwarded to patrons protruded mysteriously from a slit in a neat Rex theater folder. Neat signs in the lobby call attention to coming attractions and in many ways visitors to the Rex theater are kept in close touch with what has been booked for their enjoyment. Recently a large party of San Francisco society leaders visited Truckee, Cal., to take part in winter sports, and moving pictures were taken of their activities. These pictures were shown shortly afterward at this house and the theater was filled with wealthy patrons. Business has increased more than thirty per cent. since the first of the year and frequently all who desire to come cannot be accommodated.

Mark M. Leichter, under whose able management the business is being conducted, has been connected with the moving picture business for many years, having conducted theaters in New York City before coming to San Francisco. It is the plan of himself and those associated with him to branch out in the local business field in the near future.

The projection equipment in the Rex theater consists of two Motiographs, operated by Walter Bunge, and every effort is made to secure perfect projection. Matinees are given daily from half past one to five o'clock, and on Sundays the shows are continuous. On week days the evening performance commences at half past six. The admission price is 10 cents for adults and 5 cents for children.

PILOSI'S THEATER, OLD FORGE, PA.

Since It Was Established, Three Years Ago, This Photoplay House Has Been Doing Good Business—Uses Wurlitzer Organ—Seats 500 and Managed by Louis Pilosi.

ONE of the well-conducted photoplay houses in northeastern Pennsylvania is Pilosi's theater at Old Forge. It is owned by Nicholas Pilosi and managed by his son, Louis. This house recently celebrated its third anniversary, and it played to exceedingly good business during the celebration period, for a special program for each day was selected for the occasion. The theater is advertised as the "Home of Reel Photoplays."

Pilosi's Theater, Old Forge, Pa.

There are 500 comfortable seats in the Pilosi palace, and there is plenty of room between each of the rows. The structure is built of fireproof material and is fitted with all modern equipments. The projection room is large and is equipped with two machines. Music is furnished by a Wurlitzer organ, and an automatic ticket selling machine is used.

The foyer is spacious, and the lobby floor is of tile. There are six double exit doors conveniently arranged so that the auditorium can be emptied in a very short space of time should the emergency arise. The interior, as well as the lobby, is artistically decorated in harmonious colors.

The management says that the structure represents an expenditure of $26,000. Although the Pilosi is primarily dedicated to the exploitation of high-class motion pictures, there is a stage large enough to hold a goodly size road production. There are a number of dressing rooms and a variety of scenery, should the management ever decide to entertain a proposition from a vaudeville or "legitimate" show.

The theater is situated right in the heart of the town, at the corner of Main and Grace streets. The exterior is well illuminated, and can be seen for a considerable distance in either direction. The theater is advertised extensively, and on one side of the building is a big billboard which can accommodate five six-sheet posters. Louis Pilosi is demonstrating his ability as an exhibitor in the administration of the "Home of Reel Photoplays."

McINTOSH TAKES OVER CRYSTAL.

William McIntosh has recently purchased the Crystal theater at 212 East Fourth street, Waterloo, Ia., of Nichols Webber. He will take possession of it on June 1. Mr. McIntosh was for many years associated with Mr. Webber in the operation of the Crystal and Princess Theaters in Waterloo, and disposed of his interests in these houses about a year ago to open a picture theater in Waverly, Ia. The Crystal will be closed for two weeks for repairs. Mr. Webber is devoting his entire time to the Princess.

OBSERVATIONS
BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

IT HAS been said in some quarters that the motion picture people have been remarkably conservative in their deportment following the veto of the Christman-Wheeler censorship bill by Governor Whitman at Albany. Evidently people expressing this opinion expected to see receipt of the news of victory followed by a jubilee demonstration garnished with the tooting of horns, booming of cannon and waving of the emblem of American liberty. Perhaps some of them expected to hear speeches and read columns of commendable notices in the moving picture press on Governor Whitman's action. But the veto was not accepted by the moving picture people with any undue display of enthusiasm. Nevertheless, they are not mindful that in killing the bill the Governor did his duty in an intelligent, impartial and fearless manner.

The result of this great fight was received with mingled satisfaction and pity. Satisfied that the Governor, in his presentation of the veto, confirmed what the moving picture interests have so often claimed, namely: That the people behind censorship methods are so satiated with self-motives and a desire to injure the moving picture business—if not crush it—that they are blind to the rights and privileges of all who do not agree with them. Pity for these so-called reformers and the members of both branches of the legislature who passed for them a bill which, upon its face, was defeated by its own viciousness—so deficient in common sense and justice that the Governor would not enter into a discussion of the constitutionality of censorship. The viciousness was imposition of an unnecessary and excessive tax and the deprival of the right of appeal to the picture people while giving that right to the opposition. The most silly part of the fight made by the supporters of the bill before the Governor was a statement that it was not their intention to have either of these provisions become a law in the light construed by the Governor, but if he would sign the bill the objectionable features could be eliminated at the next session of the legislature. Governor Whitman, in his presentation, told these people that the practical answer to their statement was that the moving picture would be put to a wasteful and unnecessary expense of the greater part of a million dollars before an amendment could be made. The so-called reformers would deliberately pass a bill to execute a man and then apologize for it with an amendment. No. the moving picture people did not become hysterically jubilant when the Governor gave his decision, nor have the sponsors of the bill been heard from in any way. They have been whipped into a profound silence by one of Governor Whitman's closing comments: "I have found such fundamental objections to the form of this bill, and the procedure under it, that the necessity for censorship has been eliminated as a factor in its consideration."

Of course, some people will be disposed to discount comments coming from journals devoted to moving picture interests on the framers and supporters of the bill referred to. Many of them may attribute comment in part to a spirit of partiality. For years the moving picture people have complained of the indisposition of the public press to "come out flat-footed" on subjects affecting the picture interests at times when they should really do so, especially when the constitutionality of censorship is before the public. It is with much gratification, therefore, that an editorial of the New York Press is quoted:

"So clumsily was the movie censor bill drawn that Governor Whitman vetoed it, as he remarked, without considering at all the fundamental question of whether there should be censorship. It was a poor workman who framed the provision that appeal might be taken when a film was passed by the board, but that none could be taken when a film was ordered suppressed!"

The quotation may in part help relieve the picture organs of a charge of bias in commenting on what happened in Albany. Our thanks go to the Press. But the part of the editorial to which it is desired to call special attention is as follows:

"The 'movies' may be left safely in their present status. If there is any producer foolish enough to put out anything beyond the bounds of decency he will find quick enough punishment in the fact that the 99 per cent. of 'movie' houses which are family resorts will not book his releases."

How about it, Mr. Movie Man, who is scrambling to get under the wing of Federal Censorship? This editorial comment comes from a disinterested source, and entirely unsolicited. Compare it with a quotation from the text of the majority report on the Smith-Hughes censorship bill now pending at Washington and see which is the most logical and truthful:

"The vicious picture brings the larger return to exhibitor and producer, because it gets the money of the regular customer and the sensation seeker also."

What aggravates those who are sincere in the welfare of a clean, wholesome, progressive and standardized motion picture industry is that the first quotation is from a disinterested source, while the majority committee on the Smith-Hughes bill claims the latter quotation is furnished by a brief supplied to the committee by four of the moving picture companies that produced ninety per cent. of the motion pictures in the United States, so that others who are admittedly exerting every effort to put the picture on the highest plane of perfection and are endeavoring to persuade all manufacturers to do likewise, find the guns of their own camp trained upon them. To the ordinary observer the situation is a peculiar one, to say the least.

A man who has been in the moving picture business since its infancy, and who is still very prominent in it, expressed himself frankly on the situation: "I can understand," said he, "that if we must have official censorship, a federal form of regulation is preferable to a multitude of graft-seeking bodies created by every state, city and hamlet throughout the country; but an overwhelming majority of the legitimate and law-abiding producers have been unalterably opposed to official censorship in any form. That was the platform upon which the manufacturers declared themselves united, until recently a few of them decided to put themselves publicly on record as favoring federal censorship as the least of the evils. This was their privilege and none disputed their justification for thus placing themselves upon record if they wished to do so. But by what method of reasoning do these people who claim to favor everything that will tend to the welfare of the industry, both with respect to the public and the industry itself, gratify their action in becoming auxiliary to the Smith-Hughes majority and supply it with ammunition (poor as it may be) to fight the manufacturers who remain loyal in the battle to preserve what they deem are their constitutional rights? I am not the only one to suspect that there is an ulterior and selfish motive in their operations. What it is I have not been able to even conjecture. Some people with whom I have discussed the subject are inclined to believe that federal law will ultimately put out of business companies that will not be able to spare the time, labor or expense to comply with the requirements of the law, if it is enacted. Some say it will be a death rap to the five per cent. of manufacturers who could not weather the law because they could not stand a censoring. There is absolutely no reason why the legitimate manufacturers should surrender their constitutional rights to get rid of this defying five per cent. The minority report on the Smith-Hughes bill points to the way by which the guerrillas can be squelched when it says: "Every reasonable protection to the public morals can be secured by the proper exercise of the local police power supplemented by the amendment to the federal code already suggested," which means that the United States Penal Code be amended to include motion picture films in the list of objects barred from interstate transportation. And there is still another weapon that can be effectively used to eliminate the obnoxious five per cent. Each municipality has the power to revoke the license of an exhibitor who shows immoral pictures and the screws can be put on any exhibitor who rents or buys and exhibits such pictures, which must ultimately drive the makers of them out of the market. The authorities, the reformers and the exhibitors have a duty to perform in this matter and there is no reason why they should not attend to it and not saddle the responsibility upon the country at an enormous and unnecessary expense to those who are innocent in the matter. The exhibitor cannot claim exemption. He knows better than anyone else what kind of pictures his patrons want. He cannot claim exemption on the ground of inability to personally censor a picture. Such inability, when a question of morality is involved, disqualifies him as an exhibitor. He stands in the same position and must accept the same responsibilities as managers of regular theaters.

EASTER SCENES AT THE VATICAN.

The Eternal City has been under much excitement during the recent Easter week services because of the presence of certain enterprising American moving picture operators busily "filming" th Holy Week services in St. Peter's.

For the time being the war was forgotten, every one was interested in the great innovation of what some called "sacrilege" by the American "invasion" of what has hitherto been sacred ground. There can be no doubt that from the professional viewpoint the Holy Week services in St. Peter's offers one of the grandest spectacles it seems possible to film, the reproduction of these scenes will attract crowds in all parts of the world. Not only will devout Catholics rejoice in being able to see that which they could never hope their eyes might be able to see, but others irrespective of creed will want to see that which they have heard is one of the most impressive scenes in Christendom.

Papal processions and the recent Popes have been seen in films but pictures of the most holy services taken within the most sacred edifice of the Catholic world have always caused a natural hesitation. The question of any profanity was speedily settled in that still pictures had always been permitted and a quick succession of them could not possibly be considered objectionable. Another consideration lay in the fact that the war has considerably curtailed the income at St. Peter's and the translation into Italian dollars of pictures of so great a demand could not be treated with indifference. It was further thought that the pictures could be of great value in keeping the faithful in all parts of the world in visible communication with the center of their faith and at the same time give others a chance to see that greatest service which made St. Peter's famous. Therefore under the Supervision of Cardinal Merry Del Val this famous set of pictures was secured and no doubt will be well used.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

The American University in Washington, D. C., is cooperating with the Bureau of Commercial Economics in their plan to spread the educational possibilities of the moving picture by giving a series of lectures in the Hall of History on Saturday afternoons. This series is intended especially for teachers and senior scholars in high schools, and other adults who can be interested therein to the extent of using the knowledge so obtained in advancing teaching through means of the pictures. It should be further noted that these lectures are part of the extension work of the university and no admission fee is charged. Government films will be shown which cover very largely the scenic beauties and geographical wonders of the United States, in addition the government has prepared with great care and cost a collection of films of the different tribes of Indians in their native habitat in order that the Indian life and manners which are rapidly passing away may be preserved for posterity.

A Baptist Church convention in Philadelphia has recently praised the value of the moving picture. It is interesting to note and record that churches are now as a class looking more at the good in the picture rather than the bad, and to praise more than to blame; this means that by fostering the better side, greater benefits will accrue. An Indiana clergyman has recently gone on record as saying that the pictures are preaching some of the greatest of sermons and that their use should be encouraged, and that a proper use of them on Sundays should be provided. He was further of the opinion that opposition came rather from tradition than knowledge or experience.

The Boston, Mass., high schools are on record as having tried the aid of the moving pictures with such satisfactory results that a plan for their more permanent use is under way.

DORSEY EXPEDITION PICTURES.

Through an arrangement with Joseph S. Klotz, of 110 West 40th street, the Universal has acquired one of the most unusual and valuable pictures which the camera has yet produced. It is the Dr. Dorsey Expedition, one of the most interesting and novel ever undertaken, and also one of the most valuable, for its cost alone amounted to a quarter of a million dollars. The Universal will release this subject in split reels, one every week, under the Powers brand. The demand for educational and scenic pictures has been increasing rapidly, and it is in line with this demand that the Universal has authorized an expenditure which might otherwise seem excessive, in order to command this unexampled feature of foreign travel in unfrequentel spots of the earth's surface for the millions of interested people who see the Universal program every week.

The expedition covered the greater portion of India, Japan, China, Mongolia, Ceylon, Persia, and takes the spectator into places very seldom visited even by the most adventurous of tourists, and shows spectacles never before seen by Western eyes. Some of them were taken at the risk of instant death had the presence of the cameraman been suspected. Long experience of travel, and years of study, acquainted Dr. Dorsey with exactly what he wanted to see, and Yankee perserverance, ingenuity and daring accomplished the rest. The result is one of the most remarkable films ever presented to an audience, and the Universal feels fully justified in paying so high a price for such an interesting, instructive, remarkable and awe-inspiring human document.

Dr. George A. Dorsey, Ph. D., the man to whom the Universal is indebted for the Dorsey expedition, is probably as well fitted as any other American to realize the salient points in foreign lands which would be interesting and instructive to the American people for photographic purposes.

"THE CRISIS" STIRS VICKSBURG.

Vicksburg, Miss., has the picture craze in most aggravated form since the arrival of the Selig company of players who are appearing in spectacular scenes for "The Crisis," the drama from the book by Winston Churchill and being filmed by the Selig Company. All the stars have been interviewed time and again, and almost the entire population turned out to witness the battle scenes which were taken in the National Park cemetery.

The entire Mississippi National Guard, including officers and regimental bands, are congregated in this city. One thousand militiamen "clinched" in the battle.

JOYCE FAIR IN A THREE-REELER.

So successful have been the recent two-reel Essanay releases featuring little Joyce Fair, the 11-year-old star, that George K. Spoor, president of that company, has decided to give her a wider range of opportunity. Under the new plan she is now working in a three-reel production, "A Little Volunteer," a story of a "little mother" who has several small sisters and brothers under her care.

"THE GAME WARDEN."

Director Henry McRae is filming a two-reel melodrama, entitled, "The Game Warden," written by Noble Johnson. The featured leads are taken by Marie Walcamp, Lee Hill and L. C. Shumway. McRae recently has completed a two-reel railroad story, entitled, "The Battle of the Black Rock Short Line."

FORTHCOMING AMERICANS.

Among the forthcoming American productions is "Dust," a five-reel feature under the direction of Edward Sloman from a scenario by Julian L. LaMothe. Winnifred Greenwood, Franklyn Ritchie, Harry Von Meter, Louise Lester and Nell Franzen are the principal members of the cast. Release is scheduled for the latter part of June.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Personal Service.

APPARENTLY many who read this department do not realize that it is our desire to give the fullest possible service, and that a self addressed envelope enclosed with the material submitted will bring a carbon of the matter that may not get into print for several weeks, permitting the earlier adjustment of the new program or other matter. If you want to make your program better, get right after it and keep the printer worried until he gives you what you want. A few exhibitors have availed themselves of this service with decided benefit to their advertising. All are welcome to ask, and no fee of any sort is required or desired. It is not to be expected that the exhibitor shall also be a printing expert, and not many house managers can curse the man of types in his own language, but if you need help, it is at your command.

A Chinese Box.

The Arcade theater, Tientsin, sends in some of the work done for The Black Box; which sounds like a back number attraction over here, but is brand new in China. One of the pieces is a bill in Chinese. This is printed on native paper, scarcely stronger than tissue, and so thin that it was necessary in mounting it for reproduction to paste the mount and not the paper itself. This appeals to the Chinese trade, but the houses (there are two, the Arcade and the Pekin Pavilion) depend more on the European patronage. The management writes:

> I beg to enclose herewith some of the advertising matter I issued for our two theaters, "The Arcade" and the "Peking Pavilion," for the last episode of the Universal Serial, "Black Box." In addition to the bills, I sent out 420 letters, hand written as per enclosed sample, and delivered them in a chit book through our own messengers. The result, nearly half of the people to whom the letters were sent noted in the chit book the number of seats they wanted to be reserved. Practically every seat in the theater was booked during the day. Those who came to the theater in the evening without booking their seats could only get standing room. I took last night $300.
> I am indebted to the "Advertising for Exhibitors" department of the World for these as well as many other stunts I use in my advertising matter. I read the "Advertising for Exhibitors" and Mr. Richardson's "Projection Department" every week regularly and am very much indebted to you both.

A chit is a note and the chit book the receipt book showing delivery of the communication. The letters were written in ink on the regular letter head of the house and reads:

> We beg to inform you that we will screen this evening the fifteenth, very last, episode of the serial film, Black Box.
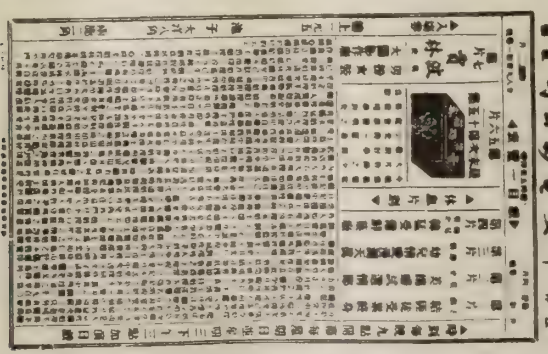
> To you who have watched the development of the story on our screen, this, the very last episode, in which Sanford Quest solves the mystery of the Black Box and unmasks Professor Ashleigh, will be very interesting. Should you decide to honor our theater with your presence, we will be pleased to reserve seats for you.

In addition to this and the Chinese bill there were three pieces in English, two small bills about five by nine and one about twice the size. All three lay emphasis upon the fact that this is the concluding episode and advertise also a Chaplin and a Ham and Bud story.



These are printed on unusually good white paper, one small bill carrying a Chaplin cut and the larger two stock cuts of the black box as well. The film ran for three days, ending on a Sunday. The same material is used for both houses, with a change of name and date.

The Arcade advertising is always interesting, and they seem to hold their ground and expand where others find the going too hard. Good and intelligent advertising backed by sound management seems to be the reason.

McCormick, the Prophet.

Long months ago, when S. Barrett McCormick was a Denver newspaper man, he did a lot to pave the way for something better than the five-cent shows which was then about all that Denver would pay for pictures. He coaxed the first house to work over to the ten-cent price and he hammered home great truths. Then he went away and now he is back in Denver running the only fifteen-cent house in town. He writes:

> Please pardon the informal salutation, but I almost feel a personal friendship as a result of our editorial acquaintance back in the dark ages of the photoplay. First permit me to express a somewhat tardy appreciation of your many kind remarks anent my work and assure you that both Moving Picture World and Sargent's columns have been and are the Koran to me. That applies to the photoplay writing end as well as my interest in exhibition, for the first story I wrote and sold was with the help of "Technique of the Photoplay," and it has always been beside the "mill" when the process of continuity phenomenon was taking place—and there have been several that I am not ashamed of, for instance, "The Disciple" and Ince-Triangle production, which Mr. Harrison of the World was kind enough to say set the standard for the Triangle program.
> But back to Denver conditions. It will no doubt interest you to know that Denver is now high and dry (particularly dry) on the ten-cent map—that is all except the Princess, which is a fifteen-cent house, and proving that price has nothing to do with it when you give them the show, and we do—for Denver. Our clientele would bring tears of delight from the most rabid screen idealist, for it is the most exclusive class in the city, and we always feel slighted if the dress suits and evening gowns are not among those present—and you know the dress suit is not an over developed product of the great West. Perhaps you will recall running a clipping from my column in the "Times" anticipating the day when a liveried starter would open the auto doors of society before a "picture show." Well, he does at ours—for every Friday afternoon is society matinee, and let me assure you that the affair is always "covered" by our society reporter and photographer and the list and photos of those present are published in the papers Our music is quite an attraction, our conductor, Signor Savallo, being quite a lion in musical and social circles, a director whose symphony concerts are always a big feature of the musical season. Enclosed is an announcement used to inaugurate our Society Screen Afternoons.
> Am enclosing proofs of several newspaper advertisements that will no doubt appeal to you as effective display. The effect was secured, you will of course know, by double exposure line and half tone work. We do little sensational or stunt stuff in our advertising, sticking close to clean, refined copy, but occasionally use a stunt such as the enclosed five-column story, on "The Race," paid for by the various automobile and accessory firms mentioned in the story. Aside from giving us five columns in each of the daily papers, the principal value is that it turned several hundred dollars of additional revenue to the newspapers—and the surest way to an editor's heart is through the editorial stomach—you and I know.

Mr. McCormick's compliment is nicely turned, for in the sixteenth sura of the Koran it is written: "We have sent down unto thee the book of the Koran for an explication of everything necessary," and in the forty-first sura: "It is certainly a book of infinite value," which is precisely what this paper is to the motion picture business.

The newspaper advertisements are particularly good, illustration being superimposed upon the hand lettered text. It is expensive, but it stands out from the others on a page.

The society matinee is played up heavily. An engraved card that really is printed from copper announces in proper form these entertainments. It will stand comparison with any invitation card received. The following day the papers carry a list of the society folk present and a cut layout of some of the patrons. One issue to hand gives eleven inches double column, including a seven-inch cut, and plays up the "Row party" as a substitute for box parties, apparently some hostess taking an entire row for her guests instead of a box. Now that Mr. McCormick has found his way home again, we hope he visits frequently.

Making Myra Known.

The Crystal, Little Rock, Ark., is now using a house program and gets up a readable and newsy little issue, taking only a page for the program and giving the rest to chat. It is intimate and friendly, and so it will make and keep friends. On one page is an invitation to use the office phone if desired. Much of the May issue is given to "The Mysteries of Myra" and the advertising booklet prepared by the International is used as an insert. It is about the cleverest thing in this line that has been given out yet, something that will be kept long after the series has been shown and passed along. Here is a good paragraph:

> Did you ever wonder why The Crystal flashed no advertising slides on the screen, except those of our coming pictures? We know it is appreciated, because so many have remarked about it. You come to The Crystal to be amused, not to read advertisements. When one buys a newspaper or magazine, it is optional whether one reads the ads. When one goes to a theater where advertising slides are shown, you will either read them or close your eyes. Are we right? We hear you say aye.

They also use some good display advertising for coming films. They are snappy and telling, and do the house real good. Jack Hudgens is the program editor, and he knows what he is doing. Perhaps he'll send you a copy if you send a return cover. It makes a good model to follow if you can write in the proper vein.

Cuts to Suit.

The other day we were talking things over with Harry Reichenbach, of the World films, about the cut problem and he pointed out that his department offered not only a fine and a coarse screen, but that it would arrange to supply any special screen on request. Mr. Reichenbach is an old time press man, trained in the Broadway school, and naturally he does things well because he knows how.

A Remembrancer.

The Remembrancer is what the Dreamland, Galena, Ill., says its monthly program is. It is a little four-pager nicely printed in black on the right sort of yellow. On the front is printed:

Take me Home or put me in Your Pocket
For Every Day Remembrance
During the Month of May, 1916.

The program lies on the second page, with house talk on the third. It would be a better arrangement to put the program on the third page and the other on the second. The house talk is nicely done. It reads:

Paramount and Metro Pictures.

DREAMLAND is in the picture business, seriously and earnestly and extensively, also exclusively, because we believe there is no higher form of dramatic art than is shown in photoplays.

DREAMLAND has gained knowledge of the public taste, of popular requirements in the picture business. We will devote that knowledge to further service to our many patrons.

DREAMLAND is interested in the business and also in the people that visit us, and both shall have personal attention.

DREAMLAND believes in better pictures, greater pictures of finer quality and higher purpose and we strive strenuously to secure them. We hope and believe that we shall meet with gratifying success. THE LITTLE THEATRE.

The "our" in the heading is double the size of the lines above and below. Perhaps a competitive exhibitor is a newcomer to the town, but the house wisely does not mention competition. It attends to its own business.

Miss Spurr Starts Up.

Miss Dolly Spurr, of the Royal-Grand, Marion, Ind., used to run two house organs at one time—the only house we recall that ever regularly ran a double issue. Then she dropped down, but has revived the idea in a new Vol. I, No. 1 of Films and Footlights. This is sixteen pages and cover, pages 4½ by 7, a white sixteen and tint cover with a two-color specially drawn cover design. Only the back page is given to foreign advertising and that only to one house. There are stories of or about each of the features for the week, news, gossip and house talk of the usual Spurr sort, which always has been a very good sort. Miss Spurr offers a new idea in the suggestion that a special morning performance will be given for parties of one hundred or more; this in addition to the usual suggestion of theater parties at the regular showings. It sounds like a rather formidable idea to make up a party of one hundred, but one hundred admissions will do the trick and hiring the theater will be impressive and not at all costly. Think it over for your own use and then thank Miss Spurr. About the only suggestion that can be offered is that the tabloid program be dolled up a bit with fancy type faces and then placed on the right hand page facing the editorial. That is the natural place for it.

A Chameleon Program.

J. E. Cooney, press man for the Webster Avenue, New Haven, Conn., sends in samples of his house program, using the same white stock of uniform size each week, but varying the color of the ink to gain contrast. He writes that they have just turned their balcony into a series of loges seating eight persons and reached by a separate stairway. As this is a 700 neighborhood house in a good locality, those boxes should appeal to many who might not care to attend and take a chance on the unreserved seats. The prices are $2 for parties of four, $2.50 for six and $3 for eight. These may be reserved in advance by mail or phone and as they use a thoroughly good program they can build up this box trade and in doing so help the downstairs business as well. The ten cent man will take pride in the box patronage just as the "diamond horseshoe" is an asset to the Metropolitan Opera House in New York. The program is nicely arranged with the days dated and set into the margin. The top of the second page is taken for some strong house talk and the back page is given to news items of the players that are more newsy than the usual "..... ..... has a new eighteen cylinder Dash car" style of stuff. There is nothing startling about the four pager but it is a nicely arranged, hard-working little program that has class and carries conviction without seriously threatening the bankroll. Here is some program talk from one issue that will help others:

YOUR HOME THEATER

> The word "HOME" ever since this old world of ours began has ever had a deep and truly wonderful meaning. A small word as words go, but small and simple as it is, it stands for more than any other in the whole English language, countless joys and pleasures, fond recollections and the place where our happiest hours have been passed. We want you to try and entertain somewhat similar feelings for this, YOUR "HOME" THEATER. For you it has been built and we wish you to look upon it as a "HOME" to which you can of an evening come and pass an hour or two of good wholesome enjoyment after the trials of the day are over. We believe that there is no section of our city that can boast of a more beautiful house to come to or one where a more enjoyable evening could be spent. The Management is contemplating additions to the interior which will render it even more cozy and homelike to you and at the same time increase your enjoyment.

A Paste-Up.

Here is an advertising frame from the Park theater, Middleboro, Mass., for The Strange Case of Mary Page, made up of illustrations from this paper and The Ladies World. It will attract more attention than any lithograph possibly could, and studying the ingenuity with which the frame is made will clinch the title and the attraction more firmly than the straight paper. It takes a little more time than merely tacking a borrowed three sheet on a board, but it will pay for the trouble taken.

Has an Organ.

The Brown Opera House, Salinas, Cal., now plays on its own organ, a neat four pager. The first issue looks well, but the editor needs to make certain that he uses all of a story. The last story on the second page is shy the climax and leaves readers wondering what the editor saw in the stuff. It should grow into a smart little sheet if they keep the promise of the first issue, though.

Plugging for Peg.

Nat G. Rothstein, of the Universal Publicity Bureau, has turned out an unusually good booklet for "Peg o' the Ring." This circus feature lends itself well to vivid cuts and posters and gives opportunity for unusual press stunts. His own suggestions constitute an entire campaign, but the live wire can supplement this with stunts of his own, small circus reproductions in store windows, utilizing the various "character" dolls, a tent dressing for the lobby, with a sawdust floor for Peg days, and anything in that line that will suggest the circus, from clowns to calliopes. Some of the stunts suggested in the booklet should be carefully considered. The advice that the sidewalk in front of the theater be sawdusted for a couple of blocks should be submitted to the authorities or you may run counter to a local ordinance, but there are many helpful stunts given that are within reach of all theatrical purses.

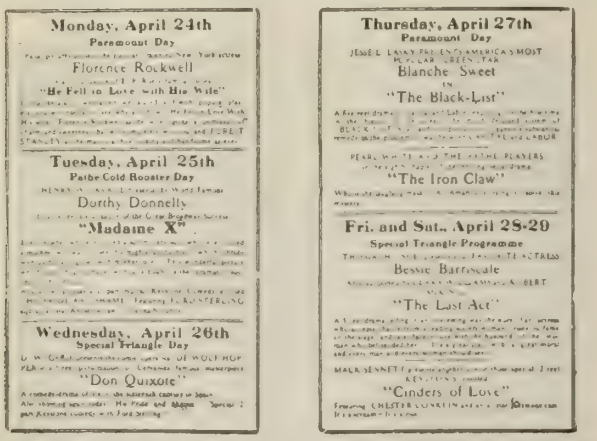
Wants Suggestions.

R. N. Smith, of the Mission, Amarillo, Texas, writes that he has been in the business for three years and is now located in Amarillo. He sends in a program for comment on its typographical format. This is a colored cover on the Hennegan style with the middle pages given to the program. The days are dated and the copy is well prepared, but the printer has set the stuff to fit the space instead of setting it to look well in the space, which Mr. Smith seems to know, since he specially asks for information about the type. The dates are in twenty-four point a blacker and sometimes larger letter than the titles. This is not necessary. It is necessary to get the day and date in close touch with the title, but an eight or ten point date is as large as is necessary. Here it is permitted to overshadow the subject, and it must be remembered that the title is more important than the day since it is the title that must first interest before the day becomes important. The printer takes his copy and sets it with the general rules in mind of having the important lines at the top. The date is the top line so he plays that up, as can be seen in this cut.



It will be noted, too, that the ten point descriptive matter is leaded out to fill the space. It should be eight point, which will pull the lines in and permit the separation of the lines of greater importance by white space. That Jesse Lasky line in the Thursday box should be made uniform with the Monday Pallas line, if, indeed, it is absolutely necessary that these various "presents" lines should run. It should be possible to call it a Paramount, or a Lasky instead of the elaborate "presents" which was started by a certain manager merely to prevent his own and his brother's attractions from becoming confounded with his third brother's second rate productions of their discarded plays. There should be at least six and preferably at least twelve points of space above and below a title line and if the rest of the matter crowds the title, some of it should be cut out. A letter space between each letter of the shorter titles, such as "Madame X" would help to get a better display and such a title as "He Fell in Love With His Wife," should be given two lines where producers inflict such an awkward length. Printers are prone to even spacing if not checked. This is the greater part of the fault of this program. It is not enough to supply good copy. You must, if possible, mark the relative value of the lines and then see that the printer renders these values. Picture Theater Advertising will help a lot in marking for the printer and talking to him afterward.

Another Independent.

The Photoplay World is the title of a small sixteen-pager published at Tiffin, Ohio, independent of the houses but giving the programs of all the theaters. Evidently its major revenue is derived from the trade advertising and they seem to be working for second class entry. It is well edited and should grow in size with age.

Service Beyond the Films.

The Chicago branch of the V-L-S-E has inaugurated a publicity department under the direction of Gordon Laurence. He'll be going some to keep up with Tom North's aggregation and L. J. Scott. The consistently valuable aid given patrons of V-L-S-E is by no means the least factor in their success.

But He Did.

Tom North has dug up another funny one. The Society theater, somewhere or other, had a lobby pennant for "That Shalt Not Covet." Evidently someone did, for a reward is offered for the apprehension of the thief. Another stunt he tells of in a late issue of V-L-S-E Pals is a Chaplin contest by the Rex, Seattle. It was worked with one of the local papers, with front page stories for five days and the judging took place in the public square after a ballyhoo parade, all of which advertised a two week run of Carmen at that house.

Graphic.

The Arcadia, Philadelphia, shows sketches of three landmarks and explains "One block from Broad street station. One block from Subway. Near City Hall." Even a stranger can get a pretty good idea of the location from that. But the man who picks out the program stock has no eye for color. Better a plain white than a mournful tint. A man will not read a sick looking advertisement. He won't want to keep it by him, and some manila stock is impossible when tinted.

Swinging on Vion.

We like the way Joe Vion does most things, but the last issue to hand shows some back page clips taken from one of those newspaper departments where you send a return envelope to find out where you may obtain the things described. Even two expositions in succession does not excuse the thrilling news that a nice picnic lunch basket is "a seven sided box ten inches in diameter, with a canopy shaped top; the whole being done in figured satin." Most photoplay patrons will continue to be more interested in the old, reliable shoe box, and the space is thrown away.

A Good Model.

Mrs. A. R. Woodruff, of the Colonial, Camden, N. J., sends in a new form of her program which gives another wrinkle in marginal date. The program, as has been said, is in the colonial colors, blue and buff, but Mrs. Woodruff very courteously had a white press proof pulled of the form. The cut shows the front page and the two inside pages, and suggests a layout that can be copied with profit. The back page carries underline and gossip.

All There.

No studying to find out where this program comes from. It reads that "The Management of the Square Town Electric theater, Brooklyn, Michigan" presents its feature program "for the month of May, 1916," and then goes on to give the Tuesday features by dated days. They get it all down as it should be done, and do it on a mailing folder that travels for a one cent stamp. It is a three fold card sealed with a paper clip and the display is nicely done; nothing elaborate, but neat and orderly.

Well Done.

The New Mission theater, San Francisco, announces its opening by means of an invitation good for two for the opening performance. The card is not engraved, but it is done in type in excellent imitation of engraving and well printed, so that it takes more than a second look on the part of the average recipient to be even reasonably certain. It is one of the type script faces which is more legible and more up to date than the once prevalent Old English. The envelope card is printed up to match and the general effect is more than merely good.

Via C. B.

A friend in Council Bluffs sends in a clipping from an Ohio paper offering a prize to the first person guessing the identity of the "Laughing Mask" before the tenth episode. The idea is not wholly new, but the phrasing is so direct as to merit approval. It merely announces:

> The first person guessing who The Laughing Mask is before the tenth episode of The Iron Claw, will receive a free ticket good for three months.

"Season ticket" would be more definite than "free ticket," but the announcement is free from the rules and regulations that too often tie up these simple contests.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Inquiries.

Questions concerning the writing (but NOT the marketing) of photoplays will be replied to without charge if addressed to the Photoplaywright Department and accompanied by a fully addressed stamped envelope. Questions must be typewritten or written with pen and ink.

Questions as to the financial standing of concerns or the probable markets for specific or certain styles of stories cannot be answered.

In no case and under no circumstance will any manuscript or synopsis be handled and if sent will be returned without reply.

A list of addresses of producing companies will be sent if the request is made direct to the publication office, but not where request is made to this department.

A New Technique.

VERY shortly a third edition of Technique of the Photoplay will come from the press. This is not a reprint of the second edition, but is practically a new work under the old title, though the chapters on Copyright, Study, Stolen Stories and Censorship are but slightly changed in order to bring them down to date. For the rest, the arrangement of the book differs materially from the old and the total number of chapters is now seventy-two, not counting an appendix containing the unasked questions, a glossary and reproductions of various script forms. This more ample chaptering permits each factor of form to be treated in greater detail and by making each a chapter in itself the book is practically self-indexing, though a simple scheme of cross reference has been provided. The total number of words is more than double that of the second edition, but the selection of a smaller, but entirely legible type-face will permit the volume to be given something less than four hundred pages (389 plus 8 to be exact).

The exact date of issue is largely dependent upon the delivery of the paper, but it should be ready some time in June or July. The price will be announced later. It will be greater in price than the second edition, but not materially so.

Work on this third edition was begun in August of last year and something like three months of actual eight hour working days has been spent on the first and second drafts.

Revision.

Just lately we saw a smeary letter in which a revision bureau advised a patron that they could fix up and probably sell her two reel story. She had seven scenes for the two reels. Evidently she needed to be revised, but even seven dollars worth of work would scarcely pay.

One revision-agent scheme is pretty evidently selling through the friends of its employees the stories sent in to them. It is not yet possible to give the name of this concern, but it is not unlikely that in time the company will be run down. As the stories are offered through outsiders, it is difficult to connect the offender with the company. This is more of a sales bureau than a revision scheme, but it suggests that what one has done others may do.

Vary It.

Waste paper is now worth $20 a ton and the price is going up. One excellent way to add to this supply of paper waste is to write something along the lines of a current success. Take Miss Pickford in Poor Little Peppina, for an example. We do not know but we are willing to bet that Famous Players get three or four stories a day, at least, with the heroine in trousers as a temporary boy because Miss Pickford did so well in the Italian part. And probably about the last thing that Famous Players wants to do just now is to offer another story along the same lines. The man who gets the money is he who is first to write a Peppina story or an "Island of....." story, not the man who comes in three weeks after the first release with another just like it.

Doing It Wrong.

We have a correspondent who is certain that if he could see the script someone else wrote for a five reel story, he could do one himself. He has been told that it will not help, but he nurses the idea that he cannot work unless he has a fetich and so he does not sell. This is partly because his ideas are seldom worth the five reel footage. He does not realize what a big idea he must have to go five reels. He seems to be guided by some of those companies that are now making their old two and three reel hits into five padded reels, and he does not even supply the padding.

Fiction Work.

From the number of letters that have come in lately asking for books on short story writing, it is evident that there is an increasing interest in short fiction. The photoplay market is poor at the moment, but we do not believe that fiction writing as a side line will help much toward making both ends meet. In the first place, though it is all story telling, the technique is entirely different. In photoplay you must preserve the continuity of time. In fiction you can start where you please and go back and, indeed, it is often a good plan to start your story in the middle and go back to the beginning in the second paragraph.

But the most important difference is that in fiction you must sell on style. This is almost the first requisite, for a good style will cover up a deficiency of plot. In photoplay plot is essential for there is no chance to cover its lack with style, and herein lies the great difference, but style is developed only through long practise and it is far more difficult to sell a story on style than to sell a photoplay on idea. The idea will not carry the story. It may carry a photoplay sale.

Generally the student will find that photoplay writing hurts literary style to some extent since the short scenes make for a choppy and broken development of the story when the same plan of development is followed in story writing. Those who can write both fiction and photoplay are doubly armed, but it must not be supposed that proficiency in photoplay will argue for a ready sale in fiction. Virtually a new start and an entirely fresh succession of heart breaks must be the price of success. It would be better to stick to photoplay and hope for the early coming of the day when manufacturers will buy and pay decent prices for outside stuff.

Here's a Chance.

E. J. Montagne, of the Vitagraph script department, writes that he is at present with the Bay Shore Studio where Ralph Ince, John Robertson and Frank Currier are working. Most of the scripts are purchased through the home office, but this Ince section is willing to consider one reel comedies, three reels and features. They can be addressed to Bay Shore, Long Island, N. Y.

Relationships.

Keep your relationships simple and clear. An editor, reading in a hurry, has no time to stop and figure things out, yet one recent story reads, "also he is softened by his son, by his first wife, marrying his second wife's daughter by her first husband." It is all simple enough, but it sounds too complicated, and the editor is apt to throw it out.

Fifty-Fifty.

Split your play fifty-fifty. The director wants stuff that will show in effective picture. Give it to him. You want to write a real plot. Do that. Have the real plot the stuff that shows in the effective pictures and you and the director will both be pleased.

Consistent.

A man writes that he had a drama turned down by three producing managers so he sent it to a photoplay company. They turned it down, and he seems to think that this argues stupidity. We fail to see the point. Probably the play is a poor one in spite of the author's opinion of it. Certainly the authorities seem to be united.

Halfway True.

When you do not sell it is possible that you do not sell because your stories are not good enough. Not many authors will agree with that suggestion, but it is true. But sometimes it is merely because you do not tell your story clearly enough to let others see that it is as good as you know it to be. See if that is not the trouble. It is one of these two, as a rule, but it is as likely to be one as the other.

When you write your synopsis, knowing all about the story, you make mental allowance for many things that should be set down on the paper, and you do not realize that the omission has been made because each time you read it you supply the missing facts. The editor does not read with your knowledge. He sees only what is on the paper.

Imagination.

The author without imagination is like the fisherman without bait. He can work as long as he wants but he'll never catch anything.

Keep On.

If you cannot write a story, write something. Perhaps some day you can change it into a story.

OF EPES WINTHROP SARGENT'S
Technique of the Photoplay
Will come from the press some time in June. This is not a reprint of the second edition, but a new work of seventy-two chapters and appendix.
Watch for announcement.

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost) will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both, for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 141.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Theater managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

What do you understand by a carbon filament lamp? By a metallic filament lamp? By a Mazda lamp?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 134.

I have divided the Roll of Honor on Question 134 into two sections. The first section is comprised of those who took cognizance of the fact that double braided rubber covered insulation is required for conduit. The rest of the replies were correct except for that one thing.

Section 1. Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas, who quoted the National Code verbatim; Manuel Nosti, Tampa, Fla.; W. B. Allen, Edmonton, Canada; L. Pagenhardt, Westernport, Md., and G. A. Yager, Anadarko, Okla.

Section 2. Comprises W. C. Crawford, Brooklyn, N. Y.; F. F. Bell, Palestine, Texas; Wilson Hays, Barton, Md.; B. P. Warrick, Worthington, Minn., and George F. Cushing, Elizabeth, N. J.

Brother Nosti has covered the matter quite completely and in good form, therefore his reply is selected for publication.

Reply to Question No. 134.

By Manuel Nosti, Tampa, Fla.

The Question:

What wire insulations may and may not be used in conduit? Why are stranded wires usually used in conduit instead of solid? Where must conduit be used and where may open wiring be permitted?

The Answer:

Wires for conduit must have an approved rubber insulation, double braided for twin, twisted pair or multiple conductor cables, and for all single conductor cables of No. 6 B. & S. gauge, or larger. Provided special permission first be secured from the electrical department of the city, slow burning insulation may be used in permanently dry locations where excessive temperatures are present. Stranded wires are used for the larger sizes of wire in conduits, because there is less liability of damage to the insulation in pulling them through the conduit; they are more easily pulled through than are the solid wires. It would be almost impossible to pull solid wires No. 6 or larger in size into the ordinary conduit system, at least without serious injury to the insulation.

Conduit must be used in operating room work and in all theater wiring, including the stage; also where the wires cross floor timbers in cellars or elsewhere where they might be exposed to injury. Open wiring is sometimes used in mills and places where looks are not considered, but even this practice is being gradually discontinued in favor of the conduit system of wiring.

Two Men Answer.

Some time ago I printed a little puzzle about a white figure in a film not scorching, whereas darker portions of the film did, inviting our readers to tell me why. Up to date only two men have been able to solve that particular puzzle; one being J. B. Middleton, Portland, Ore., and the other either Brother La Grow, Brother Martin, or Brother Griffiths. I have forgotten which and I do not seem to locate the letter. Friend Middleton's answer is as follows:

> With regard to your puzzle page 797, April 29th issue, the answer is that the light is let through the white portions, which do not absorb nearly so great an amount of the rays, and hence do not get as hot as do the dark portions, therefore the dark portions will always scorch or burn before the white ones. You can very easily prove this by binding a pair of clean cover glasses like a slide and inserting them in your stereopticon, using an amperage from 25 to 30. These cover glasses will stand almost indefinitely without getting unduly warm, but a slide with dark emulsion on will usually crack within one minute. As a rule, as you have no doubt noticed, more slides crack on the emulsion side than on the cover side, this by reason of the fact that the light is stopped by the dark emulsion and heats up the glass foundation much more quickly than it does the cover glass.

Right you are, Brother Middleton. It was a very simple thing, and I had supposed there were many operators who could answer it, but it seems not.

It's a Humdinger.

J. L. Arnold, Bellingham, Washington, says:

> I wish to let you know there is one more who appreciates the work you are doing for the operator, and the efforts you are putting forth to raise him above the level of a common laborer. Of course there are those who won't study, or even read—the men who already "know it all;" but their tribe is decreasing, praise be! Compliments on the new Handbook! It's a humdinger as far as I have gone into it, and is couched in such clear, understandable language that any one with a lick of sense ought to comprehend it. I have been working on the questions for some time, and sure have learned a lot about rectifiers during the past month, more in fact than in all my three years experience, and it is all due to the questions.

During my next winter's trip in the West, Brother Arnold, I shall probably make the trip from Seattle to Vancouver, and if the Bellingham men wish it possibly I can arrange to stop one day in your city and deliver a lecture on projection.

Very Bad.

J. J. Van Dersarl, Dawson, N. M., encloses four dollars for the Handbook and forty cents for the questions, and says:

> I have been busy trying to get the "light ghost" out of the field of my pictures, but don't seem to have much success. However, I will wait until the "Bible" comes, and then if I cannot dope it out myself it's going to be put up to Dad Richardson. I am for not only good but excellent projection. Although I don't like the idea, I am compelled to project a 20 foot picture at a 54 foot throw, using an objective one inch in diameter, with shaded corners as a result. That is not all, however, for when I first began to use this Power's Six A, now over a year ago, the travel ghost was terrible. I made a shutter similar to the one you had a design of in a recent issue of the department; also I cut off some of the lens tube, reversed the focusing barrel and placed the stereo bracket under the magazine thumb screw, placing the shutter less than one-fourth of an inch from the driving gear, with result that Mr. Travel Ghost has not shown up since.

It strikes me you have done about everything that could be done under this condition. A 20 foot picture at 54 feet is simply awful. It's very, very bad, and I doubt if the definition of your picture is good all over. What's the idea, anyway? Seems to me that you might much better reduce the width of that picture by at least 4 feet. You would get a more brilliant picture, and a far, far better projection in every way. If you get a shutter with a main blade wide enough to down the travel ghost under your present conditions, you certainly have got to speed your machine up pretty fast or have a terrific flicker.

Editor or Fish.

Recently the editor had an "experience"; also his "better half" had one, too. We went up to Liberty, 125 miles northwest. Left there on a nasty, foggy morning, and negotiated fifty miles varying from punk to good mountain roads, in a drizzle, which at Tuxedo, 60 miles from New York, changed to a rain. On the front of the motorcycle was a big suitcase, and on the rear the frau. Can you imagine us going 60 miles through a downpour at (whisper—keep it from the cops) 35 to 40 miles an hour, with water coming down, and, when the tires struck it also "going up"? It was an experience all right, but we enjoyed it all the same, and were none the worse for the drenching, though the editor tried to get the frau to run him through the clothes ringer when we got home.

All Forwarded.

There were a great many applications for the position of operator at the Y. M. C. A. near Philadelphia. They have all been forwarded to the manager without comment.

Operating Room Size.

John Koltzan, Brooklyn, N. Y., says:

On page 971, May 6th, issue, you ask for opinions as to operating room sizes. Well, in my judgment, for one machine a room should be at least 8 feet wide, so that the operator can have plenty of room on both sides of his machine; also to get the machine a goodly distance from the operating room door, which frequently opens on the side, though it is very bad practice to locate it thus. The room should be at least 9 feet deep in order that the machine may be set back far enough from the front wall so that the operator can pass in front of it. As to the ceiling, the minimum height should be 7½ feet; even the added six inches would make for better air circulation. For two machines the room should be 12 feet wide by 9 deep, with a minimum 7½ feet from the floor to ceiling. These dimensions will give ample space for the operator. My own operating room contains two machines. It is 7 feet deep by 11 feet wide and 7 feet high, which does not give me room enough to walk around the machine nearest the opposite wall from the door, which latter opens into the main auditorium. As I said I consider the opening of the door at the side as being very, very bad.

I agree with the brother on his 9-foot-deep proposition, but is not the width a little excessive, remembering that in many instances, where it is necessary to displace seats in locating the operating room, space is exceedingly valuable?

Friend Koltzan is certainly conservative in his ceiling height. Personally I would rather add six inches to his figures in that direction.

Up a Tree.

A. A. McDonald, Halifax, N. S., writes:

I am up a tree. Have an Edison transformer about six months old which is supposed to deliver 40 to 50 amperes. It did this for about three months, but, without having given any previous notice, it began to deliver 80 to 100 amperes, the device getting red hot. What is wrong? I am having excellent success using ¾ inch Diamant carbons on A. C. They are the best I have ever used. The light has a slight bluish tint, and there is absolutely no noise or hum of any kind. I have read with a good deal of pleasure of your contemplated go-devil trip to Gaspe and Nova Scotia. Don't miss Halifax on that trip.

As to the transformer, Brother McDonald, unless your voltage supply has been changed from 110 to 220, which does not seem reasonable because you certainly would have known that, there is something radically wrong with the instrument, and you should immediately either send it to the manufacturer or to some competent electrical repair man who understands transformers. Just what may be wrong I could not say. If it was a short in the coils it should hardly last any length of time at all; the whole coil should get hot and burn out. I really do not know what is the matter, but it is some thing pretty bad if the amperage has jumped to 100.

I cannot say whether I can make Halifax or not. I am going to have to travel mighty near 15,000 miles during the year, delivering lectures on projection. I would like to make your city all right, and perhaps I can. I would suggest that you find out how the roads are from Moncton to Halifax, and let me know.

A New Comer.

F. H. Gray, Wellington, Colo., says:

Of course you have never heard of me before for I am running a very small theater in a very small town. During the year we have been running we have obtained practically all our information from the projection department, Mr. Sargent's department, and your Hand Book. The good old M. P. World was one of the very first pieces of equipment installed, and will be the last we will let go.

Just now we are bothered with a little trouble which I have hesitated to ask about because it looks so elementary. However as you seem willing to help the honest ignorant, here goes: a short time ago we began using a longer throw, and changed our objective lenses. The picture is the proper size and is in good focus, but to obtain both these it is necessary to extend our objective so far forward that only the back end of the jacket remains in the head. So far as I can see the back focus does not make any change in condition. We are using a Powers Five, with a 5½ inch E. F. objective; a 6½ and a 7½ inch condenser with the 7½ in front. The throw is about 73 feet. There is another trouble. The lower loop some times begins to jump, and will keep gradually taking up until the loop is entirely gone; then if it is not set again will break the film. This is especially noticeable on two Universal serials we are running. Have tried loosening the belt, but nothing seems to stop the difficulty. We get out juice from a 2 K. W. kerosene engine generator set, and get a good light. Is there any way we could draw current from this generator for ignition after getting the plant started, so we could switch off the batteries and thus save them, as well as insure a steady, hot spark? I have been wondering about this, but could think of no way to do it. If you can help us out on these things I hope you will, and I want to thank you for the great help we have already obtained from the department.

In the first place, Brother Gray, if your picture is of the proper size and in good focus, the only question remaining is: are you wasting light? In order to determine this I would refer you to Table 1, Page 141 of the Handbook, or send me the following data: (a) exact diameter of opening in objective lens; (b) exact distance from rear lens of objective to film when the picture is in focus on the screen; (c) what is the distance from the apex of the front condenser to the film when the lamphouse is back as far as you can get it? As to the lower loop jumping, this may be due to either one of three things. First: take up tension too tight; second: idler of lower sprocket sets too near to, or too far away from the sprocket, or its spring is too weak; third: lower sprocket out of line sidewise with the aperture. You should not "loosen the belt" but the tension itself. See Page 459 of the Handbook; also Figure 283, Page 592. If you haven't the third edition of the Handbook by all means get it. The fact that you have the second edition does not mean that you don't need the third. The second edition was a good book, but the third is as far ahead of it as the second was ahead of the first. With regard to the batteries, I am not certain. I believe in order to do that you would have to use a condenser. Let some one who is posted kindly set forth the dope on that particular proposition.

Righto.

M. W. Reed, Charles City, Iowa, says:

With regard to puzzle in April 29th issue, page 797, however laughable it may be, here is my answer, and I am going to stick to it until I see I am wrong. The light rays that strike the figures dressed in white pass on through to the screen, meeting with very little resistance at the film, whereas those striking the dark portions can go no further, as the dark part of the film is almost non-transparent, therefore rays striking that portion generate considerable heat on the surface of the film, and cause it to burn sooner than the portions which are more nearly transparent. I have been in this same house for four years, and am taking this day off to celebrate.

Nothing laughable about it, Brother Reed. You are perfectly correct, and, moreover, you express it in an exceedingly good way. Resistance generates heat, and the dark parts of the film offer resistance to the passage of the light rays. Nope. Nothing doing in the laugh line. In fact, you may step up in the general direction of the head of the class on this particular proposition.

A Correction.

Our attention has been called to an error in a special to The Moving Picture World from the Midwest News Service, which appears on page 304, April 8th issue, and we are requested to make correction. The statement is therein made that the "Muse," Omaha, Nebraska, is equipped with two Power's Six machines, whereas the equipment consists of two Baird projectors. The correction is requested by Brother A. C. Hartman of the Omaha Film Exchange.

From New Orleans.

Ernst Boehringer, manager Columbia Amusement Co., New Orleans, La., says:

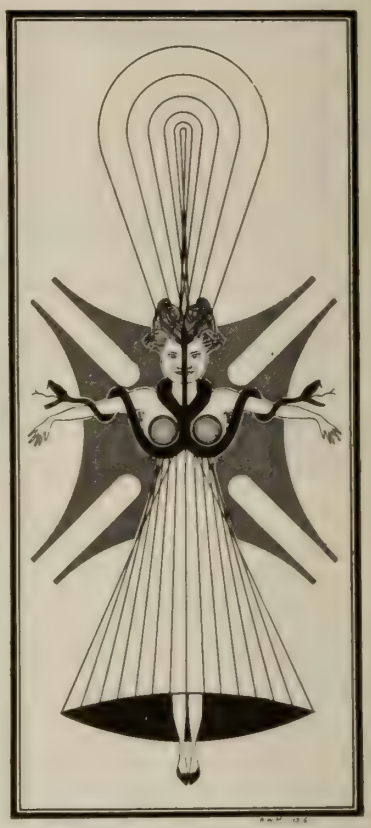
While addressing you I thought it well to tell you a few things about our Triangle Theater. The Triangle is the thoroughly renovated Greenwall, an ex-legitimate theater, and is another example of the inroads the silent drama is making upon the legitimate. It makes an ideal photoplay theater. We have heard many persons remark how comfortable they felt here, and how much better they liked it than the long, narrow houses. We have our 21 foot Minusa screen set 26 feet from the footlights, in a deep shadow box. The box is flat black and perfectly plain except for two thirteen foot triangle emblem electric signs, one on either side, which are illuminated only at intermission. We have a shadow screen around the orchestra pit, so that the orchestra lights are obscured. Two latest model Simplex projectors set 60 feet from the screen at the front of the balcony. By setting them there we killed nearly two hundred seats, but obtain an almost straight throw. We honestly believe we have the clearest, sharpest picture in New Orleans. Inverted lighting furnishes sufficient light to seat our patrons, and we don't like too much light in a theater. Our rows of chairs are 32 inches back to back. The Triangle is some theater.

My compliments, Brother Boehringer. I am always glad to hear of houses of this kind. When you killed two hundred seats in order to get perfect projection you certainly went the limit. I doubt if there are one hundred managers in the whole United States and Canada who would do that. That 26 feet from the foots and the shadow box sounds very good to me. Some time next winter I expect to have the pleasure of giving your house the "once over," and of meeting you, as well as all other New Orleans managers, New Orleans exchange men and New Orleans operators, personally. I will deliver a lecture on practical projection in your city at that time, and believe that I will have things to say which will open the eyes of quite a number of your people to things in connection with projection which they never even so much as thought of.

Official Error.

The Omaha (Nebraska) Film Exchange writes saying that the Omaha city electrician is insisting that all motor generator controls, ammeters, and voltmeter be installed in the basement, or wherever the motor generator is placed, and not in the operating room. In the "Muse," a new $60,000 house, just completed, the electrician has insisted that the equipment above mentioned be not placed in the operating room. The Omaha Film Exchange says the electrician informs them that this is the Chicago underwriters' ruling, and remarks if this is true manufacturers of the Fort Wayne, General Electric, Hallberg and Hertner generator sets, and the Wotten Rexolux are misleading, as all their illustrations show ammeter and voltmeter in the operating room. The Omaha Film Exchange asks for such information as we can give them.

As to this ruling of the Omaha city electrician, it seems to be simply another case of official error. In the first place the motor generator itself ought to be in the operating room, or in a room immediately adjacent thereto. In the second place, regardless of whether the motor generator is placed in the operating room or not, the voltmeter and ammeter should by all means be installed on the front wall of the operating room, just to the right of the left hand observation port, or as near that location as they can be placed. If the Omaha city electrician can give any reason, based in common sense, why there should be an ammeter and voltmeter at the machine itself, then let one be placed there, but after an experience of many years I do not see why this is necessary. I know of no ruling, such as the Omaha city electrician cites, being made by the "Chicago Fire Underwriters," but even if there is one that does not prove anything, because there have in the past been some of the most absolutely idiotic official rulings conceivable made in the city of Chicago. Why, at one time they actually threatened to close down a theater in Chicago because the owner refused to place sheet steel backed by ¾ inch asbestos on an 18 inch brick wall, eighty feet long by eighteen feet high, the same being without a break or opening. Don't laugh, gentlemen. I myself was operator in that theater at that time, and know what I am talking about. Chicago's city council had passed an ordinance requiring that walls and ceilings of theaters under living apartments be thus "protected."



The Spirit of Aberration,
By R. W. Martin.

Just why the Omaha city electrician wishes to hamper operators by having the voltmeter and ammeter placed outside the operating room is something of a mystery. It is not at all an uncommon thing, however, for public officials to try to force through their own individual ideas, regardless of reason and common sense, because they well know the power they have to annoy the theater owner who opposes their "rulings." Undoubtedly the "Muse" theatre could have gotten an injunction and stopped this particular piece of foolishness, but it would be altogether possible for the city official whose ideas were thus squelched to thereafter make life very miserable for the owner of that theater.

For the information of the city electrician let me say, first, as I have already remarked, the whole motor generator outfit ought to be placed directly in the operating room, or immediately adjacent thereto, with the voltmeter and ammeter in the operating room located as before set forth; second: that New York and Boston, both of which cities are right up to the minute in matters of this kind, not only permit the installation of voltmeters and ammeters, and controlling switches of the motor generator set in the operating room, but permit the whole outfit to be placed there. This also is true in practically every city in the United States. If there is a ruling against it in Chicago, I have not heard of it, and it is a ruling which is not based on practical knowledge, or founded in common sense. It is too bad that the moving picture industry is thus at the mercy of official incompetency and subject to the half-baked ideas of every Tom, Dick and Harry who happens to temporarily attain official authority.

The Spirit of Projection.

A Dangerous Practice.

F. E. Record, Jr., Mineral Wells, Texas, says:

Some time back I read in the department a statement that it was impossible to run continuous picture with one machine. I dispute this. By putting an extra spindle on top, or above the upper magazine and in line with same, removing the reel that is showing when almost ended, looping same over top spindle, shaking the film free, and by making a quick patch, both ends being already scraped, and placing the new reel on the spindle, and splitting the bottom reel on the run, the same may be done with a little practice and care. Did this stunt myself for quite a while, and know of two other operators who have done it successfully. However, I can make a change in six seconds, according to a stop watch, from the time the picture leaves the screen until the new reel is on, with less danger and no film on the floor, so I am not running continuous now, as that necessitates letting some film be on the floor, which should be avoided. We have a house which is modern in all repects, with the exception of having only one Power's Six A motor driven machine. Please send me the new Handbook. I don't belong to the I. A. on account of no local here; also might not be able to get in. Can I send in examination and apply for membership in the I. A. while in this town? Also should I leave here could I get a position in a union town? What is the amount of dues and fees?

No, I am not going to pan you more than to say that while the stunt you describe could be pulled off all right, still it would be very dangerous, and would not be tolerated in any large city. I have been in Mineral Wells, and remember the little town and its hotels quite well, although it was almost ten years ago. I believe you are within the jurisdiction of the Fort Worth local, and would suggest that you address L. Friedman, secretary, Local Union 330, P. O. Box 543, Forth Worth, Texas. No, you could not work in a union town without being a member, if the local controlled the situation. Cannot tell you the dues or initiation fee, as that varies with the locality.

Trolley Conductor Operators.

R. W. Middlecamp, Allentown, Pa., writes:

I enclose a piece of film amputated from a five reel Mutual feature. The subject was, at the time I used it, about fifteen days old. By inspecting the sample you will see that some operators would, or ought to make good trolley conductors, as they certainly can handle the punch to a hard boiled frazzle. (How about pugilists? Ed.) By using 2,000 foot reels, at least this particular outrage would be reduced to a minimum. Another thing in favor of the 2,000 foot reel is that many operators splice two reels together into one 2,000 footer, taking them apart again, of course, before shipping away. Every time this is done from two to six inches of film are wasted, which, in course of time, amounts to considerable. Just the other day I received a five day Mutual five reel feature. Fifteen feet from the end of each reel one of the trolley conductor crank twisters had started his punch working, and the film was punched clear to the end. I was forced to take off fifteen feet of film from each reel, which spoiled their ending.

The brother's letter is a little bit mixed, but what he is driving at is plain enough. He favors 2,000 foot reels, and is opposed to the punch marks. The sample he sent is 5¾ inches in length and in it are eleven round punch holes all evidently made by one operator. Eight pictures are ruined. If that operator could be identified he ought to be promptly discharged. I am sending the following letter to the president of the Mutual Film Corporation:

President Mutual Film Corporation,
71 West 23d St., N. Y. City.

Dear Sir:

Attached hereto find a sample of film which was cut out of one of your features by an operator. You will observe that in this 5¾ inch sample there are eleven punch marks. This evil is a rapidly growing one which ought to be checked. I would suggest to you that the only practical way to check it is to incorporate into your multiple reel features some change-over sign which the operator can readily recognize and then instruct your exchanges to watch closely and charge up against the theatre every foot of film ruined in this way.

The flashing of these marks on the screen is very bad indeed, and, moreover, operators who take pride in their work promptly cut off the piece of film containing them, so that in the course of time the ends of multiple reels are practically ruined.

I would suggest also that the punching of films by the manufacturers for the purpose of identification, ought to be stopped. Many operators excuse the practice of punching change-over signs into the film by citing the fact that the manufacturer or exchange inserts punch marks, some times as many as four or five in each reel of film.

Trusting you will give this matter the attention it deserves, I am,

Very truly yours,
F. H. Richardson.

Amusement Trade Body.

Touro Glucksmann, New Orleans, La., writes:

Enclosed find clipping from this morning's (April 26th) New Orleans American, announcing your proposed future visit to this city. I would like to call attention of operators in general to the fact that Local 293 has formed an Amusement Trade Body with the following: musicians, bill posters and stage employes. We find we get better results in signing up contracts by this plan.

A Trade Body of this kind in a city the size of New Orleans is just plain, common sense. In my judgment any city which contains organizations of electricians, operators, bill posters, musicians, and stage employes ought to have a theatrical trade council. San Francisco and New York city each have one, it has worked extremely well. I believe it will do the same in New Orleans, or in any other city where it is tried and run properly.

A Presentation.

During the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America's Exposition at Madison Square Garden, Miss Anita Stewart was called to the stage and was, by Local Union 306, M. P. M. O., New York City, presented with a beautifully-engrossed resolution of thanks, and a magnificent cluster of American Beauty roses.

The presentation was made by the editor, assisted by President Crehan, Secretary Fred Stoffregen, Al. Mackler, business agent, and Brothers Hollender, Gluck and Edwards.

At the last annual ball given by Local Union 306, Miss Stewart had promised to honor the local by her presence, and although the night was stormy and utterly miserable, Miss Stewart literally got up out of a sick bed to make her promise good. Under these circumstances Local Union 306 thought, and thought rightly, too, it would be eminently proper that some fitting acknowledgement be made, and this sentiment crystallized into the presentation as before set forth. In closing the remarks preceding the presentation Editor Richardson said: "These roses, Miss Stewart, will fade, but the feeling of kindly regard and esteem in which you are held by the eight hundred members of Local Union 306 will never fade. The thought of your kindness and loyalty to your pledged word will remain a pleasant memory, and your shadow form upon the screen will always meet a warm smile of welcome from the boys who man the machines in the six hundred Greater New York City theaters."

From a Manager.

On the night of May 6th, as has already been noted, I, at a banquet, addressed Local Union 384, Hoboken, N. J. Now comes C. G. Hayes, manager U. S. Garden Theatre, Elizabeth, N. J., who says:

I was one of those fortunate enough to be in attendance at the banquet of Local Union No. 384, Saturday evening, May 6th, and I think congratulations for your masterly address are in order. I remained until the last word was spoken at 4 a. m., and felt your address well repaid me for the time spent, even at that late, or early, hour. I trust that your missionary work in this direction will bear fruit, and that I will again have the pleasure of meeting you personally at some future time.

It is gratifying to know that, although I speak pretty plainly to managers concerning some of their errors, still as a general proposition they are broad minded enough to realize the fact that my criticism is wholly and entirely for their own good, as well as the good of the moving picture industry. I appreciate the kindness of Manager Hayes in sending this letter of appreciation. There were not as many managers present as I would have liked to have seen, although at that there was a goodly number. So anxious am I to do all the good possible that I make this offer here and now: At any time the Hudson County Exhibitors' League wishes me to address its members, and will undertake the contract of getting out a good attendance, I will be very glad indeed to give the time necessary to do it. These lectures are given for the good of the industry, and for the good of theater managers and operators. I am neither a film producer, a manufacturer, or a supply dealer. I have no axe of any kind whatsoever to grind and only seek to do the greatest possible amount of good in improving the methods of projection of the moving picture.

Pleasure and Benefit.

A. C. Michel, New York City, encloses money for the second set of questions, and says:

I would very much like to tell you of the pleasure and benefit I derive from reading and studying the department. This, however, I am unable to do because of the fact that my working vocabulary is some several short of the requisite number of adjectives and synonyms necessary; also I haven't the time because it would require several weeks of continuous pen pushing to do the job in the way I would want to do it. The booklet costs 25 cents; I am sending thirteen two cent stamps because I don't want to spoil the color scheme. You will, however, please donate the extra penny to the Society of "Expert Projectionists" opposed to the projection department, and all other methods of increasing projection knowledge—do doubt they need it.

All of which speaks for itself. I would gladly donate the extra penny but I don't know where the headquarters of this particular organization reside, unless it is in a certain city noted for wind and big feet. If J. M. of that classic village claims the penny he can have it without argument.

Manufacturers' Notice.

It is a rule of this department that no apparatus will be recommended editorially until the value of such appliances has been demonstrated to its editor.

One of the greatest examples of industry has been brought to the notice of the Editor in the person of Conrad H. Thiele, 437 West 41st street, New York City, who has given us some photographs of his home made "3 in 1" camera as he calls it because he can use it for the triple purpose of taking, printing and projecting. He showed some really excellent strips of film which he had taken with his home made box.

There is no reason that any young would-be camera man with a little ingenuity and mechanical ability cannot do as well for himself.

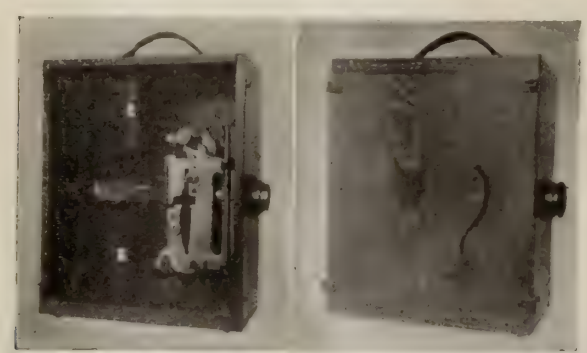
In the old days, when the Patents' Company controlled the camera situation and it was impossible to buy a camera under any pretext, there were many thousands of feet of independent film manufacturers' negatives turned out from cameras constructed from projection heads.

In this case Mr. Thiele used an old Powers No. 5 head with an inside shutter which he modified by cutting it down to one blade.

Conrad H. Thiele.

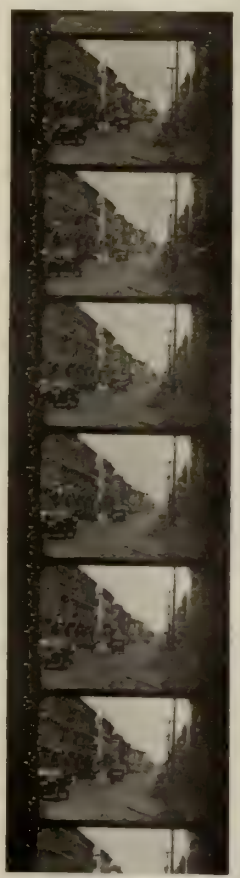
In making such a camera it is necessary to purchase a photographic lens for taking the pictures, as a projecting lens is not suitable, although the focussing mount may be used by fixing the photographic objective in a tube the same size as the barrel of the projecting lens and slipping it in place in the mount.

The retorts or film magazines may be made from a good quality of cigar box wood but it is much better to obtain some thin close-grained wood from a cabinet maker.



Interior and Exterior Views of the Home-made Camera.

The film is wound up into the take up magazine by a spring belt. A spindle in the center of the magazine box is arranged with a grooved pulley on the exterior of the retort and a longitudinal slot or groove in the spindle on the interior engages a key or peg which projects into the center of the film spool and prevents the film spool from rotating on the spindle, or the film spool may be keyed on the spindle the same as a reel in a take up magazine on a projection machine.



Sample Print of Negative Made With the Home-made Camera.

The spring belt connects the take up retort with the take up pulley on the machine head and the slippage of the belt compensates for the increasing sized roll, the same as the slippage of the friction clutch on a projection machine take up.

Usually a motion picture camera has a short crank and takes eight pictures per turn, but although the amateur mechanic can provide a two to one reduction gear for the crank if he sees fit, it is not absolutely necessary, and if he is an old machine operator, he can easily sense the correct turning time without preliminary practice with a short crank.

The accompanying illustrations show the camera open and closed, the young constructor and a short section of film which he made with it.

A tube containing a magnifying glass extends from the back of the gate to the rear of the camera and permits of focussing on the film without opening the camera.

When taking, this focussing orifice is closed by a brass flap which turns to one side flat against the back of the camera on a screw through a hole in its edge.

When printing from the negative with this camera the positive stock is placed in the retort and a rack for holding the negative is fastened to the top of the camera. Directly above the feed sprocket in the camera case is a velvet lined slot which admits the negative and below the take up sprocket is another out of which the negative is fed as fast as printed.

When in use as a camera these slots are closed with pieces of brass much the same as the focussing orifice at the back.

When printing the lens is removed and a printing light placed in front of the camera at a distance gauged by the density of the negative which may be inspected during the printing through the focussing tube at the back. If possible, for the printing a small detachable handle should be made to fit on the end of a sprocket spindle or upon one of the shafts which, like the shutter, revolves once for each picture or frame, as it is termed, so that the mechanism can be more easily operated at the slower speed required for printing. It is best to adopt a uniform speed of turning for printing and to vary the exposure as required by the different negative densities by adjusting the distance of the printing light.

In printing, the negative and positive are threaded together in contact, emulsion to emulsion, taking care to make a slightly larger loop in the positive than in the negative, as the larger radius of curve described by the positive film requires a longer arc to subtend it. If this is not done, the negative film must buckle slightly to accommodate itself within the loop of positive and give imperfect contact and a tendency to crawl.

A crawl is a shifting of the relation of frame and the perforations causing unsteadiness and misframing.

When used as a projector, the screws which hold the head in the camera are loosened and it is replaced in position on a projecting machine stand.

Putting the Move in the Movies.

The Saturday Evening Post for May 13th carries an article under this title which will be well worth the investment of five cents for a copy for every camera man to read.

While there is not much said about the technical side of the work in motion picture studios, the article is nevertheless of great importance on account of the excellent way in which it presents the idea of scientific management and factory efficiency as applied to the running of the studio: ideas which have been advocated by this department for application in both the studio and the factory end and which are daily coming into greater and greater account in the management of up-to-date studios.

Conducted by Clarence E. Sinn and S. M. Berg

Musical Setting for "The Lights of New York."

Released May 29 by the V-L-S-E, Inc.—Suggestions Prepared by S. M. Berg.

(By special arrangement with G. Schirmer, Inc., Music Publishers, New York.)

THIS "Musical Suggestion Cue Sheet" is not designed to solve every possible musical requirement of the film, but is intended as a partial solution of the problem—what to play for the picture. It has proven to be of great assistance to the leader, not only by relieving to a degree the tedium of rehearsals, but by assisting materially in overcoming those conditions encountered when the film is not available until the hour of performance.

Musical Suggestion Cue Sheets can be obtained (free of charge) by managers from their local exchange in advance of the date of release. This will afford to the progressive leader an opportunity to acquaint himself with the general character of the film drama he is to portray with his orchestra.

Together with the suggested music at the title or descriptive cues where it is to be played, the tempo or characteristic is given so that the leader can select or substitute any or all of the numbers from his own library, thereby avoiding any financial outlay though still carrying out the interpretation.

The timing of the picture is based on a speed of 15 minutes to a thousand feet. The time indications will help the leader to anticipate the various cues which may consist of the printed sub-title (marked T) or a described action (marked D). For instance, 3½ T "Poppy Brown" is a sub-title and is printed reading matter on the screen. But 20 D "Hawk calls on dancing master" is a description of action.

Hawk Chovinski, a sneak thief, holds up Yolande Cowles and her father as they are coming home from the opera one night and the shock kills the father. Hawk made such a small haul that he decides to become a society gentleman and ply his trade. His step-sister, Poppy, lives with him, but his brutality causes her to run away. After much suffering her lover Skelly takes her to Martin Dale, wealthy settlement worker and admirer of Yolande, who provides her with work. Hawk, posing as a Baron, works his way into high society and meets Yolande, who does not recognize him. He wins her affections and her promise to marry him. On the wedding day his real identity is revealed and he is imprisoned. Yolande then accepts the true love of Martin, while Skelly and Poppy are happily married.

A considerable amount of action is at a popular restaurant showing the guests dancing. Great care must be taken in following the dancers' tempo.

The THEME selected is "Little Song"—d'Ambrosio.

Time schedule: 71 minutes (five reels—about 4,700 feet).

Time.		Subtitles or Descriptive Cues.	Music.
0	D	Opening.	Little Song—d'Ambrosio. (Allegretto moderato (THEME)

Insulting the Patrons.

An Incident in a Theater.

By S. M. Berg.

ON a well-known thoroughfare a few nights ago, I noticed a crowd gathering in front of a small theater. Being curious to learn the cause of the disturbance, I joined the throng. The doorman and a patron were having a heated argument over a ticket and it seemed that a fight would ensue. A man who held authority came upon the scene and inquired the cause of the trouble. In a few brief words he satisfied the patron that the doorman was wrong and asked him why he dared insult his patrons. He then made it clear that, right or wrong, the patron must always be right. The next time the doorman took the liberty of insulting a patron he would lose his job. Impressed by this remark, I felt that this exhibitor gives careful attention to details, which tends to make an audience satisfied.

I entered the theater. It was a clean, orderly house, capacity about eight hundred, with comfortable chairs, uniformed ushers, no posts to obstruct the view; in fact, a model house as far as appearances go. The projection appeared to be good, and the house was well filled. I found a seat in the second row, and naturally my attention was directed to the music. I saw a young man, the pianist, struggling through a waltz in D, but, to be frank, it sounded like L. The picture, which was a scenic, finally ended and the music stopped, much to my relief. A few slides announced the coming attractions—then the feature was thrown on the screen.

In the meantime, two young women took seats in the front row. Evidently they were the pianist's friends, for the three began an animated conversation. The feature was well under way when a young man with a violin case came down the aisle and jumped over the railing. He greeted the pianist and the young ladies and then leisurely opened his violin case. He looked up at the feature a minute and then decided that he was there to play.

He called the pianist's attention from his friends and had him strike A a few times so he could tune up. He then hurriedly searched through the music cabinet and finally found some music which he placed on the stand. The picture had been running now about ten minutes when the orchestra (?) started a late fox-trot. Without looking at the picture, the violinist sawed through the number, even failing to observe the expression marks. Each strain played with equal forte and the whole, being entirely out of harmony with the picture, was most distressing.

Where was the manager all this time? Probably in the box office, counting receipts and wondering why business was not better. Perhaps he was helping his porter paste up posters for the next day's show.

The violinist and pianist segued into Traumerei. The next scene was an Indian war dance, but the violinist ignored the change. Evidently he was determined to play Schumann's masterpiece to the end, as he continued playing it during the scene where the Indians went on the warpath. Attempting to turn the music, the pianist let it slip and fall to the floor. He attempted to "fake" an accompaniment, but without success. Poor Schumann's Traumerei came to an abrupt end. The violinist laid down his fiddle and sat back to rest a while (he needed it) and enjoy the picture.

I saw and heard enough, and walked out. As I reached the door, the same gentleman who had reprimanded the doorman remarked, "Good evening," and I answered "Good night."

Debating with myself a moment, I wondered whether or not I should point out to the manager that he was insulting his patrons by tolerating such inferior musical interpretations. I realized that "discretion is the better part of valor" and left the house.

All the glaring errors and indifference of the musicians escaped the watchful eye of the manager. The doorman was severely reprimanded when he argued with a patron over the validity of a ticket, but the orchestra, who were offending hundreds every week, escaped. Evidently the manager paid all attention to the front of the house, as most managers do.

If more exhibitors would watch the back of the house with the vigilance they do the box-office and front of the house, there would be fewer complaints about poor business.

A successful musical interpretation is as necessary to a picture as good projection.

How many managers tolerate for an instant a film that jumps, flickers, or is out of focus?

They pay careful attention that their patrons' eyes do not suffer. They read the trade magazines, always endeavoring to select the best pictures and best service.

Their machines receive careful attention. They are oiled regularly and when a part becomes worn, it is replaced with a new part at once. No expense is spared on the quality of their films or projection. They consider their patrons' intelligence when it comes to features and projection, but forget the discord and noise that comes from the orchestra pit—which offends their patrons' ears and intelligence. Their money is going out every week for rent and salaries—but money spent on such an orchestra as I have just described is money thrown away.

Intelligence enters into the success of any undertaking, but many managers neglect one of the most important features of a moving picture theater—the music.

Whether a pianist, an organ or an orchestra, the musical setting at all times should be in keeping with the atmosphere of the picture and never for an instant be permitted to interrupt the picture, any more than a film be permitted to jump all over the screen.

There is always room for improvement and development in music the same as anything else.

There are many different ways of playing a picture well and it behooves every manager to see that his musician or musicians study the work and develop a style and method that meets with the approval of the most discriminating patrons.

It can be done and is eventually bound to be recognized by the public.

The manager should always recognize a musician's ability and pay him accordingly. Good things come high, and this is certainly true of good music.

Most audiences demand good music the same as they do good pictures.

Until the music in picture theaters is seriously reckoned with, many houses throughout the country will suffer from poor business. It has been proved that good pictures and good music are money makers and the sooner the manager realizes this, the better for himself and the long suffering public.

"Ramona" Titles an Innovation

Clune Company Makes Distinct Artistic Advance with Its Leaders Superimposed on Still and Moving Backgrounds.

NEW ideas in the making of pictures are not so frequent that we can afford to pass without comment the titling of "Ramona," the first production of the W. H. Clune Film Company. There can hardly be question that the manner of presentation of the titles in this subject adds to the charm of the picture as a whole, that the leaders serve materially to decrease the illusion-destroying powers of these necessary evils. For evils in large measure titles undoubtedly are—and what good director does not go to lengths in his efforts to avoid their use, to so clarify his action as to reduce to a minimum the number that may be required intelligibly to tell the story.

Less of fruitful thought has been given to the making of titles than of perhaps any other department of picture-making. The greatest producers of the day—just as an illustration—continue to tint their titles in the same bath as that which carries the scene that follows it. On the heels of a scene in straight black and white will be a leader in pronouncedly contrasting tint—a glaring signal to the millions of picturewise that what comes next is to be a moonlight situation or one of sunlight or one of lamplight. It is a jolt, a piece of inartistry that is as frequent as it is inexcusable. It would seem to be a case of thousands of dollars for the director but not even tens of dollars for the laboratory. Ask a producer the why and the wherefore and he will blandly inform you that it is a matter of convenience to tint the title at the same time the film for the ensuing scene is dipped; that leaders at best are a nuisance to be got over in the easiest way.

The leaders in "Ramona" mark a distinct advance. They make for artistry, for notable progress. Briefly, they are printed upon film that carries under or near the lettering matter of atmospheric value, that which holds the spectator in the illusory grip of the particular scene about to be enacted. Lloyd Brown, general manager of the Clune company is credited with the idea. It seems that Mr. Brown in the course of his work decided he wanted something distinctive in the way of titles. With that absence of commotion that marks the development of all of the schemes that hatch in his mind, he quietly ordered an adobe hut built as a background. Then Enrico Vallejo, the Clune company photographer, was asked why he could not use the hut in obtaining double exposure effects. Mr. Vallejo saw the point.

Mr. Brown's original intention was to have two or three characteristic backgrounds for his leaders, these to run through the subject. For example, he chose a frame of eucalyptus logs tied with leather thongs for the direct quotations from Mrs. Jackson's book. For the "Romana" prologue, with its pronounced Spanish and Indian flavor, Mr. Brown chose the "'dobe" wall, showing first the window and again the doorway, double exposing the title over these. Then he discovered he must escape the peril of monotony, so he chose other typical backgrounds, such as a Mission Indian blanket or the pair of horses' heads.

"When Mr. Brown's noodle gets to work," as one of his associates declared in speaking of the subject of "Ramona" titles, "it is rapid and fecund. He soon had the idea of a moving background. Hence you see the birds moving about on the branches or the Indian running through the flaming embers of the village of Temecula behind lettering." The idea of the titles according to Mr. Brown's explanation, was like Topsy—"it just growed." One of the striking leaders is printed in white on a mountainside. The camera is shut down so as to bring the hills into silhouette, while the narrowed light has clearly brought out the clouds above. Another, during the sheep-shearing period, reveals thousands of sheep, moving like waves behind and to the side of the leader.

These are but a few instances of the many that enter into the making of the picture. That the innovation will be grasped by other producers is to be expected—and for that matter to be hoped for. Some have already declared their intention to "grab" the idea. One or two have attempted titles seemingly suggested by those in "Ramona," but apparently they have failed to realize that the chief virtue in the Clune title is its simplicity—the presence of the natural, the absence of the artificial.

LITTLE AUDREY BERRY VISITS OLD FRIENDS.

Little Audrey Berry, who will be remembered as one of the most popular child artists in motion pictures, was a visitor at the Vitagraph Flatbush studios, during the week and renewed her acquaintance with the various stars with whom she worked while a member of the stock company. The photoplay star was compelled to forego the lure of picture posing, for the time being, in order to pursue her studies which took up all her time.

"I am coming back to pictures some day," replied the little lady to a question as to what she intended doing when her education was finished, "and I do hope the Vitagraph company will give me another chance to meet my many friends through the medium of their pictures."

Miss Berry's most important pictures under the Vitagraph banner includes "The Jarr Family Series," in which she played Emma Jarr; "Mr. Santa Claus," "A Close Call," "The Crime of Cain" and "The Arrival of Josie."

WESTERN STORY FOR KERRIGAN.

F. McGrew Willis of the scenario department at Universal City, is at work on a new story for J. Warren Kerrigan, which is entitled "The Beckoning Trail," and in which the popular star plays the role of a dissolute young New Yorker, who goes to a Western mining camp where, during the train of events, he develops into a real man. One of the strong features of the story is a saloon fight in which Kerrigan is offered a splendid opportunity to display his gift of unusual strength, putting half a dozen Western huskies hors de combat in short order.

JACCARD TO FILM SERIES.

Under the main title of "Dollars and Sense," Director Jacques Jaccard will film a series of one-reel underworld photoplays, most of which will be written by himself. The first one will be entitled "Men and Women," work on which has been commenced. Jaccard's company will consist of G. Raymond Nye, playing the featured lead, with Miss Roberta Wilson, Miss Peggy Coudray and Si Clegg. Jaccard recently has finished a five-reel underworld film play entitled "It makes a Difference."

FEATURING THE DESERT.

Desert land close to Newhall, Calif., just outside of the beautiful San Fernando Valley, will serve as a setting for a number of the scenes in the forthcoming Horsley-Mutual production, "The Fool's Game," an unusual story from the pen of Crane Wilbur, who will also be seen as the star in this picture.

Chicago News Letter

By JAS. S. McQUADE.

Look at the Bright Side Once in a While.

ONE gets tired of writing and reading, week in and week out, about moving pictures with a long face and in serious vein. We take ourselves and our business too seriously. We laugh too little and are prone to look on the shady instead of the bright side of things. We need a tonic that will bring a little of the sunshine of optimism our way.

To have our minds constantly filled by the bogey of censorship will make us forget that the future of the moving picture cannot be permanently injured by it or any other agency. The character of the moving picture, like our own, is purified and shaped by hard knocks, bravely borne and triumphantly overcome. Its future is closely interwoven with our own, and it will become more increasingly serviceable to mankind if our best intelligence guides it.

How often do we miss observing the good that the moving picture accomplishes? A bright instance of this beneficent observation is furnished by the editor of the Brookfield (Mo.) Argus, whose discovery is preserved in print by the following editorial that recently appeared in the Chicago News, under the head, "'Movies' and Matrimony":

"There be grumpy folk who allege that the cure is worse than the disease when told that the film shows are cutting into the business of the saloons and are keeping people away from cabaret performances and tango teas, but even these congenital malcontents should say a word of praise for the 'movies' when they read the latest verdict in favor of those great modern entertainers. The motion pictures encourage matrimony!

"This interesting discovery has just been made by the Brookfield (Mo.) Argus, which alleges that the film drama has reduced the high cost of courtship. Courtship having been made cheaper, one may assume, without spraining a logical sequence, that matrimony will become more popular.

"The Argus man recalls that in the days of his youth it cost Philander to give his best girl an evening's treat $3 for theater tickets, $2 for a carriage and a breathless sum for supper. All that is now changed. The enamored youth of today drops around in the evening, takes the girl to a picture show—20 cents—invests a nickel in popcorn and 20 cents more in ice cream soda at the corner drug store. Then Cupid, with a full heart and a full tummy, is entirely satisfied. The frugal lover has merely to repeat this formula ad lib. until the fatal question is popped and 'they live happily ever after.'

"So far so good. If the 'movies' encourage matrimony, more power to them! But one of the almost invariable results of matrimony among our best people is children, and far too many 'movie' shows hang out that dreadful placard, 'No Children Admitted.' As the sponsors of families the 'movies' must consider the most important factors in families—the little people. Not only must they encourage the founding of families, but they must conserve the families when founded."

"Gloria's Romance" in the South.

M. E. Smith, superintendent of George Kleine's branch offices throughout the country, recently made a flying trip through the South, in the interests of "Gloria's Romance" and the Kleine-Edison features. He stopped over in Dallas, Houston and New Orleans and reports that the picture business is very prosperous throughout that section of country.

"Gloria's Romance" is now being run in the Halsey theaters in Dallas, Waco, Houston and Galveston, and good business is reported from all of them.

In New Orleans the Billie Burke novel was booked by Jake Miller in his Empire theater for a run of twenty weeks, each chapter being run for a week. The opening date was Sunday, June 4. The Empire is a high class theater and is patronized by the best people in the Crescent City.

Mr. Miller has the exclusive showing of Ivan productions in New Orleans, and also the state rights in Louisiana to "The Unwritten Law" (California), so that, in addition to "Gloria's Romance," his program will offer selections from these makes. The admissions at the Empire are 10 and 20 cents.

Mr. Miller is a liberal advertiser, and after booking "Gloria's Romance," he immediately decided on a personal publicity campaign for that moving picture novel, in addition to the prominent publicity given it in New Orleans by George Kleine.

Mr. Smith found business conditions of all kinds very good in the South, due to the largest cotton crop known in many years.

Chicago Film Brevities.

George Kleine arrived in the city Saturday, May 27, and returned to New York by the Twentieth Century on Tuesday, May 30. He was busily occupied during his stay and, when seen, expressed himself as being gratified with the great success of "Gloria's Romance."

I received a card invitation, by mail, last week to attend the opening of the American Theater, in Salt Lake City, on Wednesday evening, May 31. The card came from my old friend, William H. Swanson, who owns it and a circuit of theaters that stretches through Colorado, Utah and Montana. The card was gotten up especially to invite all the nobles of El Kalah Temple, A.A.O.N.M.S., in Salt Lake City, with the assurance that after the show it would give Mr. Swanson "great pleasure to meet all the nobles of this oasis informally on the hot sands of the theater lobby." Here's to the great success of the American Theater!

Harry Weiss, formerly manager of Metro's Chicago branch, has joined the forces of the Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., as associate manager of the Chicago branch. Manager I. Van Ronkle informs me that during the two weeks that Mr. Weiss has been in the office he has increased the business in a way that is highly satisfactory.

Judge Wm. Fenimore Cooper, who is up for re-election as judge of the Superior Court in this city, on June 5, has filed two suits in the Circuit Court, each for $200,000 damages, against Wm. Randolph Hearst and his publications for certain charges published against him. Judge Cooper has been a big friend of moving pictures, and has the hearty support of the entire trade in the city. In addition to slides recommending his re-election, the exhibitors and the trade have flooded the city with one-sheet posters, which bear the following request to voters: "The 'movies' of Chicago ask you to re-elect William Fenimore Cooper. He sustained our legal rights denied us by powerful opposition; re-elect him and encourage judges who are fearless in administering the law."

L. Wm. O'Connell, who has been actively associated in the auditing department of the Rothacker Film Mfg. Co. for a year, left Chicago Saturday, June 3, for a special trip of investigation which will embrace the entire Pacific Coast. It is his intention to call upon all the film producers in that territory, and make a comprehensive report covering the situation, for his company. Mr. O'Connell will return to Chicago about October 1.

Miss Eugenie Besserer, Matt. Snyder, Cecil Holland, Leo Pierson and George Fawcett return to Chicago on Monday, May 29, after appearing in the scenes taken for "The Crisis" at Vicksburg, Miss. Miss Eyt , who had never visited New York City, took advantage of the opportunity to pay the metropolis a brief visit, to which she proceeded direct from Vicksburg to take in the sights before returning to Los Angeles. Miss Besserer and Matt. Snyder, when seen by me, were enthused over the hospitality shown the Selig players in Vicksburg. Several very enjoyable social functions were given in their honor. Among these was one given by Harris Dickson, the famous author, whose "Ole Reliable" stories have scored such a hit in the Saturday Evening Post. Mr. Dickson threw open the doors of his mansion and entertained Director Colin Campbell and the Selig players to a real southern dinner. He also conducted the Selig players over the National Park in Vicksburg, pointing out all the points of interest and making them memorable by his explanations.

Matt. Snyder, now 82 years of age, and veteran of the Confederate army, who participated in the defense of Vicksburg over 50 years ago, was given a farewell party by his fellow players at the Vicksburg Hotel before leaving for Chicago on his way to the Los Angeles studios.

Miss Eugenie Besserer gave me a glowing description of the scene in Vicksburg one evening, when one of the big war scenes was being taken. This magnificent spectacle, unfortunately, could not be included in the pictures taken by the camera. It was in the evening when the shades were falling, and fully 10,000 people—men, women and children of Vicksburg and its environs—occupied every vantage point as far as the eye could reach. "It was an inspiring sight, and it shall always remain wit me," said Miss Besserer.

The production of "The Prince Chap" will soon begin at Selig's Chicago studios. An all-star cast has been engaged, and Marshall Neilan will be the director. Scenes for this production will also be filmed in New York City and in Los Angeles.

A film producing company, known as the "Pleasure Producers," has been formed in Twin Falls, Idaho. James L. Tayc, of Twin Falls, is business manager and assistant director; Wm. Rogers, director, and V. J. Ament, cameraman. Wm. Rogers is author of several successful photoplays and of a drama, "Rose of the Desert," which was played about a year ago in Twin Falls by local talent.

The cast of the first production has been selected from residents of Twin Falls. It will be a semi-western photoplay, featuring Shoshone Falls and other local scenic points.

It is the intention of the company to work into their photoplays types of southern Idaho homes, ranches, irrigation projects, the sage bush desert, Snake River canyon (with its wonderful falls and power plants), and also Boise City (the capital of Idaho), and the lakes, woodland and mountain scenery of northern Idaho.

In its plans, the company is working with a view to give a beneficial advertising campaign of the entire state, including its scenic, civic and industrial features.

"Cousin Jim," a photodrama written and acted exclusively by members of Chicago's elite, was given its premier at the Strand theater, Wabash avenue and Seventh street, on Friday evening, June 2. Grand opera prices ranging from $2 to $5 ruled at the opening presentation, the proceeds of which will be devoted to various charitable enterprises. The authors of "Cousin Jim" are John T. McCutcheon, famous cartoonist of the Chicago Tribune; Keneth S. Goodman and C. W. Hitchcock, all prominent in Chicago and North Shore society circles. Only in the directing and technical departments was this society drama a professional production. It was staged by the Van Dee Producing Co. of Chicago, and the photogrophy and laboratory work was done by the Rothacker Film Mfg. Co. The latter company in securing the special sets in the interiors of prominent homes and leading clubs in the city and of the Blackstone Hotel, used its own special portable artificial lighting equipment. Watterson R. Rothacker, president of this company, is of the opinion that this is the first time that a feature picture has been made complete without using anything but special studio sets and special studio lighting.

H. A. Gundling, manager of the Bryn Mawr theater, this city, has leased the Wilson Avenue theater for the summer months. It is his intention to introduce big film features at this popular vaudeville house during the summer months. The opening attraction on Monday, May 5, will be "The Unwritten Law," which made a big hit at the Ziegfeld recently, being held over for a second week on account of the great interest it created. Walter Buhl will be the manager of the theater, and Mr. Gundling will attend to the booking.

An Associated Press dispatch from Pittsburgh states that a moving picture played an important part recently in the defense submitted by a telephone company in the Common Pleas Court. The telephone company was sued for heavy damages by a Mrs. Freda Garletz, who alleged that both of her hands and her back had been permanently injured after picking up a live wire of the telephone company.

After she had filed suit against the company a detective agency rented the house in the rear of her home, and installed a camera in one of the windows. The film exhibited in court showed Mrs. Garletz feeding her chickens, throwing corn over a high fence and lifting heavy boards and piling them up. In addition, the film showed other feats that required considerable strength.

Lou-Tellegen, who is an accomplished actor, will also star in these pictures.

Victor Eubank, Essanay's popular publicity manager, was out on an auto spin with his friend, Frank S. Johns, who represents a Cleveland lithographing firm, on Saturday, May 27, when the machine skidded and ran into a tree, on t North Side, near Fullerton avenue. Both men were thrown from the auto with great force, but luckily missed the tree and instant death. They were conveyed to the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, nearby, where it was found that Mr. Eubank had his left leg broken and his face badly cut, but not seriously. Mr. Johns did not fare as well. His spine was seriously injured, and at the time of writing (nearly a week afterwards) his condition is still considered grave. Mr. Eubank is improving fast and expects to be at his desk at 13333 Argyle street at an early date—but broken legs take time to mend. I heartily congratulate my friend, Eubank, that he was so fortunate, and regret deeply that Mr. Johns, whom I have met, did not come out as safetly.

The following programs have been announced at the prominent downtown theaters in Chicago for the week ending Sunday or Monday, June 4 and 5:

Studebaker—"Gloria's Romance," fifth chapter; "The Gathering Storm" (George Kleine), Charles Chaplin in "Police" (Essanay) and Alice Brady in "La vie de Boh (World). The fourth chapter of "Gloria's Romance" was even more popular than those preceding it, it is reported.

Fine Arts—Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle in "The Whirl of Life" (Cort Film Corporation), showing the popular "Castle Glide."

Siegfeld—"The Bondman" (Fox) with William Farnum, from Hall Caine's story of that name.

Strand—Lillian Gish in "An Innocent Magdalene (Fine Arts), the Casino Club players in the society film "Cousin Jim" (Van Dee Producing Co.), and Mut and Jeff cartoons.

Orchestra Hall—Fanie Ward in "The Guter Magdalene" (Lasky), and vocal solos.

La Salle—Fifth week of "The Little Girl Next Door" (Illinois vice film).

ETHEL DENIES "VAUDE" RUMOR.

A quick exchange of wires between New York and Los Angeles last week brought a speedy and emphatic denial from Ethel Teare of the story appearing in a Chicago vaudeville publication declaring that she was contemplating a return to headline honors in vaudeville. The story continued to the effect that Miss Teare was to be starred in a tabloid revue which would start a tour bringing it to Broadway with the opening of the Fall season.

TWENTY-FOUR FILM CTORS IN WRECK.

American Woman Film Company Director and Actors Seriously Injured When Big Truck Plunges Into Gully.

A GIANT motor truck in the service of the American Woman Film Company, while returning from location at Chatsworth Park, near this city, plunged headlong into a twenty-foot gully on a mountain roadway on Wednesday, May 23, injuring twenty-four persons and severely shaking up the rest of the party. Two were so severely injured they may die. The accident was caused by the presence in the road of a rock half submerged in the clay-like dirt. The front wheel on the outside of the truck hit the rock and jumped over it, throwing the steering mechanism out of the driver's control. The truck toppled over the edge.

The company was under the direction of J. Farrell MacDonald. The players were in costume for "Saul of Tarsus," The men in the party started rescuing those pinned beneath the vehicle. Word was rushed to Los Angeles by telephone, and speed officers, ambulances and police wagons were summoned. Before assistance arrived the men had rescued everyone from the debris and were administering first aid to the sufferers.

Assistant Director McDonough had a leg broken in two places and several other injuries. Mrs. Imregard Schoonemaker was perhaps the most badly injured. Others hurt were: Mrs. K. Bernard, who was found to have a broken hip and to be internally injured; Miss Virginia Driscoll, Fred Madden, A. W. Drago, Kenneth McRae, Albano Luiz, Dorothy Dean, J. E. Ellsworth, Katherine Wallace, Golda Madden, Jane Bell, Phila O'Neil, Helen Gordon, Marie James, Mrs. M. J. White, John McDonough, May Adamx, F. J. Robinson, Charles Adams, Florence Dowdell, Mrs. Charles Adams, Miss Resa Bullock and Miss Peggy Hart. T. E. Dickerson, driver of the truck, was not blamed. The responsibility has not been placed, as the evidence showed conclusively it was purely accidental.

This is the most serious accident that has been experienced by so large a number of film players in the history of picture-making on the coast.

"JULIUS CAESAR" TO BE SHOWN AGAIN

Actors' Fund to Repeat Shakespearean Drama in Majestic Theater for Thousands Who Failed to See Open Air Presentation.

Owning to the repeated demands of the public for a repetition of "Julius Caesar," the California Committee of the Actors' Fund of America has decided to give the play once more with the same remarkable cast. The play will be indoors instead of underneath the stars, as it was given in Hollywood. The cast will be the same except for two minor changes, and the principals are already working to make this performance equal the first one.

D. W. Griffith, who is now working on his greatest master production, "The Mother and the Law," of which little is known, and Mack Sennett, maker of Keystone comedies, who control the Majestic Theater, agreed to donate their house for the one night, Monday, June 5, delaying the regular weekly opening one day.

As a means of selling more seats at a higher price the committee arranged with the Hotel Alexandria to hold a public dinner and dance to sell seats at auction. Present were stars who took part, as well as many famous persons in stage and studio life. The seats were from $1 to $2.50, while boxes are $25. It was expected that the house will be sold out before the first day's sale closes.

Balboa Celebrates Birthday.

Three years ago, May 23, 1913, when studios were not so thick and large, H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer started work at the little studio formerly occupied by the Edison western company in Long Beach. There was a little stage, a small office in a bungalow, and lots of open ground. Today that bungalow has been razed, the stage is covered by a huge property room, and all the open space is bearing the weight of stages, cutting rooms, laboratory, storage rooms, garage, offices, and other buildings. There are 250 employees in place of about a dozen. Instead of occupying one corner the plant covers the four corners of the intersecting streets, and it is rapidly growing. Now there are six large companies at work. E. D. Horkheimer recently passed over the news that two more would be put on during the summer.

President H. M. Horkheimer says the success of Balboa has been attained only by perseverance and hard work. The loyal standpatters who have been there from the first are Norman Manning, business manager; Robert Brotherton, cameraman and chief of the laboratory; William Beckway, chief cameraman; John Wyse, stage manager, and Miss May Brotherton, head of the cutting and assembly departments.

In view of the fact that Balboa stock is not for sale, and has not been offered for sale, and that it has grown from almost nothing to the big factor it is in the film business today, and that it has no regular permanent releasing firm attached to it, the success is unusual.

Films to Teach Cleanliness.

Proving that visual education in the shape of moving pictures is far superior and more effective than lectures or printed matter, County Health Officer J. L. Pomeroy has filed with the Board of Supervisors the request for a moving picture outfit. He asks for $5,000. New York, Chicago and other eastern communities have equipped their health departments with means for showing the residents of these places the necessity for control of disease, improvements in sanitation and hygiene, according to the statement of Health Officer Pomeroy.

Film Stars in Unique Stunts at Ascot Races.

The main event of the show given at the Ascot Speedway for the benefit of the Actors' Fund, Tuesday this week, was the automobile fashion show.

Judgment as to which of the cars and drivers presented the best appearance was left to the audience with the result that Priscilla Dean, of the Vogue Films, Inc., driving a beautifully decorated roadster was awarded the first prize; Dorothy Dalton, the Ince star, second, and Myrtle Gonzalez, of the Universal Film Mfg. Co., the third.

Following the decision of the multitude of judges, Miss Dean was presented with a beautifully designed cup, presented by the Pals Club. Miss Dalton received a handsome trophy, donated by the Ventura Refining Company.

Second in importance was the ten-mile race for the championship of the motion picture studios of Los Angeles, which was won by Arthur Hansen of the Ince studios, with Wm. Russell of the American a close second.

Charlie Murray was the master of ceremonies. There was much comedy in the "junk race," for a Charles Murray trophy. This was won by the Keystone Cops.

The complete list of entries and events on the program was as follows:

First event—Five-mile motorcycle race, six entries; mile a minute to qualify.

Second event—One-mile exhibition for juvenile track record.

Third event—The automobile fashion show, with the following entrants:

Mabel Normand, Mabel Normand Feature Film Company; Edna Goodrich, Morosco; Priscilla Dean, Kalem; Lillian Peacock, Universal; Ruth Stonehouse, Universal; Anita King, Lasky; Louise Lovely, Universal; Helen Gibson, Kalem; Dorothy Dalton, Thos. Ince Features; Virginia Rappe, L-Ko; Francelia Billington, Universal; Mrs. Crane Wilbur, Horsley; Helen Jerome Eddy, American Woman Film Co.; Mary Anderson, Vitagraph; Gale Henry, Universal; Myrtle Stedman, Morosco; Julia Herron, Thos. Ince Features; Oliver Golden, Universal; Billie DeSosa, Universal; Vola Smith, Universal; Marcia Moore, Universal; Maude Emery, Universal; Cleo Madison, Universal; Virginia Dorr, Horsely; Constance Johnson, Lasky; Myrtle Gonzales, Universal; Rena Rogers, Vogue; Ethel Ullman, Thos. Ince Features; Baby Zoe (five years old), Universal.

Fourth event—Two-mile junk race, Charles Murray trophy,

Keystone Cops, L-Ko Cops, Carter De Haven and Pat Rooney, Universal.

Fifth event—Bicycle challenge race; the Masked Marvels, Keystone; McGuire and Turpin, Vogue. For the comedy championship.

Sixth event—Two-mile challenge auto race; Frank Goode, Fine Arts; Andy Anderson, Keystone.

Seventh event—Ten-mile championship, Barney Oldfield trophy; William Russel, American Film Company; Arthur Houson, Thomas H. Ince; "Dutch" Megers, Keystone, Keystone special; Louis L. Cody, Mabel Normand studio; Phile Goodfriend, Vitagraph.

Opposes Mayor on Film Commissioner Question.

Despite Mayor Sebastian's announcement that he would make no appointment to the new office of film commissioner on the ground that Los Angeles needs no censorship of motion pictures, the civil service commission has ordered examination for the office continued and completed.

The written examination for the film commissionership, which will pay a salary of $175, already has been held. The oral examination for the forty-eight candidates will be called for the latter part of next week.

The examination for police detectives, called for June 5, has been postponed by the civil service commission until July 5.

"Gloria's Romance" Heads the Bill at Pantages.

The advent this week of Billie Burke in George Kleine's serial, "Gloria's Romance," as the headliner at Pantages, makes a new departure in the policy of this popular vaudeville house.

Heretofore Mr. Pantages has never played anything on his program which could be billed above his vaudeville acts. He has run a number of serial pictures and feature films, but no one before has been advertised as the exclusive head-liner of the program.

There are very few stars before the public who are more universally popular than Billie Burke, and her sweet and winsome personality transfers to the screen in most attractive fashion, and the producers of "Gloria's Romance" have not overlooked any opportunity to make use of it. The serial will be shown in Pantages' Spokane and Tacoma houses at the same time it is running here.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

The fifteen-thousand-dollar St. James Methodist Episcopal Church, now under construction, is to be equipped with a projection machine and a complete outfit for putting on educational and biblical pictures. Several other churches are trying to secure moving picture machines for such purposes.

William J. Fahey, proprietor of the Joyland Theater in Long Beach, has taken a lease on a theater which is being constructed in his city at a cost of $15,000. The new house will be at 30 Pine avenue and will be modern and up to the minute. It is to be called The Paramount Theater, and will be opened in about three months.

Writers at the American have organized an informal club. The first dinner has been held in Santa Barbara with over a dozen present. The pen pushers and scenarioists who enjoyed the feast were Editor in Chief William Pigott, "Pop" Hoadley, one of the veterans; William Parker, author of the submarine serial now being made by the Flying "A"; Al Santell, Harold Hoadley, Donald W. Rayburn, John Wall, E. H. Gooden, Julian L. Lamothe, A. W. Coldewey, George Wight and Karl Coolidge.

R. S. Sturgeon at the Vitagraph is finishing the big detective story that he has been working on for some weeks. One set he used represented a courtroom. In the audience he had several hundred extras yelling and protesting. In this scene George Holt, the heavy, runs through the crowd and jumps from the window. In the picture he did a real leap from the fourth story of the real court house, into a firemans' net, and was uninjured.

Clem Pope, manager of the publicity department of the E. & R. Jungle Film Company, has invested in a natty red racer.

This week the Lasky company burned a small village for the newest Wallace Reid-Cleo Ridgley picture. The town was specially built for this purpose on the Lasky ranch. About 500 persons took part in the fire scenes at night. Ranchers from miles around stayed up all night to see the film actors doing their stunts.

All of the pictorial exhibit made at the great motion picture exposition recently in New York has been returned to the Chamber of Commerce and may be seen by the people of Los Angeles and vicinity at any time. The film division will be shown every morning beginning at 10 o'clock. Seeing this picture is the same as visiting nearly a dozen of the leading film studios of this vicinity. Another moving picture is "The Wining of the Peach." The scene is laid in Tulare County. The pictures are free, as are the lectures and concerts that fill every half-hour period of the day.

The work on the photoplay feature, "Saul of Tarsus," will be resumed this week by the American Woman Film Co. Although J. Farrell McDonald, the director, has not entirely recovered from the effects of the automobile accident in which he and a number of the members of the company were injured Wednesday last week, still the work will be carried on in his absence, the directing being temporarily in the hands of P. Z. Hartigan. All the persons injured in the accident are now reported out of danger.

Carried to the bottom of the ocean when he became ensnared in the body of an automobile which he drove from the end of the municipal pier at Santa Monica one day this week during the taking of a moving picture James Keating, an actor employed at a local studio, narrowly escaped drowning.

Enid Markey of the Ince forces will go to New York and appear in the prologue of "Civilization," at the Criterion theater.

Thomas H. Ince this week became the namesake of a full blooded Sioux Indian baby born at Inceville. The infant is to be christened Thomas H. Ince Thunder Bull, and is the son of Chief Charlie Thunder Bull and Mrs. Nancy Thunder Bull, both of whom have appeared in several Ince-Triangle dramas to date.

The child is the first Sioux Indian to be born in California, this tribe having just come from the North Dakota reservation to take part in Ince moving pictures.

San Francisco's famous Barbary Coast is being duplicated at Culver City this week for some scenes in a current Ince-Triangle drama in which H. P. Warner is appearing as star, under the direction of Charles Giblyn.

The story was written by J. G. Hawks and several hundred persons are appearing in the mob scenes.

Five Triangle exhibitors of San Francisco and its suburbs were among the visitors this week at Thomas H. Ince's new plant at Culver City.

They are H. C. Smith of the Marquee theater, in Palo Alto; W. Nasser of the Palace theater, San Francisco; George Roy of the Burlinghame Photoplay theater, in Burlinghame, and E. R. Freidburg of the Lyceum theater, San Francisco, and W. E. Corey of Corey and Fairland theaters, San Francisco.

Norma Talmadge of the Fine Arts, with her director, John Emerson, his assistant, Erich Von Stroheim, and his cameraman, have departed for the New York studios where they will start immediately the production of a new five-reel Triangle drama. Miss Talmadge will play the star role, which was written for her by Anita Loose.

The Fine Arts players were accompanied to the train by a number of their friends and studio associates, which included Mae Marsh, the Gish Sisters, Robert Harron, Mary Alden, Co-Directors C. M. and S. A. Franklin, Millard Webb, Bernard McConville, Chester Withey, W. S. Hart of Inceville and Miss Talmadge's two younger sisters, Constance and Natalie. The Fine Arts star found her drawing room crowded with choice flowers, candies and literature, and as the train pulled out of the Santa Fe station, the Fine Arts studio folks gave three cheers and a tiger for the departing party.

Melies Offers New Comedies

Series of High Class Subjects from Vim Studios for Release on General Film Program.

FEATURE comedies in the regular service of the General Film Company form the subject of an interesting announcement issued this week by Melies Manufacturing Company, releasing Vim Comedies and Knickerbocker Star Features. Harry C. Myers and Rosemary Theby, one of the most popular comedy teams on the screen, will appear each week in a high-class refined single reel comedy directed by Mr. Myers. It is probable that the first picture will be released late in June. Wednesday of each week will be the regular release date.

Mr. Myers has already completed eight productions, five of which have been screened in New York for the private view of a number of film notabilities, including exchange managers and prominent exhibitors. "Housekeeping," the first release, presents the Newlyweds in their Harlem flat, which is barren of furniture. It will be followed by "Spring Cleaning," "The Connecting Bath," "Will a Woman Tell?" and "Hubby's Relatives," in this order.

A strong appeal to the public is expected from the nature of these comedies, because of their refinement and unique manner of production. In the five pictures already screened the comedy depends entirely upon quick perception of the funny side of human foibles. There is not the slightest suggestion of vulgarity, even in "The Connecting Bath," whose title is capable of a risque interpretation. So far Mr. Myers has smoked only one cigarette, entirely for the purpose of introducing a very funny bit of business; and there is absolutely no drinking or rough handling of woman.

The many interior sets are all designed by Mr. Myers, who is a pupil of the celebrated Josef Urban. Included among those already seen are several sets which are bound to win enthusiastic comments upon their striking originality and effectiveness. Black-an-white effects are boldly used.

Harry Keepers, one of the most highly endorsed cameramen in the business, is responsible for the excellent photography. Mr. Keepers has introduced many unusual "shoots" into the five pictures above mentioned. It is his practise, upon returning to a scene after a cut, to present an entirely different view of the room. This, in combination with frequent close-ups, greatly enhances the interest of the scenes.

The scenarios for these releases have been carefully selected by a committee comprising Louis Burstein, managing director; Mr. Myers and Bert Tracey, scenario editor. They include the work of several of the best-known writers of refined comedy.

Strand Theater Books "Tess"

Broadway's Big Theater Presents Famous Players—Mary Pickford Masterpiece During Week of June 4.

THE unprecedented screen career of "Tess of the Storm Country," considered by thousands of exhibitors and fans to be the best motion picture in which the Famous Players Film Company ever presented Mary Pickford, is to have another chapter of unusual interest added to its amazing record of international success because of the action of the Strand Theater in New York in booking this quaintly humorous and pathetic photoplay for the week of June 4.

The presentation at the Strand Theater of this great epic of the screen, often enthusiastically described as the best five-reel picture ever produced, is in the nature of a revival similar to the return of stage plays that have had unusual popularity, as the production was first released by the Famous Players in March, 1914. It has never been shown at the Strand before, however, for the reason that this theater was not yet in existence at the time of the release of "Tess."

After creating a veritable sensation in the United States "Tess" went to England, where it repeated its American triumph, as it did in all the countries of Europe and Australia. In the latter country its presentation resulted in the collection of twenty-one thousand Australian pennies, with which an enormous loving cup was purchased and sent from Sydney to New York at a tribute to the art and charm of the gifted Mary. It is said that more prints of this feature have been distributed by the Famous Players than any other two photoplays of equal length.

Kalem Plans Busy Summer

Hot Weather Will Mean Increase Instead of Lessening Activity at Coast and Florida Studios.

THE coming of the summer months, which are usually marked by a let-up in activity at picture studios, will on the contrary mean unusual activity at all the Kalem plants. Of importance in the announcement of the company's plans for the hot-weather months is the news that the Jacksonville studios will continue operations throughout the summer.

Five companies of players are now at work in the Kalem studios at Jacksonville and Glendale and Hollywood, California. The new Ivy Close Comedy company is scheduled to start work this week at the Jacksonville studio.

Four companies will continue the regular output undiminished through the warm months at the Pacific Coast studios. The completion of extensive construction work enlarging the producing facilities at the Glendale studio shows the promising plans for this studio, as does the recent addition of True Boardman, famous as "Stingaree" to the playing forces. Director Horne is nearing the closing episodes of "The Social Pirates," Kalem's big series success featuring Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby, and July will find the company at work on a spectacular new series of which announcement will be made soon.

The studio-station on the Salt Lake Railway where the "Hazards of Helen" are produced is another producing plant undergoing the enlarging process rather than the expected hot-weather let-up of most studios. Two comedy companies at the Hollywood studio, the Ham and Bud and the Ethel Teare forces, complete the Kalem roster on the coast. The recent appointment of Harry Millarde, the feature producer, to direct the Ethel Teare company is an indication of the strong backing being given these subjects.

Kalem's releases through the General Film Company will continue to include six reels a week throughout the summer months. In addition June also finds "The Lotus Woman," a five reel feature, on the regular program service.

PALLAS STAGES NEW FARNUM SUBJECT.

After a short vacation upon the completion of "David Garrick," Dustin Farnum has returned to the Pallas Pictures studios in Los Angeles and has commenced work on his next vehicle, "The Parson of Panamint." This subject has been taken from the story by Peter B. Kyne which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post and gives an exact account of conditions in the mushroom mining towns of Nevada forty years ago.

It is understood that "The Parson of Panamint" will prove the biggest production yet undertaken by Pallas Pictures. Among the more elaborate sets now being built is a replica of a complete mining town on the spot in the desert where a boom-days mining town formerly stood. This will be the most pretentious set ever erected by the Pallas organization, which, judging from those used in "The Gentleman from Indiana," will necessitate an enormous expenditure. William D. Taylor, who is directing the new film, is experiencing no little trouble in securing the exact types for the minor parts.

Paramount Program

Regular Features for June 19 Will Be Reinforced by the Usual Pictographs and Travel Films.

PARAMOUNT Pictures for the week of June 19 will be headed by the usual two five-reeler features, the releases being the Lasky production, "The Clown" starring Victor Moore, which will be shown on Monday, and "Susie Snowflake," the initial screen vehicle of Ann Pennington, diminutive star of the Ziegfeld Follies. The latter will be a Thursday release.

Single reels on the same program for this week will be the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Picture "Imperial Berlin," the Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoon, "Bobby Bumps' Fly Swatter" and the weekly Pictographs.

With this release of the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Pictures Mr. Holmes will make his first stop in a film tour through the most interesting part of Europe as they were before they had borne the brunt of the fierce fighting of the present war. Europe's most celebrated tourist-goals will be shown to Paramount audiences in this series as they were before the present struggle began, the first point of interest visited being Berlin the Imperial. Through this journey Mr. Holmes preserves his attitude of strictest neutrality so that his "Easy-Chair" travellers may view the beauties of the country through which he passes with unbiased appreciation.

Swatting the fly forms the theme of the latest of the Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoons by Earl Hurd. As demonstrated by Bobby on the screen, fighting the fly is the most interesting of summer sports.

In the Paramount Pictographs for this week will be seen "Keeping Time" in the "Testing the Mind" series of Professor Hugo Munsterberg; how to dress and undress the baby in "Better Babies"; "Training a Lion"; "Preparing Fruit, New Ways" and "How to Fall."

Snared by the Halter

"Bill" Barry Gives Up Single Blessedness in Apartment where "Gas Administered" Sign Hangs in the Window.

"BILL" BARRY has "went and done it!" At the fashionable hour of high noon Thursday, May 25, he left the ranks of the happy bachelors in which he has carried a flaming banner for years and became a benedict. All of this is by way of saying that William Leslie Barry and Miss Nan Jacobus were united in the bonds of holy matrimony Thursday at noon by the Rev. Maitland Bartlett, pastor of the Beck Memorial Church, New York City, at the pastor's apartments on East Fifteenth street.

"Bill" had been threatening to do the trick for a long time. It probably is a matter of only truth but no significance that in one window of the apartment house in which the wedding ceremony was performed there hangs a sign "Gas Administered."

Mr. Barry, until a few weeks ago, was advertising manager of the Nicholas Power Co. At the present time he is associated with the Monroe Press and is continuing his association with motion picture people by soliciting printing from them. Miss Jacobus left home and mother in Montclair, N. J.

The wedding was a quiet one, being attended only by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Powell, and A. MacArthur and W. P. Milligan, all of whom are close personal friends of the contracting parties. Mr. Powell provided the wedding automobile which was gaily bedecked with bridal flowers and white satin ribbon. MacArthur and Milligan whistled the "Bachelor's Dirge" in lieu of a wedding march. Mr. Powell was host at an elaborate wedding luncheon served at the Prince George Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Barry have taken a house in Bayside, L. I., and already have a little flivver running around.

SELZNICK CLOSING DEALS.

Lewis J. Selznick's two representatives, Ben S. Cohen and Ned H. Spitzer, made such rapid progress in negotiating for the distribution of the future Clara Kimball Young features in Chicago and throughout the middle west that Mr. Selznick has already followed them to the Windy City to close several big deals they had started. Messrs. Cohen and Spitzer had only been in Chicago a week when affairs took such definite form as to require Mr. Selznick's immediate presence to complete the negotiations.

It is understood Mr. Selznick has formed a partnership with big western exchange men similar to those he formed in Philadelphia, Detroit and Boston.

Mutual Program

Thirty-two Reels of Satisfying Pictures on the List for Week of June 12.

THIRTY-TWO reels, including two Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, featuring Crane Wilbur and Winnifred Greenwood, comprise Mutual releases for the week of June 12. First of the Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, "The Inner Struggle," starring Miss Greenwood supported by Franklin Ritchie and Roy Stewart, will be released June 12. "The Wasted Years," Crane Wilbur's starring vehicle follows on June 15. In addition to these five act features, Mutual releases for the week are composed of a number of short length features, including a three reel drama, four two reel subjects, a number of single reel comedies and the three popular Mutual feature releases —The Mutual Weekly, Reel Life, The Mutual Film Magazine and See America First.

Scene from "The Inner Struggle" (Mutual).

The self sacrifice of a young physician, portrayed by Franklin Ritchie, who quits the girl he loves to minister to the stricken lepers in a colony far out in the Pacific, furnished the basic theme of "The Inner Struggle," in which Miss Greenwood stars. This Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition, was written for Miss Greenwood by Julian Louise Lamothe and screened under the personal direction of Edward Sloman. It is a straight drama, powerful in its action and its great punch is a mental one.

"The Wasted Years," second of the Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, of the week, in which Crane Wilbur is starred, finds this popular player essaying a role seldom witnessed on a motion picture screen. It is a psychological drama, in which the follies of a man's early life are brought back to him with bitter memories in the years which follow. Mr. Wilbur's supporting cast includes Mae Gaston, John Oaker and Thelma Salter, popular child actress recently engaged by the Horsley-Mutual studios.

The three reel drama of the week will be released June 15, under the title of "The Window of Dreams." This is a Thanhouser production in which Grace De Carlton and Bert Delaney have the principal roles.

Mutual two reel subjects for the week present a host of popular players. First of these short length features, "Circumstantial Evidence," in which the chief parts are played by Edward Coxen and Lizette Thorne, will be released June 12. "Brothers Equal" is the two act Thanhouser production of the same week with Barbara Gilroy in the lead, supported by a capable company of players. It will be released June 13.

William Stowell and Helen Rosson are the featured players in "The Sheriff of Plumas," a powerful story of the cow country, which will go to the public June 16, under the Mustang brand. "The Star of India," a gripping drama of the Orient, featuring Margaret Gibson and the Bostock animals, is the Centaur contribution of the week. It is scheduled for release June 17.

Mutual laughmakers for the week of June 12, offer a number of novel stories and bring into play various of the popular Mutual mirthmakers. "Real Estators," starring Claude Cooper and Frank E. McNish and "Doughnuts," first of the new comedies featuring Riley Chamberlin in his popular role of "Conductor No. 786," are the Falstaff offerings. The former will be released June 12 and the latter June 17.

The Vogue comedies include "Love, Burglars and the Bulldog," with Rube Miller for release June 13 and "Delinquent Bridegrooms," starring Ben Turpin, which will go to the public on June 18.

"Beauty" releases present Carol Halloway and Johnny Sheehan in "Billy Van Deusen's Eggs-spensive Adventure," for release June 14, and "Pedigrees, Pups and Pussies," with Orral Humphrey, for release June 18.

"Jerry, and the Moonshiners," starring George Ovey, is the Cub offering for June 16.

Louis A. Buettner

Progressive Exhibitor of Cohoes, N. Y., Who Will Be a Delegate to the Chicago Convention.

A SPLENDID type of the modern progressive exhibitor is Louis A. Buettner of Cohoes, N. Y., joint owner with Louis J. Shearer of the Cohoes Opera House and the Majestic theater. Mr. Buettner is the president of the organized exhibitors of Troy, N.Y., and the foremost champion of organization in the capitol district. The strong and growing organizations of exhibitors in Albany and Schenectady are largely due to his efforts. He demonstrated the practical uses of organization when, in the county of Rensselaer, he restored prosperity to his fellow exhibitors.

Louis A. Buettner.

Murderous and foolish competition had come very near ruining more than one exhibitor in Troy and its environs. Mr. Buettner possessed of a thorough knowledge of the exhibiting business, possessed likewise in an uncommon degree of the power to inspire confidence, using tact, diplomacy and patience succeeded in banishing ruinous competition. The long show for five cents disappeared from Troy and the nickel is no longer the unvarying unit of admission. Mr. Buettner took a prominent part in the recent state convention at Albany where he was elected delegate to the national convention at Chicago.

Mr. Buettner has learned the art of exhibition through years of experience. The houses under his control are models in every way and the prosperity they enjoy is but a result of Mr. Buettner's intensive showmanship. Previous to coming to Cohoes Mr. Buettner had owned and operated amusement enterprises and moving picture theaters in Gloversville, Amsterdam, Utica, N. Y., and Kane, Pa. Mr. Buettner is in his early thirties and full of energy and ambition. He will be heard from in the future.

FRED. ("BING") THOMSON RETURNS TO VITAGRAPH.

Fred ("Bing") Thomson has been engaged by the Vitagraph Company of America as director for E. H. Sothern, who has begun work at the Vitagraph studios in Brooklyn on three photo-dramatic productions.

Thomson was selected out of a large number of possible candidates for the work of directing Mr. Sothern. He is known as one of the most artistic and forceful directors now engaged in the production of screen drama.

Thomson began his career as a motion picture director with the Vitagraph Company several years ago after a long experience in the theater. Since that time, he has been with several other concerns.

Dixon Will Have Studio

Producer of "The Fall of a Nation" Preparing for More Big Subjects.

SPECULATION as to the future of the Dixon Studios and Laboratories, Sunset Boulevard and Western Avenue, Hollywood, Cal., has been set at rest by Thomas Dixon on the eve of the production at the Liberty theater, New York, Tuesday, June 6th, of his mighty preparedness spectacle, "The Fall of a Nation." Mr. Dixon is so well satisfied with the results of his collaboration with Victor Herbert that he has decided to devote the new plant exclusively to the production of big operatic spectacles. He announces that Bartley Cushing, his assistant in the staging of "The Fall of a Nation," and the managing director of the production department at Hollywood, is now preparing plans for a new spectacular feature along entirely novel lines. The making of small features is not contemplated at this studio.

It is interesting to note that the filming of "The Fall of a Nation" had been going on for several weeks when ground was broken in October for the Dixon Studios. Construction of the plant and continued production were carried on simultaneously. It was not until January 15th of this year that the last nail was driven in the studio where "The Fall of a Nation" was completed and where its successor will soon be begun.

The plot on which the plant is situated was formerly an orange grove. Part of the grove still remains as a screen for the Sunset Boulevard side of the studio. Overlooking this grove are the mechanical departments and dressing rooms. Adjoining the latter are the stages, one a glass enclosed affair and the other open but equipped with improved diffusing curtains. The rear of the lot is reserved for exterior scenes. A replica of old Mulberry Bend, New York, was constructed there for "The Fall of a Nation."

Towering above the mechanical departments is the chalet top, in which there is room for four complete paint frames. Along the Western Avenue side are the executive offices, leading down to the laboratories. This latter department is said to be one of the most complete in any motion picture studio. In charge is William C. Thompson, chief photographer, a graduate of Columbia University, and a member of the American Chemical Society and other organizations of chemists. Under his direction the capacity of the laboratories is 500,000 feet of film weekly. Here as many prints of "The Fall of a Nation" as may be required can be turned out as rapidly as desired.

GERALDINE FARRAR LEAVES FOR CALIFORNIA.

With the long winter season of grand opera and concert at an end, Geraldine Farrar, looking her very happiest started last Monday with her husband, Lou-Tellegen, on that long deferred honeymoon trip to the land of motion pictures at Hollywood, California.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou-Tellegen were passengers on board the 20th Century Limited attached to which was a private car for the star and her suite. Miss Farrar's drawing room was embanked with roses.

A summer devoted to the motion picture camera is no novelty for the prima donna as she had the unusual experience a year ago of making three big productions at the studios of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company at Hollywood, California, including a filmed version of the opera "Carmen" all within a period of nine weeks.

Famous Players to Star Donald Brian

DONALD BRIAN, celebrated comedian and matinee idol, and left wing of the inimitable "Donald and Julia and Jo" trio, in the current stage success, "Sybil," is to be starred by the Famous Players in a modern smuggling story which will be released on the Paramount Program within the next few weeks.

Mr. Brian is one of the best known and most popular figures on the stage today, his clever work in "Sybil" during the current season adding to the laurels which he has gathered in "The Siren," "The Dollar Princess" and "The Merry Widow," in the last of which he created his first great success. However, before entering musical comedy Mr. Brian played a number of important roles in straight comedies among which was "The Man From Mexico."

Donald Brian.

The role which he will play for the Famous Players is that of a wealthy young American who revolts at our tariff restrictions and decides to bring a handsome necklace into this country without the formality of mentioning the fact to the customs officials. He is married and he loves his darling wife, of course, but he cannot resist the temptation to practice a little harmless deception upon her. Alas for the lady's peace of mind, the deception includes an actress and an imitation necklace which is a perfect replica of the exquisite affair which he purchased for his spouse.

The result is a general scrambling of wives, actresses, customs officials and detectives in which our would-be smuggler and his friends have a very painful experience. It is a swiftly moving comedy of action that is ideally suited to Mr. Brian. Work on the production has already begun under the direction of Sidney Olcott who has many excellent Famous Players productions to his credit.

This is not Mr. Brian's first appearance before the camera as he has already been starred on the Paramount Program by Lasky.

MORE V-L-S-E PROMOTIONS.

Last week marked many important changes in the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc., whose policy it is to elevate from the ranks, the most important of which was the promotion of F. F. Hartich, Assistant Manager of the New York Exchange to the managership of the Syracuse Branch Exchange. Mr. Hartich's elevation will be received cordially by his host of friends who have followed his career with the V-L-S-E since he joined that organization less than a year ago. It is being looked upon as a striking illustration of success attained by intelligently directed effort, persistent application and studiousness. It is especially noteworthy because of Mr. Hartich's short period of association with the industry.

In the Cleveland exchange, A. M. Holah, salesman, has been promoted to the position of Assistant Manager. Mr. Holah goes to the new position particularly well qualified by reason of his experience in sales promotion work, and intensive development. Mr. Holah, who has been covering part of Ohio, has turned his territory over to James Surrell, a new salesman.

Frank D. Stanton, manager of the Fraklin Park theater, Boston, Mass., has left that position to become associated with the Boston branch as salesman. He will work in Massachusetts territory exclusively. This Boston appointment will enable George Balsdon, manager, to visit his territory frequently, which he finds essential. Assistant Manager Reardon will take care of office details during these trips.

Vitagraphs for Week of June 12

General Film and V-L-S-E. Will Issue a Number of Excellent Subjects from Eastern and Western Studios of the Big Company.

Released by General Film.

"ASHES," a Vitagraph Broadway Star Feature, is a sympathetic drama, produced by Vitagraph Western Branch, which is bound to please. In it are seen Corinne Griffith, Jack Mower and Anne Schaefer. "Ashes" tells the story of a man whose life is embittered, when his wife, Miriam, whom he loves better than life itself, dies while giving birth to a child. He curses the innocent babe as a murderess and leaves the house of sorrow to wander aimlessly. William E. Wing wrote the story and the production was supervised by William Wolbert.

"Her Loving Relations," is another subject from the Hollywood studios. This is a one-part comedy featuring Mary Anderson. Anne Schaefer, George Kunkel and George Lawrence are seen in Miss Anderson's support. Dave Smith produced the picture from the scenario by William E. Wing.

In "Harold the Nurse Girl" William Dangman is seen as Harold, a nurse girl—that is, he has an estabished business, which consists mainly of minding babes at so much down and so much an hour, according to the disposition and lung power of the infant. When Henry Peck entrusts him with his infant, he little dreams what trouble is in store for him. Florence Natol, George O'Donnell, Richard Turner and Harry Mayo are also seen in this comedy. The scenario is by Edward J. Montague and Frank Currier had charge of the direction.

Released by V-L-S-E.

Vitagraph's Blue Ribbon Feature for the week of June 12, is one worthy of the talents of its star, James Morrison.

Scene from "The Redemption of David Darcey" (Vitagraph).

"The Redemption of Dave Darcey" is an appealing story of the struggles of a crook to reform. Morrison has the title role, a crook and gangster. Morrison is given excellent support by Emmanuel A. Turner, Belle Bruce, Billie Billings, Mary Maurice, Robert Gaillord and Gordon Gray. The scenario comes from the pen of Charles T. Dazey, author of "In Old Kentucky," and its filming was supervised by Paul Scardon.

After enjoying himself immensely in Mexico with a beautiful senorita, Frank Daniels, as Kernel Nutt in "Kernel Nutt in Mexico," wakes up to find himself embracing his wife in his little flat. Wifey "laces" it out to him, but try as he will, he cannot fall asleep again and regain his pleasant dreams. Alice Washburn as Nutt's wife and Adele De Garde as the senorita, assist Mr. Daniels in separating the audience from many hearty laughs. Frank Koch, Jr., wrote the story while C. Jay Williams directed the picture.

Roy Hauck

AS a youth of many and varied attainments, first on the stage and more recently on the screen, Roy Hauck, aged fifteen years, has an enviable record. He comes by his accomplishments naturally. On his mother's side he is connected with a number of prominent actors and actresses, among them Bessie McCoy (Mrs. Richard Harding Davis), whereas the other branch of the family included Minnie Hauck, an important figure in grand opera for many years.

Roy Hauck.

Having reached the age of seven, Roy made his first professional appearance at the Hippodrome and for about one year thereafter continued in stage productions, which he abandoned to play juvenile leads in Thanhouser pictures. The list of photoplays in which he has proved his ability in prominent roles, includes "Guilty or Not Guilty," "Her Big Brother," "Bobby's Plot," "The Tin Soldier and the Doll," "A Gentleman for a Day," "The Million Dollar Mystery," all Thanhouser productions; also the Arrow Corporation's "Right Off the Bat" and George Kleine's "Gloria's Romance," starring Billie Burke.

Weighing only one hundred pounds and measuring five feet, three inches, Roy scarcely looks like a boy of fifteen, although his training has developed a versatility that might be envied by a mature man. He can drive any kind of a machine, ride or drive a horse and is an expert at swimming, high diving, boxing and acrobatic and fancy dancing. For the past two years he has been his own business manager and handled his contracts. At the close of a busy day Roy is accustomed to indulge a taste for music, for he is something of a pianist with a repertory that runs all the way from grand opera to ragtime.

WELCOME DINNER TO ALICE JOYCE.

For a welcome back to the screen Miss Alice Joyce was the honor guest at a dinner given at the Strand Roof Garden, Sunday evening, June 4. This dinner was attended by the other principals in the cast of the big spectacle, "The Battle Cry of War," which is being produced by J. Stuart Blackton of Vitagraph, among them being Joseph Kilgour, Harry Morey, Dorothy Kelly, James Morrison, Naomi Childers, Templer Saxe, Walter McGrail and Edward Elkas, as well as Director William P. S. Earle. Miss Joyce has just reappeared in the ranks of her motion picture friends after an absence of a year and a half and has begun work on the big feature picture at the Vitagraph studio in Brooklyn.

MISS CRAWLEY WRITES SCENARIOS.

Miss Constance Crawley, popular star of American-Mutual releases and favorite of the speaking stage, is now actively engaged, in addition to her screen work, in the writing of scenarios for the American-Mutual studios. Her first effort in this line will be released shortly in two acts under the title of "Fear." It is an interesting story dealing with cowardice and fear, the action of which is centered in a typical border cow town.

Chester Beecroft With American-Mutual

Opens New York Office to Negotiate with Big Stars, Authors and Directors—Also Will Handle Foreign Business and Direct Advertising Campaign of Chaplin and Mutual Serials.

THAT the American Film Company intends to maintain leadership in the way of all productions is evidenced by the opening last week of a New York office, in which prominent players and well-known writers of fiction, drama and scenario will be gathered to the fold of the "Flying A." Chester Beecroft, whose experience and whose achievements in various branches of the business amply qualify him for the important duties of the position, has been chosen to manage the new office. Already he has taken up his duties in Rooms 1627 and 1628 of the Masonic building, 71 West Twenty-third street.

S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American, has wisely determined to continue his policy of personal supervision, so that when he and his associates decided to confine the future activities of the company to the biggest and most desirable attractions that can possibly be procured the necessity of a metropolitan office became apparent.

James Kirkwood, director, and Mary Miles Minter, star, have already been engaged for American productions, and negotiations are now under way with two of the most famous female picture stars in the world as well as with three great dramatic stars, who will be presented in the play or plays with which they are most closely identified in the minds of theatergoers. The guiding idea in this new departure will be the careful study of the real demand of the generality of picture audiences and the development of the artistic and technical phases of the motion picture along lines most conducive to the permanent success of the industry.

A frequent cause of failure of individual productions which have had the advantage of a great star or a great play has been the weakness of the connecting links. A great star needs equally great directing, and a great play or story is frequently ruined by incompetent "scenarioizing." Granted these major requirements have been fully met, there is still the peril of improper technical and scenic preparation, hopeless camera men, bad laboratory work, and last, but still important, unskillful advertising.

To guard against the operation of any such faults in the productions of the American, Mr. Hutchinson has instructed Mr. Beecroft to contract with the greatest actors, with the authors of current works of fiction and drama for their most striking successes, and original stories to be written for special stars, experienced scenario writers who have had literary training to put such creations into "working" form for the studio, master directors of the Kirkwood class, crack camera men, etc.

When John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, advanced the policy of that distributing organization to its new point of commanding efficiency by limiting its releases to brilliant and pretentious big star or big photoplay productions, each capable of creating its own individual business and profit for the exhibitor without depending at all upon any other Mutual releases, the American was the first company to see the wisdom of the plan and put it in instant operation.

That the American is in earnest in its determination to produce only the "ultra" in motion pictures and is properly equipped to do so will be apparent to all when it is recalled that it was Mr. Freuler who conceived the idea and worked out the details of the contract whereby Charlie Chaplin is now receiving $10,000 a week, plus $150,000 bonus. Mr. Freuler is one of the principal stockholders in the American and is vitally interested in its progress, so that it becomes reasonable to expect that the Chaplin standard will be closely followed.

Mr. Beecroft will also handle the export department, as far as sales and contracts are concerned, of the American, Lone Star Company (Charlie Chaplin), North American ("Diamond from the Sky," etc.), "Damaged Goods" and some others, and special advertising on the newly-acquired stars and the series of pictures in which they will appear.

GAUMONT COMPANIES NOW AT FLUSHING.

When the Comanche of the Clyde line reached New York Sunday, June 4, it carried the Gaumont players who had come from the winter studios at Jacksonville, Fla., to spend the summer at the American headquarters of the Gaumont company at Flushing, N. Y. Here are located both the studios and the laboratories of the United States branch of the world-wide Societe des Etablissements Gaumont.

George E. Middleton

ACCORDING to statements which General Manager Alexander Byfuss of the California concern has just given to the press, the actual directing brain behind the firm's producing activities belongs to George E. Middleton, producing manager, of whom the picture world has heretofore never head a word.

George E. Middleton.

The feature of the announcement lies in the fact that Middleton is not a new aquisition to the California people, but has been quietly working in the background ever since the corporation's inception. He has never associated his name with his work, however, and it is only those most intimately connected with the California corporation that have so much as suspected his existance as a film director.

Among the greatest of the productions with which the recent announcement credits Middleton are "Salomy Jane," "Mignon," "Salvation Nell" and "The Unwritten Law." It is to be noted that it is in these same productions that Beatriz Michelena has made her outstanding screen success. Middleton has just completed the film adaptation from C. N. and A. M. Williamson's "The Woman Who Dared," in which Miss Michelena is playing the stellar role. It is under his immediate direction that Otis Skinner will appear in the film dramatization of "Kismet."

In commenting upon his announcement and the reasons for so long withholding it from the public Mr. Beyfuss said: "Although Mr. Middleton's work has been of the most artistic and powerful calibre from the first and we have never had the smallest doubt about his continued success, all mention of his directing responsibility has been withheld at his own request.

"It has been the policy of our corporation always to let results speak for themselves and to make no claims without substantiating evidence. Mr. Middleton believed that this should apply to himself as well as the affairs with which he was so intimately connected. Although he had been a close student of all things dramatic and had penetratingly studied picture requisites, he wished that he might work in the background until he had proven his capabilities beyond all possibility of question."

ANOTHER PHOTOPLAY PAPER.

Add to the list of photoplay papers the Kinema News published at Tokio by S. Isono and edited by Y. Matsushita. The first issue is dated March 20th, and consists of twenty four pages well illustrated with half tones and gelatine prints interleaved. It is printed entirely in Japanese characters save where the ideograph fails to represent required words, when the names or titles are set in English type. This gives a rather peculiar effect where an occasional word falls in the body of an article. This paper maintains no Japanese editor, so the literary quality of the magazine may not be passed upon, but it is interesting to note that the growth of the business in Japan makes possible the issuance of a paper of such pretension and typographical quality.

EDWARD BRENNAN IN METRO SUBJECT.

Edward Brennan, one of the foremost leading men in the country, who has appeared in many Metro wonder-plays, will next be seen on the screen in "The Quitter," the Metro-Rolfe release for July 10, in which Lionel Barrymore is starred. In this production Mr. Brennan proves his apparently unending versatility, playing the role of a rugged mining man, in which he is called upon to participate in many strong dramatic situations. Mr. Brennan was featured with Grace Elliston in "Black Fear," a Metro wonderplay, and had a similar role in "The Woman Pays," with Valli Valli.

No Price Too Great

World Film Spending Ten Thousand Dollars to Improve Quality of Stories.

By William A. Brady.

ONE of the prominent New York dailies recently published an editorial in which it condemned the motion picture industry in general for the lack of appreciation of those who supply the written material. In cold words, they decried the unwillingness of film producers to encourage writers by reason of the fact that a limit had been set on the price of material.

"So much for so much, has been the slogan with newspapers and magazines for the past century. A reporter gets a given amount for so many columns. A short story writer gets so much for a three thousand word tale. A cartoonist gets so much for each of his cartoons, unless he is permanently employed—yet the fact that producers of film plays set a standard price for a standard article, is unjust.

"There is no limit to the price we will pay for good, logical, dramatic material. If a writer is important and brings us a big story, he can almost command his own price. If a writer of unknown quality can bring us a written tale that will attract unusual attention and make an unusual picture, he can get far more for his product that he can for a like amount of work in any other field in the world.

"We pay for material, any sum commensurate with the importance of the writer, bigness of the story, unconventionality of the plots and promise of the scenario. A John Smith is as welcome to us as Sir James M. Barrie—all we want is the finished product.

"There is no field in the world where a reputation counts for less than in motion picture making.

"An author, in order to attract attention, must lay before us a finished work. If it is unfinished we must, in order to produce it, put a professional writer to work, have it revised and scenes, situations and climaxes injected, all of which, when the film is produced, go to the credit of the original writer.

"But, to my mind, at least so far as World Film is concerned, there is no limit to the price we will pay for original material. We court the finest stories from the World's greatest authors, and in our scurrying for new and picturesque material have finally prevailed upon Thomas W. Lawson to allow us to convert his thrilling financial story to films.

"Our production of Murgur's 'La Vie de Boheme' and the contemplated early production of many more fiction classics best illustrates our seriousness in wanting only the best.

"We are advertising at an expense of ten thousand dollars for new writers, new idea creators, new plot architects—all because we want to get away from the hackneyed, tiring 'two men and a woman' ideas.

"Last week a noted playrwight, one of whose plays created a furore on Broadway this season, wanted to do business with us. He wanted to write six scenarios a year. We would have liked to engage him but he demanded one thousand dollars in advance, before even submitting his synopsis. We had to decline his services. But an hour later we paid an unknown writer five hundred dollars for a finished scenario, which on the face of it, proved original and attractive.

"We recently bought one scene from an author to insert into the story of another writer, and paid almost as much for the scene as is sometimes paid for an entire story. The author of the play, when it is screened, will get full credit for that scene.

"There is no standard price for World Film. We are in the market for the product of the best authors, for which we will pay the highest prices. We are just as much in the market for original matter from obscure writers. We invite newspapermen to send us ideas and stories. We want new and better material—there is no limit—a good story to start with, is half the battle won.

"We have stellar players of every imaginable type and we want material that will permit of them displaying the versatility they are supposed to possess. We do not want stories bordering on the forbidden topics of conversation. We do not want vampire stories. We do not want to put on the screen, to show the people of the world, anything we would not broach as a subject during a drawing room chat.

"Subjects unfit to be spoken of in polite circles are certainly not fit to offer millions of people of every thinking class. We want clean, original, dramatic material—and will pay amply for it. Those who write for the morbid, the pervert, and the low thinking can save their postage."

Studio for Clara Kimball Young

Selznick Leases Big Tract Near Flushing—Construction to Begin Immediately.

AFTER scouring the environs of New York for a likely site for the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation studio and printing plant, Lewis J. Selznick, president, and Miss Young, star and vice president of the company, decided this week on a section of land in the vicinity of Flushing, L. I. A long-term lease was signed for five acres of meadow and woodland on the shore of Flushing Bay. The work of constructing the studio and adjoining plant will begin at once.

The architectural plans for the studio were drawn to meet the ideas of Miss Young and her director general, Albert Capellani. These call for a studio floor space 100 by 150 feet. The walls and roof will be completely glassed and the front end of the studio, facing on the bay, will be so constructed as to be thrown wide open, permitting sets to be erected within the studio showing a natural sky background and glimpses of the shore and bay.

One of the biggest architectural gardeners in the East has been engaged to plan the grounds around the studio and along the shore front. There will be several kinds of formal gardens for exterior scenes and an artificial lake and waterfall.

Among the innovations planned for the studio itself is a specially constructed flooring that will be impervious to shock and free from vibration. With the new flooring the heaviest sort of construction work may be carried on close to a camera in operation without affecting the film.

Another feature will be the two revolving stages, on each of which four interiors of ordinary size or two big sets can be erected and "shot" without moving the position of the camera and lights. This device has been proved a tremendous saving in time.

The dressing room accommodations planned are unusually commodious. Miss Young practically drew the dressing room specifications herself, being determined to avoid, both for herself and the members of the company, the many inconveniences she has suffered in other studios. It is hoped to have the studio completed by the end of the summer. For her first production, a picturization of Robert W. Chambers' famous novel, "The Common Law," Miss Young will lease a studio in New York.

Omaha "Movie" Ball a Success

Three Thousand Persons Present—Affair Reflects Credit on Omaha Screen Club and Photoplay Managers' Association.

WILLIAM J. SWEENEY, who attended the "movie" ball given at the Auditorium, Omaha, Thursday, May 25, reports the event was a big success. The affair was under the auspices of the Omaha Screen Club and of the Photoplay Managers' Association.

About 3,000 persons were present. The grand march was led by Bryant Washburn, of Essanay, and Miss Dolores Cassinelli, of the Emerald Motion Picture Company, who were followed by Richard C. Travers and Miss Caroline Winters, of the Emerald. These photoplayers accompanied Mr. Sweeney on the train to Omaha, and there were, besides, Lee Moran and Eddie Lyons, of Nestor-Universal, and Franklin Farnham, of Universal, who were on their way to the Coast and stopped over to attend the ball.

Mr. Sweeney took advantage of his visit to boost the coming Chicago National Convention and Exposition, and was given hearty assurances from many Nebraska exhibitors that they would attend.

The officers of the Omaha Screen Club are F. A. Van Husen, Jr., president; S. H. Goldberg, vice president; C. W. Taylor, second vice president; J. E. Kirk, secretary, and Jake Schlank, treasurer. The officers of the Photoplay Managers' Association are S. H. Goldberg, president; W. O. Jensen, treasurer, and H. B. Watts, secretary.

FITZMAURICE FINISHES "ARMS AND THE WOMAN."

George Fitzmaurice of Astra, Pathe producer, has completed work on "Arms and the Woman" and is now engaged on "The Romantic Journey," an original five-reel feature by George Brackett Seitz and Ouida Bergere, for the Pathe program.

William Courtney is the star and the cast is made up of well-known Broadway actors, among whom are Alice Dovey, now playing in "Very Good Eddie"; Macey Harlan and others.

Tefft Johnson a Manufacturer

Former Vitagraph Player and Director Will Issue Weekly Stories of Childhood Doings.

THE Tefft Johnson Film Corporation announces the completion of three single-reel stories. These will be ready for public showing within a fortnight. They will be the forerunners of regular weekly releases designed especially for children's programs, but not without interest for grown-ups. The subjects are all to be produced by Tefft Johnson, who also will be seen in them. Mr. Johnson was for seven years a player and director for the Vitagraph. He was for two years with the Edison Company prior to that. On the stage Mr. Johnson was for twelve years with David Belasco, for three years of that period playing with Mrs. Leslie Carter's company. Mr. Johnson's ability as an actor and as a director is too well known to the trade and to picturegoers to require any extended comment here.

Scene from "Sonny Boy" (Johnson).

Tefft Johnson.

The subjects completed by the Johnson company are "Sonny Boy at the Bat," "Sonny Boy at the Dog Show" and "Sonny Boy in His School Days." Featured in these are young Willie Johnson, who is said to be no kin of the director. Mr. Johnson will be seen as Daddy Dear, while Mabel Kelly will portray Mother Dear. Toto, a trained water spaniel, also will figure much in these stories of boyhood, the portrayal of the incidents in a youngster's life that will be recognized by all males, large as well as small. The stories will run in length from 850 to 1,000 feet and will be sold on a state's right basis.

The officers of the company are Tefft Johnson, president; Charles Abrams, secretary; Joseph A. Schuchert, of Buffalo, vice-president and treasurer. The permanent studios will be in New Jersey.

MARGUERITE SNOW JOINS IVAN.

Marguerite Snow, after completing a year with the Metro organization, has joined the Ivan Film Productions. It is said an especially attractive offer won Miss Snow to the Ivan ranks. Her first role under the Ivan banner will be "The Faded Flower," which was written especially to feature her by Ivan Abramson, the author of the many Ivan successes. An especially strong cast is being assembled to support Miss Snow.

Horsley Studios Busy

Last Half of May Sees Many Subjects Completed and New Ones Begun.

INCREASED activities were noticeable at the David Horsley studios during the last half of the month of May, there having been completed nine reels of film, constituting six pictures and work was started on three new subjects.

Director Milton H. Fahrney and his Cub Comedy company finished three pictures, starring vehicles for George Ovey; the two dramatic companies completed three photoplays, one of which is said to be the best work of Crane Wilbur, star and author. The co-stars, Margaret Gibson and William Clifford, will be filmed in two Centaur features, in which the Bostock animals also take a prominent part.

"The Fool's Game," a drama of the two-reel length, from the pen of Crane Wilbur, who is also the star of the production, is a story believed to be new to the screen. Mr. Wilbur portrays the part of a multi-millionaire and falls desperately in love with one who returns a sham affection, but who is, in reality, devoted to a youth of her same set. Mae Gaston and John Oaker make up the supporting cast, and although there are but three principals the eternal triangle does not exist in this offering. Robert B. Broadwell handled the direction.

Margaret Gibson and William Clifford, co-starring in the latest work of Francis Worcester Doughty, are cast in ideal parts. "The Star of India" is the title of the play and is a two-reel subject in which the Bostock animals are used in large numbers. Many of the scenes present an excellent idea of life in the jungle, introducing lions, leopards and elephants. Hand to hand combats with the beasts and a furious jungle fire add to the massiveness of the production. Director Charles Swickard supervised the filming of this Centaur feature.

The three offerings of the Cub Comedy company, all from the inventive mind of Director Milton H. Fahrney, are of the same high standard as has marked past productions of this brand. George Ovey is the star in each, and large and capable companies assist the popular funmaker, chiefly among the casts being Claire Alexander, dainty ingenue; Louis FitzRoy, George George, Janet Sully, Jefferson Osborne and other Cub favorites.

"Jerry and the Moonshiners" is the first of the trio to be released, Jerry's attempt to pass counterfeit money launching him on a rocky road from the start. "Jerry's Elopement" is one long laugh from start to finish, George Ovey taking all sorts of abuse before he finally overthrows the obstacles which stand in the way of a happy marriage. The last, "Jerry's Big Haul," gives Mr. Ovey even larger scope for clean and wholesome comedy, the three pictures, in fact, being among the very best from this group of David Horsley players.

"JAX" WELCOMES IVY CLOSE.

Ivy Close, Kalem's latest star, arrived at Jacksonville last week on the Clyde liner Comanche being met by a large delegation that included many members of other companies in "Jax" in addition to the Kalem forces. Jacksonville's newspapers also combined in extending a welcome that left the famous English stage star and beauty a very much flustered person.

"I hated to leave New York," she laughed, "But Jacksonville has been so wonderful that I have forgotten all my regrets. To be perfectly happy now the only thing I need is the word to start work."

BEBAN THE FRIEND RELIABLE.

When Thomas H. Ince was forced to delay his departure for New York to arrange the many details of preparation for his massive production of "Civilization" his first thought was to seek some one to leave Los Angeles for New York in his place—some one who would truly represent him. He sought no further than his closest friend, George Beban.

The latter agreed, in spite of the fact it necessitated his breaking his promise to his beloved Friars to accompany them on their tour.

A CORRECTION.

William E. Wing is the author of "Miss Adventure," Vitagraph's three-part Broadway Star Feature, released Saturday, May 20. Through an error another person was given credit for the authorship on the film.

Featuring Stars in Short Subjects

Policy of General Film Service Brings Approbation from Exhibitors—Program for Week of June 12.

A RECENT advertisement of the General Film Company in The Moving Picture World calling attention to the fact that more than thirty stars appeared in General Film Service program during the week May 29-June 3 emphasized the predominating policy of General Film Service of presenting stars in one, two and three-reel dramas and comedies as well as in five-reel features. This policy undoubtedly is receiving the cordial support of exhibitors, and the significant remark made recently by William N. Selig that "Since the General Film Company had emphasized that policy, the Selig Polyscope business through the General Film Company had trebled," is convincing evidence that the manufacturers releasing through the General Film are profiting by this policy. George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, is another who is enthusiastic over the policy of featuring big stars in short-length subjects. He again recently announced that Essanay's biggest stars will be seen in one, two and three-reel releases.

With the advent of hot weather, during which exhibitors say it is more difficult to hold the attention of patrons to so-called features, unless they are exceptionally interesting, the General Film Service program of short pictures, and of great variety, and made distinctive by noted stars, should appeal. General Film Service for the week June 12-18 inclusive bristles with the names of famous film artists.

Kate Claxton's greatest success, "The Two Orphans," picturized by Selig, will be the first release of the week. The Selig company has been calling attention to the unusual cast featured in this reissue. It includes Kathlyn Williams, Myrtle Stedman, T. J. Carrigan, Lyllian Leighton, Adrienne Kroell, Charles Clary, Winnifred Greenwood and William Stowell. Stress has been laid on "beautiful scenic effects, gorgeous costumes, and the strictly all-star cast." Tears occasioned by the pathos in "The Two Orphans" will be quickly dried and forgotten when the next picture, a Vitagraph comedy, "Her Loving Relations," is thrown on the screen. Then the Selig-Tribune will flash pictorially the important news of the world. Biograph's reissue of "The Spirit Awakened," featuring Blanche Sweet and made more interesting perhaps by having been directed by D. W. Griffith, will be presented. Then, just to send everybody home in good humor, Lubin's comedy, "Otto the Cobbler," will be shown.

Essanay's "Putting It Over," a comedy in two parts, featuring Marguerite Clayton and Bryant Washburn, will be first on Tuesday's program. This will be followed by Kalem's "The Alaskan Mouse Hound," a single-reel comedy, which will precede "The Avenger," in two parts, by Lubin, in which L. C. Shumway is featured. Then will follow one of Edison's exceptionally strong reissues, "The Man in the Street," in which Marc MacDermott and Duncan McRae share titular honors.

"The Bachelor's Alliance," a Kalem one-part comedy, is the first subject for Wednesday. It is followed by Essanay's "Canimated Nooz Pictorial" and a short scenic production. "The Charge of the Light Brigade," an Edison single-reel reissued drama, featuring that widely-known favorite, Ben Wilson, will then be shown. The program for the day will close with Biograph's "Liberty Bells," a three-part comedy, in which Dorothy Gish and young Jack Pickford furnish the fun.

Lubin offers "The Sons of the Sea," a drama in three parts, which leads Thursday's program. Lucy Payton is featured in this, a guarantee in itself that the picture is well acted. The Selig-Tribune is one of the strongest features of this day's releases, and "Hungry Hearts," a Vim comedy in one part, will close the day.

Marguerite Nichols and Daniel Gilfether share honors in "An Old Man's Folly," a Knickerbocker Star Feature three-part drama, on Friday's program, and will be followed by one of the Sis Hopkins series, "The Stenographer's Strategy." Then "Harold, the Nurse Girl," a Vitagraph comedy, and "The Raid," a Vim comedy, each one reel, will be screened.

Another instance of where Essanay's big stars are featured in short reels will be seen in the first release Saturday in "The Promise Land," in three parts, featuring the Essanay artists, Marguerite Clayton and Bryant Washburn. Lubin will provide a one-part comedy, "Hubby Puts One Over," which will precede "Ashes," a Vitagraph three-act drama in which Corinne Griffith and Jack Mower are featured. The thrill of the day's releases will probably be emphasized by Kalem's "A Race Through the Air," an episode of the Hazards of Helen. Saturday's program will close with Selig's "The Cowpuncher's Peril," featuring Tom Mix.

Sunday the General Film Service innovation, a five-reel feature, will be presented in "Pay Dirt," produced by Knickerbocker, featuring Henry King. This is a drama having to do with the western gold fields, and is said to be exceptionally fascinating in plot and presented in a superb manner by Mr. King and supporting company.

Kirkwood Joins American

Freuler Secures Old Time Director for Mary Miles Minter Mutual Productions.

JAMES KIRKWOOD, one of the ablest of photoplay directors, has signed a long term contract with the American Film Company, Inc. He leaves immediately for the American studios in Santa Barbara, Cal., where he will begin the direction of a series of feature photoplays starring Mary Miles Minter. The contract negotiations were conducted by President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation.

James Kirkwood.

Mr. Kirkwood's experience includes the production of some of the most notable features in the history of photoplay manufacture in America. He began directing seven years ago, after a long and successful career on the speaking stage, his entrance into the picture field being due to D. W. Griffith and Henry Salter, when they were working at the old Biograph studios.

As a director for the Biograph, Mr. Kirkwood put out the picture versions of a number of the Klaw and Erlanger productions, principal among them "Classmates," in which Blanche Sweet and Henry Walthall were starred. Mr. Kirkwood directed ten pictures for the Famous Players, featuring Mary Pickford, and playing important roles in these productions, among them "The Eagle's Mate," "Behind the Scenes," "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" and "Rags." He also directed "The Gangsters of New York," a highly successful feature production made at the Reliance studios and released by the Mutual Film Corporation. As a director for the Reliance, Mr. Kirkwood in one year made two one-reel pictures a week which is something of a record in high pressure direction.

Mr. Kirkwood, as a director, places great emphasis on the importance of the scenario, and he expresses it as his conviction that while the public is tired of stunts, it never will tire of the motion picture's interpretation of real human experience. He holds the motion picture to be a fundamental form of art expression, with the future as definitely assured as the future of sculptor, painting music and the drama.

"There seems to be a good deal of talk lately," said Mr. Kirkwood, "concerning the scarcity of motion picture stories and a great deal written about it in the papers. Now, as far as I know, they always have been scarce, and to the best of my belief they always will be scarce. Trained writers are now taking up the work of writing photoplays, but even with more of them doing so, good stories will be scarce. Good stories are scarce in magazines, in books and in plays, so why shouldn't they be in motion pictures, where they must have all the qualities which make them desirable as stories for type publication and the special quality for visualization?

"I believe that the most desirable sort of play today is modern and American, whether a swift moving drama with strong, human characterizations, or a comedy devoid of extravagance, its incidents growing out of the foibles of human nature, rather than produced by one of the characters smiting another with what is commonly called a slap-stick."

BOARD OF REVIEW PASSES "CIVILIZATION."

The National Board of Review passed unanimously Thomas H. Ince's cinema spectacle after a review of the production of "Civilization." The board reached its verdict without comment before the members left their seats.

Richardson on the Road

Projection Sharp of the Moving Picture World Doing New England by "Gas Wagon"—Sees Waterbury First.

WATERBURY, Connecticut, is what we may term, in the vernacular of the streets, "A live wire." Not only are there fifteen picture theaters in that city, but a considerable number of these houses are managed by men who are real, sure enough theater managers—men who have a comprehensive understanding of the "picture game" and who study their business. The houses are open on Sunday, and the theaters have the hearty co-operation of the pulpit of the city. In fact the ministers, themselves, have not only admitted, but frankly said that the Sunday pictures have done much to produce orderliness among the workmen of the city on the Sabbath day.

The school teachers of Waterbury are much interested in moving pictures. Recently one of Waterbury's teachers remarked that her pupils acquired more information on the early history of this country through viewing the Columbus film than they had been able to absorb from their books.

Waterbury is essentially a manufacturing town. At present the army of the unemployed is conspicuous by its absence, which means that times in Waterbury are good, and the moving picture theaters are prospering.

Taking, for example, the Strand theater on East Main St., one of S. Z. Poli's theaters (he has three in Waterbury), the house seats, on the main floor and balcony 2,300. The auditorium is spacious, and while the decorations are not particularly sumptuous they are very pleasing. The house, viewed from the back, is really very pretty indeed. The music is supplied by a Choralcelo Organ, which is said to have cost the mere trifle of $10,000. The action of the organ is entirely electrical. I am not going to personally vouch for the $10,000 end of it, but it certainly cost a good round sum of money. The projection equipment is rather poorly located, in that the angle of projection is tolerably steep, though there has been decided improvement made in that respect. The operating room formerly was (as usual) located immediately under the ceiling at the highest point it was possible to attain in a very high gallery. It has since been moved to the front of the balcony, which secures several degrees improvement in the angle of projection, and at the same time gives plenty of room between the lens and screen, viz., 78½ feet. The ventilation of the room is none the best. There should be an intake duct running to the open air and the fan speeded up to its normal; also a proper hood at the exhaust would help. It is not to be expected that an operator can produce the best results when working under conditions which are, to say the least, particularly in the summer, decidedly uncomfortable. The projection equipment consists of two Power's 6A's.

Now don't get the idea from the foregoing that I was not pleased with The Strand. The Strand is a corking good theater, and its manager, Jean Belasco, is what we commonly term a good scout, although he doesn't like me any more, because he took me, together with Charles E. Gradwell, over to the very most swellerino cafe in Waterbury for lunch, and what happened to his bank roll would be a shame to tell.

Another of Mr. Poli's houses, The Garden, is located almost directly across the street from the Strand. It is managed by Peter Murphy, who, besides having the glory (and work) of being secretary of the operators' local is now (new honors suddenly acquired) manager of the house. Directly across the street from the Strand is the Park airdome, which does an excellent business when the people patronize it, but during most of the front part of the present season the Rain-God has put the kibosh on the box office, and put it on right too.

Down street from the Strand is the Princess, a five hundred seat house, and in the other direction the Bijou, a 350 seat house, and by the way, there is a little joke that goes with the Bijou, which is now closed to be remodeled, prior to being reopened under a new management. The late manager says he knows there was lots of money in the picture business because he himself had put in a lot. Not far away is the Scenic, seating 800, managed by J. H. Nichols, who bears the reputation of being a regular feller. Mr. Nichols not only bears the reputation of being a theater manager par excellence, but also he has been tried by his fellow exhibitors and operators and found guilty of being one of the boys.

Taking it up one side and down the other the writer is of the opinion there are any number of very much worse places than the charming little city (population 100,000) of Waterbury, Connecticut.

Changes in Metro Subsidiary

Yorke Film Corporation New Sponsor for Lockwood-Allison Subjects—Henry Otto to Direct.

A METRO company of players, headed by Harold Lockwood and May Allison, are now mixing much business with some pleasure at the Thousand Islands, where they have gone to make the exterior scenes for their next production, "One Cylinder Sam." Heretofore they have appeared on the Metro program under the auspices of the Quality Pictures Corporation, but in the future the Lockwood-Allison features will be released by the Yorke Film Corporation, a newly-organized producing company. Fred J. Balshofer is president of the Metro-Yorke company.

Several of the prominent members of the Lockwood-Allison company are with them in the north, including Lester Cuneo, the well-known heavy leading man. Beginning with "One Cylinder Sam," and in the future, Henry Otto, a newcomer to the Metro forces, will direct Mr. Lockwood and Miss Allison. He was formerly with the American company and later with the Universal, and is considered one of the ablest directors in the country. His features are invariably highly artistic, as is evidenced in such productions as "Undine," a recent Universal release.

Upon their return from the Thousand Islands the Lockwood-Allison players will complete the interior scenes for "One Cylinder Sam." Then they will go to California, where they will probably be located permanently. "The Masked Rider," which Mr. Lockwood and Miss Allison have just completed, will be released on the Metro program June 12.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of June 4 at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses.

"Tess of the Storm Country" at the Strand.

MARY PICKFORD in the Famous Players' screen drama, "Tess of the Storm Country," a "repeat" of what is perhaps Miss Pickord's greatest success, was the leading feature at the Strand theater for the week of June 4. German war pictures, a Max Figman comedy ("His Birthday Gift"), Strand Topical Review, a "Mutt and Jeff" cartoon comedy and the third issue of the Goldberg film cartoons were also shown.

The soloists were Grace Hoffman, Bruce Weyman, George Scott and Florence Hardeman.

"Macbeth" at the Rialto.

The Triangle-Fine Arts film production of "Macbeth," with Sir Herbert Tree in the title role and Miss Constance Collier as Lady Macbeth, was the attraction at the Rialto, the usual travelogues and scientific studies in film form and vocal and instrumental solos being omitted. An ambitious orchestral setting was the only music heard.

"A Gutter Magdalene" at the Broadway.

At the Broadway theater, Fannie Ward was the star in the Jesse L. Lasky-Paramount production, "A Gutter Magdalene," written for her by Clinton H. Stagg from the story by Willard Mack. In this photoplay the spectator's interest is sustained throughout. It abounds in situations of great intensity, its theme portraying a woman's triumph and redemption. The usual weekly news, scenic and educational studies; cartoons and comedies round out the program.

Eighty-First Street Theater Program.

At the Eighty-first Street theater four new Triangle features were shown. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Norma Talmadge was seen in "Going Straight." A new Triangle Keystone comedy supplied the lighter portion of the bill. On Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday "Buster" Collier in "The Bugle Call," and the latest Keystone comedy formed the picture part of the program.

E. FORREST TAYLOR JOINS KALEM.

E. Forrest Taylor, prominent on both the stage and screen, is the latest player to be added to the Kalem forces at work on "The Social Pirates." He is appearing in leading male roles opposite Marian Sais and Ollie Kirkby.

Frank Jonasson, also of the Glendale company, and E. Forrest Taylor were both for years members of Willard Mack's famous producing stock company at Salt Lake City. Later Mr. Taylor formed his own repertoire company, touring with Clara Kimball Young as his leading woman. Catherine Countis and Brandon Tynan are other stars with whom Mr. Taylor has appeared. After being featured in "The Deep Purple" he last year left the stage to accept a feature screen offer.

Seligs for June and July

Fine List of Subjects Announced Featuring Several Prime Favorites.

CONTINUING his policy of utilizing his best stars and best stories for regular program service, William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, announces another list of unusual picture plays for the final two weeks of June and the first week in July. These dramas will be released in regular service of the General Film Company.

"The Reprisal," released Monday, June 19, features such popular stars as Fritzi Brunette, Jack Pickford, Guy Oliver and others. "The Reprisal" is the story of the South and of the vengeance of a woman. Miss Brunette and Jack Pickford are afforded many opportunities for versatile work and the plot is strictly an out-of-the-ordinary one.

"Taking a Chance," released Saturday, June 24, presents Tom Mix, the cowboy star in an unsual western story which affords him many opportunities to exploit his habardous feats.

On Monday, June 26, "The Sacrifice" will be released. This gripping drama is particularly timely, containing as it does a strong plea for preparedness. There are some wonderful battle scenes presented. Eugenie Besserer enacts the leading role and is supported by Harry Mestayer and Guy Oliver.

"The Return," one of William E. Wing's best motion picture stories, is booked for release through General Film Company's regular service on Monday, July 3d. Kathlyn Williams is featured and is talently supported by Guy Oliver, Wellington Playter, Harry Lonsdale, Sidney Smith, Vivian Reed and others. There are a number of elaborate sets. Those who have viewed advanced showing of the drama state that Kathlyn Williams is given the best role of her triumphal career.

On Saturday, July 8, the Tom Mix series of Western comedies begin. A Tom Mix one-reel comedy will be released through General Film Service every Saturday thereafter until further notice.

NEW MUTUAL MANAGER IN BOSTON.

J. L. Roth has been appointed manager of the Mutual's Boston office to succeed J. C. Butner, who resigned to enter a new field. Mr. Roth has been a salesman in the Boston office for the past year. His promotion came as a result of a visit to Boston of Hunter Bennett, sales manager of the corporation.

Mr. Roth has been an exhibitor for several years, and prior to his connection with the Mutual was manager of the Park theater, Boston. W. H. Patten will continue as assistant manager. The sales staff consists of W. V. Hart, R. E. Riddick, F. G. Snodgrass and R. Pinkham. H. Hirsch is serial representative, R. F. Borroto is manager of the Bangor, Me., office, which is subsidiary to the Boston office.

HENRY REIMERS DEAD.

Henry Reimers, 43 years of age, died at the Bellevue Hospital, Tuesday, May 30th, 1916. His body was shipped to his brother in Chicago for burial. Reimers was with the Selig Polyscope Co. for eighteen years holding the position as general superintendent of laboratories. He was known as the father of cameramen, being the first man to use a motion picture camera and establish a laboratory in this country.

Reimers was not only the first cameraman, but one of the very best. He made several tours of the world, and everyone proved successful financially. He held the last position with the Diamond Feature Film Co., 1547 Broadway, New York City, for which company he photographed some of the best features that were ever produced. Communications can be addressed to his brother, Fred Reimers, 520 Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

UNIVERSALITES FOLLOW COURSE OF EMPIRE.

H. O. Davis, general manager of Universal City, who has for several weeks been in New York City, departed for the West on Sunday, June 4. Preceding him to Los Angeles, as the result of the adoption of the concentration policy by the Universal, were Jane Gail, Matt Moore, William Welsh and Joe Gerrard. On Saturday, June 10, Ben Wilson, Hobart Henley, William Barwood, Irene Hunt, Howard Crampton, Edith Roberts and Mrs. Roberts will also depart.

Women Indorse Open Booking

Chicago's Political Equality League Declares Scheme Gives Exhibitors Chance to Avoid Improper Films.

AS the result of a city-wide campaign in Chicago to expose exhibitors who persist in showing immoral moving pictures and thereby to force manufacturers to produce cleaner and better film plays, the Women's Political Equality League of that city has just issued a report giving the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc., first place in the list of producers working toward that end. In the report, recently compiled by Mrs. Guy Blanchard, chairman of the Motion Picture Investigation Committee, following a canvass of every theater, large and small, in the greater city, the V-L-S-E is shown first in the percentage of good, clean plays produced.

With a view to ascertaining the cause of this situation in the hope that the solution would lead the way to better pictures in general, the members of the league instituted a second inquiry. As a result of this inquiry the open-booking policy of the Big Four, which permits individual exhibitors to select those pictures best suited to their clientele, was declared to be the dominating influence responsible for V-L-S-E's good showing. A fact worthy of note in the report is that the oldest and largest exhibitors in the city were those who lead the list striving for cleaner pictures. This is taken as conclusive proof that progressive exhibitors throughout the country are harkening to the public demand for film plays that can be shown alike to children and grown-ups.

The investigation of the League had its inception last November. Under the direction of Mrs. Blanchard the city was divided into districts and a competent woman placed in charge of each. Each district manager was in turn provided with a corps of assistants, who were detailed to visit the forty-five theaters in her respective district. From November 25 to April 10 1,755 visits were made and 4,563 reels of film inspected. The investigators were provided with blanks for a complete report of the film plays and the houses in which they were shown.

Many investigators, appending comments to their reports, told of encountering frequent assertions of exhibitors that they were unable to play clean features at all times because it was impossible for them to select them. They had to take what they could get, owing to contracts for long periods which they had signed up with various exchanges. A meeting was called to discuss the matter. M. A. Coynski proprietor of the Newberry and Vision theaters, one of the oldest exhibitors in Chicago, surprised the gathering by the declaration that the excuse of exhibitors that they had to take anything sent them would not hold—that there is one organization, the V-L-S-E, which permits exhibitors to select the features they desire and see them before playing them.

The members of the League then heartily indorsed the open booking policy of the V-L-S-E as the one manner in which to cleanse moving pictures.

WAR FILMS BOOKED 100 DAYS AT LOEW'S.

Samuel Cummins, of 1476 Broadway, New York, has closed the biggest individual war film booking contract by signing up the latest and what is considered absolutely the most sensational German war films ever shown in this country known as "Germany's Battles at Verdun" under the auspices of the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung.

The representatives of the Loew offices immediately upon seeing this picture booked it for 100 days—three sets of prints. They are to have the first run in their houses. This picture is in four reels, being cut down from seven and contains nothing but action. The titles are in English and in German and are up to the very last minute of the war.

R. R. NEHLS IN NEW YORK.

R. R. Nehls, general manager of the American Film Company, has been in New York for the past week or more looking after the interests of his firm.

"POP" ROCK CONVALESCING.

"Pop" Rock, known to the trade as the daddy of the Vitagraph Company, has about recovered from a slight indisposition that sent him to bed for a few days. "Pop" has practically retired from active participation in the Vitagraph Company and is enjoying himself at his beautiful country home at Oyster Bay, L. I. His son, John Rock, whose home is in Chicago, is here looking after business and is accompanied by his wife. They expect to return on Saturday.

AUSTRALIAN NOTES

A NEW picture theater, the King's Cross, was opened this week in Darlinghurst, a near suburb of Sydney. The new show has comfortable seating accommodation for 2,000 people, and is well fitted up, while exterior and interior decorations are tastefully carried out.

The management, Waddington's Ltd., are showing Paramount features, the opening attraction being the Lasky feature "The Secret Orchard," with Blanche Sweet.

"The Birth of a Nation" begins its season at the Theater Royal under the management of J. C. Williamson Ltd. next Saturday, the 25th instant. A special orchestra of twenty-five performers has been engaged, and will render the appropriate musical score. The prices of admission are the largest ever charged for picture entertainment in Australia, ranging from one shilling (25 cents) to six shillings ($1.50), the latter price being for reserved seats.

The first Universal feature was released this week. This was the four-part comedy drama "Mrs. Plum's Pudding," with Marie Tempest in the leading role.

The picture is not up to the standard of other brands of features shown in Sydney recently, but big things are expected from Universal in the near future. The next release is "Scandal," to be followed by "Business is Business," "Just Jim" and others.

The Fraser Film Company hold exclusive Australian rights for Broadway Universal Features, Red Feather Photoplays, and Bluebird Productions.

The present Triangle program consists of the seven-part Kay-Bee subject "Peggy" featuring Billie Burke; "Jordan is a Hard Road," with Frank Campeau; and a one-part Keystone entitled "Fido's Fate."

The Triangle Playhouse, which seats 1,600 persons, has been packed nightly with this program, which is an illustration of the growing popularity of Triangles.

Australasian Films Ltd. announce that the next program will be headed by the Kay-Bee production "The Disciple," starring William S. Hart, supported by "His Picture in the Papers," a Fine Arts comedy-drama with Douglas Fairbanks in the leading role, while a Keystone comedy will also be on the bill. The press has given very fine reviews of the last two double programs, and it is expected that the new one will be received even more favorably.

The George Willoughby Photograph Co. has finished its second production "The Woman in the Case," and is now engaged on another five-reeler "A Pearl of Great Price," from an original scenario by Randolph Bedford, a prominent Australian writer. Much of the action in this story takes place in the South Seas.

Current screenings include "The Christian," an eight-part adaption of Hall Caine's famous novel, by the London company. Derwent Hall Caine, son of the author, and Elizabeth Risdon have leading roles.

"Pennington's Choice," a splendid Metro feature, starring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne. Though these two stars are not quite as popular here as in America, they nevertheless have a large following, which assures the success of any picture in which they appear.

"The Secret Orchard," the Lasky production. This subject is likely to prove more popular than others from this studio, being a much deeper play, in addition to being dramatically stronger.

"The Master of the House," an Equitable five-reeler, of average entertaining qualities.

TOM S. IMRIE

Sidney, N. S. W., Australia, April 19, 1916.

RUSSELL SMITH WITH TRIANGLE.

Russell E. Smith, the well-known writer of feature film stories, has just been added to the staff of the Triangle-Ince Scenario Department and has already started work on a new feature in which it is more than likely Douglas Fairbanks will be starred.

Exchange Man Stern is Producing Pioneer

WOULD a chap that manufactured film in 1905 be considered something of a pioneer in a business that is itself little over one decade old? Well, back in 1905, —eleven years ago, which is an age, in this business!—Herman Stern was making moving pictures with Fred S. Balshofer. Why he didn't stick to film making isn't told, but it must have been Stern's loss as Balshofer and everybody else making moving pictures at that time are in the "magnate" class today. Laemmle, Lubin, Powers, Kessel, Selig!—but why make Mr. Stern feel bad?

Herman Stern.

Stern strayed into the producing of advertising films in 1910, making him somewhat of a pioneer in that field also. He showed these films at, among other theaters the Prospect Hall, Brooklyn. Then he became assistant manager of Prospect Hall, staying there three years. Then he went with the Universal 23rd street exchange in New York City. There he has just won the first competitive sales prize offered by the management of that exchange to hustling representatives, aforesaid prize consisting of a gold watch fob suitably inscribed. Perhaps that compensates for missing on the "magnate" distinction. Anyway, Stern's forte seems to lie in getting more business for his exchange than most of the other representatives, and there may be money after all in following the line of least resistance. Time and his growing strength with the exhibitors will tell, in Herman Stern's case.

FOOTE AND DEXTER WITH MOROSCO.

Courtenay Foote and Elliott Dexter have been engaged by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company and are now at work at its West Coast studios. Mr. Foote is known as a leading man of more than ordinary talent and has a large following among patrons of the photoplay in this country. With Bosworth, Inc., he appeared with great success in "Hypocrites" as Gabriel, the monk who carved the statue of "Truth." In "Captain Courtesy" he portrayed the heavy character opposite Dustin Farnum, while in several of the Elsie Janis photoplays he also appeared to advantage as leading man for the famous comedienne.

Elliott Dexter is another actor of accomplishment and has a large following both as a screen and stage player. On the speaking stage he has appeared in many successes during his ten years in this field. On the screen he has portrayed important roles before Paramount patrons. Both Courtenay Foote and Elliot Dexter will appear for the first time under the Morosco management in "An International Marriage," now being produced with Rita Jolivet in the stellar role. This photoplay is planned for release on the Paramount Program early in July and is the initial George Broadhurst play to be adapted to the screen.

Negotiations are pending whereby the General Film Company will secure a theater in Times Square, New York, for the week of June 18 to exhibit the new Knickerbocker Star Feature production, "Pay Dirt," in five reels. The deal was closed early this week.

This latest strategic move of the General Film Company must be credited to President George Kleine, who conceived the idea of establishing a criterion whereby eastern exhibitors may ascertain the strength of the features released on the General program.

"Pay Dirt" is a story of the gold fields, adapted from a drama which had a successful run a few years ago. Henry King, the star, has a strong following in the east, and it is expected the success of his latest production on Broadway will inaugurate a standing policy whereby General Film features will be frequently exhibited for a week's run in a leading New York theater.

"For Idea Only"

By Epes Winthrop Sargent.

COMMENTING upon a recent story a manufacturer remarks "I would gladly pay a thousand dollars for the working manuscript of a good feature. The trouble is that I never can find them. Practically all of our purchased ideas must be reconstructed." We will accept his statement, but let us also look into the matter. First of all, a little arithmetic. Suppose that we split with him fifty-fifty and agree that he would be willing to give five hundred dollars for a good working script. That means one hundred dollars a reel for a five reel subject. The idea in proper action is worth that much. As a matter of fact it is cheap at that price.

But what really happens?

The good idea comes in, perhaps not in the manner the editor approves of. The idea is liked. The editor writes the author that they like the idea but that the script must be entirely reconstructed. For this reason they can offer him merely the nominal price of forty or fifty dollars. Suppose that the offer is accepted.. A staff man is put on the job and spends perhaps forty dollars worth of time making a working script. For ninety dollars the studio has a five hundred dollar idea. It has saved four hundred and ten dollars.

But has it?

In the first place the script is not as good as the author's crude continuity. It has been taken and debased. All originality of thought in the development of the action has been edited out. The story has been robbed of a certain charm of individuality and has been reduced to the dead sameness of all the other ideas this studio has offered. It is much the same as the story the staff man reconstructed the week before. It is very like the idea he will "fix up" next week. The little flashes of fancy that are the expression of individualism in the author are thrown aside. Perhaps the reconstructor has not even looked at the continuity. Some men even brag that they never read continuities. In place of this novel bit of business or that new twist, which the reconstructor does not see or cannot appreciate, we get the same old recourse to diaphragming, to close-ups, to dissolves, to hackneyed light effects. It has come to the point where a five reel story without hampering trick work would be a positive novelty. All of the special tricks have their uses, but in an effort to gain semblance of novelty, they are overworked.

As a result, the idea that might have been new if the author's ideas had been followed out, has become as stale as any studio-made idea. The imagination that was the sole excuse for the purchase of the story has been thrown away. It is no longer a story by John Jones, it is the same old stuff that Sam Smith always writes.

This confirms the manufacturer in his belief that it is no use trying to buy on the outside. What is the use of paying Smith a salary to reconstruct stories that are no better than the stories Smith can write himself? The practice merely represents the additional payment to the author for which absolutely no return is had. In a way the manufacturer cannot be blamed for the stand he takes. He is to blame that he puts the fate of his entire business enterprise so completely into the hands of incompetent persons who, for their own sakes, cannot afford to encourage the free lance. They want to hold their own jobs. They must maintain the fiction that all scripts must be reconstructed by the staff. They must make certain their own positions, and this works two ways. They cannot encourage the free lance author with decent payments or the script room would cost so much that salaries would be cut, and if they encouraged the free lances to the point where the right sort of men went to work and learned the technical side of the business there would be a reduction in the staff anyway.

All the manufacturer knows or sees is that his editorial staff is "saving" him money. The average cost of his features is well under two hundred dollars whereas he knows others who pay five hundred and a thousand dollars. It must be a good staff. Perhaps he even goes through the bunch of submissions and finds that there is little worth while. He cannot know that the best ideas go to the men who pay the best and who give the author the most courteous treatment. He does not know that the "idea only" policy is keeping from the work men who can and will give good work for a fair price.

Even where the editor and his staff are honest in their belief that they are serving their employer's best interest the situation does not change. Good intention is no excuse for incompetency. Many editors are utterly unable to visualize scripts. They can see nothing that is really new. Here is a story like one that pleased when Biograph made it. They purchase that. Here is another that was a hit with a Lubin trade mark. They buy that. Here is a third story that is better than either of the others, but the idea is so new that the editor never heard of one like it. Back it goes to the author. It may be marked "Not in our line." In reality it is too original. It contains a new thought. The editor cannot realize the idea or its value.

Sometimes the editor does see the value of a new plot and yet is unable to purchase because the director will not take it. The director is unable to comprehend anything that is out of the ordinary. He declares that it will not make a good story, and it will not—in his hands—because of his inability to grasp the thought. He is too unintelligent to think. He can only copy. At that, he can only copy badly. And the man he works for backs up his director because, since the earliest day of the director there has been the tradition that a director cannot make a good story from a script he does not like. This is perfectly true, but why not get directors whose mental capacity permits them to grasp the ideas of others? If the manufacturer has a pair of shoes that pinch his feet, he gets another pair. If he has a director who cramps his stories, who wedges all productions into the narrow compass of his own mind the manufacturer cuts down the ideas to suit the mental capacity. He never thinks of getting a broader gauge director just as he got a larger pair of shoes, though he would never dream of having a couple of his toes amputated to make his feet fit smaller shoes.

There is only one way to get good stories in proper variety. Get an editor who really knows stories. Get a story man; not a dramatic man, because he is buying stories and not plays. But not all story men are well qualified. Get men who can see good in the work of others. Permit them to pay reasonable prices for good stories. Let them encourage the promising writers just as the editors of 1910 developed the present stars. Cut out the idea of paying only for the plot suggestion. Favor those who can give individuality to their development, and then, if the director cannot follow the author's thought, get men who can. There must be such men. If there are not, they can be trained. They are not broken down stock company directors, they are more likely to be authors, but they can be had and trained, and they and they only, can bring novelty to a business that sadly needs it.

RUBINSTEIN RE-ENTERS PRODUCING FIELD.

Leon J. Rubenstein ("Ruby"), the Thanhouser publicity director, has resigned his position, with two weeks notice. It has long been rumored that Ruby would make this move, yet his resignation caused no mild surprise.

Rubinstein has been at New Rochelle for almost two years, since Edwin Thanhouser returned from Europe. He engineered Mr. Thanhouser's re-introduction to the industry and then started a series of spectacular publicity stunts. His advertising won quick recognition by its originality, and his knack of playing to the theater man produced results. While at the helm in New Rochelle he made a specialty of stunt work, and in the past year he gathered in a number of scoops. Florence La Badie will no doubt be sorriest of all to see him go, for Ruby was particularly successful in securing publicity for her.

Before taking up his work at Thanhouser's, he was in the producing business as head of the Ruby Twinplex Studio, which he built. When the time came he sold out, which later transpired to be wisdom on his part. Now he will practically resume where he left off, but declines to give any details of his plans except that he will show the trade an entirely new style of production. Rubinstein leaves New Rochelle with the best wishes of the company and the board of directors.

VON KLEIN OUT OF HORSLEY STUDIO.

Bert H. Von Klein, since last October the general manager of the David Horsley motion picture studios, has severed connections with that institution. David Horsley, sole owner and director-general of the studios, has elevated John Jasper, formerly the purchasing agent at the plant, to the position made vacant by Mr. Von Klein.

In discontinuing, Mr. Von Klein stated that he had not made up his mind for the future but that he was negotiating for a similar position with one of southern California's film concerns. Mr. Von Klein vacated his office at the close of business, Saturday, May 27.

"How Britain Prepared" Draws Well.

Al Lichtman Declares Many Film Men Could Not See Possibilities of Picture Now at the Lyceum.

"SUCCESS!" exclaimed Al Lichtman, general manager of the Patriot Film Corporation, which controls the rights for the United States of "How Britain Prepared," the official British film now being shown at the Lyceum theater, New York. "Success! Well, if turning them away by the hundreds every night and a chorus of enthusiastic praise from the entire New York press isn't a success, then I do not know what the word means."

"We have got a 'winner' for sure," he continued; "although one after another film man turned it down and it would have been lost to America had not a group of serious business men been invited to take a last look at it before Charles Urban—under whose direction the pictures were made by authority of the British Government—took it back to London disgusted with his reception by 'the trade' here."

"So these gentlemen just snapped it up," went on Mr. Lichtman. "In a day or two they formed a $100,000 syndicate to finance the pictures. The Patriot Film Corporation was born and the patriotically demonstrative houses that have been greeting 'How Britain Prepared,' at the Lyceum, are the result."

"And some people thought that the 'war film' had seen its day," was remarked.

"This is not a war film," retorted Mr. Lichtman. "This is a Preparedness-for-War film—something totally different. That's one of the elements of its success. It shows us exactly what we Americans must do if a war cloud should threaten our tranquillity. And, indeed, as the Evening Sun critic said, in that respect, it is 'calculated to stir the spirit even of a pacifist.' As for Urban's wonderful films showing Admiral Jellicoe's great North Sea Fleet on guard and in action—something to which recent events have given an increased importance—such an authority as Commander Crank of the United States Navy said to me that they are simply incomparable."

"And now that you have this big success," Mr. Lichtman was asked, "what are you going to do with it?"

"A pertinent question. Answer: Although we have had many offers for rights, including the largest legitimate theater circuits, we propose sending out 'How Britain Prepared' ourselves, as a big road attraction. We intend choosing the best theaters in every city, but we will always give preference to the big first class moving picture houses with good orchestras. You may be sure we will play fair with everybody. The gentlemen behind the enterprise would not stand for anything else."

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS' LAST STORY IN PICTURE.

"Somewhere in France," the last story from the pen of the late Richard Harding Davis, is now being arranged for filming at the Triangle-Ince studio. The story is a particularly virile one and it promises to be one of the film sensations of the year. As now being written, it is likely that Louise Glaum, the well-known Triangle star, will be seen in the featured part.

CUB COMEDY COMPANY CELEBRATES.

A celebration in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the Cub Comedy Company and the successful completion of half a hundred pictures in as many weeks was held at the David Horsley studios, Los Angeles, Saturday night, May 27, the guest of honor being Director Milton H. Fahrney. The big stage at the north end of the plant was transformed into a huge ballroom, and when the festivities started fully three hundred persons were present, the assemblage being composed of the entire working force of the studio as well as many prominent lights of the film colony of southern California.

David Horsley, sole owner, and director-general of the studios, planned the event, in recognition of the faithful services of Mr. Fahrney and his associates. Sharing the glory of the occasion with Mr. Fahrney were five members of the Cub Comedy Company who made up the cast of the first picture, a year ago. This honor fell to George Ovey, star of the company; Louis FitzRoy, assistant to Mr. Fahrney; Janet Sully, Jefferson Osborne and Ross Fisher, the cameraman who turned the crank throughout the entire five thousand scenes or more used in making the fifty productions.

One of the surprises of the evening was the appearance of the Cub Company band, consisting of twelve pieces, under the leadership of George Ovey. It was the first public appearance of this aggregation and they made an excellent showing from the start.

A program made up of talent from the celebrating company occupied a good portion of the evening, it being so arranged that it alternated with the dances, thereby making the activities continuous. At midnight the grand march took place, the procession being headed by Mr. and Mrs. Fahrney, followed by the Cub band and then the company.

ACORD SERIOUSLY INJURED.

It was entirely an accident, and not because the horse proved capable of unseating Art Acord, that he was badly hurt during the filming of a scene for a Mustang picture entitled "Sandy, Reformer," at the Santa Barbara studios of the American Film Company, Inc., recently.

The Mustang company was on location—in one of the densely wooded valleys of the Santa Ynez Mountains. Acord's part called for him to ride down a steep slope among boulders and through thick underbrush. At one of the most perilous points, the horse lost its footing and fell sidewise down the incline. Feeling the horse going, Acord attempted to spring off on the upside. One of his spurs caught in a worn cinch, and he was dragged after the rolling, pitching, struggling horse. Before the animal could regain its feet, it had rolled over the rider inflicting severe internal injuries

"THE PRIMA DONNA'S HUSBAND."

The Triumph Film Corporation has secured the Lyceum Theater for a trade showing of "The Prima Donna's Husband," Monday, June 12th at 10.30 a. m. This is said to be an exceptionally strong photoplay, directed by Julius Steger and Joseph A. Golden, with Holbrook Blinn heading a cast that includes Clara Whipple and Kathryn Browne Decker.

BRITISH NOTES

JOHN D. TIPPETT, the managing director of the British "Universal" Company—the Trans-Atlantic,—promises to become an inveterate exhibitor. The week has seen his second venture in London in screen presentations with "The Dumb Girl of Portici" at the Philharmonic Hall and incidentally in a style calculated to command the attention of the aristocracy. The first day's proceeds of the exhibitions of the Pavlowa film were in aid of war charities and considering the ultra-selectness of the audiences—it was I believe Queen Alexandra's first visit to a public kinema entertainment —and such delightful little impositions as cigarettes at ten-shillings each, the results were most gratifying.

"Are we going to master the Kinema and direct it into useful channels or are we going to allow it to master us?" is a question that has been exacting much thought and discussion from a few perplexed prelates of the Established Church. Says one, "it is worse than useless, it is foolish and short-sighted, to rail against the pictures. They are the outstanding social fact of our time and it is for us to make the best of them, which we have hitherto been very far from doing. Especially do we wish to see the kinematograph used in schools. It is now being pressed upon the Imperial Council at Delhi for acceptance by the Indian Government for use in all public schools and it has been suggested that in England and America, schools might combine by using a common building and so not incur great expense. Picture-house proprietors would probably welcome cooperation to this end."

The concluding observation is for once accurate and coming from the one-time most formidable opponents of the motion-picture is, to say the least, interesting. But the experiences of many exhibitors with designs upon the educational development of the kinematograph have not been happy ones. Instead of cooperation from the authorities, ecclesiastical or educational, dissenting cranks have frustrated many praiseworthy propositions and I have known cases where special facilities arranged for school chiildren to see educational films have been actually resisted through the domination of the text-book fads. It is unnecessary to wade through Plutarch or Gibbons to find that war is as great a revolutionary factor to mind as body so it is not surprising that this along with other old cherished prejudices should have gone to the wall. The educational authorities might do much to encourage the idea. In one Northern city they have made a laudable start by permitting 25,000 school-children to see the "Britain Prepared" series of war-films. The children attended the exhibitor's hall at nine in the morning, accompanied by their tutors, and were clear before the ordinary performances. The local education authorities arranged the collection of the kiddies "twopences" and, it is most gratifying to observe, not a single parent amongst the 25,000 refused the wherewithal of admission to his offspring or voiced any objection to the innovation.

The time of writing is the second week of the administration of the Amusements Tax and there is no gainsaying that its imposition last week, coming simultaneous with a spell of brilliant weather, an hour's extra daylight, and the ratification of the general conscription bill for all men of military fitness, was conducive to anything but good business. The country and suburban showmen appear to have been hit hardest through the new exaction but this week conditions are more promising all round.

The first Kerrigan serial was unspooled to the trade in London last week. Two of the villains in different episodes of "Terence O'Rourke" have been furnished with Teutonic attributes for the more palatable assimilation of the British film fan. There is no point upon which Trans-Atlantic publicity scores oftener than upon these little touches of topicality.

A journalistic friend who was amongst a privileged few invited to see a recent War Office acquisition from the official camera-men at the front gives a vivid account of a wonderful film of the St. Eloi battle. He states that the military authorities think it the most realistic war-film yet issued, particularly because it shows close views of concentrated artillery fire and a Fokker biplane in flames. The film will be shown to the trade here in London in the course of a day or two and will be released for exhibition next month.

Mr. Geo. H. Smith of the Vitagraph Co. returned to the London offices from his American tour on the eve of the release of his company's big subject "The Battle Cry of Peace."

At a meeting the other day of the London County Council theatrical sub-committee one member described the principle of compelling Sunday kinemas to devote part of their proceeds to charitable funds as one of blackmail and suggested that along the same system of reasoning the L. C. C. tram cars should give their quota of Sunday fares!

Octavia Handworth Returns

Old-time Favorite Comes Back in Important Role in "Who's Guilty?"

IT ALWAYS is a pleasure to welcome the return of old friends. This is particularly true in the world of the theater, where "here today—gone tomorrow" seems so inevitably the rule. And so it is with unusual delight that the host of admirers who so long have followed the career of Octavia Handworth on stage and screen note her reappearance in the silent drama.

Octavia Handworth.

Miss Handworth was some years ago the first star of the American company which the famous house of Pathe established. Under the guiding hand of her husband, an extremely popular and capable director, Miss Handworth climbed slowly but steadily into the dizzy eminence of stardom. Then she went to Europe, to appear there for several years in pictures and on the stage.

Upon her recent return to the United States she was engaged —"gobbled up" might better describe the process—by W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Company, which is producing the "Who's Guilty?" series for Pathe. So that really Miss Handworth has but returned to her first love in the motion picture field.

To those who see her for the first time as the scheming housekeeper in "Sowing the Wind," one of the "Who's Guilty?" series, it will seem as if Miss Handworth has eclipsed her part, as if she were, if anything, too convincing in a difficult and rather unsympathetic role. But those who have made the previous acquaintanceship of this clever young woman will realize that with her return to pictures she merely has set a new mark of dramatic attainment.

The average "adventuress"—we mean the stage type of adventuress—is usually dark, with solemn, sullen eyes that seem to brood as if over darkest Egypt's past. Yet Miss Handworth is a true blonde. Nor is there aught in her eyes when they are not conscious of the camera's work, of anything save kindness and good humor. Also an "adventuress" is supposed to be a wicked woman of fixed and daring purpose; Miss Handworth rather gives the impression of subtle cunning and masterful design.

All true "adventuress" types are—or they say should be—a dominating force. In this, at any rate, Miss Handworth fills the prescribed defines, except that she carries domination to the point of regalness. For regal she is, rather than masterful; dominant rather than dominating.

Under the careful direction of Lawrence B. McGill, who staged "Sowing the Wind," all of the cleverness of this unusually clever woman is brought to the fore. So sincerely has her work been done that, at the conclusion of the "Who's Guilty?" series, President Shallenberger of the Arrow Company plans to present Miss Handworth in a stellar role in a feature drama now being written for her.

"The Destroyers"

Lucille Lee Stewart Makes Debut as Leading Player in Vitagraph V. L. S. E. Picture

Reviewed by George Blaisdell

THE V. L. S. E. released on June 5 "The Destroyers," the five part Vitagraph feature in which Lucille Lee Stewart has made her debut as a leading player. The subject, the script for which was written by James Oliver Curwood, was produced by Rollin Sturgeon. Mr. Sturgeon has made an effort to make his story appeal to the people in fact there are few who will not readily sympathize or attend an adventure such as he has portrayed, but the story lacks originality as to the opportunities as a leading player. The cast of characters portrayed is more or less ordinary and Miss Stewart as well as the others appear to greater interest at the latter parts.

"The Destroyers" is a good subject. The opening is in the north woods snow covered. The sitting of the principal characters at the end of the first reel is in death. It is at this point that the story reveals to the discouraged beginning and for more than one there is enticing the story with the story, the complication to be met the accompanying behind them a schools and so to why the young woman is so far from the understanding a good picture and a breathtaker. It is a dramatic subject and holds throughout. When the tale fades into the present the result is a strong climax and it is cleverly handled.

Huntley Gordon has the role of McLeod and later of Peter and the numerous reformer who is present of his activities is framed up by a detected scoundrel for the immorality. As the result of a struggle in which his parents are killed he goes to the woods away from civilization believing himself a murderer and hated by the world. His Protector is a trapper and hated by the world. His Protector is a murderer and hated by the world. Lawler the politician who succeeds in destroying the reputation of the man who caused his misfortune. Virginia Borden is Cecile the girl who is the working instrument of Lawler. It is an excellent cast.

The opening of the story is effective. Even the snow covered trails speed the six dogs and their sled with its human freight. They are seen from head and front. The staging of the fort, with its log buildings is realistic. The location of the woods is well sustained throughout the subject.

"His Brother's Wife"

Premo World Film Drama Presenting Three Players of Marked Ability in an Adequate Story

Reviewed by Lynde Denig

THE three players at the points of the triangle in this five part drama—Ethel Clayton, Paul McAllister and Carlyle Blackwell—complete as strong a combination as any producer could desire. It would not be fair to credit the author of the story—or to the director Harley Knoles to state that the actors are the making of the picture, but surely they do their share, and each has a drawing power worthy of consideration. If Miss Clayton is new to World Film and more, she may be assured by the way critics and theatregoers in general speak of her work in numerous latest productions Mr. Brownell is of course well known to all picture patrons, whereas Mr. McAllister has proven himself to be an effective actor on the screen as on the stage. In point of broad possibility in the present instance, the featured players were a happy selection.

From the point of viewpoint if not always from the more exacting one of camera art "His Brother's Wife" as a production offering is that it contains certain refreshing elements of subject. There is Helen Burton the wife, ready to sacrifice herself for her husband's career with humiliations after his financial ruin there is the husband's dashing young brother, who magnanimously foregoes a tempting affair with the sorely persecuted wife and when it is decided to advise a domestic role calculated to arouse a sympathetic response in the audience, there is a photo-play, an innocent victim of the tragedy threatening the parents.

That the author did not always avoid the appearance of convenient employment in the progress of the plot is true, and at times the director permitted scenes not essential to the action such as those of an Apache dance and a spirited race on snow covered car but in the main the story advances with commendable directness. First we meet the Burtons in the time of their prosperity, suddenly ended by the disastrous fire started by a discharged employe. Then we meet the brother, who, having amassed a fortune on an Australian ranch, visits New York and we see we follow the events dependent upon his chance encounter with Helen. When the action shifts to Saranac Lake there are opportunities for beautiful scenes and enchanting bits of drama. The separation of husband and wife, as the result of an unjust suspicion is not improbable, according to photo-play standards, and the reconciliation on the night that Helen scores as an actress in a stellar role is within reason.

"The Code of the Hills"

Lubin Western Studio Produces Three Part Subject Containing Good Situations.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell

THE Lubin Company released on June 1 "The Code of the Hills," a three part subject treating of life in a primitive community and also in the city. The story is written by Millard Wilson and is directed by Melvin Mayo. Mr. Mayo would have added materially to the illusion of his picture had he seen fit in staging it to have incorporated backgrounds containing mountains or even hills. So far as this writer observed, there was not present the faintest suggestion of these.

Lucy Payton plays the dual role of mother and daughter. Rod Hopkins is the lawyer who on vacation meets and marries the former. The union is an unhappy one and the mother returns to her home. A daughter is born and the mother dies. The father is unaware of the existence of the newcomer. In later years the daughter goes to the home of the lawyer, now a judge to kill him in revenge for his having sentenced to prison a man who had been the child's protector as he had also been the unsuccessful suitor for the hand of the mother.

The daughter, unaware of the identity of her father, stands beside the painting of her mother in the judge's study and with pistol in hand. It is a situation of dramatic power. The design of Nan to kill the judge is aborted by the intervention of the actual murderer, the brother of the man sentenced, who has come to the judge to confess. The story told by the visitor unites father and daughter and steps are taken to free the one in prison. As the crime for which he had been sentenced was the shooting of a man who had insulted the daughter of the judge the code of the hills is accepted by the latter, there is no further prosecution, and all ends happily.

"The Code of the Hills" will make an acceptable three-part subject.

"The Three Godfathers"

Six-Part Bluebird Photoplay Presents Story of Strong Appeal by Peter B. Kyne.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE exceptionally human character of this story allows of its extension over six reels of film without becoming tiresome. The regeneration of three crooks through the enforced adoption of a lone infant born on the desert and left to their care by a dying mother, forms the main theme of Peter B. Kyne's story, cleverly adapted to the screen by Harvey Gates. Director E. J. LeSaint with Stella Razeto and Harry Carey in the leading roles, and George Berrell, Frank Lanning, Joe Rickson and Hart Hoxie in the supporting cast, has made the production one of the welcome sort that the exhibitor may show with impunity before any audience.

The introduction of the main theme of the story has been done in a most satisfactory manner. We are thoroughly well acquainted with Ruby Merrill of the western dance hall, Bob Scene from "The Three Godfathers" (Bluebird).

Sangster, the cowpuncher from nowhere, and the three strangers, who, it transpires, knew Bob in the Yuma "pen" when he was "doin' time for smugglin' horses," before the safe-breaking episode and the flight into the desert. Bob Sangster, trying to make a stake with which to return and marry Ruby, takes a last chance on a crooked game, flings the girl from him to safety, refusing to "lay down at the pinch," and rushes through the bullet-swept street with the horses at the signal from the other three. The dark street scene at this juncture of the story presents a remarkable spectacle, excited action under the cloak of night, with indistinct forms hurrying from the saloon, and guns flashing fire as the strangers make a getaway with their loot. The scenes on the desert where the men do their best with the new-born babe will be found both pathetic and amusing, and sometimes singularly gruesome. The double exposure work representing the spirits of the two older men who died on the desert that the babe might be brought to safety by the younger man, driving a couple of burros toward the tottering last one, are very effective.

June 19 is the date set for the release of this excellent feature.

"The Lotus Woman"

Five-Reel Kalem Release Containing Many Picturesque Scenes—Alice Hollister in a Vampire Role.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE line in George R. Sims' "Ostler Joe" descriptive of the lady "who lured men's souls to the shore of sin by the light of her wanton eyes" applies equally as well to Juana, the Lotus Woman. This lady vampire is a native of South America, and was reared in rigorous seclusion by her haughty old father, Don Roberto, until the arrival of a dashing rebel chief at the hacienda. Whereupon she is found the next evening in the garden by her sire clasped in the arms of the rebel gentleman, Lopez by name. When Don Roberto voices his disapproval he is shot down by Lopez, and the couple is next seen in camp, with Lopez in command of a conquering army. Jerry Mandeville, an American soldier of fortune, disappointed in a love affair at home, joins the rebel, and the Lotus Woman tries her fascination on him. She is repulsed and vows vengeance. Mandeville's successful rival next appears on the scene, and Juana makes a quick conquest of him. The way is thus opened for Mandeville to prove himself the better man and win his lady love as the final picture is thrown upon the screen. The path leading to this proper consummation of the tale is a bloody one, however, and strewn with the bodies of Lopez, the Lotus Woman and the faithless American. During a perfect whirlwind of strictly melodramatic action the rebel chief is killed by Don Roberto just as he is about to finish Juana; the American is shot down while trying to escape a squad of soldiers, and Juana performs "the happy dispatch" by the aid of her own stiletto. An embarrassment of riches in the way of plot makes the story somewhat slow in getting under way, but, the exposition once over, events move forward at a rapid and compelling pace. Judged from its own viewpoint, "The Lotus Woman" is a photoplay of merit. Like all plays of its class, the characters are dominated by the melodramatic exigencies of the situations, but have been outlined with a steady hand. The atmosphere of Latin America is sustained in the locations and accessories throughout the five reels.

Alice Hollister's performance of Juana is consistent, admirable in expression and physically attractive, although she does not attempt to make this last quality unduly prominent. A vampire who depends upon her mental appeal to entice her victims is a novelty in this day and age. Harry Millarde, who had charge of the production, is quietly effective as Mandeville, and Arthur Albertson, John E. Macklin, James B. Ross and Faye Cussack give an excellent account of the other important characters.

"Bogus Ghost" Was by Gardner.

Through an error in the announcements concerning "The Bogus Ghost," a single-reel Ethel Teare comedy, released by Kalem, May 24, the authorship was credited to S. A. Van Petten. The story was from the pen of Louis B. Gardner.

"Civilization"

A Most Powerful and Compelling Film Spectacle Contrasting the Apparent Peace of Civilization with the Grim Reality of War.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

AS A SPECTACLE "Civilization" is an undoubted success. The spectacular has been rather emphasized on the screen these last few months. Exacting standards have been set, but even judged by these exacting standards Mr. Ince's production bears the severest test. It is altogether probable that the spectacular element in this feature will assure its popularity and its commercial success, and if there were no other criterions this review must end right here. An attempt has been made, however, to produce an allegory and to convey a great idea. Whatever criticism is attempted here will confine itself entirely to that aspect of the production. Mr. Ince has endeavored to use the artistic and psychological power of the screen, and his laudable and ambitious efforts in this direction call for a just but sympathetic analysis.

Of all mediums of expression, of all forms of literature, nothing is more difficult than allegory. In all the literature of the world, ancient and modern, the successful allegories may be counted on the fingers of one hand. The use of the supernatural requires little less than genius. In "Civilization" the most daring use is made of the supernatural. Mr. Ince takes us to "The Borderland" which he informs us "flows" between Earth and Eternity. What we see there is by no means clear, though it is weird and picturesque. In this "borderland" we meet the figure of Jesus. The inventor of a submarine, "Count Ferdinand," has refused to fire a torpedo at a peaceful passenger ship, and though he was the commander of the U-boat, he preferred to kill most of the crew and blow up the boat to executing the orders of his inhuman king. He is drowned and his soul is presently found wandering in the "borderland." Jesus meets him and addresses him as "Count Ferdinand." He praises the Count for the service he has rendered to humanity and announces that He will reappear upon earth in the form and shape of the Count and preach peace.

Before this strange transformation takes place the Count is led to a spot in the "borderland" which is palpably copied from the Dante film and is told that "Here abides Immortal Hate chained to herself." The Count seems much impresed and then disappears from the story except as to his outward and visible form. Before the audience reaches this remarkable scene it has been profoundly impressed by the horrors of war. The early scenes of war, the terrible contrast between the apparent peace of civilization and the grim presence and reality of war, have been portrayed with a realism and an art rarely surpassed in film history. No stronger appeal on behalf of suffering humanity has ever been made in words or in pictures.

Toward the end of the picture, when we have supped our fill of horrors, a new series of horrors is shown, strong, artistic, realistic, overwhelmingly powerful but withal anti-climactic. The titles with negligible exceptions are good, but there are altogether too many of them, and the long narrative which introduces the pictures is apt to become tedious. The picture, except in the purely allegorical attempts, is clear and powerful enough to tell its own story and unnecessary titles only interrupt.

With all its confusion of ideas the feature has a compelling interest, which could have been greatly enhanced with the right sort of music. In spots the music was suitable enough, in other places it was altogether out of place. The success of the music depends entirely on a skillful use of crescendo and diminuendo. The composer, it seems to me, has overlooked most of his opportunities.

The acting surely was not up to the height of Mr. Ince's "great argument." Herschell Mayall was an impossible King of Wredpryd and strutted most of the time. Howard Hickman had a most unenviable part as Count Ferdinand and did the best he could. Miss Enid Markey as Katheryn Haldemann may eventually develop into a good actress. There were moments when she encouraged such a belief, and of her ambition and her conscientious effort there can be no doubt. She, too, had an almost possible part and never seemed quite clear just what to do with it. George Fisher acquitted himself well in the extremely delicate and difficult part of Jesus.

The pantomime preceding the film at its first showing at the Criterion on the night of Friday, June 2, was exceedingly well done and deserved the rich applause it received. The audience was extremely lavish in its demonstrations, as may be judged from the fact that the quotation of one of the ten commandments brought forth a storm of applause.

At the end of the performance Mr. Ince came uopn the stage in response to the noisy demands of his friends. He was evidently much moved by the favorable reception of his most ambitious effort and made a short speech acknowledging his gratitude.

"The Spider and the Fly"

Robert Mantell and Genevieve Hamper in Well Acted Melodrama by the Fox Company—Five Reels.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE spider in this picture, "The Spider and the Fly," is played by Genevieve Hamper. It is a five-reel offering full of the old-fashioned melodrama's high lights and deep shadows. The spider, after wrecking the lives of several men, among them a gentleman who loved her too well, played by Robert Mantell, is converted and becomes a slum worker, but is too late to save the poor, broken gentleman.

The juvenile parts are taken by Claire Whitney and Walter Miller, two guileless young folks who see only enough evil in the world to come through their trials and tribulations safely. Stewart Holmes plays the chief helper of the "Spider." In the early scenes there is a most charming child, one of those kiddies, it seems, who are earnest and sensitive and who can be played upon even to tears of sympathy as sweetly as a piano.

One notices the Fox skillful workmanship in the picture abundantly. There is a wonderfully effective use of close-up scenes that pick out the faces where the drama values are highest for the instant. There are sets and backgrounds that are unobtrusively perfect. The quality of the story will, as an offering, depend on the taste of the audience—it is the old-fashioned melodrama, nothing more or less, but well acted (for the most part) and well produced. It is not a picture that those who are asking for substantial offerings would seek, nor would those who want pictures significant of real life care much for it.

"Gloria's Romance"

Chapters IV and V Arouse the Keen Interest of the Spectator in Gloria's Preference for Freneau and in the Web That Is Being Spun Around Him.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

I WAS not mistaken in foretelling in my review of Chapters II and III of "Gloria's Romance" that the indications pointed to increased action and keener interest in the chapters soon to follow.

Chapters IV and V cannot fail to stir spectators into the belief that the story is very much worth while, notwithstanding the luke-warmness that may have been created by the first three chapters because of their simple reasonableness and tameness of action, necessitated by the avowed purpose of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes to write a moving picture novel that would show life as it is reasonably lived.

It is pertinent here to submit the opinion that it might have been better, in the first filmed novel of this type, had Chapters I, II and III been all included in the first release. It seems to me that if this plan had been followed the disappointment of many who were not prepared for a story of this type would have become hearty interest and support. It now appears evident, after viewing Chapters IV and V, that interest henceforth will be cumulative and that the new type of film novel—instead of unfolding its greatest thrill in the opening chapters and then gradually dwindling into monotony and wearisomeness until the close—will continue to exercise greater influence as it proceeds. I expect to see finer opportunities for acting on the part of the principals and of all the other important characters and to witness a denouement that will be worthy and satisfying.

Chapter IV is headed "The Social Vortex." Here Freneau, the gentleman adventurer who plays havoc among the hearts of women, renews his attentions to Gloria, and through her girlish cunning succeeds in being a guest at her coming-out party, notwithstanding that her aunt Hortensia had blue-penciled his name on the list. He had made his peace with her over his failure to recognize her at the opera by paying her the artful compliment, "You've grown so wonderfully beautiful that I didn't know you," and while her father slept in his chair during the first act he had conducted a wireless conversation with her by means of his and of her opera glass and taken her off to the refreshment room, where he fully reinstated himself in her favor.

There is a fine touch of comedy in this scene (or scenes), in which Miss Billie Burke's Gloria is a girlish, radiant creature, who throws social decorum to the winds at the dictates of her heart and makes of her doting old millionaire father a stern keeper, who fumes over his powerlessness to keep her in her cage.

The scene in the Stafford mansion showing the initiation of Gloria as a debutante is animated and picturesque, and Miss Billie Burke is the star toward which all eyes are directed. Gloria refuses to give her opening dance to any of the young gallants who press her for the favor, and finally selects her old Dad for that honor, but his heart trouble soon makes logs of his feet and he resigns to another. Freneau is her favorite, and the jealous Dr. Joyce registers in his mind that Gloria dances with him just a bit too often and makes it his duty to have a talk with him and threaten him.

Chapter V, "The Gathering Storm," introduces a new character, Gideon Trask, who promises to interfere more effectively with the plans of the wily Freneau than does either Gloria's father or Dr. Joyce. A sight of this stranger by Freneau recalls a chapter out of his reckless past life, but that is soon forgotten, and we see him sleighing with Gloria the following day behind her new ponies. Billie Burke handles the ribbons like a prize winner at a swelldom's horse show and looks stunning in her winter garb. On the trip, at the inn, where they stop for a cup of tea that is never drunk, so far as the pictures show, Freneau holds Gloria to her promise of marriage, made five years before, and the unsuspecting girl accepts him.

This scene is very well acted. Freneau's proposal is made in a most original way, the dominating impression being cold, intellectual forcefulness, with an artificial show of deep sentiment. Billie Burke's Gloria is just what we would expect on this occasion. She listens to his words in silence, looking at him all the time out of eyes filled with a trustful tenderness—and their lips meet in the first kiss.

Pneumonia seizes Gloria as the result of the sleigh ride, and the old fogy family doctor is called in. He comes near putting an end to the story right here, but Dr. Joyce comes to the rescue, the old fogy fires himself, and our heroine is spared to encounter whatever joys or ills the future may have in store for her.

"The Evil Thereof"

Unpleasant But Powerful Famous Players Subject Is Well Made and Well Acted.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE Famous Players released on June 5 "The Evil Thereof," a five-part adaptation of the drama by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf. It is a "morality drama"; an unpleasant subject is treated in a powerful way. The object of the story is to show the widely divergent uses to which money may be put. There is shown the contrast in which the spendthrift showers money on those who share his orgies and the scant consideration he bestows upon the wife of a laborer fatally injured by his machine. The picture is directed by Robert G. Vignola in the Famous Players style.

Two characters stand out in the story. Frank Losee is seen in the role of the wealthy man who is in business not because he needs the money, but because he believes it to be expedient to get away from the possibility of the charge of being one of the "idle rich"; the broker is altogether despicable, a libertine without a saving grace unless it be the lavish manner in which he throws money, hundred-dollar bills, to his women friends. Grace Valentine is a manicurist who is seduced by the broker and, disowned by her father, afterward has no interest in life; her subjugation is complete; there is nothing for her to do but heed the "beck and call" of the broker. It is a strangely contrasting pair. The two roles are splendidly played. The smooth villainy of the one is matched by the deep despair of the other.

The story is a succession of tragedies—of the soul and also of blood. The culmination is near the close of the banquet where the broker entertains seven of his friends, or associates if you will. The brooding manicurist, repentant, rebellious, overcome by shame, plunges the carving knife into the breast of the host.

"The Evil Thereof" is realism—gilded brutality. The story grips.

MABEL TALIAFERRO IN "GOD'S HALF ACRE."

Mabel Taliaferro, the famous stage and screen favorite, has signed an engagement with Metro-Rolfe to appear in at least eleven more five-part productions. The first of this number, "God's Half Acre," is now in production, and will be released the middle of July. Edwin Carewe, who has been directing Miss Taliaferro, and who appeared with her in "The Snowbird," her last feature on the Metro program, will direct all the Taliaferro productions.

CLIFFORD ELFELT WILL DIRECT "MUGGINS."

Clifford Elfelt has been selected to film "Muggins," a one reel comedy drama in which Gretchen Lederer will play the lead, with N. Myles opposite, and supported by Adele Farrington and little Elizabeth Jaynes. The filming of this picture play will require at least another week.

"Chip's Carmen"

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

HERE is a burlesque on a burlesque depending somewhat, though not entirely, on the supposition that prospective audiences have viewed the original. To thoroughly appreciate Charlie Chaplin's comedy version of "Carmen" it is wise to see one of the serious productions first; likewise the meaning of these two reels, made by the Juvenile Film Corporation, under the direction of James A. Fitz-Patrick, will be grasped more completely if the incidents in the famous Essanay burlesque are recalled. An exhibitor who has shown the Chaplin picture would not go far wrong in booking "Chip's Carmen," while the impression left by the original is still fresh, especially if the taste of children, or that of adults with a childish sense of humor, is being considered.

The spirit of this picture is ingenuously youthful and therein lies most of its charm. It is very much as though a party of clever youngsters had been inspired to adjourn to the back yard and spend the afternoon playing "Carmen," having secured an assortment of costumes from their elders. Indeed, something of this idea is carried out in the introduction of Joseph Chip Monahan, the juvenile imitator of Chaplin. His mind filled with memories of the "Carmen" burlesque, he returns home and wanders out into the fields with his goat. Presently he falls asleep and the scene dissolves into a fantastic distortion of the picture just witnessed.

In the dream, Chip Monahan becomes Bon Doze, who is fascinated by the wiles of a nine-year-old Carmen, cleverly presented by Chip's sister, Janethel Monahan. Then all of the lad's playmates enter into the action as bandits, toreadors, or just plain spectators of Bon Doze's heroic encounter with the bull. The scenes are brightly acted by the children, among them Dolores Mitrovich, a dancer of rare grace.

"The Gutter Magdalene"

A Lasky Feature with Many Admirable Points Featuring Fannie Ward in the Leading Part.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

DESPITE its absurd and ill-fitting title, this production may be ranked as a thoroughly successful Lasky feature. In its clever seizure of profound psychological moments, in its portraiture of phases in underworld life, in its inspirational devotion to perfect details, this feature stands in the first rank. I must qualify the statement right here in order to give the exhibitor the right perspective: Fannie Ward is not at her best. She starts well as the victim of the young gambler's flashy deceit, but her conversion and her entrance into the Salvation Army was far from convincing. Conversion implies a triumph of sincerity, a welling up of the spiritual nature, a change of soul. There was indeed a splendid opportunity for the display of high histrionic gifts and there was much in Miss Ward's past performances to encourage the belief that she would meet the highest expectations. As a matter of fact, she never got further than looking unnaturally demure. With this qualification the highest praise is none too high for the merits of the film. Jack Dean, Billy Elmer, James Neill, Gertrude Kellar and Robert Bradbury made a most satisfactory cast. The story is a strictly modern one, and the settings as well as the atmosphere lend great force and interest to the production. The pictures and scenes of low life while never in the least offensive are startlingly true to life. The whole situation is handled with extraordinary skill. The feature, I am pleased to add, is remarkably free from padding.

"His Great Triumph"

William Nigh Gives Vivid Portrayal of Underworld Character in Columbia-Metro Drama.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

FOR about two-thirds of its five-reel course, "His Great Triumph" holds true to a tense story of an unusual nature; but after that, after the climax in the life of Buttsy Gallagher has been reached and passed, there is considerably less to engage the attention. Had the plot been allowed to run its natural length, it is probable that we should have had a three instead of a five-reel picture, and the impression left by William Nigh's complete portrayal of a pathetic weakling would have been stronger in consequence.

Although Marguerite Snow is given a prominent place in the cast, this is essentially Mr. Nigh's picture. His is the character that stands out in unchallenged prominence, attracts sympathy and justifies the story. Buttsy is a mental and physical incompetent, possessing a craving for the pleasant things in life without even the ability to maintain the respect of his associates in the slums. Abused by everyone with whom he comes in contact, his one pleasure in life is gained by skulking around the homes of the wealthy, where the lights and the luxury awaken dreams in his unbalanced mind.

This accounts for his presence at the mansion of Judge Winters when a man is shot by burglars, who escapes leaving Buttsy in a compromising position, although the judge's daughter and a fortune-hunting count know that he is blameless. Thus far there has been nothing extraordinary; but with the progress of the trial the nature of Buttsy is revealed in a quite unprecedented light. When it comes to a choice between the electric chair and a return to the old life of misery, the defective chooses the chair and urges his guilt for fear that the luxury of death may be denied him.

It is here and in scenes immediately following that the story reaches a logical climax, the effect of which is lessened by the last reels, designed to show the ultimate good fortune of Buttsy—a man destined by nature for misfortune. The direction of the picture indicates care and the acting of Miss Snow, Robert Eliot, Julius D. Cowles and others suffices.

"The Window of Dreams"

Three-Reel Thanhouser Presenting a Simple Story Artistically Treated.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

MORE of an impression than a drama, a production in which we are scarcely conscious of the number of its parts, which, by the way, are three, a simple theme clearly outlined and not overburdened by detail other than that which has a direct bearing on the story is what constitutes this perfectly natural and deeply pathetic picture.

Agnes C. Johnson is responsible for the scenario which was directed by Howard C. Mitchell with a cast consisting of Grace De Carlton, Bert Delaney, Clifford Gray, Betty Lawson and Carey L. Hastings. The production teaches a valuable lesson to the oversuspicious wife and sweetheart by showing the untold sorrow which the jealous disposition is capable of causing to all concerned. In the instance presented in the picture a mere trifle is the cause of a terrible tragedy. A lover late for his appointment with his sweetheart because he is engrossed in leaving at her home a canary which he names "Joy," suggesting that she can always keep it in its cage so that it will never escape from her, meets his death a few minutes later through the pettishness of the sweetheart, who, absorbed in her fancied grievance, allows him to wander on a hillside that is about to be blasted. In attempting all too late to make him understand his danger she herself is made a cripple for life.

The remainder of the story shows the invalid observing from her window the domestic life of a newly-married couple who have come to live next door. At the moment when their bark strikes the breakers she is able from her superior knowledge and the part played by circumstances to smooth their path and be of use in a financial crisis.

Grace De Carlton is to be especially commended for her intelligent work in this production.

Triangle Shows Two Subjects

"An Innocent Magdalene," Fine Arts, an Unusually Fine Picture—"The Dividend," from Ince Studio, Shows Structural Weakness.

By Louis Reeves Harrison

"An Innocent Magdalene."

As sweet and dignified as its main characterization, ideal in conception, well designed and artistic in execution, "An Innocent Magdalene," by Roy Somerville, is more than an enchanting story—it is a valuable contribution to the support of the moving picture business. The new art would drag along through a sickly youth if nourished only by the general run of makeshifts and plagiarisms. Bright hopes of its future and vigor of present existence depend for sustenance upon such occasional examples of true artistry, as "An Innocent Magdalene," true and shining gems among a lot of lusterless paste imitations.

The story starts off with an exquisite characterization. It makes us well acquainted with a tender-hearted little Southern girl placed in small-town environment and brought up in strict seclusion by an egostical father, an aristocratic gentleman of the old school, at odds with progress as well as with his unpretending neighbors. He represents the fast-decaying idea that distinguished ancestry must dominate present merit. Pride of family is all he has to sustain an assumption of superiority that lacks other reason for existence. Unable to meet conditions as he finds them, lacking in both mental breadth and gracious tact, the soured old pretender lives in a state of semi-retirement and obtrusive respectability and attempts to keep his daughter from soiling contact with ordinary people, very much to their general amusement and occasional derision. This characterization presents some interesting contrasts and is so decidedly American that it gives atmosphere to the play.

The girl is inspired by the better part of her father's pride. She carries herself with a fine deportment that results more from purity and elevation of mind than from over-estimation of herself. The characterization is complex, is that of a human being rather than of an ideal, and Lillian Gish presents it so clearly that the impersonation may justly be called the best she has ever done. Pure, sweet and grave, the Southern girl falls in love with a handsome stranger, and he boldly asks the father for her hand in marriage. He is turned out of doors. The lovers are married without parental consent, and the old aristocrat writes his daughter's name in the Bible among dead members of his family.

The young wife is not hurt by discovering that her husband is a man of light morality, a gambler in peril of arrest, for she inspires him to a change of occupation, though too late to save him from arrest. She is not broken down when he is sentenced to a year's imprisonment. She exhibits great courage when a woman out of her husband's past appears as his first wife, but she gives up her home and goes back to her father because she is with child. He rejects her as a soiled thing. Small-town society turns upon her the finger of scorn. The church points to her as an example. She finds refuge in a negro cabin and gives birth to a child, but the strain of sustained ignominy proves too much for her fortitude after she has served her divine mission, and her mind begins to weaken. She is finally saved from self-destruction by her husband, who finds an impostor in her place on his return from prison, and the cruel egotism of her father is bitterly punished. The whole story moves with clarity and vigor through its scenes, but there is no forced effort to rouse and sustain attention. Interest grows constantly and naturally out of fine development of a beatuiful character.

"The Dividend."

A play of social criticism with a strong theme, "The Dividend," a five-reel Ince subject written by C. Gardner Sullivan, is admirably handled and interpreted with skill, William H. Thompson carrying off the honors as a hard old capitalist who judges everything in the world, everybody, including his own son, and even himself by one standard of valuation, that which affects his property interests. Outside of this marked characterization, one not intended to attract sympathy, there is lacking some form of compensation for the almost continuous injustice done by the father to his weakling son and to those wage earners who earn his dividends. But the play's chief weakness lies in the fact that a wholly unexpected and unconvincing fit of repentance is forced upon the old capitalist in order that he may be punished by the spectacle of his dying, decadent son.

Such abrupt conversions are jarring in the extreme. Dickens took the pains to lead his hard old characters through fear to a change of sentiment and conduct, and there are plenty of facts and motives through which the transformation can be made plausible. That of the old capitalist at the last moment, for no very apparent reason, reminds one of the hard-hearted parents in conventional comedy, when they suddenly turn from their original intention to oppose the happiness of a young couple and say "God bless you, my children," after all. That a playwright so capable as Gardner Sullivan should base his conclusion on such unsafe grounds indicates that he is going at too high a speed, trying to do too much in a very limited time.

"The Man from Nowhere"

Five-Reel Red Feather Offering Features King Baggot as Falsely Imprisoned Convict Who Wins Pardon.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

In construction and general story-value this is one of the best of Red Feather releases. The author, William H. Clifford, and director, Henry Otto, have wrought a harmonious production which gets up an unusual amount of interest. Even one of those unbeknighted wretches (watch your step, F. P. A!) who profess to find it difficult to concentrate on moving pictures ought to enjoy this.

King Baggot is featured in the leading role. The first reel introduces him as a young man just returning to his Virginia home, where he is welcomed by his sister, Betty. In a few short, graphic scenes is shown the tragedy which sends him to prison, convicted of shooting his sister, who had been lured away by the real villain of the piece.

His years of imprisonment; the saving of a prison outbreak; the friendly interest of the governor's daughter, and then his release by the warden to show up a card sharp at an evening entertainment, all make good, well-handled incidents.

The production is particularly strong in plot and original situations. It succeeds in making improbable incidents probable, avoids obvious, hackneyed scenes and blends humor and drama entertainingly. There is no conscious striving for effect on the part of the very capable cast, and this helps strengthen the effects achieved.

In the cast beside Mr. Baggot are Joseph Granby, Helen Marten, Frank Smith, Joseph Gerard, Johnnie Walker and others.

Director Lloyd Carleton has finished a two-reel drama, entitled "The Days of The Missions," featuring Dorothy Davenport and Emory Johnson. This photoplay deals with the early days in California, and carries a heart interest theme throughout. He is preparing to begin the production of a new picture next week, the title of which has not been announced. The leads will be played by Miss Davenport and Johnson.

"The Committee on Credentials"

Three-Reel Western Number, Based on Story by Peter B. Kyne, Proves a Sensational Success.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

MANY moving picture performers have risked life and limb in falls over cliffs in order to provide sensations for the screen, but it is doubtful if anyone ever made a wilder plunge than the one accomplished by Joe Rickson at the close of this Bison release. He plays the part of a squatter who shoots up a town in a fit of drunken rage, brought on by unreasoning jealousy. He escapes, under the fire of many guns, in a small rig, and is thrown over the cliff in this vehicle. Few performers would care to imitate this feat.

The story, based on a tale by Peter B. Kyne, is a strong one, both in general atmosphere and presentation. Harry Carey has the part of Ballarat Bob, a gambler. Rickson plays the squatter and Olive Fuller Golden the wife.

The first two reels are a trifle slow in action, but provide a good psychological preparation for the action when it comes. The events of the last reel are fast and furious. Clem, the squatter, insists on playing the roulette wheel in spite of the gambler's remonstrances. The latter, knowing the needs of his wife and child, takes Clem's savings to her.

Clem conceives the idea that the gambler is a rival in his wife's affections. He shoots first an old prospector and then Bob. This arouses the camp and there is a free-for-all gun fight, winding up with the tragedy as told.

"Myra" a Big Hit Everywhere.

Last week the Princess theater, Chicago, was the scene of a pre-showing of three episodes of "The Mysteries of Myra." More than nine hundred people, film magnates, exhibitors, newspaper and trade paper representatives attended. J. K. Burger, manager of International Film Service exchanges, who staged this great performance, states that this is the largest audience ever gathered to view a pre-showing. "The Exhibitors," states Mr. Burger, "are tremendously pleased with the 'Myra' series. At the finish the entire audience gave us continued applause. All trade paper people say our exhibition is the largest ever held, and that it makes history for Chicago."

A similar pre-showing of "The Mysteries of Myra" was given at the New York theater roof on Tuesday, May 23, at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. Twenty-six hundred invitations were issued to this performance.

The "Myra" series from its initial release has been a continued triumph of photoplay production and merchandising. The story becomes more intense and vivid as episode follows episode, and successful exhibitors fortunate enough to secure a booking are daily writing the International to tell of the unprecedented business done with this great feature series. The huge success of the New York and Chicago performances augurs well for the remaining episodes of "Myra."

Park Theater, Boston, Gets "Brady-Mades."

Through an arrangement entered into early this week by William A. Brady of World Film and Thomas D. Soriero, manager of the Park theater, Boston, the forthcoming "Brady-Made" pictures on the World program will be housed in that theater. The deal was consummated by Mr. Soriero during a short visit to New York. The Park theater, Boston, located on Washington street, near Boylston street, is one of the most important houses in the New England territory devoted to film presentation and for the past two years a varied program, but beginning July 3 with Alice Brady in "La Vie De Boheme" the place will play World Film production exclusively.

Ivan Exchange Owners to Convene.

The great success enjoyed by the Ivan productions and the enthusiasm with which they are greeted throughout the country has caused the owners of franchises as distributors of this brand to desire more features along similar lines. With a view of increasing the output, the exchange owners from all over the country are coming to New York, where the executive and production departments of the Ivan Company are located.

Among those already in New York are: William Hershberg, president of the General Feature Film Company of Chicago; Mayer Silverman, of the Liberty Film Renting Company of Pittsburg; Harry A. Samwick of the Merit Film Corporation of New York; E. W. Lynch of the E. W. Lynch Enterprises of Boston, and H. Schwalbe of The Electric Theater Supply Company of Philadelphia.

Among those who are en route to New York and who have signified their intention of being present are: C. D. Struble of The Monarch Feature Film Company of Kansas City, Mo.; A. T. Lambson of the Reelplay Feature Service of Seattle, Wash.; H. L. Charnas of The Standard Film Service of Cleveland; J. F. Cubberly of The Zenith Feature Film Company of Duluth; L. J. Santikos of the Central Feature Film Company of Waco, Tex., and A. M. Graham of The Queen City Feature Service of Birmingham, Ala.

Variety Prepares Series.

What was merely regarded as an interesting experiment by President Louis Rosenbluh of Variety Films Corporation turned out to be a conclusive demonstration of the desire and ability of motion picture patrons to furnish acceptable scenarios for a series of productions to form a sequel to the five-part feature, "Should a Baby Die?" which is being distributed by this company. A cash prize offered by exhibitors in conjunction with Variety, for the best suggestion, and adequately advertised prior to the showing of the picture, did not fail to draw interested patrons to a number of houses.

The overwhelming evidence of the popularity of such a contest, which at the same time might mark a new departure in picture production, prompted President Rosenbluh to secure an additional force for the handling of scenarios by movie fans, who found the requisite inspiration in "Should a Baby Die?" for the unfolding of their hitherto hidden talents.

George Szirmay was put in charge of the scenario contest department of Variety Films Corporation, and has already begun active work on the production of a "series of picturizations for and by film fans."

Good Bluebird Features Coming.

General Manager M. H. Hoffman has arranged a series of summer-month releases which will keep public interest in Bluebird Photoplays at high tension, if the advance promises shall be fulfilled—and thus far the Bluebird people have always furnished features that lived up to their announcements. Exhibitors may, therefore, expect during the summer a series of releases that will maintain an even standard, and keep their clientele in line for the further good things the regular season will afford.

Among the attractions for July will be four plays that Mr. Hoffman believes will create an unusually good impression, introducing three of Bluebird's pretty girl stars and showing Warren Kerrigan, the matinee idol, in what is considered to be the best work he has done for the screen. Violet Mersereau will be seen as the star of "Broken Fetters"; Ella Hall makes her second appearance as a Bluebird star in "Ambrosia," and Louise Lovely is seen in her regular order as star of "The Grasp of Greed." Kerrigan's vehicle, this time, is "The Silent Battle," and there will be Lois Wilson in his support to add a charm of feminine loveliness to the situations.

Standard News Film Has Unique Subject.

Miss Nan Hathaway, the famous English emotional actress now in this country, assumes the leading role in the spectacular photoplay production, "The Price of Liberty," which the Standard Newsfilm will release on American flag day, June 14. The publishers of this new production describe it as a "drama of 'Americanism.'" They state that it will be unique in that actual and not fictitious events in the great world war will be shown as they apply to this country; a new device has been used to combine two "actualities." In the scenes showing the destruction of New York monster aircraft now in use by the warring nations will be shown in the skyline and also the uses of the different kinds of aircraft in attempting the annihilation of the American metropolis. Private showings of this somewhat "different" photoplay will be held in New York this week.

Much Interest in "Who's Guilty?" Contests.

Several live exhibitors out west have found in the Pathe series "Who's Guilty?" produced by Arrow Film Corporation, opportunities for unique and forceful advertising such as do not often exist. J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, has recently received three letters, one from an exhibitor in Milwaukee, another from St. Louis and still another from Seattle, which show that without collusion or any outside suggestion each exhibitor had hit upon the same idea of intensifying public interest in the series.

ANIMATED NOOZ PICTORIAL, NO. 10 (Essanay), May 24.—Preparedness is one of the subjects cartooned by Wallace A. Carlson in this number of his comic pictorial. The artist's clever drawing is shown in other timely topics. Half of the reel contains a western scenic.

THE BATTLER (Vitagraph), May 26.—Hughie Mack has the title role in this one-reel comedy by C. Graham Baker and Lawrence Semon, and knocks out a bunch of fighters, with the aid of a newly-invented gas bomb. The picture is a good comic offering. Ed. Dunn, Billy Baxter, Claire McCormick, Danny Hayes and Doc Donohue are members of the cast.

THE CAPTURE OF RED STANLEY (No. 81 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series) (Kalem), May 27.—Helen, the operator at Lone Point, performs a new stunt in this installment of her adventures. As usual, she risks life and limb as though high-priced leading ladies of skill and daring could be replaced without loss of time and at little expense. The story grades up to the average "Hazard."

A FIVE THOUSAND DOLLAR ELOPEMENT (Selig), May 27.—Two crooks attempt to steal five thousand dollars from the father of Tom's sweetheart, and find that they have carried off the young lady as well. Tom is mixed up in the affair, but manages to win the girl. An interesting one-reel western drama. Tom Mix, Victoria Forde, Joe Ryan, Sid Jordan and Chet Ryan are the familiar names on the program.

FRILBY FRILLED (Lubin), May 29.—Edwin McKim directs this broad farce or burlesque, as its name implies, on "Trilby." Davy Don is Svengarlic, the wonderful "hyp," who gathers his singular power from surrounding sizzling electric cocktails and inhaling "juice" from dynamos. The show goes to smash when the engineer, bribed by Frilby's lover, shuts off the power. The picture contains absurdities that will move to mirth.

THE SELIG-TRIBUNE, NO. 43, 1916 (Selig), May 29.—National Guard Tournament at Sheepshead Bay, L. I.; classic dancing, Boston; running race, New York; leopard gives a tea in Lincoln Park, Chicago; canoe races, Auburndale, Mass.; largest dams in the world, Elephant Butte, N. M.; Vincent Astor's first flight in aeroplane, Marblehead, Mass.; dog show, Belmont Park, L. I.; aeroplane race, Sheepshead Bay, L. I.

THE RICH IDLER (Vitagraph), May 29.—Joseph F. Poland has written a bright one-reel comedy-drama and filled it with the wholesome incident and character that so many plain folk find to their taste. It is a homely little romance, but the poor girl marries the rich young man, and all ends happily. Mary Anderson and Webster Campbell are youthful and sincere as the lovers. Director, Dave Smith.

A BUNCH OF FLIVVERS (Kalem), May 30.—A review of this "Ham" comedy was printed in the issue of June 10, page 1901. The reel is well stocked with fun.

THE FABLE OF THE WILLING COLLEGIAN WHO WANTED TO GET A FOOTHOLD (Essanay), May 31.—The subject of this one-reel fable is one that George Ade has treated with great familiarity. George loves to take a good-natured fling at the young man starting out in life with a profound belief in the efficacy of his nice new diploma, and the lanky humorist has not lost any of the fun of the matter by sticking close to the truth.

A SMOKEY ADVENTURE (Kalem), May 31.—The efforts of a cigar salesman to get his goods indorsed by a millionaire is the original theme of this one-reel comedy. The gentleman's wife has to come to his aid, and Ethel Teare does it in her usual whole-hearted fashion. The picture has been adroitly directed by Harry Millarde. Victor Rottman, Gus Leonard and Myrta Sterling complete the quartet of leading actors.

THE SELIG-TRIBUNE, NO. 44, 1916 (Selig), June 1.—President Wilson attends wedding of Dr. Cary T. Grayson and Miss Alice Gordon, New York, Col. House and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo among the guests; Bay Shore, L. I., one hundred ton house loaded on scows; dress parade at West Point; celebration in honor of Drake, Kentfield, Cal.; Gov. McCall visits training ship, Boston; with the U. S. Troops in Mexico; buying horses and mules for the Allies, San Francisco.

SIS, THE DETECTIVE (Kalem), June 2.—The scenes in this one-reel "Sis" shift from the Hopkins farm to the city, and the lady of the pigtails has many amusing adventures as a detective. A review of the picture was printed in the issue of June 3, Page 1709.

THE SPIKED SWITCH (No. 82 of "The Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series) (Kalem), June 3.—Edward W. Matlack, the old reliable writer of "Helens," is the author of this one-reel drama. He has supplied the necessary sensation and led up to it in an interesting manner. Helen Gibson risks her neck in the same reassuring fashion as in the preceding reels. G. A. Williams, Pearl Anibus and P. S. Pembroke are members of the cast.

PICKLES AND DIAMONDS (Lubin), June 3.—This single reel comedy is based on the desire of Adolph Pfefferschnitzel, one-time pickle magnate, to recoup his declining fortunes by marrying his daughter into wealth. The young man selected as the goat is also ambitious to make an alliance, as he, himself, is without funds and assumes the pickler's daughter has them. The picture is photographed at Atlantic City and carries the atmosphere of the big shore resort. It contains a few laughs.

HICKS IN NIGHTMARELAND (Edison), May 31.—Two subjects are given in this number of The Animated Grouch Chaser, "Hicks in Nightmareland" and "Cook vs. Chef." The "Hicks" cartoon is particularly amusing. "A Trip Through Uganda, British South Africa," is on the same reel.

THE SCHEMERS (Vim) June 1.—Plump and Runt are rivals for the hand of a fickle young woman and Plump is the loser. Not satisfied with winning the lady, Runt turns villain and tries to ruin the weighty but always virtuous Plump. The way in which the fat person is rewarded by fate is highly edifying. It is also a pleasure to state that the reel has the additional virtue of being equipped with frequent and well-developed laughs.

THE LAND LUBBERS (Vim), June 2.—The familiar but none the less effective device, the revolving stateroom, is the big comic hit of this one-reel farce. Pokes and Jabbs are the leading funmakers, and the finish is rapid of movement and prodigal of laughs.

THE LONELIES (Vitagraph), June 2.—Lillian Walker and Evert Overton form the happy pair in this bright one-reel comedy. Wm. Shea and a serious-minded little monkey are two more worthy members of the cast. The story is a reflection of certain phases of city life and is both entertaining and amusing.

CROOKED TRAILS (Selig), June 3.—A Tom Mix production in which the author plays the "lead" and the entire cast does riding "stunts" of a hair-raising character. Victoria Forde, Pat Christman, Sid Jordan and Joe Ryan all show how well they can stick to the saddle of a flying broncho.

THE SCHEMERS (Essanay), May 27.—Joseph A. Roach is the author of this three-reel comedy and has written a snappy and amusing photoplay. Two college youths, whose poor school records turn their friends against them, are forced to shift for themselves. They become stock brokers and win a fortune on nothing but nerve. They also win a wife apiece. Their display of high finance is more laughable than impressive and the complications are cleverly handled. John Junior, Harry Dunkinson, Elizabeth Burbridge, Frances Raymond and Josephine Sylvester form a speedy cast.

THE PRIMAL INSTINCT (Vitagraph), May 27.—Mrs. Owen Bronson has hit upon a novel plot for this three-reel screen drama. The theme is well worth the telling and belongs to the class of drama that is built upon character and not upon theatric situations. Leah Baird portrays the heroine skillfully, and Don. Cameron, Jack Ellis, Leila Blow, Van Dyke Brooke are satisfactory in the other important roles. Director, Van Dyke Brooke.

UNMASKING A RASCAL (No. 10 of "The Social Pirates") (Kalem), May 29.—An attempt to defraud a young girl out of her fortune is neatly stopped by Mona and Mary in this installment of the George Bronson Howard serial. A review of the picture was printed on Page 1709 of the June 3 issue.

THE HARE AND THE TORTOISE (Selig), May 29.—In writing this three-reel photoplay, Wm. Anthony McGuire has maintained the directness and simplicity of plot to be found in an Aesop fable. The hare and the tortoise of the picture are two brothers, and their progress in life is a repetition of the famous race in which steady plodding won. The love interest dominates the theme, one brother being the possessor of all the virtues, and the other endowed with every vice. The scenes are varied and interesting, and Harry Mestayer, Edward J. Piel, Harry Lonsdale, Fritzi Brunette, Lillian Hayward, Edith Johnson and Wm. Scott keep the acting at a high level. Wm. Robert Daly directed the picture.

THE SONG IN THE DARK (Essanay), May 30.—This two-reel reissue, with Richard C. Travers, Gerda Holmes, Bryant Washburn and John Cossar in the cast, has a blind heroine and a generous share of sentiment. The earnest acting of the principals gives the picture an air of reality.

THE FINAL PAYMENT (Lubin), May 30.—This two-part subject can hardly be described as original in conception or convincing in its working out. Too many coincidences rob it of plausibility. In the cast are L. C. Shumway, Helen Eddy, Velma Whitman and Melvin Mayo.

THE WOMAN IN BLACK (Biograph), May 31.—A five-part adaptation of a play presented on the stage by Klaw and Erlanger. The picture makes first rate melodrama, capably acted by Lionel Barrymore, Millicent Evans, Alan Hale and others. A review appeared in the issue of May 27.

THE CODE OF THE HILLS (Lubin), June 1.—A three-part subject containing good situations. A review will be found in this week's issue.

HELEN OF THE CHORUS (Edison), May 30.—Although the heroine of this three-reel photoplay becomes one of those familiar screen characters, a member of the chorus, the incidents surrounding this situation are novel. They are also of decided dramatic value. A fireman is the hero of the story and performs a gallant rescue for the big scene. William Adison Lathrop wrote the scenario and George Ridgwell was the director. Sally Crute has the title role and Herbert Prior plays the fireman.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

THE THREE GODFATHERS, June 19.—An excellent six-part feature with Stella Razeto and Harry Carey in the leading roles. A full review of this production which is an adptation of the magazine story by Peter B. Kyne, will be found on another page of this issue. The adaptation was made by Harvey Gates, and directed by E. J. LeSaint, with a splendid supporting cast. The story treats of the regeneration of three crooks through the finding and enforced adoption of a newborn babe on the desert.

THE BATTLE OF HEARTS, May 21.—A fishing village melodrama that is pleasing and exciting. It is freshly interesting, yet has the oldtime are sure fire quality that makes it easily commendable as an offering for the average house. A longer review will be found on another page of this issue.

THE SPIDER AND THE FLY, May 28.—A five-reel melodrama with Robert Mantell and Genevieve Hamper. Well acted for the most part and beautifully put on, this picture, though an old-style kind of story, should prove a safe guess for the average theater. A longer review will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

THE COME-BACK (Quality-Metro) April 24.—While the plot in this five-part picture is rather slight, most of the scenes, very well staged and acted, with Harold Lockwood and May Allison in the leading roles, are interesting. Much of the action is laid in a lumber camp in the winter, where a youth who has led a dissipated life in New York develops a manly character. For a photoplay using such familiar material, "The Come-Back" is surprisingly good. Subtitles are written in a pleasing vein.

THE SNOWBIRD (Rolfe-Metro), May 8.—Released in six reels instead of the customary five, "The Snowbird," written by Mary Rider and directed by Edwin Carewe affords an excellent opportunity for the wholly delightful Mabel Taliaferro, also for Mr. Carewe, who plays the chief character in her support. Miss Taliaferro depicts a pampered society girl, who, to save her father from financial ruin, journeys to the Canadian wilderness in search of papers needed to make good his title to valuable property. In the wilds she meets a dominating man and the result is according to precedent. There are scenes of dramatic strength and others of picturesque quality.

Mutual Film Corporation.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 74 (Gaumont), May 31.—A launching at Charleston, opening of a new causeway, drills, celebrations, classic dances and other events are pictured in this entertaining number.

THE COMET'S COMEBACK (Beauty), May 31.—This is one of the most original ideas that has been put in comedy for many a day. Many of the scenes have been taken by a rapid camera, representing what takes place after the passing of a certain comet when the world slows up. No finer analysis of motion from the movements of people walking on the street to the rough-and-tumble fist fight could be imagined than is seen in this picture, which is excruciatingly funny.

NAILING ON THE LID (Vogue), June 4.—A moderately amusing farce comedy in which a man's love of money leads him to submit to being placed in a coffin to verify a report that he has been murdered by an employee of a crooked politician, who is anxious to get this particular employee out of the way to prevent his telling tales out of school.

ADVERTISEMENTS (Falstaff), June 5.—A nonsense number, with a knockabout finish. Two rival restaurants employ sign carriers and a girl to bake pancakes in the window. Oscar and the girl fall in love and disrupt the rivalry, or rather bring it to a head. This has numerous amusing moments and is pleasingly presented.

SEE AMERICA FIRST, NO. 39 ("Montgomery, Ala."), June 7.—This number gives some excellent views of Montgomery, Ala., and surroundings, including the home of Jefferson Davis, scenes on the Alabama and Tallapoosa rivers, and various other points of historic and scenic interest. On the same reel with "Escapades of Estelle."

ESCAPADES OF ESTELLE (Gaumont), June 7.—A cartoon number from the pen of Harry Palmer giving a continuation of the colored woman, Estelle's remarkable adventures. This time she places rather too much faith in the sayings of a phrenologist who tells her that the first man she meets after leaving his office is to be her husband. Very amusing.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials.

THE TRAIL OF THE THIEF (American), June 1.—A three-reel number, by J. Edward Hungerford, featuring Winifred Greenwood, Edward Coxen and George Field. The girl and hero are in service as detectives and their quarry is a gentleman thief. The opening action is slightly mechanical, picturing the theft of a necklace at a reception. Later the action comes up well. The abduction of the girl and her timely rescue while being assailed by the villain are handled in an intensely melodramatic way. The number is not particularly new, but works up good suspense and holds interest well.

A MAN'S FRIEND (Mustang), June 2.—A two-reel number, by Hal Coolidge, featuring Nita Davis, Lawrence Peyton, Robert Hannum and Art Accord. Later a dog and a baby do much to monopolize the attention; the dog is very clever and performs some really notable stunts. The story, which is Western in setting, gets a strong natural development. The opening scenes, showing the unhappy wife and her worthless husband, are close to life. The events of the second reel are exciting and will have wide appeal, particularly to children.

CLOUDS IN SUNSHINE VALLEY (Centaur), June 3.—A fine two-reel story of the "dry" country, where water for irrigation purposes is the basis of warfare. Wm. Clifford and Margaret Gibson play the leading roles. Carr, owner of the irrigation ditch, makes an unjust raise in rates in order to force the settlers to sell. There is a battle fought between opposing sides, in which the girl's father and others are killed. The atmosphere is excellent and the photography bright and pleasing. The situations contain a good deal of natural drama and are well handled.

WHISPERING SMITH (Mutual Masterpicture De Luxe—Signal), June 5.—A five-part production featuring Helen Holmes and J. P. McGowan. The scenario from which the film was made is an adaptation of a novel by Frank H. Spearman, and the material which it affords for a stirring picture is abundant. The situation around which the story centers is an attempt to stop the looting of wrecked freight trains. The foreman of the wrecking gang is discovered to be the ringleader among the looters, and the detective sent out on the job being a former sweetheart of his wife's, and is run out of town, a circumstance which eventually ends in the murder of the detective's brother, and the return of the detective to avenge his blood. The final conquering of the gang is accomplished with the installation of a new superintendent, and the persuasion of the foreman to join his wife again and ride straight.

JOHN BREWSTER'S WIFE (Thanhouser), June 6.—A two-part production featuring Ernest Howard and Ethyle Cooke, with pretty Ethelmary Oakland, a tiny tot of possibly five years, attracting as much attention as the older players. The story on which this picture is based is not an exceptionally well balanced one, and in spite of careful work on the part of the director and players does not ring quite true. According to the story a wife whose early ambitions savored of the stage grows tired of her home and leaves her husband, with unhappy results.

THE FLAMES OF VENGEANCE (Gaumont), June 8.—A three-part melodrama of the old school featuring Gertrude Robinson with Iva Shepard, supported by a capable supporting cast. Judging the production from a purely melodramatic standpoint it is well produced and entertaining. It treats of how a woman on the eve of her marriage is discovered with a former lover, is cast off by her fiance, and marries the other man. Later her daughter becomes an employee of the man her mother had intended marrying, falls in love with him and saves him from death at the hands of the workers in his mill. He then foregoes his intention of treating her as her mother has treated him, discovering that he is really in love with the girl.

SOUL MATES (Mutual Masterpicture de luxe), June 8.—A five-part production from thee American studios featuring William Russell, Charlotte Burton and other well-known American players. The story treats of an unhappy domestic situation brought about through the actions of an unfaithful wife. In some respects the picture is artistic, but too much has been shown of scenes that are extremely suggestive.

THE WINDOW OF DREAMS (Thanhouser), June 15.—This three-part production is one of rare artistic treatment. The theme is simple, and concerns in the first place a tragedy caused through a young woman's jealous disposition, when her lover is killed and she becomes a cripple for life, and in the second place her opportunity to avert a domestic rupture between a newly married couple whose life she is able to observe from her window. A full review of this excellent production will be found on another page of this issue.

Paramount Pictures Corporation.

BURTON HOLMES TRAVELOGUES (Paramount), June.—"Visiting the Sultan of Zulu in Jolo" is the title of this issue of the travel pictures being made by Burton Homes. The explorer and his party enter Jolo, said to be the smallest of fortified cities, are entertained by the Sultan and have an opportunity to study the Moros at close range. An interesting number in a valuable travel series.

FARMER ALFALFA'S TENTLESS CIRCUS (Paramount), June.—Paul Terry is responsible for this spirited comedy drawing bearing the stamp of the Bray Studios. It is certain to amuse; but the more important subject on the reel is reserved for the second part, entitled "Mimi, a Study in the Mentality of a Chimpanzee." Here we have close views of a chimpanzee doing many astounding things, all indicating mental processes generally supposed to be exclusively human.

PICTOGRAPHS (Paramount), June.—Some extraordinarily fine pictures of a motorboat being tossed about in the rapids of Snake River, Idaho, are included in a well varied number of Paramount Pictographs. The Better Babies department, always carefully edited, treats of the benefits of outdoor exercise for children, whereas an unusual subject with an effective comedy touch, shows the meaning of various signs used by tramps, William Wadsworth impersonating the tramp.

Triangle Film Corp.

THE BUGLE CALL (Kay-Bee), June 4.—A story of military life, with Willie Collier, Jr., in the leading role. Sure to be popular with women and children all over the land.

GOING STRAIGHT (Fine Arts), June 4.—An old story of a reformed crook's temptation, but well played and fairly interesting.

REGGIE MIXES IN (Fine Arts), June 11.—A comedy melodrama with Douglas Fairbanks in a role well suited to his genial interpretation of character and athletic ability. Full of adventure and movement.

THE SORROWS OF LOVE (Ince), June 11.—A tragedy of love resulting from the weak character of a nun who twice broke her vows. Its principal merit lies in picturesque backgrounds and artistic treatment.

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

TWIXT LOVE AND THE ICEMAN (Nestor), June 9.—A farce-comedy, by W. H. Ratterman, featuring Billie Rhodes, Stella Adams, Neal Burns and Harry Rottenberry. The jealous iceman substitutes spoiled meat for the widow, in order to queer the butcher. But the trick is discovered and trouble follows. A pleasing little number, with some very fair character work in it.

THEIR AWFUL PREDICAMENT (Nestor), June 12.—A comedy number, by W. and M. Trost, featuring Billie Rhodes, Eddie Lyons, Ed Burns and Lee Moran. A stolen necklace brings confusion to the house party, the thief being one of the guests. The girl is arrested, but later cleared. Rather conventional in plot, but has amusing moments.

WHEN THE WOLF HOWLS (Rex), June 14.—Cleo Madison and Wm. V. Marg appear in this story of an artist who wins success with starvation staring him and his wife in the face. The wife is about to commit suicide when he makes good. The tone of this is a little depressing, but it is strongly handled and achieves a happy ending.

AN ANGEL UNAWARES (Imp), June 13.—A pretty little romance, by Wm. Addison, featuring Edith Roberts and Harry Benham. There is a touch of novelty in the situation in which the hero finds the girl trying to get a dinner for her father's visitor without killing her pet rooster. The plot is not strong, but it proves entertaining and enjoyable.

ALMOST A WIDOW (Nestor), June 16.—A comedy number which revives an old favorite situation. The young husband misses his steamer and sits in a card game. The steamer is reported sunk and he returns with a big story of his personal bravery; later it develops that the steamer did not sink at all. This is amusing in spite of its familiarity and is presented by a pleasing cast, including Neal Burns, Betty Compson and others.

THE GOLDEN BOOT (Victor), June 16.—The angry housewife throws an old boot at an unwelcome tramp. It contains a fortune in money, hidden there by her miserly husband. The tramp's experiences would have been more amusing if not handled with such a strong touch of burlesque. A fair subject.

LOVE QUARANTINED (Joker), June 17.—Gale Henry, Wm. Franey, Lillian Peacock and Milburne Moranti appear in this comic number, by Allen Curtis. Dr. Killem, in love with the girl, has her quarantined for smallpox. He also refuses to treat the father's aching tooth until he consents to the marriage. This is a characteristic number, with some funny spots in it.

Universal Film Mfg. Company Specials.

JIM SLOCUM, NO. 46393 (Imp), June 2.—A two-reel number, featuring King Baggot and Edna Hunter. This tells a story that is entertaining and gets hold of the sympathies. There is good suspense in the opening scenes, where the taxi driver loses his job and then makes a losing fight to save the life of his child. He plans to have revenge on the doctor who refused his child's case in favor of another. But his career as a burglar never matures, as he saves the doctor's wife from danger instead of robbing the house. The closing scenes are happy ones. Well-constructed and entertaining.

THE ROSE COLORED SCARF (Gold Seal), June 6.—A two-reel number by Eleanor M. Ingram, featuring Herbert Rawlinson and Agnes Vernon, who are getting some splendid results in polite comedy. This pictures the love affair of a wealthy young girl and the financially embarrassed young man who acts as her chauffeur. The situations are very entertaining and the number is handled in a very attractive way. The offering is a good example of the better type of love story.

OBJECT MATRIMONY (Victor), June 7.—A two-reel number, by Paul West, featuring Harry C. Myers and Rosemary Theby. The engaged young man, out of a job, employs himself as a professional husband-to-be at a matrimonial agency. He has some very funny experiences. There is considerable vulgarity in some of the situations, but it is of the comparatively harmless sort and carries enough genuine humor to make it excusable. His girl learns what his occupation is and soon puts an end to it. A laughable burlesque offering.

ALIAS JANE JONES (Rex), June 8.—A two-reel crook story, by Wm. V. Mong, who appears with Edna Maison, Roy Hanford and others. This follows the operations of two male and one female crooks. The latter hides in a trunk and gets into Gentleman George's room. She turns out to be a detective and hands him over to justice. This has no great dramatic moments, but the element of surprise at the close is pleasing. It makes a fairly strong offering.

PHONEY TEETH AND FALSE FRIENDS (L-KO), June 11.—A knockabout number, featuring Reggie Morris as a young dentist. His assistant creates trouble by maltreating the girl's father in the dental chair. Some characteristic chase and slapstick scenes follow, the assistant finally falling into the lake from a high bridge. This has humorous moments and is a characteristic number.

WHAT LOVE CAN DO (Red Feather), June 12.—A five-reel offering by Gertrude H. Andrews, featuring Adele Farrington as a newspaper woman of years and experience. She presents a well drawn character in the opening scenes. Later the plot takes on a melodramatic tinge, and the scenes in which the scorned woman fills up on liquor and goes to Paige's home for an accounting are not quite so convincing. The break in this particular character tends to weaken the production as a whole. The atmosphere of the newspaper office is good and the strike scenes, while lacking any particular continuity, are well staged. A near-tragedy results at the close, but the happy ending is achieved. A fair offering.

THE MELODY OF LOVE (Gold Seal), June 13.—A three-reel number, featuring J. Warren Kerrigan as a young Irishman who pursues the open road. He stops at a mountain cabin, where he falls in love with the daughter of an old man known as Hardpan. He discovers gold in a creek near the cabin and this, together with rivalry over the girl, leads to trouble. The construction is not very strong at times, which causes the action to move slowly. The scenic effects are perhaps the strongest feature of the production, these being very attractive. The offering is one of about average strength.

HER SOUL'S SONG (Laemmle), June 15.—A two-reel number, by Calder Johnston, featuring Dorothy Davenport and Emory Johnson. The story is that of a young opera singer who marries a young man and loses her voice when the baby is born. She dislikes the child, but later returns to it when it is ill; she regains both her voice and her happiness. The story is a good one and is given a fine presentation. The ornamented title and subtitles are decidedly artistic and the two principals are pleasing. The baby also shares the honors, being uncommonly attractive.

THE DEVIL'S IMAGE (Imp), June 16.—A two-reel number, featuring Hobart Henley, Irene Hunt and Curtis Benton. In the story the young husband dreams that he has become a dope fiend. Hobart Henley does some very creditable work in this repelling part. Such a picture, though a little unpleasant to the average observer, should have a powerful effect on the mind of anyone tampering with drugs. Such efforts are not usually particularly commendable, but this one carries a good plot and is sincerely and forcibly handled. It should prove a valuable sermon of the screen in these days when drug addiction is so common.

A RAILROAD BANDIT (Bison), June 17.—A splendid two-reel Western number, by Wright Roberts, featuring Lee Hill, Marie Walcamp, L. C. Shumway and others. A bandit organization, a box of gold bullion and some decidedly attractive Western mountain scenic effects are among the ingredients. The action is good and some stirring stunts of one kind and another are performed. The photography is unusually good.

HEARST-VITAGRAPH NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 43, 1916 (Vitagraph), May 30.—Riots in Dublin; auto race, Chicago; blind soldiers at Otto Kahn's London home; canoe race by girls at Auburndale, Mass.; Col. W. F. Stone and James B. Reynolds preparing for Republican Convention, Chicago; Ithaca students training; Children's Pageant, Sacramento, Cal.; Gov. McCall of Massachusetts visits training ship; pursuing bandits in Mexico.

HEARST-VITAGRAPH NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 44 (Vitagraph), June 2.—Memorial Day parade, New York; girls play water football, Venice, Cal.; Preparedness Parade, Boston; fete for crippled children, Haverstraw, N. Y.; delegation visits Roosevelt at Oyster Bay; G. A. R. meet at Danville, Ill.; hippo taken to tank, New York Zoo; military exhibition, Governor's Island; athletic meet at Harvard; military drill, Culver Academy, Culver, Ind.

World-Equitable.

HIS BROTHER'S WIFE (Premo), June 5.—Very well acted by Ethel Clayton, Paul McAllister and Carlyle Blackwell, this five-part drama makes an interesting offering, carefully directed and properly staged. A review appears on another page of this issue.

Miscellaneous.

CHIP'S CARMEN (Juvenile), June.—A two-reel burlesque on Charlie Chaplin's burlesque of "Carmen," brightly acted by a company of children, headed by Joseph Chip Monahan. The picture is likely to appeal to the youthful members of an audience. A review may be found on another page.

"LOTUS WOMAN" IN REGULAR SERVICE.

In order to definitely remove doubts apparent in the minds of some exhibitors Kalem wishes to make emphatic announcement that "The Lotus Woman," the coming five-reel feature, will be released in the regular program service of the General Film Company.

Exhibitors may thus book "The Lotus Woman," which features Alice Hollister, the original vampire of the photoplay, without extra charge. Advance showings of this picture are now being given to exhibitors at all General Film Company offices.

MYSTERY ABOUNDS IN LATEST BLUE RIBBON.

"The Man Behind the Curtain," Vitagraph's Blue Ribbon Feature for June 19, is an excellent photoplay of the type that holds the breathless attention and admiration of the audience from start to finish. It is in five parts and comes from the pen of Minnie Krakauer.

Lillian Walker, who is featured in this picture, portrays the role of Edna Hall, a beautiful young girl, who, after marrying Harry Leland (Evart Overton) in the country, is horrified at being brought to live in a house which holds terrible connections for her. In her mind's eye she sees once more the body of Mrs. Stanhope as she has found it in this house months before. Then she recalls how the curtains had parted while she stood as if transfixed and a man (William Dunn) had stepped forth and told her that things looked very bad for her and she had better escape. Frightened at the apparent hopelessness of convincing a jury of her innocence, she had taken his advice and gone into hiding. Next day, in the papers, she read that a female accomplice of a dangerous band was suspected of the murder, but she was afraid to refute the statement. Then she had married Lelanu, Mrs. Stanhope's son by a former marriage, and he had brought her back to be tortured by the accusation which hung over her. She finally meets the man who had stepped from the curtains on that day, and, with clever manipulation, she manages to prove his guilt. She now returns to her husband, able once more to look him in the eye with sincerity.

Scene from "The Man Behind the Curtain" (Vitagraph).

Miss Walker's lovable personality is plainly evident throughout the picture. Templer Saxe and John Costello round out a capable cast. The picture was directed by Cortland J. Van Deusen.

AT THE PENAL COLONY OF PALAWAN.

Before his return to Europe for an extended journey through the countries of the Old World, Burton Holmes takes his screen admirers to one more beauty spot among the distant islands of the Philippines.

Unusual in scenic and photographic features and unique in human interest is this Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Picture, "At the Penal Colony of Palawan and Up the Underground River," the final release in the Philippine cruise. For two miles up the dark, winding river which penetrates into the heart of the Island of Palawan, film audiences will travel—part of the time under its verdant mountains. Through the glass bottom of Mr. Holmes' boat are seen the marvelous submarine forests of coral and sea plants and their inhabitants. This scenery, however, is only incidental to the main journey to the Penal Colony.

In the Bilibid prison of Manila Mr. Holmes showed the regeneration and rebuilding of Filipino manhood in its highest development. Inmates of Bilibid who have passed beyond its walls through their own merit are sent to Palawan, where through the humanity of Uncle Sam they are permitted to live lives of comparative freedom, each having his own home, in which he is surrounded by his family, and his own farm.

Palawan is the last step of the convict in the Philippines toward freedom. Here Uncle Sam's officials live unharmed without locks or bolts on their houses and prisoners are not even confined in a stockade. This release is unique in its interesting views and descriptions of two remarkable places.

ABRAMSON WRITING SCENARIO FOR NEXT IVAN PLAY.

Having finished "Her Husband's Wife," the newest Ivan feature, Director General Ivan Abramson is working on the scenario for his next production, which will be put into work within the next two weeks. The theme for the new Ivan production will treat of an evil in modern society life and will present the facts as only Mr. Abramson can illustrate them. As yet no title has been decided on for this play, but the working name of the story is "The Faded Flower."

"THE TWO ORPHANS" (Selig).

Probably the most pretentious cast of characters ever appearing in a picture play released in regular service is that presented in "The Two Orphans," a Selig Diamond Special. This will be released through the regular service of General Film Co. on Monday, June 12th. This play marks a new era in film production, for it presents a strictly all-star cast, including Kathlyn Williams, Winnifred Greenwood, T. J. Carrigan, Myrtle Stedman, Charles Clary, Adrienne Kroell, Lyllian Leighton and others. The mere announcement of these stars should be enough to crowd any motion picture theater.

Scene from "The Two Orphans" (Selig).

The Selig revival of "The Two Orphans" is taken from the world-famous play of Kate Claxton. The production abounds in wonderful scenic effects gorgeous costumes and talented acting by a noteworthy company of stars. The Selig Company is certainly to be commended for its consistent policy to raise the standard of regular motion picture programs and to introduce real-for-sure feature films in regular film service. The Kate Claxton vesion of "The Two Orphans" is the best version and one that should appeal to those who remember the wonderful success attained by this actress in the play.

"FRIDAY, THE 13TH" (Paragon).

"Friday, the 13th," the novel which stirred Wall Street, and State Street in Boston, to its very depths, and by far the most talked-of novel dealing with the intricacies of the Stock Exchange, from the prolific pen of that master financier, Thomas W. Lawson, will be Robert Warwick's next photoplay vehicle, in which this celebrated actor will play the role of Robert Brownley, whom on account of his phenomenal success on the Stock Exchange, became known as "the Napoleon of Wall Street." It is a role eminently befitting such a sterling actor as Mr. Warwick, who was, by the way, Mr. Lawson's personal choice for the part.

Scene from "Friday, the 13th" (World).

When William A. Brady announced his intention of producing for the World Film program the biggest stories ever written, and that these would be produced under his personal supervision, in their proper atmosphere and with all their details most accurately and minutely carried out, "Tom" Lawson, who has for many years been one of Mr. Brady's staunchest friends, suggested the filming of his story of the Stock Exchange. Details were discussed and it was decided to film this story which thrilled financiers of this country as they had never been thrilled before. Robert Warwick and his director, Emile Chautard, made a trip to Boston, where they outlined the details of importance with Mr. Lawson, such as the characters, the scenes and the sets which would be required to give the story its proper staging. Through Mr. Lawson's influence the World Film was able to secure from the brokerage firm of Flagg & Stone, the privilege of taking the Stock Exchange scenes in their offices. The Astor was also used one Sunday morning for the pit scenes, which attracted thousands of pedestrians to the scene.

As a whole, this is by far one of the most satisfying productions in which Mr. Warwick has ever been seen. Director Chautard spared neither pains, time nor money in producing the picture according to Mr. Lawson's own ideas, and when Mr. Brady saw the finished picture, he said that he could place his stamp on it with the utmost satisfaction that it would please all beyond description, and Mr. Brady is known for his ability to pick the material that will take the country by storm. "Friday, the 13th" will be the regular release on the World Film program for July 17.

GOOD REPORTS ON GLORIA'S ROMANCE.

No matter how inclement the weather, Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance" is proving such a box office magnet the country over that capacity business is being done by nearly every house playing the picture. Below are just a few reports from different Kleine exchange managers selected at random from a long list of similar reports:

B. T. Hardcastle, manager of the Kleine office in Atlanta, says: "The Piedmont opened Monday in a drizzling rain which continued throughout the day and night, but played to full houses all day long. It was the only house in the city doing any business, most of the others not having at any time more than a handful of people. The following day it cleared up in the afternoon, but a hard rain throughout the morning and noon hours and an overcast sky frightened the people against coming out. However, at night the Piedmont was jammed, and every one went away delighted with the production they had witnessed."

Foster Moore, of the Kleine branch office in New York, writes under date of May 25: "F. G. Hall, proprietor of the Hall Circuit in New Jersey, states that the Billie Burke in 'Gloria's Romance' business at his Hoboken U. S. Photoplay theater was an absolute turnaway for the three days, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, though Tuesday night there was a heavy rain. At his Palace theater in East Orange, where he charges 25 cents admission, his opening Monday night was to capacity, and on Tuesday night, in a rainstorm, the house record was broken."

Charles M. Thall, of the Minneapolis Kleine exchange, reports: "The New Princess theater in St. Paul opened the third chapter of "Gloria's Romance" last Monday to over 8,000 paid admissions and the New Palace theater in Minneapolis is showing to hold-out business right along."

THE TRIANGLE KIDDIES.

The other day a brand new moving picture on which the producers had spent much time and money was shown for the first time. The reviewers spoke in glowing terms of the picture and then as a sort of climax to their criticism, took occasion to speak of the work of the Triangle Kiddies. There are five of these interesting youngsters in all. In some pictures only one or two will appear, but in many of the pictures all five are used and what's more, picture goers have come to look forward to the laughing, tumbling, frolicking children in the pictures and when they don't all appear, the admirer of this one or that one is certain to voice his or her disapproval.

The children have appeared in such well known pictures as "Let Katy Do It"—the five grew to seven in that picture, by the way—"The Children of the House," "Going Straight" and scores of others. Not that the children care or that it is likely they will ever be called anything but just "Triangle Kiddies," it might be mentioned that their names are George Stone, Violet Radcliffe, Carmen de Rue, Francis Carpenter and Ninon Fovieri. Now watch for them and see if you don't fall in love with every last one of 'em. If it matters in the least, it might be added that the eldest is eight.

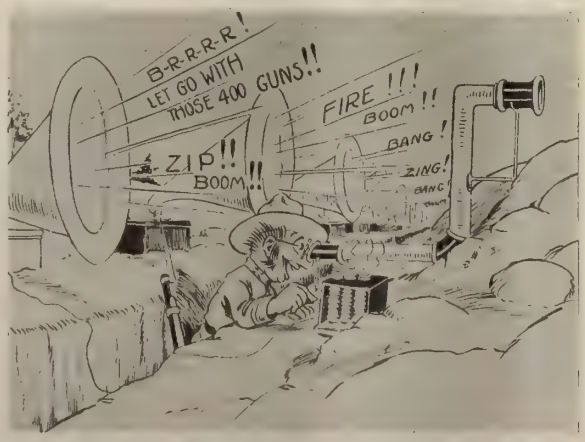
ROLIN FORCES MAKING BIG BURLESQUE.

The Rolin Film Co., makers of Pathe's Lonesome Luke comedies, put special effort and a large sum of money on a burlesque of "Julius Caesar," which it is making. To show the magnitude of this one-reel production the company has utilized among its hundreds of extras the several hundred pretty dancing girls who took part in the Actors' Fund presentation of the great Shakespearian tragedy which was enacted on May 19 in Hollywood. The whole studio is being utilized in one giganitc set for this production.

"HEEZA LIAR OUTWITS MEXICAN BANDITS" (Paramount-Bray).

Having failed to capture the elusive Villa in his first sortie into the heart of Mexico, Heeza Liar returns to the border to confer with Scott and Funston. Hearing that Pershing has been surrounded and is in danger of annihilation, the entire force of American troops goes to his rescue, leaving the Colonel to defend two miles of border single-handed, in "Colonel Heeza Liar and the Bandits," a coming release of the Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoons.

Plotting of the Mexicans to make a raid the following night is disclosed to Heeza Liar and he quickly collects all of the phonographs for miles around, places them at intervals along the border, thoroughly concealed, and puts into each one a record prepared long before for just such an emergency. At the psychological moment the Colonel turns on the switch and a vast battery of machines begins to shoot off records of artillery and infantry in action, frightening the bandits away in a mad flight.



Scene from "Col. Heeza Liar and the Bandits" (Paramount-Bray).

Retribution follows fast at the Colonel's heels, however. He is captured by the bandits and tied to a cactus, then left to starve in the desert. An eagle rescues him as food for her young, but in aeroplaning to the eagle's nest, Heeza Liar is able to locate the bandit's headquarters. Later he makes his escape with the aid of an unruly mule, stolen from the bandit camp, then delivers his information at headquarters and gets his reward.

"THE ADVENTURES OF PEG O' THE RING" (Universal).

Grace Cunard and Francis Ford are back on the coast after their flying trip to New York, and work on the latest episodes of the Universal Special Feature, "The Adventures of Peg o' the Ring," is progressing rapidly. The seventh episode of the serial is set for release during the week of June 12.

Other Universal serials have been great box office successes, but "Peg o' the Ring" promises to surpass all records. The mere fact that Miss Cunard and Ford will play the principal roles alone assures the success of the feature, but, in addition, seventeen hitherto untried stunts will be worked into the circus serial.

These hair-raising episodes were suggested to Mr. Ford and Miss Cunard by veterans of the sawdust ring from real life happenings. Since the serial was started hundreds of circus people have written to the Universal stars offering suggestions, and many of these will be adopted. In addition, when Miss Cunard was in New York, she conferred at Madison Square Garden with representatives of a big internationally known circus regarding special circus stunts for the picture. Startling developments can be expected before "Peg o' the Ring" is finished.

UNIQUE STUNT BY WHARTONS.

Ordinarily in studio work Cooper-Hewitt violet ray lights are used overhead and on the sides of the "set"—the lights themselves do not show in the picture, the rays being reflected downward upon actors and settings.

The seventh episode of "The Mysteries of Myra," however, afforded opportunity for a distinct novelty in photoplay craft, and the Wharton brothers were quick to make the most of it. In this episode the Black Master's spirit enters the Maynard home and materializes under a red light—red light being conducive to materialization and violet light antagonistic. After materializing, the spirit of the Black Master attempts to turn on the gas in Myra's room and in so doing throws a flood of violet rays full upon himself and dematerializes in great agony.

In producing these scenes a set of Cooper-Hewitt lights are shown both before and after installation. During the action Howard Estabrook turns the current on and off several times for the benefit of the camera, and the effect is both novel and startling. All this is shown in the seventh episode of this remarkable feature series.

Experts who have viewed a pre-showing of this part of the picture state that the scenes in which the Cooper-Hewitts are used are entirely new to the screen and that they have never before seen anything like the photographic effects attained.

"THE PROMISE LAND" (Essanay).

This three-act photoplay has a story fully as strong as many five-act photoplays and tells it in a straightforward manner that is sure to appeal to any group of spectators. Bryant Washburn and Marguerite Clayton appear for the first time together in this piece. Both have been with Essanay since their first experience in pictures, but never had been cast together until this time. "The Promise Land" is but the first of several pictures in which they will perform, so well do they appear as opposites. With Mr. Washburn and Miss Clayton, two stars of international reputation, in the leading roles, this play offers an example of President George K. Spoor's plan of putting his best players in short-reel productions. Edmund F. Cobb and Harry Dunkinson, each of leading-man caliber, top the supporting cast. The story is one of small-town sweethearts, the boy a drug clerk with ambitions. As he goes away to study medicine a young traveling salesman wins the girl. Some years afterward the drug clerk is a surgeon of recognized ability at a city hospital. The girl, deserted by her husband, becomes a nurse to support her child. It so happens that when the victim of a railroad wreck is brought in the new surgeon gets the case and the nurse is sent to help him in the operating room. They recognize each other and then identify the victim as the former traveling man and the nurse's husband. They strive to save him, but in vain. The surgeon shows the girl that the promise land is their little home town rather than the city of which they dreamed, and they return together.

ESSANAY GETTING SCENICS.

The scenic beauties of Canada from Nova Scotia to British Columbia and from the Georgian Bay country to the Yukon will be filmed by several squads of Essanay camera men during the summer months.

Great preparations are being made for the Yukon pictures. Animal life in this great north country will be given as much attention as scenic, and the camera staff has orders to get a series which will show how polar bears live, regardless of the difficulties. So thorough will be the canvass of this country for appropriate scenery and animal studies that the party is not expected to return until late in August or even in September. All scenics will be released in split reels with the Canimated Nooz cartoons by Wallace Carlson and other 500-foot productions.

PARAMOUNT "SHELL PLATE" WEEKLY.

The Paramount Pictures Corporation issues its "shell plate" weekly. The page contains all sorts of matter—"shorts" and "longs," pictures of stars and scenes in each of the two weekly Paramount releases. This page, in proof form, goes to every exhibitor and to the newspaper in his town or small city. Circular letters have told the exhibitor the advantages of the proposition—that if his newspaper receives shell plate, it will be more likely to print publicity for his pictures than if it has to set up the story. Shell plate does away with composition charges, and the editors of this class of newspaper using Paramount Publicity have welcomed the new page.

"A RAILROAD BANDIT" (Universal).

It is nothing new nowadays for the Universal to engage a train consisting of an engine and fifteen or twenty box cars or a dozen passenger coaches. The Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line and other western railroads have even turned over local passenger and freight stations to the picture people from Big U town. In fact, the relations between one great trans-continental line and the Universal are very close. This company, the Santa Fe, recognizing that Scene from "A Railroad Bandit" (Bison).

Universal City is one of the coast's greatest attractions to Eastern tourists, has issued special folders describing the city and urging tourists to visit it as one of the greatest sights in California.

In "A Railroad Bandit," a two-reel Bison railroad drama featuring Marie Walcamp and Lee Hill, a western railroad turned over an engine and train crew and a dozen coaches to the Universal merely for the privilege of having the name of their line in Universal moving pictures. There is no doubt that Universal pictures receive a tremendous circulation in all parts of the world, and the advertising departments of many railroad companies have come to realize that it is a paying proposition to have the name of their road roll across the cinema screen painted on their coaches.

WALTHALL IN "THE LITTLE MUSKETEER."

Picture patrons familiar with Henry B. Walthall's rich interpretation of Southern character leads may await with expectancy his newest production on which Essanay has just begun construction.

"The Little Musketeer," to be filmed in five acts, gives Mr. Walthall the wide opportunity necessary for the display of his unique ability, and the chance to offer a powerful portrayal of a part which requires just such acting as his to be successful. A cast composed of many stage stars will support him. Antoinette Walker, famed for her parts in Belasco productions, principally with David Warfield, will take the feminine lead. Director J. Charles Hayden will handle the new piece. One thousand infantrymen and several hundred horsemen to take guerilla foraging parties, will be utilized. Exteriors will be taken at Camp Logan, the artillery and rifle range of the Illinois National Guard.

"The Little Musketeer" is a drama of Civil war times, without bringing the war topic directly into it. It was written by Charles Mortimer Peck especially for Mr. Walthall, and the latter takes the double role of two brothers. Both love the same girl. A murder is committed and each believes the other is guilty and attempts to shield him. The climax is in keeping with the rest of the story, a strong point reached after numerous intense situations.

WOMEN FOR LEADING ROLES.

Something new in motion picture dramas—two women essaying the principal roles—is presented in "Flames of Vengeance," a three-act Gaumont-Mutual production. Miss Gertrude Robinson and Miss Iva Shepard are the principals, the former in the role of a young girl and the latter as the "vampire." Teamed together in this production, these young women give an exceptionally stirring interpretation of the difficult roles assigned them. The success of the two women in the leading roles has prompted the Gaumont-Mutual studios to prepare several other dramas for them in which they will appear as the principals.

"BROKEN FETTERS" (Bluebird).

New York and the Orient provide scenes and settings for "Broken Fetters," the Bluebird for July 3, in which Violet Mersereau makes her regular appearance as a star in that popular series. Rex Ingram has directed the production, going to China for the early scenes and locating the final action in New York's Chinatown and upper Fifth avenue. By clever artifice the Oriental atmosphere has been pleasantly infused, and as there is always a mysterious interest in Chinatowns, in whatever city they are located, the element of novelty will provide a strong appeal to the fancy of the populace. Considerable success has been attained in providing sensations, and there is an element of excitement to accelerate the interest and speed the concluding incident to an emotional climax. Kittens Reicherts plays, in the first act, the role which Miss Mersereau, as a grown up, carries through the four remaining reels. Wm. Garwood is featured as Miss Mersereau's leading man, and Paul Panzer and Isabel Patterson have been assigned to important roles in developing the interesting plot.

FROHMAN COMPANY TO SCREEN "JAFFERY."

"Jaffery," William J. Locke's most popular novel, is to be screened by the Frohman Amusement Corporation. As the author of "The Beloved Vagabond," more than from any of his other writings, Locke has been associated in the public mind in the past. Yet this new book, "Jaffery" has already outsold "The Beloved Vagabond" and will certainly retain at least equal place in the hearts of his many admirers. The story lends itself to very beautiful dramatic treatment, and forms in essence a pictured play that might, with only the loss of scenic variation, be quite as effective on the stage.

For the name part the author's own friend, whom he had in mind in writing the book, has been engaged. This is C. Aubrey Smith, the English actor who played with Marie Doro in the play from another Locke book, "The Morals of Marcus." Mr. Smith has done some strong picture work before, notably in "The Builder of Bridges" and "John Gladye's Honour."

Others in the cast have been chosen with as much care, the familiar names including Eleanor Woodruff, Eric Blind, Florence Deshon, Doris Sawyer, Paul Doucet and Stanley Dark.

HOLMES TO TOUR CANADIAN ROCKIES.

Burton Holmes, the celebrated traveller and lecturer, whose journeys are shared by screen audiences each week in the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel Pictures, has left for a trip through the Canadian Rockies. Through the land of Evangeline Mr. Holmes will travel during peach-blossom time, later going to Newfoundland and for a visit to the historic shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre. The journey, which will cover all of Canada, will be made in the car of the late Lord Strathcona, and Mr. Holmes will be entertained by Lord Shaunnessy. He has also been invited to be the guest of the Duke of Connaught during his Canadian visit.

MARGUERITE CLARK STAR OF "SILKS AND SATINS."

Marguerite Clark makes her next screen appearance in the Famous Players production, "Silks and Satins," which is released on the Paramount Program June 12. The play is an unusual one, opening in the present and then reverting to the Napoleonic era as the story of the romance of the great-great-grandmother of the little bride is related to her and furnishes her with the solution of her own grave problems.

J. Searle Dawley, who directed "Silks and Satins," has gathered an exceptional cast about Miss Clark, including Vernon Scene from "Silks and Satins" (Famous Players).

Steel, Clarence Handysides, Thomas Holding, W. A. Williams, and Fayette Perry. Some of the most elaborate settings ever erected in the Famous Players studio were built for this production, among them a three-story interior of the De Sagen Chateau, and another interior view of the chateau which was over one hundred feet in depth. The picture is a delightful blending of the present and the past, in which Miss Clark plays both diminutive heroines in her inimitable way.

"THE SHERIFF OF PLUMAS" (Mustang).

Because her rare type of beauty fitted exactly the heroine of William Piggett's stirring story of the West, "The Sheriff of Plumas," Helene Rosson was especially selected by Director Warren Ellsworth to portray this role in the picturization of this popular story by the Mustang-Mutual studios. Her appearance in this production will mark Miss Rosson's first effort as the heroine of a short-length feature in many months.

Scene from "The Sheriff of Plumas" (Mustang).

William Stowell and Harry McCabe, the latter a newcomer to Mustang-Mutual releases, appear at the head of a capable company supporting Miss Rosson. "The Sheriff of Plumas," which was put into scenario form by Karl Coolidge, is an unusually appealing story of the Far West, replete with stirring situations and presenting an exceptionally novel domestic situation.

RALPH HERZ IN METRO'S "THE PURPLE LADY."

"The Purple Lady," a five-part Metro-Kolfe production in which Ralph Herz is starred and Irene Howley is featured, will be released on the Metro program June 26. This Metro feature will serve to introduce Mr. Herz to the silent drama. He has had a long and successful career on the speaking stage, and is perhaps best known for his work in "The Soul Kiss," "Madame Sherry," "Dr. De Luxe," and recently in "Ruggles of Red Gap." He is truly an international artist as he was born in Paris, has German relatives, was educated in England and is now a naturalized American citizen. He came to America with Mrs. Patrick Campbell, playing with that star in "The Joy of Living," "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" and "Aunt Jeannie."

Miss Howley is another stage favorite who won added fame on the screen. She was last seen on the Metro program in "A Yellow Streak" with Lionel Barrymore, which was pronounced one of the best features produced last year. She was known for several years on the vaudeville stage as "The Manhattan Girl." There is a strong supporting cast in "The Purple Lady," which includes Alan Hale, Howard Truesdell, George Pauncefote, Guido Colucci, Gretchen Hartman, Mrs. William Bechtel, Cora Williams and other well-known stage and screen artists.

"The Purple Lady" is a picturization of the play of the same name by Sydney Rosenfeld, which enjoyed a successful run on Broadway.

RUTH ROLAND STARRED IN PATHE'S "A MATRIMONIAL MARTYR."

In Ruth Roland and Andrew Arbuckle, the two players featured in "A Matrimonial Martyr," the five-part Gold Rooster play made by Balboa and treated to the exquisite process of Pathecolor in the Pathe company's Paris laboratories, we see that rarity of screen art—actors physically and temperamentally in accord with their parts.

In the double role of Erma Desmond and Mrs. Hugo Stanley, Ruth Roland is happy. The play calls for her happiness only as Erma Desmond; but Ruth's volatile temperament revels happily in her interpretation of the irascible, waspish termagant, Mrs. Hugo Stanley; for her chameleon feelings conduce to making each part more real for contrast with the other.

Miss Roland first won the admiration of countless screen enthusiasts by her consistent playing in the now famous "Who Pays?" series, released by Pathe about a year ago. A native daughter of California, which has produced so many favorites of the stage and screen, Miss Roland has been before the public since she was four years old.

After finishing her education in Hollywood, she had considerable stock experience and wound up in vaudeville before going into pictures. She joined the Balboa forces about a year and a half ago and rose rapidly. Only recently she made a great success in "The Red Circle" serial and in the Gold Rooster play, "Comrade John," wherein she co-starred with William Elliott.

"LA VIE DE BOHEME" (World).

"La Vie De Boheme," in which Alice Brady, the charming World Film star will make her appearance late in June, received its directorial patronage at the hands of Albert Capellani, the famous French producer, creator of "Les Miserables," Scene from "La Vie De Boheme" (World).

"Camille" and at one time the foremost operatic director of the French capital.

For the making of this exceptional subject, Mr. Capellani did not rely on his own knowledge of Murgur's story, but called into conference a number of his friends among the Metropolitan Opera House singers and directors, and they were asked to look at such of the film as had been completed and suggest for forthcoming scenes, with the result that a most artistic atmospheric production is seen.

As an opera, under the name of "La Boheme," Murgur's story has become a classic of the music world. The tale itself, torn with the heart yearnings is of the young girl, "Mimi," who, as a baby is left at the "Motherless Home," later taken from there by an inn keeper and given a place as domestic. She is assaulted by a drunken inmate and rescued by a Bohemian musician. She leaves the inn and takes up flower-making and meets her destiny in Rudolph, the scion of a notable family—honorable withal and loving as a true spirit.

Alice Brady as "Mimi" responds to the high tense, tempo called for by the story. Her sublime sorrow, her majestic manner of flitting from gloom to joy and her death-bed request for "a muff to warm my hands" sees the film dissolve itself and leave the auditor struggling to hold back the tears.

In addition to Miss Brady, Paul Capellani, Zena Keefe and a specially selected cast of players, have important parts. The scenic environment is perfect, the detail and atmosphere carries out the general effect, and as it was aptly described by one of the Metropolitan Opera House singers, "La Vie De Boheme" is a symphony of art.

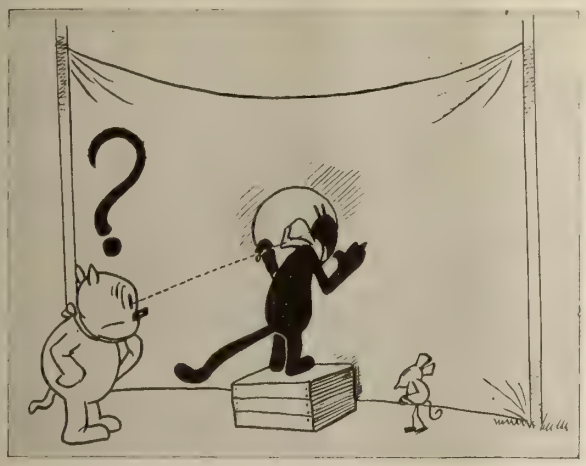
"La Vie De Boheme" is in five acts and will be released as "Brady-Made" June 19 on the regular World program.

John Junior, Essanay juvenile leading man, has another comedy part in "The Schemers," a forthcoming three-act comedy-drama.

INTERNATIONAL ANIMATED CARTOONS.

"A Quiet Day in the Country" by the famous F. Opper, and George Herriman's "Krazy Kat at Looney Park" are the new International animated cartoons booked for release June 5.

These split-reel comedies grow better every release and the late offerings are quite the best yet turned out by the well-known cartoonists. With vastly improved situations and action both comedies are riots of laughter from title to finish.



Scene from "Krazy Kat at Looney Park" (International).

Krazy Kat's trip on the roller coaster is a scream and Cousin Willie in pursuit of the pig are just about the funniest objects we have seen in animated cartoons. Opper and Herriman seem to have hit upon a style of navigation for these characters that classes with the "Chaplin Shuffle" in its palmiest days. Watching these pictures on the screen it is hard to believe that they are not actual living beings, but only children of the artist's imagination, taking on life and expression at the whim of the originator.

CHANGE IN A GAUMONT TITLE.

After announcing as its photoplay for June 22 "The Spatulate Thumb," the Gaumont company has decided to change the name to "The Criminal's Thumb." This is the three-act drama which had its ending changed by vote of the women of the Gaumont stock companies. The authors, Lionel Barrymore and Wright Huntington, wrote that the heroine was to marry the young attorney who secured the acquital of the wea young man with whom she had been in love when the story opened. Miss Iva Shepard, Miss Gertrude Robinson, Miss Gertrude Mc-Coy, Miss Lucille Taft and Miss Mathilde Baring were a unit in declaring the heroine would stick to the man to whom she had first given her love. The story was then changed to get it in tune with the feminine psychology of the Gaumont actresses.

NOVELTY NOTES FOR JUNE.

"Novelty Notes" for June contains an exhaustive special article, entitled "Percentage Pictures," which is important to all who are interested in the future careers of Anita Stewart, Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin and their probable effects on the motion picture industry. "Novelty Notes" is mailed to exhibitors only; but any of our readers may obtain a copy of the June issue if they will send their names and addresses to "Novelty Notes," 115 East Twenty-third street, New York.

UNITY MARKETS SERIAL ON UNIQUE PLAN.

"The Yellow Menace," the sixteen-episode serial starring Edwin Stevens, the famous dramatic artist, which is being distributed through the Unity Sales Corporation, is the first serial ever to be sold on a State's right basis, according to Andrew J. Cobe, vice-president and general manager of the Unity.

Mr. Cobe reports that the entire country has been practically sold on "The Yellow Menace," within a week of the announcement of its acquisition by the Unity concern. The extreme timeliness of the subject has no doubt a great deal to do with this, as orators in the House of Representatives and presidential candidates are at the present moment striving to arouse the country to a sense of its danger from across the Pacific.

NEW KNICKERBOCKER-VIM BULLETIN.

Two bulletins in one is the result of a novel method adopted by the Melies Manufacturing Company in its latest issue of the house organ advertising Knickerbocker Star Features and Vim Comedies. The new bulletin is a saddle-stitched booklet of twelve pages and covers the Knickerbocker and Vim advertising matter occupying opposite halves of the publication and meeting in the middle, upside down to each other. Thus the information the exhibitor requires is provided in a form that obviates confusion and is handily preserved in a binder supplied for the purpose.

ROONEY REACHES UNIVERSAL CITY.

Pat Rooney has reached Universal City and will be directed by Roy Clements in a series of comedies, the first one being entitled "The Bell Hop." Rooney has been appearing on the vaudeville stage, and is one of the best-known comedians in the country. He was at Universal City once before for a brief engagement. Additional film plays are being written for the comedian. Work will be commenced on the first episode next week.

NEW "VIM" POSTER TRADE MARK.

Vim Comedies have dropped the cartoon style of poster so long distinctive of the Vim brand, and have adopted a new device, consisting of a Shakespearean fool with a bauble. The device is used as a border for one-sheet posters, the Vim name appearing on a balloon which the fool holds tethered with a string. In the panel is inserted a comedy scene from the subject, posterized in three colors with photographic reproduction of the players' faces.

NOTES OF THE TRADE

COMING a week or ten days ahead of the Gaumont stock companies, Gertrude Robinson, one of the stars of these aggregations, has reached New York. As she is not cast in any of the final productions in work at Jacksonville, Fla., it was possible for her to get away ahead of time. Her first photoplay to be made at Flushing, N. Y., will be announced within a week.

Two sisters, Helen and Queenie Rosson, are employed at the American Mutual studios in Santa Barbara. Despite the year's difference in age, the two bear such a striking resemblance that it is with difficulty they are told apart. Both are stars, Helen in strong dramatic roles and Queenie in comedy parts. Their brother, Dick, is also a member of the studio forces, making it quite a family affair.

Director Smiling Billy Mason has completed the fourth episode of "Base Ball Billy," made in one reel, in which he plays the featured lead, supported by a large cast, and is now preparing to film the fifth chapter of this series of pictures dealing with the national game and full of comedy situations.

The U. S. Department of the Interior, which is releasing scenic film of National Parks through the Gaumont company, has a most remarkable series of views of the Yellowstone which will be released as a Mutual Picture June 14. These are equal in photographic excellence to the pictures of Yosemite, which proved such a popular Gaumont scenic release through Mutual. The pictures of the geysters, the stupendous falls, and the other beauties of nature with which the park is filled, made a wonderfully popular release.

Charles Chaplin is now at work on his third Mutual feature, the name of which as yet is undecided. In this release, the famous laughmaker will be seen in the role of an itinerant musician, in which the violin, which he plays so well, and an accordion furnish the chief music. Edna Purviance, Eric Campbell, Leo White, Charlotte Minneau and the other members of his company appear with him in this production.

American Director William Bertram in "Like a Knight of Old" put Nita Davis through a strenuous week in shooting that stage robbery picture. Nita is used to being dragged by runaway horses, flung over cliffs and plunged into icy cold mountain streams. "The director certainly made us earn our keep this week," Nita was heard to tell one of the extra men. "I've been in tight places many a time, but today he had me hanging on by my imagination. That's all I had left to cling to."

• • •

"The Fourth Tree" is the title of a one-reel comedy drama being produced by Director Clifford Elfelt, the featured lead being Vola Smith, with Hayward Mack opposite. Elfelt already has finished his first one-reel production at Universal City, entitled "Muggins," the lead being taken by Gretchen Lederer with Norbert Myles opposite. Clever work was done in this drama by Elizabeth Janes, one of the child actresses of Universal City, and Adele Farrington in the heavy role.

Helen Holmes and her company of Signal-Mutual players are now far out on the Pacific, bound for Hawaii and the Orient, where they are to enact a number of scenes for "The Diamond Runners," a Mutual Star Production, to be released in five acts late this summer. About twenty persons, including players, cameramen and assistants to J. P. McGowan, who is directing the production, made up the party.

• • •

Lone Star Deitz, the famous football coach, who some years ago captained the Carlyle team when it defeated Harvard, has a small part in the next American Audrey Munson picture, "The Gem of the Western Seas." All the men that appear in this feature are six-footers. The celebrated model they support is a slight American girl of about five feet two.

With his company working in the lumber camps of Humboldt county, California, Director Jay Hunt is filming "The Wilderness Creed," featuring Lu Cille Younge, with Jack Holt playing opposite. Hunt already has filmed a one-reel sea drama, made en route to Eureka, and will make two mountain dramas of two reels each before his return to Universal City.

So powerful a means of education has the art of cinematography become that many large manufacturers throughout the country are adopting it is a medium of education. The Willys-Overland company was among the first of the automobile manufacturers to look with favor upon the screen in connection with its work in disseminating knowledge of motor car construction. A lecture descriptive of the Knight sleeve valve motor, illustrated by 2,000 feet of motion pictures made by Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, is being given in various cities throughout the country by Henry H. Hower of Willys-Overland. The picture, many of them interior views of a motor in actual operation, are declared by exhibitors to be remarkable for their sharpness and clearness of detail. Without them, according to Mr. Hower, it would be extremely difficult to drive home many of the points of vital interest.

Alan Forrest, who recently joined the forces of the American-Mutual studios, has had an eventful career as a screen actor. One of his most notable successes was as the heavy in the serial "The Master Key." Leaving the Universal he joined Lubin, where he worked in many releases, including several features. He achieved a signal success in "A Sister of Cain," and in "Jackstraws" features. At present he is working in "The Sign of the Spade," to be released shortly in five reels.

Murdock McQuarrie, one of the most widely-known character actors on the Coast, has come to the American Studios to direct the company headed by Helene Rosson. His first picture will be "The Sign of the Spade," by Kenneth B. Clarke.

It will be at least ten days before Director Otis Turner completes the five-reel drama entitled "The Seekers," by Olga Printzlau, and featuring Flora Parker DeHaven, with the well-known character actor, Charles Mailes, as leading man. A strong cast is provided Director Turner, in support of the dainty little star, who plays the part of a nurse in a quaint religious community. The heart interest story runs throughout, with plenty of action.

Two women, Gertrude Robinson and Iva Shepard, play the principal parts in "Flames of Vengeance," a forthcoming Gaumont-Mutual three-part feature. A production in which the two principal roles are handled exclusively by women, are rare, indeed, in picture fields.

King Clark, who recently joined the American forces, is to be seen in "The Dancer" as his introduction to the public under the "Flying A" banner, with Vivian Rich and Margaret Nichols playing the principal feminine roles.

An automobile and a bicycle furnish the thrills for "Daredevils and Danger," a Beauty-Mutual comedy, featuring that trio of Carol Hallowoy, John Sheehan and John Steppling. The story has to do with an invention of a self-aiming gun and an excitable chase after the inventor by a herd of foreign representatives.

Constance Crawley has written a story entitled "Fear" which is now being filmed in two reels under the directions of Frank Borzage, with Mr. Borzage, Anna Little and Jack Richardson in the important roles. It is now expected that "Fear" will be offered to the public on June 30.

The Smalleys nearly have completed the five-reel society drama, entitled "The First Stone," written by Lois Weber and starring Mary MacDonald, with Horace Morgan appearing opposite her. A big cast of Universal players appear in this film story, including Maude Emory, Jack Mulhall and Ernie Shields. Many of the scenes were taken at the wonderful Elliott-Brandt Rancho, said to be one of the finest ranches in the United States. Other scenes were taken at San Diego and at a huge cattle ranch at Oceanside. Many beautiful sets were erected at Universal City for the use of the Smalleys for this production.

"Killed by Whom?" is a two-reel "Flying A" sociological drama written by William Parker and directed by Carl M. Le Viness. Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh and George Periolat play the principal parts, and the story is very interesting from the standpoint of modern legal justice.

Alan Forest and George Bebhardt are the most recent additions to the American-Mutual studios. Their initial appearances will be in support of Helen Rosson in "The Sign of the Spade," a forthcoming American-Mutual feature in five acts. Forrest will appear in juvenile role opposite Miss Rosson, while Gebhardt will essay the "heavy."

• • •

"Smiling" Billy Mason has completed the fifth episode of "Base Ball Bill," a series of one-reel comedies surrounding the diamond and in which Mason plays the featured lead.

The famous collection of Bostock animals appearing in Horsley-Mutual releases are now en route from the studios at Los Angeles to New York, where they will appear during the summer months at Luna Park in Coney Island. A "Horsley-Mutual Special," consisting of twelve cars, is bringing the animals East. During their stay in Luna Park, visitors will be given an opportunity of seeing just how motion pictures in which animals are used, are made. Captain Jack Bonavita is in direct charge of the transportation of the collection. At the close of the summer season at Luna Park the animals will be returned to the Los Angeles studios.

"Love's Bitter Strength" is an American photoplay without a villain. Edward Coxen, Lizette Thorne and George Field constitute the important cast, under the direction of Alfred Hollingsworth, who has taken over the Ricketts company. This subject is a film adaptation arranged by Anthony W. Coldewey from a story by Nelle Brown Duff.

Director William Worthington is preparing to take over the direction of Ruth Stonehouse, the well-known star, who will be featured in a five-reel film play taken from Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," introducing Miss Stonehouse as a girl who dances, full of vivacity and life. The supporting cast has not been determined, and will not be until the film version is completed.

Director Murdock McQuarrie, who for the past six months has been directing Signal-Mutual five-reel features, has transferred his baggage to the American-Mutual studios. His first production under his new employers will be released shortly under the title of "The Sign of the Spade." Helen Rosson has the leading role in this production, supported by George Gebhardt, Alan Forrest and a strong company of players.

Early next week Director Lynn Reynolds will finish the picturization of his own story, written in five reels, entitled "The Deacon's Demise," featuring Myrtle Gonzalez. Val Paul appears opposite Miss Gonzalez, with a strong supporting cast including Nanine Wright, Lule Warrenton, Fred Church, George Hernandez, Frank McQuarrie and Jack Curtis. Miss Gonzales does some notable work in this film play, and some very beautiful sets have been provided by Manager Charles Rankin of the production department at Universal City.

"The Wasted Years," next of the Horsley Mutual features, starring Crane Wilbur, will be released shortly in five acts. Thelma Salter, who boasts but six years of age, will be Mr. Wilbur's chief support. This production will mark Miss Salter's first appearance as a Mutualite.

"Flames of Vengeance" will be the second of the new three-reel features produced at the Gaumont studios in Flushing for release through the Mutual. Gertrude Robinson and Sydney Mason, popular Mutual stars, are to be the featured players.

Iva Shepard, famous Mutual "vampire," John Reinhard, John Macklin, Albert Macklin, Mathilda Baring, Charles W. Travis and James Levering are the other players in the cast. Edwin Middleton is staging the drama.

Edward Schulter, technical director at the Rolfe-Metro studios, is getting things in readiness for the production of "Romeo and Juliet," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be starred.

Now it is the "homeliest boy" who is to make his bow as a star of Mutual releases. Gertrude McCoy, star of Gaumont-Mutual feature releases found him at the recent motion picture exposition held at Madison Square Garden. He introduced himself as "Tommy McCarthy." "It's not me real monicker," Tommy explained, "but it will have to do. I've got to have a phoney title, like all the other picture players." Tommy, they say out at the Gaumont-Mutual studios, where he is now working in his first release, has real ability and a wealth of talent. Tommy will shortly depart for the Vogue-Mutual studios in Los Angeles, where he will become a regular member of the playing forces.

Director Jay Hunt is in the woods of the northern part of California filming two logging camp photoplays, in which the lead is played by Lucille Younge, with Jack Holt appearing opposite. Albert MacQuarrie also appears in the cast. En route to Eureka, Hunt filmed on the steamers a one-reel story entitled "On the High Sea." Ben Cohn accompanied the company as scenario writer. The director and his company will be away for at least ten days more.

Edwin Guetlein, the Gaumont-Mutual cameraman, is now touring the South securing pictures for "See America First," released each week by the Mutual. After Atlanta, Savannah and Montgomery, Ala., were the first of the cities visited. His tour will occupy about ten weeks, during which he will obtain views of not less than twelve of the principal Southern cities.

"Any Youth," a psychological society drama, has been filmed by Director Allen Holubar from his own story. Holubar plays the lead, with Dorothy Phillips opposite, and supported by Hector V. Sarno as the heavy. This one-reel picture required a great deal of double and triple exposure, depicting as it does the thoughts of a man as they flash across his brain.

Following "Flames of Vengeance," the Gaumont company will release "The Criminal's Thumb," a melodrama written by Lionel Barrymore and Wright Huntington. The leading roles will be taken by Alexander Gaden and Iva Shepard. A peculiar twist to the story is given by the fact that the heroine does not marry the strong man, but says that the weaker of the two needs her. Others in the cast are Lucille Taft, Mathilde Baring, Charles W. Travis, Henry W. Pemberton and James Levering. The drama is being directed by Edwin Middleton. It will be released June 22.

Within a few days, director Joseph De Grasse will have finished the picturization of "The Grasp of Greed," a five reel production, featuring Louise Lovely and Lon Chaney. Some very beautiful sets have been used by DeGrasse in this picture, many of them being his own conception. His next story has not been announced, but it is being prepared for his use early next week.

The meetings, and ceremonies attendant upon each of the several conferences held, between General Scott and Funston, representing the United States, and General Obregon, Mexican Minister of War, were photographed by L. N. Burrud, a Mutual Weekly cameraman who has been in Mexico with Gen. Pershing's expedition. In order to obtain these pictures, a special permit had to be obtained from both the United States and Mexican authorities and signed by each of the three participants in the conferences. General Obregon posed several times for the camera.

"The Silent Battle," a five reel feature production in which J. Warren Kerrigan is starred, with Lois Wilson opposite, has been completed by Director Jack Conway. He is now working on his next production, which will start early next week, with Kerrigan as the featured lead, supported by Miss Wilson, Maude George, Harry Carter, and others of the Universal City stock company.

Millions of dollars have been spent, countless lives sacrificed, fortunes made and lost and feuds born, in the big reclamation projects engineered on the desert regions of the great west. All is lived again on the screen in "The Reclamation," a Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe feature, filmed at the American studios and starring Winnifred Greenwood and Franklin Ritchie. The author was Enneth B. Clarke. Margaret Nicholas, Dick La Reno, and Clarence Burton are the principals in the cast supporting the stars. The piece was staged by Director Edward Sloman and most of the exteriors were filmed on the outskirts of the great Mojave Desert.

In "She Was Some Vampire" the featured leads are played by Gale Henry and William Franey, a comedy in one reel which is being filmed by Director Allen Curtis at Universal City. The story was written by Curtis and is a satire on the vampire woman, many of the scenes being taken at the seashore. Others in this laughable screen play are Lillian Peacock, Milburn Moranti and Charles Conklin.

Old Town's Strand Sold

Well-Known Maine Theater Changes Hands When W. E. McPhee and O. B. Fernandez Buy the Strand Theater from Eugene Boucher—Latter Has Owned It Since It Was Built—W. E. McPhee Will Be the Manager for the Firm.

By John Flannagan, 147 Park View Ave., Bangor, Special Correspondent.

OLD TOWN, Me.—An important deal in theatrical affairs has just been consummated after days of consideration by the parties concerned, when the Strand theater was sold by Eugene Boucher, who has been its owner since it was built, to W. E. McPhee, owner of the New Central, and O. B. Fernandez, owner of the Bijou, who will be associated together under the firm name of McPhee & Fernandez, with Mr. McPhee as manager. Both the Strand and Bijou theaters were closed during the past week.

The New Central will be kept for road shows entirely, while the Strand will be devoted to a straight program of high-class picture shows, including regularly Paramount and Triangle plays. The Bijou will remain closed, at least for the present.

New Maine Film Company.

Portland, Me.—Lochren Film Corporation has been organized here for the purpose of conducting a general manufacturing, commercial, mercantile, mechanical, trading or real estate business. Capital stock, $1,000,000, of which $500,000 is common and $500,000 is preferred; par value, $10; paid in, $50. President, R. E. Monroe, Portland; treasurer, Carl W. Smith, Portland; clerk, Isaac W. Dyer, Gorham; directors, William Lochren, Stanley B. Houck, Minneapolis, Minn.; Carl W. Smith, E. R. Monroe, M. G. Connellan, Portland. Approved May 26.

W. U. Baker Opens New Theater.

Lubec, Me.—W. U. Baker opened a new moving picture theater here on Decoration Day, and is using Universal service. This new house has been built especially for Mr. Baker's use, and should prove profitable.

Pathe Comes to Bangor.

Bangor, Me.—Another film exchange, the Pathe, will be opened in Bangor shortly. Al Bevans, who is to be the manager of the local branch, is now looking for a location. Mr. Bevans has been in the business for the past ten years, having started with George Kleine when he opened his Boston branch. For the past few years Mr. Bevans has been managing exchanges. He was assistant manager of the Boston General Film exchange and was recently manager of the General Film exchanges in Albany, New Haven and Syracuse.

The local branch, which is to be established so that the company will be better able to furnish the people of this state with Pathe pictures, will control the territory this side of Lewiston. The Boston office has charge of the other territory in Maine. Mr. Bevans will be in position to furnish exhibitors in this section with features, serials and singles of all kinds made by his company.

Another benefit expected in having an exchange in this vicinity is that, with a man in Bangor, the company will be able to cover this territory for the Pathe Weekly. When anything of particular note happens in this vicinity, Mr. Bevans will have a camera man on the spot at once to take pictures for the weekly.

H. P. Smith to Manage General Exchange.

Bangor, Me.—H. P. Smith, of the Boston office of the General Film Co., has taken the Bangor exchange, on Franklin street, as manager, to succeed George H. Newhall, who was drowned a short time ago. Mr. Smith has been in the film business for the past eight years. He was formerly in the booking department, but for the past three years has been handling the work in the feature department.

Mr. Smith made a trip down through Eastport last week and is greatly pleased with conditions thus far. He likes the territory he has been placed in and thinks there are great prospects for business this summer.

Bluehill, Me.—The Century theater, Mason brothers, proprietors, has just contracted for Broadway features from the Bangor office of the Universal Film Company.

BOSTON REPORTS EARLY SUMMER BUSINESS GOOD

Barnum & Bailey's Circus Dents Week's Business in Boston—Business in State Prosperous.

By William Flynn, Boston Correspondent. Address Boston American.

BOSTON, Mass.—Barnum & Bailey's "Greatest Show on Earth" put a dent in the receipts of several Boston moving picture houses last week, but in spite of this counter attraction most of the larger photoplay theaters did a good business This was particularly true of the Park, Fenway and Modern theaters, in which the cooling systems have been given a thorough overhauling in anticipation of the approaching warm weather.

Both of the Olympia theaters, the Orpheum and the Boston, drew their quota of moving picture lovers, and the majority of the smaller houses held their own Judging from the present outlook the moving picture business in Boston and the rest of the New England territory this summer will be far better than it has been for years past.

Many of the local film exchange managers are enthusiastic over the prospects and their enthusiasm has been enhanced by the large increase in the number of summer moving picture houses that are due to be opened at New England summer resorts within the next few weeks. Edward J. Farrell, New England manager of the General Film Company, says the bookings of his office have held out remarkably well. Frank Vine, of the local International Film office; Frank Grady, of the World; W. H. Bradley, of the Triangle; George Balsdon, of the V-L-S-E, and Harry Campbell, of the Fox office, also report large bookings, and the general business aspect throughout the territory is encouraging.

BRAINS AND BEAUTY GIRL.

New England's Fair Representative, Phyllis Curl, Is a Blonde.

Boston, Mass.—Miss Phyllis E. Curl, the Boston girl who has been chosen to represent New England in the beauty and brains contest by the World Film Company, has received so many congratulations from her host of friends and persons she does not even know that she is in a quandary as to how she is going to answer them all.

Miss Curl is nineteen years old. She is a striking blonde with wavy gold hair and dark blue eyes. She is five feet six inches tall and has an erect and graceful carriage. Her father, who died some months ago, was a buyer of antiques, and with him she has traveled practically all over the world. She has been in Africa, Australia, Japan and Europe.

Following the death of her father the young lady was compelled to seek employment, and after working a short time as a stenographer she secured an engagement with William Hodge in "Fixing Sister." She was persuaded to enter the contest by her friends and is overjoyed to think she won. Miss Curl is a graduate of the Girls' High School in Boston, and those who have seen her predict a wonderful future for her on the screen.

An Organist of Fine Discrimination.

Boston, Mass.—Part of the success of Loew's Globe theater, in Boston, is due to the brilliant talent of Francis J. O'Connor, the organist. Mr. O'Connor has made a deep study of the science of interpreting motion pictures on the organ and his work augments the value of the photoplay on the screen to such an extent that he has built up a following among film devotees that few moving picture house musicians can boast of. He follows the theme of the picture on the organ in a manner that makes one feel as well as see the action as the reel unwinds on the screen, and discriminating audiences are loud in their praise of his efforts.

NEWARK NEWS LETTER.

By Jacob J. Kalter, 51 Strand Theater Building, Newark, N. J., Special Correspondent.

Airdomes Are Opening.

NEWARK, N. J.—The season for open air moving picture places was practically inaugurated in this city during the last week or so. The expectations of the airdome owners are much better this year than last. Weather conditions last year were deplorable. In a conversation with an airdome owner, the Newark correspondent of the Moving Picture World learned that thus far ideal conditions have prevailed as far as the open air places are concerned. The larger parks have also opened their season. Vailsburgh park, Newark; Olympic park, Belleville, and Hillside park, Irvington, all were opened last week. The wonderful business of the past week augurs well for the succeeding weeks.

Bayonne's New House.

Bayonne, N. J.—Plans have been prepared by Eugene Reilly, architect, for the erection of a one-story brick motion picture house to be built at 978 Broadway, Bayonne. The house, which will cost $6,000, is owned by A. Cohen.

Another Open Air.

East Orange, N. J.—James A. Endiso has built at 389 Dodd street, this place, a modern open air motion picture place at a cost of $500.

Success Company Chartered.

Trenton, N. J.—The Success Amusement Company, with registered offices at 135 East Hanover street, has just been chartered. The incorporators are: Charles C. Hildinger, George D. Bishop, Russell H. Lamont. The capital stock is $10,000, and the business of the concern is to do an amusement business.

B. S. Moss Interests Open Newark Office.

Newark, N. J.—The B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation has completed arrangements whereby they are to be represented in New Jersey by the Messrs. R. S. Clark and F. D. Hunt, who are to act as exclusive New Jersey agents.

Mr. Clark was with the V. L. S. E. Corporation for the past year as their New Jersey representative, and is now uniting with Mr. Hunt, who has been handling the Moss Features for several months.

The boys have opened an up-to-date office in the Proctor's Palace theater building, 114 Market street, Newark, N. J., where they will be glad to greet all their old friends.

Boyland at City, Irvington.

Irvington, N. J.—I. Boyland, well-known exhibitor around these parts, has taken over the City theater, 765 Springfield avenue, Irvington. Mr. Boyland has put on some extraordinary features in his house and he reports good business.

Atlantic Exhibition Company.

Newark, N. J.—With a capital of $10,000, the Atlantic Exhibition Company has been chartered at 828 Broad street, Newark. The members of the concern, which will conduct amusements, are Powell Crichton, Frank T. Matthes and Alex R. Fordyce.

Ruppert Opens Airdome.

Jersey City, N. J.—The Ocean airdome, at Bay River and Ocean avenue, has been opened by William Ruppert.

Madge Evans Popular.

Newark, N. J.—Madge Evans, recently shown at the Paramount theater, Broad and Hill streets, in "Sudden Riches," is probably now the pet of the city. The Newark correspondent of the Moving Picture World was informed that practically every theater booking World productions is making arrangements to have their house show this six-year-old wonder. The little film actress is very popular here in Newark, and it is expected that other playhouses will arrange for her personal appearance in the near future.

New Open Air Theater.

Newark, N. J.—An open air picture house has been opened at 267-269 Prince street by Morris Gold. He has installed a new operator's booth at a cost of $100. The booth was designed by M. B. Silberstein, architect.

Lakewood Incorporation.

Lakewood, N. J.—The Gem Amusement Company has been incorporated here with registered offices at 305 Sixth street. The capital is $3,000, which will be used for amusement purposes. The incorporators are Harry G. Hecht, Anna K. Otto and E. M. Firschbaum.

Syndicate at Penns Grove.

Penns Grove, N. J.—The New York theater Syndicate has been formed at this place with an authorized capital of $37,000. The incorporators are Frederick D. Doty, Giles S. Doty and E. S. Kilmer.

Regal Incorporated.

Paterson, N. J.—The Regal Amusement Company has been organized at 67 Main street, Paterson. The concern is capitalized at $10,000 and will probably take over the Regal theater, situated at the same address as the registered office. The incorporators are Salvatiore Peranio, Sanfelici Alexander and American V. Alexander.

New Camden Concern.

Camden, N. J.—The Cumberland Amusement Company has opened offices at 509 Market street, Camden, for the purpose of promoting amusements. The authorized capital is $5,000. The incorporators are S. MacGregor, Max Satinsky and Rose Black.

BALTIMORE ITEMS.

(For Baltimore Letter See Page 2078.)

"Gloria" at Strand.

Baltimore, Md.—The management of the Strand theater, 404-6 North Howard street, has booked "Gloria's Romance" and the first episode was shown this week for the first three days.

Ed Myrick presented all the lady patrons at his house, the Columbia, Portland, with a small bottle of perfume one Sunday recently.

Philadelphia Ball

Local Operators Give Brilliant Dance on Decoration Day at the Eagles' Temple—More Than Five Hundred Persons Attend—The Hall a Bower of Beauty—An Excellent Program—The Committee in Charge.

Special to Moving Picture World from Philadelphia News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—On Decoration Day more than five hundred Philadelphians attended the fifth annual ball of the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union, Local 307, held in Eagles' Temple, Broad and Spring Garden streets. The occasion was one of festivity, and those present voted it a huge success, which fact was corroborated by the members of the executive committee both as to attendance and financial results. The crowd gathered early and everything was running at full speed long before the allotted time. The ballroom presented a remarkable sight as the b autiful gowns worn by the ladies in attendance blended with the gorgeous decorations. Special efforts were made to have the decorations of a character long to be remembered, and too much credit cannot be given to those in charge of that portion of the affair.

The moving picture industry in Philadelphia was strongly represented at the ball, exhibitors, supply men and folks from the various exchanges mingling together on the floor. Charles Segal, president of the Philadelphia Exhibitors' League, was easily to be distinguished as he moved from place to place greeting those present. He made a brief address in which he remarked that the exhibitors as a body wished to congratulate the members of the Union upon the most proficient manner in which their organization was conducted and stated that it was their sincere wish that Local No. 307 continue along the excellent lines already drawn.

A strange coincidence of the affair was the fact that the ball fell on the date of the birthday of William Katz, manager of the Stanley theater and a well known member of the union. Mr. Katz was showered with congratulations by those in attendance and this live film man was voted one of the most popular exhibitors in Philadelphia.

A Fine Program.

It would be unfair to state which form of entertainment was most enjoyed by those present, either the cabaret show or the dancing. A most excellent vaudeville program was offered, the talent being drawn from the members of the union, and it must be said that every act was well presented and the large crowd thoroughly appreciated the efforts of the operators. The dancing was enjoyed to the utmost, nobody seeming to tire, and it was noticed that there were more upon the floor as the evening progressed than during the early hours of the ball. While speaking of dancing, the grand march must be mentioned. It proved to be a beautiful procession led by Benjamin Harrison, a member of No. 8.

Much of the credit for the successful manner in which the ball was conducted is due the officers of the organization. B. F. Bache, John J. Stevens, Walter G Murray, John A. Harris, Louis Krouse, Abbot Oliver and William Hamilton all deserve special mention for the untiring manner in which they went about preparing for the affair and for the commendable manner in which they handled the actual festivities. It is hoped by many Philadelphians that the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union, Local No. 307, enjoy unlimited success, and judging from the general trend of conversation at the ball any future entertainments offered by the union will meet with the same well-deserved success.

CENSORS ACTED "ARBITRARILY."

Court of Common Pleas Administers Sadly Needed Rebuke to Censors.

Philadelphia, Pa.—In a recent opinion handed down in Common Pleas Court No. 2, Judge Audenreid held that the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors "abused its discretion and acted arbitrarily" in eliminating a number of scenes and sub-titles from a film dealing with motherhood. In effect the court held that motherhood was a fit subject for presentation upon the moving picture screen. The decision is hailed as a decisive victory by local moving picture interests, as it is established that their right of appeal to the Common Pleas Court from decisions of the censors may not be without effect. This follows closely upon the heels of a recent decision stating that the court was no place for viewing moving picture films and that the word of the censors was final except in extraordinary instances.

Joseph Graves' Airdome.

Water Gap, Pa.—Joseph H. Graves has opened an airdome on Main street, Delaware Water Gap, and announces that he has met with most gratifying results considering the earliness of the season. This form of entertainment is new to that place and the folks in that vicinity have taken a liking to the idea, all of which bodes well for the future prosperity of the airdome.

44th Street Airdome Opens.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Messrs. Somberg, Rosen and Geber have opened their airdome at 44th street and Parkside avenue, directly opposite to Fairmount Park, and report a very good patronage to date. This establishment has an ideal location and is frequented by many during the warm summer evenings.

Grand Will Be Larger.

Camden, N. J.—Announcement has been made in Camden to the effect that Abe Greenberg, owner and manager of the Grand theater, Broadway near Mickle street, has purchased the property of Charles Foulon, 205 Broadway, adjoining the Grand. It was stated that plans are under way to rebuild the Grand and make it larger. The new building will have a frontage on Broadway of 62 feet and a depth of 125 feet. The seating capacity of the house when completed will be about 1,600.

Silver in the Photoplay Business.

One of the odd features connected with the recent growth in the value of silver is the added expense which it has put on the moving picture industry. Silver is now selling around 72 cents an ounce, owing to heavy European and Asiatic demand. It is well known that it is an essential in photographic chemicals, and the Engineer and Mining Journal prints an estimate of the silver used by the moving picture industry as about 15,000,000 ounces yearly, or considerably more than $10,000,000 worth at the present price. If this calculation of consumption be correct the film producers now use about 7 per cent. of the world's annual production, which was estimated at 195,600,000 ounces for 1915.

Philadelphia Notes of Interest.

Steve Trumbette, well known exhibitor of Carbondale, Pa., was a recent visitor to Philadelphia, and paid his respects to many of his friends in moving picture circles before departing. He likewise purchased considerable new equipment from the Swaab Film Service, 1327 Vine street.

Manager Stamper, of the Tioga theater, is to be complimented upon his new choralcello. This marvelous instrument, combining an organ, piano and orchestra, is certainly a revelation in the way of good music and folks living in the vicinity of the theater enjoy listening to the music in the evening with the result that Mr. Stamper's receipts have increased accordingly.

Bids are at present being received for alterations and the erection of an addition to the Poplar theater, 903-907 North Sixth street, J. M. Kennedy, Jr., and M. Steeple and Brothers, owners.

MID-NEW YORK LETTER.

By E. O. Weinberg, Special Correspondent, Novelty Theater, Troy, N. Y.

New V-L-S-E. Manager at Syracuse.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—F. F. Hartich, for a long time assistant to Mr. Partridge, New York branch V-L-S-E, has been promoted to branch manager at the Syracuse office for the same concern.

Philip Gentille in Albany With Pathe.

Albany, N. Y.—Philip Gentille, at one time assistant manager of the Regent theater, Buffalo, N. Y., is now located at Albany in Pathe exchange.

Sunday Shows in Cohoes.

Cohoes, N. Y.—Picture theaters in Cohoes will soon try to open on Sundays. There is considerable agitation on foot at the present time for and against Sunday opening.

Leases Mechanicsville Houses.

Cohoes, N. Y.—Louis Beuttner, now interested in both theaters in Cohoes, has secured options on the two houses in Mechanicville, owned by C. Meyerson and F. Howland. It is expected that the deal will be closed by June 1.

E. J. Schmidt With Bluebird.

Albany, N. Y.—E. J. Schmidt, formerly road man for Rex film exchange, Albany, is now covering the entire State for Bluebird photoplays. Mr. Schmidt at one time handled "Neptune's Daughter" in Pennsylvania, and he is very optimistic on conditions in this State.

NORTH CAROLINA NEWS LETTER

By Clarence W. Linz, Special Correspondent, 635 Tenth St., N. E., Washington, D. C.

Universal Exchange Incorporates.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—The North Carolina State Corporation Commission has recently granted a charter to the Universal Film Exchange, Inc., of Charlotte. The incorporators are J. J. Lanie, Paul Dubois and E. F. Dardine. Mr. Dardine is the manager of the business which is quite an extensive one.

New Theaters Hereabouts.

Wilmington, N. C.—The Auditorium at Wrightsville Beach is being enlarged preparatory to the opening of the season.

Raleigh, N. C.—The Strand theater here is practically ready for opening. The formal opening will take place upon the completion of some of the decorations and the installation of the seats. This will take place some time during the month of June.

Goldsboro, N. C.—The Acme theater will not be completed for some little time and it may be that the formal opening will be postponed until after the summer months, probably until the middle of September or first of October.

IN THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Uncle Sam Will Recruit with Films.

Washington, D. C.—The preparedness campaign is to invade the motion picture field, for Uncle Sam is to utilize the theaters in the effort to secure the additional soldiers required to recruit the army to its new strength of 175,000 or more men. To accomplish this the War Department is planning to have pictures made showing every side of army life. The cameramen are to start with the recruiting stations and then in following the work along, take up the drill work. There will be many feet of film showing the athletics in which the soldiers engage when off duty and the other fun and amusement provided for them. It is said that these pictures will be "unvarnished," showing army life as it actually is minus the gold braid. Prospective recruits will be shown the discipline that exists in the army. It is believed that the films will have a real effect upon the youth of the country and greatly increase enlistments.

Summer Films at the Gaiety.

Washington, D. C.—The Gaiety theater, on Ninth street, Northwest, between E and F streets, has recently closed its regular burlesque season and has been given over to the exhibition of motion pictures during the summer months. A new policy thus prevails and particular attention is to be given to women and children. A ladies' rest room under the supervision and care of a woman attendant has been provided. Smoking, permitted during the regular season, is now prohibited. Bluebird and Red Feather first-run features have been booked for this house.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.

S. Robbins Opens Georgia Theater.

Washington, D. C.—S. Robbins has recently reopened the Georgia theater, on Georgia avenue, Northwest, as well as Schuetzen park, an airdome.

The Elite Theater Reopened.

Washington, D. C.—A firm trading under the name of Keane & Britt have reopened the Elite theater at Fourteenth street and Rhode Island avenue, Northwest, running an all feature program. They are said to be doing a nice comfortable business. This theater has been closed for some time.

School Benefit at the Princess and Apollo.

Washington, D. C.—Playground finances were given a considerable boost when Joseph P. Morgan, manager of the Princess theater, at Twelfth and H streets, Northeast, turned over that house to the teachers and pupils of the Henry T. Blow school for a benefit performance. A similar performance was also given at the Apollo theater at 624 H street, Northeast, through the courtesy of Harry M. Crandall, for the benefit of the schools of the sixth division. At each of these houses the program included the film subject, "Hiawatha," loans for the occasion by E. T. Crall, of the Imperial theater, Newport News, Va., its owner, through Frank B. Spurrier, manager of the V-L-S-E exchange here. These four film men did everything possible to make the affair a success and it is said that the box office receipts were very satisfactory and sufficient to go a long way toward equipping the playgrounds for the summer.

Leo Yates' Fine Office

Washington Film Exchange Has Now Moved Into Its New Quarters and Manager Yates Is Delighted With Them—Some of the Interesting Details—Announces a New and Better Service After June 15.

By Clarence L. Linz, 635 Tenth St. N. E., Washington, D. C. Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—J. Leo Yates is the happiest film man in Washington now for several reasons. First he is nearing the end of his labors incident to the moving of the Washington Film Exchange from 419 to 307 Ninth street, Northwest, and in getting the new quarters in shape, and second, he has an exchange that is far superior to the old one in every respect.

When visited by the correspondent of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD the rooms were in the possession of decorators for they are to be repapered, the partitions are to be refinished, and the ceiling is to be repainted. A new system of lighting is also being installed and when all of this work is completed Mr. Yates will have a very fine place in which to do business.

A considerable amount of space at the front has been partitioned off for office purposes. This space is in turn divided so as to allow of the use of one part thereof as the private office of Manager Yates, while the other section is occupied by the cashier's and bookkeeping departments. Beyond this is another space shut off by partitions which is to be utilized as a reception room. Here is to be installed a magazine table, and it is safe to bet that the MOVING PICTURE WORLD will always have a prominent place among the magazines that will there be made available for the exhibitors who visit the office. Comfortable chairs and photographs of the famous actors and actresses will complete the equipment of this room.

Another room similar to the reception room is to be occupied by the booker, and at one corner of this section will be a place for the handling of incoming and outgoing films. The rest of the space is being devoted to the storage of films and paper, for the shipping room, and at the rear is a space fitted out for rewinding and examining the reels handled in the exchange.

The entire upper floor of the building is to be used by the poster mounting department and for the storage of paper for Bluebird and Red Feather features.

There is still a lot of work to be done before the exchange will be put into the shape contemplated by Manager Yates, but when the last brushful of paint is deposited on the ceiling and partitions, he will have as fine an exchange as is to be found in Washington. "I am very well pleased with my new quarters," said Mr. Yates. "We are going to find them a whole lot cooler this summer, the rooms are better situated and we are going to find it much easier to serve our customers. The various departments are so separated as to avoid confusion. At the old place there was little or no privacy for the offices and we were often interrupted while conversing with customers by having an expressman or some other person wander into the office and perhaps dump a load of films into one corner of the room. We are also better located for the Ninth street cars stop almost in front of the building and a few steps away are the Pennsylvania avenue cars. This exchange can now be easily reached from any section of the city."

Mr. Yates is also announcing that beginning with June 15, he will be able to offer a new four-reel lock box service. Up to the present time he has only been having eighteen reels a week, interchanging reels with the Philadelphia office of the Interstate Film Company. The two offices have been completely separated and Washington will hereafter buy four reels daily besides the Red Feather productions. One particular advantage of this to the exhibitor is that all of the reels he will get under the new service will be of the same age, and those who show Universal will not have to go elsewhere to secure a fourth reel.

V. D. Shreve Buys Revere Theater.

Washington, D. C.—V. D. Shreve has recently taken over the ownership of the Revere theater, on Georgia avenue, Northwest, and this house will hereafter be managed by W. O. Wren, at one time manager of the Strand, one of the string of motion picture houses operated by Tom Moore. The Revere was formerly operated by Mrs. Hawkins, who has since retired from the motion picture business in this city.

New National Film Company.

Washington, D. C.—The National Film Company has been incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia, with a capital stock divided into 200 shares of a par value of $50 each, "to manufacture, photograph and print moving picture films, and to sell said films or other accessories pertaining to the film trade." The trustees who are to manage the business for the first year are Isaac B. Nordlinger, Benjamin A. Bowles and George R. Macomber. They are to engage in business at 2133 Pennsylvania avenue, Northwest.

The National Film Company will produce, among other things, catchy advertising films. Prior to incorporation it engaged in this same line with good results.

Universal Opens Clarksburg Office.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—The Interstate Film Company, which markets the Universal program in this territory, is to open a branch office in Clarksburg, W. Va. The Bluebird and Red Feather features will be served from the Washington office as heretofore. Surplus films and paper are being shipped from Washington to form a nucleus of the stock to be kept on hand for the service in West Virginia. The office is to be opened on or about June 15. M. H. Seigel has just left Washington for the West Virginia territory, intending to travel through the state for several weeks with the features of the Bluebird and Red Feather brands. Mr. Seigel expects hereafter to spend one-half his time in West Virginia and the balance in the state of Maryland.

April's War Tax from Theaters.

Washington, D. C.—Motion picture exhibitors and others engaged in the show business will be relieved of a great burden when Congress repeals the so-called war emergency revenue law which assesses extra taxes upon all theaters according to seating capacity, and it is said upon pretty good authority that this course will be taken to become effective the first of July.

The latest figures available at the Office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue are for the month of April. These show that during that thirty-day period there was paid into Uncle Sam's Coffers the sum of $22,104.92 as against $21,972.70 in April, 1915. For the ten months ending April, 1916, the figures are $819,033.17, as against $595,729.99 for the ten months ending with April, 1915.

Olean's Clean Theater

Exhibitor Barnes of Olean, N. Y., Offers His Patrons $10 If They Can Find a Particle of Dirt on Any of His Seats When He Opens—Interesting Notes About Theaters and Exchanges in Buffalo—Screen Club's Outings.

By Joseph McGuire, 611 Erie County Bank Bldg., Buffalo,, Special Correspondent.

OLEAN, N. Y.—"An all-feature programme is the attraction at my theater," said J. W. Barnes, proprietor of the Grand, Olean, N. Y., who was a recent visitor in Buffalo. "Cleanliness is a rule always enforced at the Grand. If a person rubs a silk handkerchief over any seat in the house and picks up a particle of dirt I will give him $10. The walls were painted at a cost of $1,000 and the curtain came from the Burnham studios. My house has always passed the state fire inspection with flying colors. I use a new 6-A Powers machine. We lay particular stress on good order, and in eight years I have never had to eject a patron. My audiences co-operate with me in keeping up the high standard of the Grand, and after a show even the floors are in a clean condition. To avoid all delays and disappointments I always have my shows booked two months in advance. To accomplish this I make frequent visits to the film exchanges in my territory, and for new ideas keep close tabs on the moving picture business in New York and other cities."

J. R. Levy New World Film Manager.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The newly-appointed manager of the World Film Buffalo branch says: "We shall use every means to co-operate with the exhibitors and give them superior service."

J. R. Levy.

"No matter what the exhibitors' wants may be, we shall make every effort to please. We are featuring the Brady-made pictures, which we believe are second to none in the field."

Mr. Levy has joined the Buffalo Screen Club. He was visited by H. S. Drum, assistant general manager of the World Film.

"In a number of cities, from New York to Minneapolis and Dallas, which I recently visited," said Mr. Drum, "I found many evidences of prosperity, and the exhibitors generally were in an optimistic mood. We are catering both to the masses as well as the classes in the production of our pictures, and, with this popular appeal, their hold on the public everywhere throughout the country is assured."

Prosperity in Port Allegany, Pa.

Port Allegany, Pa.—A. Berg, of Berg & Ristine, proprietors of the Grand and Star theaters, Port Allegany, Pa., was a recent visitor in Buffalo.

A. Berg.

"Moving picture fans in the smaller towns, like ours, are as discriminating as those of the big cities," said Mr. Berg, "and I am always on the lookout for up-to-date films and advertising features when I visit Buffalo. The moving picture business in Port Allegany is now on the top wave, because the glass factories, one of our principal industries, are booming, and there is plenty of money in circulation. My firm, with several merchants of the town, has given an appropriation for an old-home week celebration the week of July 3d. This will draw a big crowd to the town, and we hope to get a share of the benefits at our theaters."

Exhibitor Cordingly Sick.

Oswego, N. Y.—Jerome Wilson, road representative of the Mutual Film, Buffalo, brings word that Manager Cordingly of the Gem theater, Oswego, N. Y., is still suffering from a serious illness.

The Hiltonia to Be Enlarged.

Hilton, N. Y.—E. C. Weeks, proprietor of the Hiltonia moving picture theater of Hilton, N. Y., has increased the size of his house, so it now seats 700 persons. Mr. Weeks is noted for using an aggressive policy in pleasing his patrons.

Screen Club Outings This Summer.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The discussion of plans for a series of summer outings was a feature of the last meeting of the Buffalo Screen Club. Suggestions on this line were made by Manager Mack of the General, and if the plans go through, Buffalo exchange men, exhibitors and their wives will have enjoyable trips to Niagara river resorts. The members may also motor to the Buffalo Automobile Club's country headquarters at Clarence.

Items from Buffalo.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Lionel Edel, brother of Harold Edel, manager of the Strand theater, Buffalo, has been appointed assistant manager of the Strand theater, Syracuse. He succeeds Archie Moses, who has taken a similar position with the Eckel theater, Syracuse.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Ben Abrams was a Buffalo caller. He was handling the Universal feature, Madame Pavlowa in "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

Buffalo, N. Y.—J. Feinen, formerly of the Elite theater, Buffalo, has taken over the Marlowe theater, this city. F. E. Grubb is now in charge of the Elite theater.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Rialto theater, Buffalo, owned by the Rosedale Amusement Co., has been closed.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Harold B. Franklin, manager of the Lyric theater, Buffalo, announces a new summer schedule for performances at his house. The matinee performances will remain as in the past, but on account of the lengthy day the evening shows will commence a half hour later than heretofore.

Geneseo, N. Y.—G. A. Hallstead of the Rex theater, Geneseo, N. Y.; C. H. Landers of the Fredonia opera house, Fredonia, N. Y., and F. C. Fisher of the Fisher theater, Seneca Falls, N. Y., have taken on the Paramount service.

BALTIMORE NEWS LETTER.

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Ter., Baltimore, Special Representative.

E. G. Evans Heads Mutual Exchange.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Edwin G. Evans, who for the past three years has been employed in the Washington branch of the Mutual Film, has been made manager of the branch Mutual exchange in this city. He succeeds J. T. Cunningham, who has resigned. A. Ramer, formerly of New York, has also become associated with the Mutual office here. Mr. Evans is well acquainted in Baltimore, having handled the Mutual master pictures and serials for the past nine months in this territory. He states that he will endeavor to give the exhibitors the same courteous treatment to which they have been accustomed. He is now making headway with the new booking arrangements introduced by the Mutual, whereby exhibitors can book a series of pictures featuring one star, to receive one a month.

First Milo Release Shown.

Baltimore, Md.—The first release of the Milo Film Corporation of Baltimore, entitled "The Charity Ball Game," was given a premier showing at the New theater, 210 West Lexington street, on May 30th. L. A. DeHoff, the manager, states that he will use it as part of his program for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 5th to 7th. Several prominent merchants of Baltimore were present at the exhibition, which was held at 11:45 A. M. Among them were A. S. Weinburg and Jacob Epstein, of the Baltimore Bargain House. The proceeds gained through the rental of the film will go for the benefit of the Hospital School for Crippled Children. Part of this picture was made at the Oriole Park ball grounds on May 20th. A. Kurnick was the photographer.

Grand Attired for Eagles.

Baltimore, Md.—Charles E. Anderson, manager of the Grand theater, 511-17 South 3rd street, Highlandtown, Baltimore, has just had elaborate decorations of bunting, pennants, flags and shields placed on the exterior and interior of his large theater. The house has taken on quite a gala array and has been done in honor of the Eagles' convention, which is to be held here on June 4th to 10th.

J. A. Barry With Milo.

Baltimore, Md.—J. A. Barry, formerly associated with the forces of the Fine Arts Film Co., Los Angeles, Cal., as assistant director, is now with the Milo Corporation, this city, and will shortly begin active operations for them.

E. Powell Leaves the New Pickwick.

Baltimore, Md.—Edwin Powell, who for several years has managed the New Pickwick theater, 115 North Howard street, gave up this position on June 3d and has left for New York, where he will become associated with the firm of William H. Nye, a building contractor. G. Horton Gaffney, who recently purchased this theater, will now manage it himself.

Pavlowa Playing Record Houses.

Baltimore, Md.—Through the hard work of J. Blechman, manager of the Picture Garden theater, "The Dumb Girl of Portici," in which Anna Pavlowa is being featured, is now playing to record houses at this theater. It was stated that the picture would be held for two weeks, to be followed by "Where Are My Children?" with a three weeks' run at this house.

Children's Programs at the Parkway.

The Parkway theater, Baltimore, of which Bernard Dephin, Jr., is manager, has been conducting the Special Children's performances for about a year and they have proven to be a great success both from a financial standpoint and as an advertising medium. Following is a list of some of the attractions he has played:

Mary Pickford in Cinderella—Famous Players.
Alice in Wonderland—Nonpareil.
Little Mary Sunshine.
Good Little Devil—Famous Players.
The Wishing Ring—World Film Corp.
The Little Dutch Girl—Biograph.
Rip Van Winkle—Republic.
The Foundling—Famous Players.
Wild Flower—Famous Players.
The Patch Work Girl of Oz—Oz Film Co.
The Magic Toy Maker—Oz Film Co.

Molly Make Believe—Famous Players.
Uncle Tom's Cabin.—Kalem.
Loyalty.
The Girl of Yesterday.

The Golden Locks.
The Camp Fire Girls.

This list doubtless will be of interest to our readers, as almost every week a request comes from some exhibitor regarding children's programs.

Show Mashers Punished.

Baltimore, Md.—On Tuesday, May 23d, Justice Gerecht of the Eastern Police Station sentenced a man to two months in the House of Correction for hugging a seven-year-old girl in a moving picture show on South Broadway. The child was accompanied by her two sisters and they had the man arrested.

In the Western Police Station a man was fined $11.45 on a charge of assault preferred against him by a woman who stated that as she was standing near him in a crowded moving picture theater on Lexington street on Saturday night, May 20th, he tried to catch hold of her hand The man claimed it was an accident.

New Owners for Dream.

Baltimore, Md.—The Dream theater, 582-4 North Gay street, which was formerly owned by Louis Katzner, has been sold by him to the Jorio Brothers. This theater will now be under the management of Herbert C. Jorio, who states that he intends to show only the highest grade pictures.

Ford's Treasurer Back.

Baltimore, Md.—This has nothing to do with the famous automobile man, but with Thomas Gavan, treasurer of Ford's opera house, who has now completely recovered from an operation for appendicitis. His many friends are calling at the opera house to give him the glad hand on his recovery.

Broadway Theater Rebuilt.

Baltimore, Md.—The Broadway theater, 509 South Broadway, opened its doors to the public on Monday, May 22d, finely arrayed, after the extensive remodeling which it has been given by the management. Fire destroyed this theater in the first part of February and it has now been entirely rebuilt. New Edison No. 7 hand driven projection machines and a new plaster screen have been installed. The house is now under the management of J. Louis Rome, assisted by I. R. Martin, who, it is understood, will succeed Mr. Rome as manager in a short time. Before the theater was destroyed by fire Mr. Martin was the manager.

Property to Bushman.

Baltimore, Md.—On Wednesday, May 17th, conveyance was made by Maude B. Blakiston to Francis X. Bushman of the 110-acre Blakiston estate, known as Thornton Farm, near Riderwood, in the Green Spring Valley. The title was guaranteed by the Title Guarantee and Trust Company. F. N. Iglehart & Co. were the brokers through whom the deal was consummated.

Detroit's New Ordinance

McCabe Measure, Now Before City's Common Council, Makes Stringent Regulations Governing the Storage of Cellulose Film—May Put Some Exchanges to Great Inconvenience—Ordinance Committee to Hold Public Hearing.

By Jacob Smith, 503 Free Press Bldg., Detroit, Special Correspondent.

DETROIT, MICH.—The film industry of Detroit has been greatly upset for the past week over an ordinance governing the storage of celulose film and introduced into the common council on Tuesday, May 24. It has been referred to the ordinance committee, although there is every likelihood that it will pass, especially in view of the disastrous fire of one of the local film exchanges a few weeks ago.

The ordinance in question is one of the most important and is one of the most rigid ever introduced in the common council. The ordinance is too long to be printed here. It has been published in Detroit and should be carefully read. Should it pass it will mean that quite a number of the film exchanges will have to vacate their premises now occupied, as it would be impossible to make them come up to the requirements of the ordinance. The ordinance was drafted by John C. McCabe, city boiler inspector, with the assistance of the building inspector and the corporation counsel.

The ordinance committee has agreed to grant a hearing to the managers of the local exchanges in connection with the proposed new ordinance regulating exchange buildings. There are some parts of the ordinance which are favored by the exchangemen and other parts to which they are strenuously opposed to. They will have full opportunity to express themselves before the ordinance committee at an early date.

New Big U. Exchange.

Detroit, Mich.—The Universal Film Co. and the Bluebird exchanges are busv this week moving from their temporary quarters at 183 Jefferson avenue, to the building at the southeast corner of Cass and Fort streets. This building is of solid brick, two stories high and is fireproof in every respect. A special steel film vault is being built in the rear. When all completed the new quarters of these film companies will certainly rank with the best in the country. The building is centrally located, only four blocks from the heart of the city, one block from the post office and a stone's throw from the Detroit News and the Detroit Journal. For the present only the first floor and basement will be occupied, but ultimately the entire second floor will be added, so that the Universal and Bluebird will consume the entire building.

When seen by the World representative, George W. Weeks, general manager, stated: "The fire inconvenienced us very slightly because the New York office was exceedingly prompt in sending on new film and additional paper. But we want to say a word about our customers; they are a loyal bunch—they stood by us realizing our predicament—and not a single one became impatient. They co-operated with us in every way they could, and I can't speak too high of this fine spirit of loyalty. In our new quarters we will be in a better position than ever before to give our customers good service." Just as soon as the new building is in readiness Manager Weeks will hold an informal opening for exhibitors in Detroit and Michigan.

E. O. Gurney, general auditor of exchanges for the Universal Film Co., has been spending several weeks in Detroit.

Bert M. Graham, special representative in Michigan for the Universal, was married on May 29th to Miss Margaret Hough. Congratulations, Bert. This should be an incentive to work harder than ever.

Robert S. Bendell, manager of the Bluebird features for Michigan, reports: "We haven't a single complaint to make. Business is getting better all the time and we are taking on new accounts every day. J. L. McCurdy now looks after the road work in Michigan for Bluebird productions, while Ira H. Cohen looks after Ohio.

Notes of Kunsky Theaters.

Detroit, Mich.—The Alhambra theater, Woodward and Kenilworth avenues, Detroit, has returned to the daily change policy for the summer months. The same statement applies to the Strand theater, Grand River and Fourteenth streets, both houses being owned by John H. Kunsky. At the Alhambra boxes are being installed in the rear of the main floor auditorium.

Mr. Kunsky has abandoned the idea of charging 50 cents per year for the Weekly Film News, his weekly house organ, and will send it out free each week to those who request that their name be placed on the mailing list. The Weekly Film News unquestionably is the finest house organ of its kind published in the United States by any exhibitor. It is more than a house organ—it is a film news magazine.

Jack Mowitt Managing the Knickerbocker.

Detroit, Mich.—Jack Mowitt, former manager of the Empire theater, has been appointed manager of the Knickerbocker theater, Jefferson and the Belle Isle bridge.

Detroit Notes of Interest.

The Avenue theater, Woodward and Jefferson avenues, will remain closed until sometime in August, when it will reopen as a stock musical comedy theater.

John E. Ryder, who for several months has been doing special work for the Essanay serial, "The Strange Case of Mary Page," is now representing the latest Essanay release, "The Little Girl Next Door." This film started an indefinite run at the Grand Circus theater, 301 Woodward avenue, Detroit, on May 25 and has been showing daily gains in business. All seats are 25 cents and the film is shown continuously from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m. Mr. Ryder makes his headquarters at the General Film Co. office, 100 Griswold street.

The oldest moving picture theater in Detroit still in operation is the Princess on Woodward avenue, between Congress and Larned streets, managed by Louis A. Chapoton. The interesting point about this theater is that it was originally started by Mitch Marks, now the owner of the Strand theater in New York and a chain of houses in Buffalo and other cities. In a later issue we will have something more to say about the Princess.

Detroit, Mich.—The Kercheval theater at 456 Kercheval avenue, has been leased for commercial purposes. The building will be remodelled into stores.

Jackson, Mich.—Arthur A. Frudenfeld has been appointed manager of the Orpheum theater, Jackson, succeeding Frank R. Lampman, who has engaged in another line of business. Mr. Frudenfeld comes from Waterloo, Ia., where he was manager of the Majestic. He previously managed theaters in Springfield, Ill., and Davenport, Ia. He has also been in the newspaper business.

John H. Kunsky and George Trendle, of Detroit, have already made reservations for the thirteenth annual cruise of the Detroit Board of Commerce.

Hit at Sunday Baseball

Nashville, Tennessee, Authorities Are Proposing to Have Sabbath Games of Baseball Declared Nuisances Like Picture Shows—Exhibitors Are Hoping That They Will Soon Get Voters Tired of Blue Laws.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., 1404 Starke Bldg., Louisville, Special Correspondent.

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Taking the recent State Supreme Court decision on moving pictures as a basis, the local authorities are endeavoring to so apply the law as to stop Sunday baseball in Nashville. Sunday moving picture shows were declared a nuisance under the old blue laws, and finally closed up. While there is no state law apparently relative to stopping ball games on Sunday, it is figured that it would be comparatively easy to declare baseball games nuisances if picture shows could so be designated. In some states the courts have held that while the common law principles were applicable to picture shows and theatrical productions they were not applicable to baseball. City Attorney Albert G. Ewing, Jr., Attorney James A. Watts and Attorney John R. Aust are about to bring the question to an issue. Watts is backed by the ministerial association and contends that ball playing is illegal, while Aust supports a contrary contention and represents the baseball association.

Moving picture men are of the opinion that the Sunday closing agitation is being carried too far by the ministers' contingent, and that the citizens of the state will shortly become so tired of being tied down by a lot of ancient laws that they will take the trouble to support bills at the next session of the legislature which will permit the theaters, picture houses, ball parks, etc., to run without a miserable war being waged at all times.

Sunday Exhibitors Fined.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—At a recent session of the criminal court judgment was passed on the cases of four moving picture exhibitors, namely, C. T. Bobo, H. M. Lusk, M. H. Silverman and Peter Block, who were indicted along with Howell Graham several months ago, for operating picture theaters on Sunday, and before the decision of the state supreme court. The men were all indicted, charged with "conducting a nuisance." Each was fined $5 and costs by Judge McReynolds. When the indictments were returned it was agreed that Howell Graham should test the constitutionality of the act upon which the charges were based, and the other defendants should abide by the decision in that case. The state supreme court affirmed Judge McReynolds' decission, but went much further than he did in its findings.

Free Picture Shows in City Parks.

Nashville, Tenn.—Subject to such regulations as the Board of Park Commissioners shall deem proper to prescribe, free motion picture exhibitions will be given at the city parks this summer. Secretary John Lewis has been authorized to close a contract with the Crescent Amusement Co., and has been instructed to endeavor to secure the presentation of pictures having an educational value along with comedy and other subjects. The performances really cost the city nothing as they are presented under a contract with the Crescent Amusement Co., whereby it is agreed that the company be permitted to devote one-third of its time to showing advertising matter at the performances.

Arthur Lane's Line of Autos.

Memphis, Tenn.—Arthur Lane, the new manager of the Strand theater in Bellevue, which is operated in connection with a summer garden, is making things hum in his latest venture. Mr. Lane is manager of the Orpheum theater, a legitimate house, during the winter months, and his opening at the Strand compared favorably with former Orpheum openings. There was a big line of autos extending the full block for the opening of the picture theater. The success of the opening was largely due to excellent newspaper and other publicity.

Publicity in Ad Puzzle.

Nashville, Tenn.—The Princess theater recently conducted a special little puzzle contest for the ladies through the columns of the "Tennessean." Each day except Saturday an ad was inserted in the papers in which one line was missing. This line was to be found in other columns of the paper. Every lady finding the missing line and placing it in its correct position was admitted free of charge upon presentation of the advertisement.

LOUISVILLE SMALLER HOUSES PLAYING SHORT SUBJECTS.

Managers Find That Transient Patronage Doesn't Want Features.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., 1404 Starks Bldg., Louisville, Ky., Special Correspondent.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—According to several Louisville managers, especially those operating at five cents, and playing to a transit patronage, long photoplays are not producing much money for such theaters, and most of the small downtown houses are going back to single and double reel productions. Good comedy, drama and melodrama are all good in short subjects, but the average person dropping into the five-cent house is endeavoring merely to kill a few idle minutes, and hasn't the time nor inclination to watch a long photoplay. For instance, in the middle of the day many people drop in to spend a part of the noon hour, but haven't time to stay an hour or an hour and a half to see a five-reel subject run off. Even two and three-reel subjects have been found a little longer than the popular demand, it is claimed, and the little houses are leaving the long photoplays to the big theaters catering to the higher class business. Judge W. A. Kinney of the Princess Amusement Company recently adopted a new program of short stuff which is coming back strong.

Screen Club Progress Slow.

Louisville, Ky.—Plans of local exhibitors to organize a local screen club, composed of exhibitors, film men, newspaper publicity agents, etc., are working out very slowly, and so far there has been no definite action taken in the matter. Louisville is badly in need of such an organization and it is hoped that the organizers will be successful in getting the plan over.

Another Boat Show.

Dover, Ky.—The Bryant Company, operators of a show boat known as the "Princess," recently purchased an additional barge, 40x140 feet, on which to build a theater seating 800 people. The barge will be equipped with all modern conveniences, electric lights, etc., and will be towed by a small steamer supplied with a calliope.

EXHIBITORS.

A new list of special correspondents is printed on another page. Send items of news interest to the nearest office.

Wants Chairs.

J. Dubinsky & Sons, of Newport, Ky., have asked for the names and addresses of manufacturers of opera chairs and chairs suitable for use in moving picture theaters.

Manager Ward Reopens the Alhambra.

Richmond, Ky.—Miss Anna Belle Ward, manager of the Alhambra theater, of Richmond, Ky., has reopened the house which was closed for several weeks while being enlarged. New chairs have been installed, a balcony built, the building extended back, and the entire theater done over.

E. A. Lawson Takes the Parkland.

Louisville, Ky.—E. A. Lawson has taken over the Parkland theater, which was recently closed by T. H. Johnson. Mr. Lawson has taken on Universal service, and expects to make the little house prove profitable.

Worth Noting in Louisville.

George Strong, who for three years was with the L. H. Howe travel pictures, has taken a position as operater at the Star theater of Louisville.

Virgil Winters, who recently opened the operating booth at the new Arista theater, has resigned to become operator at Keith's house, which is running summer pictures.

Joe Hebert, of the Unicorn Film Co., of Indianapolis, Ind., and S. N. Luhter, of the Union Film Co., of Cleveland, O., were recently in Louisville calling on the exhibitors. Walter Vandewalker, of the General Film Company's Indianapolis office, was also in and made bookings with the Orpheum and Westonian.

Lee Goldberg, manager of the Mary Anderson theater, and temporary manager of the Keith theater, had a visitor last week in the person of J. J. Murdock, a director of the Keith interests. The local Keith house has been showing the "Battle Cry of Peace" to good crowds. The picture was shown last winter at the Mary Anderson.

J. H. Cristy, of Salem, Ind., and J. Wells of the Scenic theater of Scottsville, Ind., were recent visitors at the Louisville Mutual office. Ben Cohen, representing the new Clara Kimball Young Film Co., was also in the city and visited Percy L. Smith, manager of the Mutual office.

Rowland Clark, manager of the Arista theater of Lebanon, Ky., was in Louisville last week, calling on some of the film exchange offices and local exhibitors.

Hellier, Ky.—R. F. McClure and J. M. Pickell are now operating the Rex theater. The firm has moved the theater from the third floor of the Mullins building to the ground floor of the large building formerly occupied by G. W. Barkley & Co.

Extensive improvements have been made to the Jo Jon theater of Leichfield, Ky., which has been done over and equipped with an entirely new front.

T. E. Neer, a special representative of the V-L-S-E Cincinnati, O., office, has been making a trip through Central Kentucky. At Danville, Ky., he closed a contract with Dr. John B. Stout, of the Danville Opera House, for showing a number of high class pictures, such as "The Ne'er Do Well," "Sherlock Holmes," "God's Country," "Woman," etc.

Middleboro, Ky.—The Brown Amusement Co., of Middlesboro, is reported to be making arrangements to build a new three-story brick building in which a moving picture theater will be located.

Maysville, Ky.—The Washington theater of Maysville, has made several minor improvements, including a number of additional electric lights at the front and side entrances.

INDIANA NEWS LETTER.

Special to Moving Picture World from Indiana Trade News Service.

Bonfire Burns Airdome.

WASHINGTON, Ind.—A small boy destroyed the source of one of his chief pleasures here recently when he set fire to the airdome, a motion picture open air theater which had been closed, but which local men were planning to open for the summer run. The small boy started a bonfire near the frame side of the airdome and shortly afterward the theater was a mass of blazing timber. The loss was estimated at $500.

Big Tin Can Day in Spencer.

Spencer, Ind.—"Tin can day" proved a success at Spencer, just as it has proved a success in many of the smaller cities of the state. "Tin Cans for Movie Tickets"—each ten cans entitling the owner to admission to the theater—brought about a "million" cans to the theater front. The cans otherwise were worthless. The city health authorities thanked the Spencer manager for getting rid of the cans—they said they had tried and failed. Indianapolis papers carried some publicity, local papers were full. The plan is a success.

Gayety Airdome Opens.

Lafayette, Ind.—Horton Brothers' Gayety airdome has opened for the summer run after the big downtown open air theater was repainted and redecorated throughout. New machinery was installed as well as a ventilating system that is a novelty in an airdome. The Gayety has always been popular and this season promises to surpass others of preceding years.

Promoting Children's Films in Lebanon.

Lebanon, Ind.—Lebanon has taken up the idea of censored pictures for children and the women of the city who are leaders in social work have banded themselves together to provide this sort of entertainment for the kids. The theater managers of the city, it is understood, will get together with the women and the censored shows will be distributed around among the various theaters.

Nat Wolf Managing Terre Haute House.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Nat Wolf is the new manager of the American. Nat comes to this city from Chicago, where he was connected with the Interstate Amusement company as manager of the Plaza. Nat was formerly associated with the Alfred Hamburger company, owners of a string of fourteen houses. Wolf says there are some things the local theater needs to put it in the Terre Haute class, and he is going to work immediately to provide those things.

CLEVELAND NEWS LETTER.

By Hubert Persons, Special Correspondent, 410 Standard Theater Building.

Local Film by Social Leaders.

CLEVELAND, O.—Society men and women here, under the leadership of Mrs. James R. Garfield, are to appear in a photoplay entitled "The Perils of Society," to be screened at the Metropolitan theater the latter part of June. The proceeds are for the benefit of the French War Orphan Relief Fund. Mrs. Garfield is chairman of the Cleveland committee in charge of the fund and induced other society folk to become film actors for the good of the cause. Miss Katherine Bleecker, of New York, is directing the making of the pictures.

Screening Riley's Poems.

Cleveland, O.—Robert H. McLaughlin, president of the Reserve Photo Play Company, is at work on a scenario dramatizing the poems of James Whitcomb Riley. The dramatic right to one of Riley's best-known works, "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," has been purchased by Mr. McLaughlin from the Bobbs-Merrill Company of Indianapolis.

Mr. McLaughlin's screen and stage version of the poems will contain all the characters so dear to lovers of Riley, such as Little Orphant Annie, the Raggedy Man, Doc Sifers and Squire Perkins.

New Southern Theater Opens.

Cleveland, O.—Mayor Davis and Councilman Zmunt delivered addresses at the ceremonies marking the opening of the new Southern theater, W. 25th street and Prame avenue. The new house seats 1,000 and is one of the prettiest picture theaters in the city. G. T. Sharp and wife will manage it. The house will make a special effort to present only programs with big features.

Three Picture Hits.

Cleveland, O.—Four downtown theaters deemed the photoplays they had booked last week as strong enough to run the entire week without a change. "The Girl with the Green Eyes" was at the Opera House; "The Battle of Hearts," at the Standard; "The Law Decides," at the Alhambra, and "Race Suicide," at the Orpheum. All four productions drew crowds.

Filmed the Kiddies Who Come.

Cleveland, O.—The Alhambra theater instituted a pleasing novelty at its children's matinee this week, when every child attending was given an opportunity to get in a real motion picture. The pictures were taken in front of the theater and will be shown in the house in a few days.

The Monarch and the Wind-a-Meer theaters have also adopted the policy of giving special matinees for children.

Arrested for Banned Film

In Cincinnati, Exchange Manager, Newly in Charge of Local Office, Gets a Suspended Fine on Account of Film in Circulation Before He Came to the Exchange—Need of Some Better Way to Identify Censored Film.

By Kenneth C. Crain, 610 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Cincinnati, Special Correspondent.

CINCINNATI, O.—H. M. Berman, formerly of Kansas City, but for the past three weeks manager of the Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co., ran into an unexpected and exceptionally hard jolt very shortly after he took charge of things in the Queen City, in the shape of the vigilance of the local self-appointed censors who have been making the fur fly so busily of late. A certain film, "Dad's Doings and Dirty Dollars," came under the ban of the Ohio Board of Censors, but had none the less come into the possession of the Buckeye Company before Mr. Berman's arrival, and apparently had been making the rounds of some of the smaller theaters, until the censors here viewed it and investigated.

The result was that during its exhibition at Othello Dempsey's Pekin theater it was seized and Mr. Berman, who was perfectly innocent of any knowledge of the circumstances, was arrested, charged with violating the censorship statute. He explained his position in court, and in view of the facts the heavy fine of $300 and costs, which was imposed, was suspended, with a warning that any similar violation would mean that the fine would be collected. Mr. Dempsey was held blameless, and was not arrested. Mr. Berman, who was with the Metro organization in Kansas City, and is familiar with the operations of a local censor, says he appreciated the cordial welcome extended him in Cincinnati, and intends to use every effort to fight shy of trouble hereafter.

Need Better Identification of Censored Film.

As a result of the several clashes between film exchange men. exhibitors and censors, local and state, in Cincinnati, it is more than possible that some plan will be evolved, with the approval of the authorities at Columbus, looking to the more efficient operation of the censorship laws, for the elimination of objectionable films and the protection of the exhibitor against the trouble which results from showing films which he has no way of knowing have been turned down. At present the stamp of the board on the film is all that the exhibitor has to go by in determining whether everything is all right, and this, as in the recent case of Manager Libson, handling four of the largest theaters in the city, is not always conclusive nor a suffcient protection against the annoyance and humiliation of arrest. There is a Cincinnati office of the State Industrial Commission, in charge of a deputy, with a force of fourteen men, who have been acting as film inspectors, in addition to their other duties, but this force has no apparent authority to enforce the mandates of the State Board of Censors, even if it had exact knowledge of its orders.

Religious Films at the Bijou.

Piqua, O.—Under special arrangements with the management of the Bijou, at Piqua, O., the house is being used on Sundays, both afternoon and evening, by the local representatives of the International Bible Students' Association for the exhibitions of religious films. The first of a series, "The Creation of the Universe," was shown recently to large houses, the attendance being the larger by reason of the fact that no admission is charged.

Will Remodel the Columbia.

Portsmouth, O.—Manager Fred N. Tynes of the Columbia theater, Portsmouth, O., has let a contract for the remodeling of his house, with provision for additional space, which will enable him to increase its seating capacity to about 800, making it one of the largest houses in that part of Ohio. Work has already begun, and will be pushed so as to be completed before the end of the summer, and in ample time for the beginning of the fall season.

Cincinnati, O.—Manager Holah of the V-L-S-E local office announces that the forthcoming releases look quite as good as anything yet seen on the program. William Gillette's performance of his famous stage success, "Sherlock Holmes," is one of the new group, while Edna May in "Salvation Joan," Kathlyn Williams in "The Crisis," and others are receiving heavy bookings.

McMahan & Jackson, controlling some fine features on a State rights basis, received an inquiry recently which indicates the extensive popularity of moving pictures, and also the extent to which THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD is read. The letter came from J. P. Caswell, of Long City, Alaska, where he has a picture theater, and indicated a desire for film service. Mr. Caswell had heard of the Cincinnati firm through another exhibitor, who was a regular reader of the WORLD, it appears, and therefore applied for service and information.

Strike of Expressmen in Chicago Brings Business to Peoria—American Express Company Has Been Shipping Films There to Be Transshipped to Other Points —Film Men on the Job There and Find It Convenient.

By Frank H. Madison, 6749 Emerald Ave., Chicago, Special Correspondent.

PEORIA, Ill.—Peoria has become a film center because of the strike of expressmen in Chicago. Unable to get films in and out of Chicago by the usual methods, the American Express Company has been shipping stuff to Peoria in carload lots by freight and transferring it to other points from here.

The location is a good one for motion picture men supplying the Illinois field and several of the exchanges have men on the ground looking after the shipments. The Famous Players' Film service opened headquarters in the Federal warehouse. The Adams Express Company is partially solving the problem by making Galesburg a more important transfer point. Many means are used by Illinois exhibitors to secure films from the Chicago exchange during the express strike in the windy city. Bert Lindsay, one of the managers of the Star at DeKalb, drives to Chicago in his auto. Manager Harry E. Graupp of the Orpheum at Rockford is doing the same thing. When possible a week's supply of films is being secured. Manager Joseph Hogan of the Dreamland at Seneca missed a feature and had to go to Morris and Marseilles to borrow enough for his show. In Morris the proprietors of the Empire and the Royal take turn about in going to Chicago to get the show.

Local Comedy Paid Well.

Springfield, Ill.—"Us Three," a local comedy with a "Fatty" comedian, produced by the Illinois Film Company of this city, did so well at the Grand theater that the company is planning to produce a comedy a week. The Grand will have the first showings.

Manager Day to Give Special Childrens Shows.

Omaha Expects Fine Exchange Building

Jake Schlank, Proprietor of the Hipp Theater, Plans to Build a Fireproof Building for Local Distributors.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

OMAHA, NEB.—Omaha may have its film business concentrated. Jake Schlank, proprietor of the Hipp theater, proposes to erect on Douglas street between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets a four or five-story fireproof building especially designed for film exchanges and the other offices allied with the motion picture industry. The site will be used for a photoplay theater, but if enough of the film folk take to the idea the plans will be broadened. Lower insurance rates are likely in the proposed building. There are ten exchanges in Omaha.

Referendum on Sabbath Shows in Seward.

Seward, Neb.—The initiative and referendum law has been invoked to see whether Seward people want Sunday picture shows. The council passed an ordinance closing the houses on the Sabbath. Petitions resulted in the calling of a special election for June 27 to decide the issue.

ST. LOUIS NEWS LETTER.

By A. H. Giebler, 236 Vanol Building, St. Louis, Mo., Special Correspondent.

California Airdome Opens.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The California airdome, Sidney and California avenues, opened on May 28 with a program composed of picture features and serials, and occasional vaudeville. The California is a very beautiful garden, with ample space, many seats and a spraying fountain near the entrance. On rainy or cold nights the program will be moved to the Gravois theater, at Gravois and Jefferson avenues, some three blocks away.

S. J. Baker Wins Prize.

St. Louis, Mo.—S. J. Baker, manager of Bluebird offices in St. Louis, is registering big with Bluebirds. He has been awarded the monthly prize of $100 for making the best proportionate increase for his territory. Baker is a manager of the live wire variety, and he and his two trusty traveling representatives, Levy and Shurman, loaded their guns for Bluebird contracts along about the first of April and said that they were going out for the prize, and they bagged it—just like that. Baker says, "It wasn't the easiest thing in the world, because there is some competition in St. Louis territory, but if you go after the business right and have the right kind of stuff to offer to exhibitors it can be done"—and he done it.

S. J. Baker.

Maryland Airdome Running.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Maryland airdome, 1900 South 13th street, opened also on May 28, with an all-picture program. The airdome is run in connection with the theater of the same name, a block and a half away, and the program can easily be moved to the house in case of cold or rainy evenings.

W. D. Beckley Managing the Iola.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Iola theater and airdome, which has been closed for a few weeks, has reopened at California and Lafayette avenues, under a new management on June 1. W. D. Beckley is the new manager, and will show an all-picture program for five and ten cents admission.

Short Film Runs Solid Week.

St. Louis, Mo.—Manager H. P. Wolfberg, of the General Film exchange, 3610 Olive street, says his office has broken all records for long bookings on short films with Chaplin in "Police." The comedy ran for a week solid at the New Grand Central theater, the Royal and the Lyric skydome, on the first week of its release.

World Film Shows Film on Tuesdays.

St. Louis, Mo.—George W. Fuller, manager of the World Film offices in Film Row, has established Tuesday as regular World feature projection day at William Sievers' New Grand Central theater, Grand and Lucas avenues. The current Bradymade picture for each week will run free for the benefit of exhibitors at noon of every Tuesday.

New Pathe Serial.

H. W. Francis, publicity agent of the Pathe Exchanges, Inc., was in St. Louis recently arranging for the publishing of the new serial "The Grip of Evil," which succeeds "The Iron Claw." C. S. Edwards, of the local Pathe Exchange, reports that "The Iron Claw" is being shown in eighty-four theaters in St. Louis and East St. Louis, a record that has not been surpassed by any serial in this territory.

Sam Shurman Goes to Memphis.

Sam Shurman, well known in moving picture circles in St. Louis, has been appointed manager of the Unicorn Film Service exchange at Memphis, Tenn. Mr. Shurman has had much experience in the film business in almost every branch of the art as exchange manager, salesman and exhibitor. He departed for Memphis on May 30, after making the rounds of Film Row, where he received many good wishes for his future success in his new office.

MICHIGAN NEWS LETTER.

Renew Licenses by June 11.

LANSING, MICH.—Michigan theaters which failed to renew their licenses by June 11 would be closed and the wires leading thereto cut by order of the state fire marshal, it was announced. The middle of May there were 100 delinquents in the state.

Michigan Theater Changes.

Escanaba, Mich.—The Bijou theater, a five-cent house on Ludington street near Elmore, has gone out of business.

Vermontville, Mich.—The Family theater has opened here in its new location. Wednesday will remain feature night.

Athens, Mich.—Wood & Woodruff, contractors, have closed a deal to erect an opera house here.

South Haven, Mich.—Louis Slowinski and Charles Knox, of Portland, Mich., have purchased the moving picture theater here.

Owosso, Mich.—Fred R. Patterson, who recently sold his Temple theater at Portland, Mich., is remodelling the building at 113-115 West Main street with a moving picture theater which will seat 886. It will open some time in the fall.

Iron Mountain, Mich.—A. E. Brauns is erecting a 75x125 moving picture theater here.

Minneapolis Club Doings

Twin City Screen Club's Frolic for Actors' Fund Planned to Take Place in the Shubert Theater on June 9 at 11 P. M.—Club Governors Increased to Seven, and They Will Choose Their Own Chairman.

By Percy S. Williams, Special Correspondent. Address The Tribune.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—The actors' fund entertainment planned by the Twin City Screen Club will take place in the Shubert theater, according to the present plan. Vaudeville acts furnished by the various theaters whose managers are members of the club, will make up the program which will contain twelve turns. The Palace theater orchestra will furnish the music and the New Grand, New Palace, Gayety and Unique theaters are among those which already have promised talent for the evening.

The screen club has increased the number of governors from five to seven and has elected Prosper Schwie and J. P. Reisman to the new places. David G. Rogers also was elected a member of the governorship group to succeed J. T. Van Meter, former manager of the General Film corporation, who has been transferred to another post. The governors will elect their own chairman.

J. D. Thatcher, Jr., Handling Serial.

Minneapolis, Minn.—J. D. Thatcher, Jr., of the Mutual exchange, formerly with the New Empress theater at Kansas City, is aiding in the work of booking "The Secret of the Submarine." L. E. Davis also is engaged in the sale of the film.

John May to Travel for Mutual.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Mutual exchange has secured the services of John May, the former Metro man, who has accepted a position as general traveling representative. May is an old Iowa exhibitor and has been road representative for a number of exchanges.

Northwest Feature Exchange Moves.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The handling of several new big features already contracted for has forced the removal of the Northwest States Feature Film Company from the Produce exchange to 9 Western avenue. Ben Rosenberg, manager, asserts the addition to the company's stock required the enlargement of the plant.

Victoria in St. Paul Opens.

St. Paul, Minn.—Three theaters in a mile on University avenue is the record of Henry Breilein. The Victoria, the last of his houses to be opened, is decorated in ivory and blue-gray tints. He has installed a $6,000 Fotoplayer. The Victoria is the largest of Mr. Breilein's string, having a seating capacity of 600. "The Blindness of Love," a Metro release, was shown at the first program in the new theater.

G. C. Johnson Honored.

St. Paul, Minn.—The Association of Commerce of St. Paul has officially designated G. C. Johnson of the Monogram Slide and Publicity Company, to record the business men's trade booster tour the first week of June on the films.

Interesting Local Items.

Albert Lea, Minn.—V. B. Valleau has sold the Broadway theater here and has bought the Cecil theater at Mason City, Ia.

Wenatchee, Wash.—This town has the opportunity of putting itself on the film map if it wants to pay $10,000 for it. The Pathe company has offered to take a feature picture here if the cash is forthcoming to pay for preliminary expenditures.

Miles City, Mont.—The Star theater has been opened here by H. W. Carlie, manager, after a period of "dark" time as a result of remodeling being done to the building. It has been renamed the Iris.

Luverne, Minn.—W. L. Klug, manager of the Palace theater, has returned from a visit to Minneapolis, where he booked "Neptune's Daughter," a Universal film.

Powers Lake, N. D.—A motion picture theater soon will be opened in this town by Edward Mortensen.

Chippewa Falls, Wis.—Frank Mahler of Caledonia, Minn., has bought the Empire theater here from R. J. Neumann.

Rhinelander, Wis.—The Cozy theater has been opened here.

Chaska, Minn.—Thomas Slough has purchased the picture theater here.

C. D. Wells Will Travel with "Gloria."

Minneapolis, Minn.—C. D. Wells, formerly a traveling salesman handling films for himself, will cover Iowa and the Dakotas with Billie Burke's "Gloria's Romance" for the Kleine-Edison Film Service.

W. L. Merrill Heads Local Unicorn.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Friends of W. L. Merrill learn that he has returned to Minneapolis after several months spent in New York. Mr. Merrill formerly was manager of the United Film Service of Minneapolis. He will assume charge here of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation.

Saenger Co. Gets Strand

New Orleans' Strand Theater, Now Building, Has Been Leased by the Saenger Amusement Company for Ten Years—E. V. Richards Will Have the Management of the House, Which Is to Be Like Its New York Namesake.

By George M. Cheney, New Orleans Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—With the announcement that ground would shortly be broken for the new Strand theater and office building in Baronne street came also the announcement by Leo Fellman, real estate operator and agent, that the theater had been leased for a period of ten years by the Saenger Amusement Company, one of the largest operators of motion picture theaters. In addition to its other large interests, this widely-known amusement concern directly operates ten theaters in Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas, where their financial success determined them to come to the metropolis of the South. The affairs of the Saenger Amusement Company, which has amusement connections in fourteen other states, is handled by Julian and A. D. Saenger.

The new Strand, it was announced, will be managed by E. V. Richards, Jr., one of the best-known motion picture men in the country and close friend of S. L. Rothapfel, of New York's Rialto. Mr. Richards will shortly take up his residence in New Orleans. The controlling interests in the DeSoto Building Company, which is building the new Strand, are Harold W. Newman, Commissioner of Public Safety in New Orleans; Leonard Newman, Henry Beer and Edgar Bright, of H. and B. Beer, the largest cotton firm in the world.

The new theater will be patterned along the lines of the Strand of New York. It will accommodate an audience of 2,000 within an auditorium of graceful and attractive proportions, finished throughout in Caen stone and marble. There will be three entrances, the principal one in Gravier street and the other two in Baronne street. The gallery will appear as one tier of seats, but will have three mezzanine floors, from which the seats will be easily accessible. The floor of the first mezzanine will have as a special feature a beautifully appointed reception room and retiring rooms for women and children.

The exterior of the entire building will be white terra cotta, and concrete and steel will be used throughout, assuring a perfectly fireproof structure. The ventilation will be thorough, and silent rotary fans will be installed six feet apart throughout the auditorium. A pipe organ will be a special feature.

The New Houses in New Orleans.

According to the latest compilations of film exchanges in the Crescent City, New Orleans now has 69 moving picture theaters actually in operation. In the same breath it must be mentioned that J. J Fabacher's new Portola theater and the Pearces' new Newcomb theater, both Canal street houses of beautiful design, have but recently opened. Herman Fichtenberg is making rapid progress on the Canal street site that will be the future home of his $100,000 Globe theater. Construction of a great big Saint Charles street house by Ernst Boehringer probably will begin early in October, so it's a safe bet that New Orleans will have seventy-five moving picture houses before the end of this year. And the city has not quite reached the 400,000 population mark, all of which is food for serious reflection.

The Broadway's Troubles.

New Orleans.—Union troubles are blamed by the management of the Broadway theater, a prominent suburban house, for the cutting of wires and damaging of the house, which necessitated closing down for the better part of a week. The malicious marauders did not stop at this, but proceeded to put the whole theater on the blink. The management of the house, determined to stop the vandals and show anyway, hired a watchman for the property, and proceeded to give their regular evening's performance after the damage had been repaired.

Manager Hoyt T. Morrow.

New Orleans, La.—The General Film Company's New Orleans manager is Hoyt T. Morrow, who has been in the moving picture business continuously since 1905, during which time he has been connected in the manufacturing, distributing and exhibition ends of the business, having been connected with the General Film Company in 1909 as traveling salesman for their Oklahoma City and St. Louis branches, later becoming connected with their Atlanta branch in a like capacity, then being placed in charge of the Jacksonville branch in 1912, which position he held until the latter part of 1913, when he became interested in the Odeon and Folly theaters, Savannah, Ga., leaving last November and assuming charge of the New Orleans office in December, 1915. He is now in charge of the Memphis branch, in addition to the branch in New Orleans.

Charles R. Meade Here.

New Orleans.—Charles R. Meade, southern division manager for V. L. S. E., dropped off in New Orleans this week and paid his respects along Film Row. During Mr. Meade's stay in New Orleans thirty film and newspaper men were the guests of J. J. Fabacher in the latter's new Portola theater, where "God's Country and the Woman," a new Big Four release, was given its premiere in New Orleans. The entire eight reels were shown the guests, who pronounced the picture a smashing success.

Heave Ho, My Hearties, With Film Men Aboard.

New Orleans.—J. Eugene Pearce, one of the premier yachtsmen of the South, as well as premier exhibitor, entertained a number of New Orleans film men on board his yacht "Spitfire" during the regatta at the Southern Yacht Club. The film men had the time of their lives. The yacht won a handicap race with them on board. It was the Queen Handicap, and the Spitfire came in handily ahead with several minutes to spare. His guests included J. H. Kirkpatrick, handling the "Mary Page" serial; H. G. Morrow, manager general, and K. A. Bugbee, manager of Metro. At the conclusion of the races the film managers sojourned to Spanish Fort, North Shore, and Chef Menteur, picking up a half barrel of speckled trout from the waters of Lake Ponchartrain on the way.

Miss Anna Sessions Heads Local World Film.

New Orleans.—F. F. Creswell, manager of the Crescent City office of the World Film, left last week to assume charge of the Cincinnati office of World, and thereby made some film history for New Orleans, inasmuch as Miss Anna H. Sessions was appointed to take his place. This is the first time in the history of the city that a woman has been named manager of a film exchange, and probably the first time in the entire South. Miss Sessions is a very capable young woman, who is very popular with the exhibitors, and there is every reason in the world to suppose that her position will be permanent.

Louis Levin Fox Southern Manager.

New Orleans.—Louis Levin, from the New York office of Fox, shortly will arrive in New Orleans to take charge of the entire southern district. He succeeds C. W. Harden, who last week resigned as southern division manager to take charge of the Metro exchange in Kansas City, Mo. The New Orleans office of Fox has been fitted out extravagantly, and its handsome appointments have made it an office envied by all in 'Change Row. New Orleans Manager R. E. Barron has fitted a real nice front office with rocking chairs and fresh cut flowers on a table every day. Nowadays the film exchanges are getting away from the idea that they can be quartered in a barn and still get the business. They have something to sell, and they are getting so that they are making their selling quarters attractive.

ATLANTA GIRL VICTIM OF SCREEN AMBITION.

Blanch Hoover Dies by Own Hand in Los Angeles—Wanted to Act.

By A. M. Beatty, Special Correspondent, 43 Copenhill Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

ATLANTA, GA.—Did the sudden realization that her dreams to become a moving picture heroine were doomed prompt 20-year-old Blanche McGill Hoover, an Atlanta girl, full of soul and full of temperament, and a college graduate, to seek a seclusive spot in the woods near Los Angeles, Cal., Saturday morning and put a bullet through her heart?

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Hoover, of 140-A. Luckie street, have wired the chief of police of that city to make an investigation.

A brief telegram conveyed the news to the family Saturday. It said that the body of an unknown girl, 20 years old, neatly dressed, clutching a gold cross in her hand, had been found and that a note had been pinned on the girl's dress asking that Mrs. B. M. Hoover, of 140 Luckie street, be notified. Mr. and Mrs. Hoover are positive the body is that of their daughter. They have authorized the body be shipped to Atlanta.

For several years, according to Mrs. Ruby Wiley, a chum of the dead girl, who lives in an apartment at 140 Luckie street, on the floor above that occupied by the Hoovers, Blanche Hoover has nursed a tender affection for the moving pictures. She had her favorite screen stars. She never cared for Mary Pickford. But, according to Mrs. Wiley, Blanche was simply crazy about Theda Bara, Lillian Gish, now posing in California, and Maude Adams, the star of the legitimate stage.

Miss Hoover wanted to go west, believing her chances to get in the moving pictures would be better there.

Miss Hoover, who had written quite a few comedy scenarios, had been in California only about three weeks, and the report of the tragedy comes as a shock to her many Atlanta friends.

Charles Chaplin in "Carmen" created some new records at the Trianon theater. In his latest Mutual release, "The Floorwalker," he has run a solid week at the Plaza theater.

WALTHALL IN ATLANTA.

Little Colonel Entertained by Screen Club.

Atlanta, Ga.—Henry Walthall, the idol of the South because of his vivid portrayal of "the Little Colonel" in the "Birth of a Nation," as well as his being a Southerner by birth, is this week the guest of the "Screen Club" of Atlanta.

Included in the club's program of entertainment was a beefsteak supper. The banquet at the club was an elaborate affair. President William Oldknow sat in the toastmaster's chair. When it came to a speech Walthall blushed and lost himself, apologizing for the misfortune of failing to inherit oratory as one of his talents. But as a story teller he proved his value.

Oldknow Gets Two Big Features.

Atlanta, Ga.—William Oldknow, general southern manager of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company, has purchased the southern rights for two motion picture productions, "The Dumb Girl of Portici" and the recently-filmed New York sensation, "Where Are My Children?"

Arrangements are being made for the showing of the later picture at one of Atlanta's large houses in the very near future.

DeBruler Books First Run Paramount.

Atlanta, Ga.—The Paramount first releases will be shown at the Piedmont, Atlanta, beginning June 1. Manager Ralph DeBruler has secured the program from the Southern Paramount Pictures Company.

Second-run Paramounts will be shown in future at the Georgian, Atlanta, which is the policy formerly obtaining in this house.

Joe Marentette Goes to World Film.

Atlanta, Ga.—Joe Marentette, manager of the General Film offices in Atlanta, and one of the most popular figures in the local moving picture colony, has resigned to take the direction of the Atlanta division of the World Film. The World headquarters are in the remodeled Hirsch building on Marietta street. Mr. Marentette took charge Monday morning.

Joe Marentette is one of the best-known and best-liked men in the southern film industry. He has been in the picture game since what is known in film vernacular as the "dark ages," when moving pictures was one of the world's tiniest and hardest-struggling industries. He has been in Atlanta for several years.

Mr. Marentette is treasurer of the Screen Club in Atlanta.

At Kansas City Exchanges.

A new system has been adopted by George Bowles, the hustling publicity manager of the Universal, who also acts as editor of the Universal Weekly. This is in connection with that publication On the suggestion of H. H. Daniels, an exhibitor of Oswego, Kans., a number of copies are printed with one page left blank. On this blank page the manager of the theater which gets the paper has his week's program printed. The Monarch Booster is the name of the new exchange publication issued by the Kansas City office of the Monarch Feature Film Company, one of Kansas City's live-wire exchanges. The editor of this little paper is C. D. Struble, Kansas City executive of the Monarch office.

Recent activities at the Kansas City Feature Film Company include the return of Lee D. Balsley, publicity man, from the Omaha and Des Moines exhibitors' conventions, and the departing of A. D. Flintom, president of that company, for a three weeks' trip to the East.

"Pat" Hall, the genial manager of the Western Film Supply Company, is taking the initiative in starting the local moving picture interests in making preparations for participating in the preparedness parade to be held on June 20.

Kansas City License Fees

Fifteen Theater Managers Appear Before City Finance Committee and Ask for Reduction in the Cost of Yearly Licenses—Now Have to Pay $100, But Ask That It Be Made $12.50, the Average Cost of Trade Licenses.

Special to Moving Picture World from Kansas City News Service.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—One of the most important movements undertaken by the exhibitors of Kansas City was recently launched when the managers of fifteen very prominent suburban theaters went before the finance committees of the Upper and Lower Council in an effort to have the cost of their license fee reduced. The first of July is the date when all such will be renewed, and this action is taken so that when this date comes the moving picture theater owners will be able to realize on their efforts.

The fee is now $100 per year, one of the largest required for any business in Kansas City. The plea of the owners was that this be reduced to $12.50, the average amount required for any trade. In the lower house their request was granted and the finance committee of that body agreed to support any ordinance decreasing the fee. The members of the upper house committee said the best they could do would be to cut the license in half, making it $50, and that their action would have to depend on the view taken by Mayor Edwards. If he was of the opinion that the city could not do without the revenue thus derived they could not favor it. However, it is believed that the efforts of the managers will be successful to the extent that the license will be reduced to $50, as suggested by the upper house. The matter is now in the hands of the mayor, after which it will be voted on in the houses, following the introduction of an ordinance.

John G. Hiatt, manager of the Gladstone theater, acted as chairman of the committee which made the protest.

CALL SCREEN CLUB MEETING.

Kansas City Picture Men Will Hold a Get-Together Dinner and Talk Plans.

Kansas City, Mo.—Kansas City's Screen Club is to become a reality. Following the mailing of 600 circulars to moving picture men around Kansas City, a dinner will soon be held at which final plans will be perfected and the organization put on a permanent basis. The following is an extract from the circular sent out by the three undersigned, which will probably cover every point that might be of importance to the body:

1st. Should the club be purely social, or organize to consider and abate trade evils as well? 2nd. Should its membership be limited to exhibitors and exchange employees, or be open to all possessing actual interest in motion picture and allied enterprises? 3d. Should organization be perfected at a big stag dinner at some leading down-town hotel, or at a formal meeting held at one of the theaters? 4th. Would you, personally, be interested in becoming a member of such an organization and assisting in guiding its destinies? 5th. What day of the week and what hour of the day or night would you recommend as being most convenient for all concerned to attend the organization meeting? 6th. What suggestions would you make as to the functions of such a club?

As the undersigned are taking the initiative in this matter at the suggestion of many interested, we earnestly hope you will let us hear from you immediately. Signed by E. C. Mills, Mutual exchange; Jos. Gilday, Willis Wood theater; E. R. Pearson, V. L. S. E. exchange.

City's Oldest Picture House Closes.

Kansas City, Mo.—Kansas City's oldest moving picture theater, the Yale Arcade, 720 Main street, has closed its doors, Harry Fogel, proprietor, announcing that the place could no longer pay its expenses. Coincident with the closing of the place a long article appeared in one of the Kansas City newspapers telling the history of the house. A remarkable fact concerning this theater is that since its first opening day, in 1898, it has changed hands but once. Carl Mencing and J. F. Mencing started the place, and in a short time admitted A. D. Flintom, at present the head of the Kansas City Feature Film Company, into the partnership. In 1911 these parties relinquished their claim, and the house went to Harry Fogel, the present owner. This place has witnessed every advance of the game from its location on the second story of a building over a penny arcade, but itself has seen very few changes. It is said that nearly every person in Kansas City of middle age has at some time or other witnessed a show in this house.

Frank Tracy Managing the Electric.

St. Joseph, Mo.—Frank Tracy, formerly doorman and assistant manager of the Electric theater, St. Joseph, Mo., is now managing the theater. Barney Riley, proprietor, finds his time fully occupied with his law practice, since serving his time as first assistant prosecuting attorney of Buchanan county.

Osawatomie Airdome Running.

Osawatomie, Kans.—J. P. Kelley, manager of the Majestic theater, announces that he will open the Osawatomie Airdome in the near future. The place has been thoroughly overhauled and repainted, new seats provided, new electric wiring, and the stage remodeled and a new curtain installed, making it one of the most up-to-date airdomes in that part of the state.

Kansas Theater Notes.

Anthony, Kans.—The Novelty theater at this place has been purchased by Mrs. Cook.

Muscotah, Kans.—It is reported among local circles that a new moving picture house will soon enter the local field.

Belleville, Kans.—Work on the Chapin building on Broadway street is progressing in fine shape and the moving picture house which will be installed by Concordia parties will soon become a reality.

Missouri Theater Notes.

Kingston, Mo.—Messrs. Bebermeyer and Bathgate have purchased the Majestic at this place from the former managers, the Hamptons.

Marshall, Mo.—The Orpheum at this place, which has been closed for some time, has been reopened as a moving picture house under the management of Forrest Kereno.

Union Star, Mo.—If present plans now under consideration mature, W. P. Clarey will soon open a moving picture house here.

C. W. Harden Heads Local Metro.

C. W. Harden, well known to exchange men and exhibitors in this territory, succeeds to the office of manager of the Metro Picture Service in Kansas City recently vacated by H. M. Berman, who left here to take charge of the Universal office in Cincinnati. Mr. Harden has been manager of the southern division of the United States for the Fox Film Corporation for the past two months, and previous to that time he was manager of the Fox office here. Mr. Harden is an enthusiastic booster of the proposed screen club and will no doubt play an active part in its formation.

Film Frolic in Dallas

Screen Club, an Exchangemen's Organization of Dallas, Texas, Plans Annual All-Star Entertainment on June 4—L. B. Remy Appointed Manager and Ned Depinet, the Treasurer of the Show—The Committee in Charge.

By S. A. M. Harrison, 615 Comal St., Dallas, Texas, Special Correspondent.

DALLAS, TEX.—The Dallas Screen Club, an organization of the motion picture exchange men of Dallas, will give the annual all-star frolic at the Majestic theater June 4. The program will consist of vaudeville and a number of short, snappy motion pictures donated by the various exchanges. It is planned to make the entertainment an annual affair. L. B. Remy of the Triangle is managing director; Ned Depinet of the Consolidated is treasurer, and others in charge of the entertainment are R. H. Logan of the World, C. A. Clegg of the Mutual, and W. M. Byrd of the Box Office.

New House for Houston.

Houston, Tex.—Paul Berracco, who built the Texas theater at Houston, and has been its owner for several years, is just completing his new playhouse to be called the Best. The theater is located on Main street near Congress avenue, and will seat over 500. The building was formerly occupied by a bank and its interior is beautifully finished, which will make this one of the most attractive theaters on the inside in Houston. The house opened June 5 with "Peg o' the Ring."

"The Ne'er-Do-Well" Goes Big.

Houston, Tex.—The publicity campaign for "The Ne'er-do-Well" was one of the biggest ever attempted in the history of Houston, and the result was that hundreds were turned away the first day of its showing Houston. Anthony Xyidias was the man that pulled off the campaign, and opened the Houston engagement of the picture at the Interstate Amusement Company's Majestic, Saturday, May 27, for an indefinite run. Xyidias is a well-known exhibitor and is known to have put on "The Battle Cry of Peace" in Broadway style in many of the larger cities in the Southwest.

Baseballdom.

Dallas, Tex.—On Sunday, May 21, the Consolidated "Cats" won out over the Hurst Bros.' "Bears" in an exciting game of baseball with a score of 2-1.

The game scheduled to be played between the Motion Picture "Cubs" and McGoldrick "Panthers" was called off on account of wet grounds.

Banquet for Cats.

Dallas, Tex.—The Consolidated Film & Supply Company gave a very enjoyable banquet May 26 at the T. M. A. Hall at Dallas in honor of the Consolidated "Cats" and their lady friends. A rousing good time is reported.

Princess at Midland Sold.

Midland, Tex.—H. P. Dunnagan has sold out the Princess theater at Midland, Tex., to Theo Ray. The Kirksey Bros. have been employed to manage the theater. They were formerly exhibitors at Alpine, Tex., also Lampasas, Tex.

Peebles Succeeds Touchon.

Houston, Tex.—H. T. Peebles has been appointed manager of the Houston office of the Consolidated Film and Supply Co., succeeding Charles D. Touchon, who has resigned. Mr. Peebles has been traveling representative of the Universal in this territory, and is a well-known film man, having been in the picture game since its infancy in Texas. Mr. Touchon announces that he has accepted a position with the W. D. Nevills' theaters in Dallas, having been employed as general representative of the theaters, of which there are six. Paul Christensen has been appointed assistant manager of the Houston office of the Consolidated. Mr. Christensen was recently with the World Film in Dallas as booking clerk.

Change of Management.

Abilene, Tex.—H. C. Hanie has succeeded J. C. O'Malley as manager of the Queen theater at Abilene, Tex. Although the Queen is one of the finest houses in the State in towns of 10,000 and under, Mr. Hanie has put in many improvements. The most notable one is that of the installation of a $5,000 pipe organ.

Hurley to Have New Theater.

Hurley, New Mexico.—L. P. Gooding of the Hurley theater at Hurley, New Mexico, reports that he has plans drawn up for a new $10,000 theater.

Leases Airdome.

Abilene, Tex.—J. T. Hodge of the Gem theater at Abilene, has leased the Dixie airdome in this city. The Dixie is one of the best-known in the state and one of the most substantially built in the South.

Manager Has Right Idea.

Bowie, Tex.—G. L. Berry has taken over all the shows in the city of Bowie, which includes the Lyric, Gem, Opera House, Grand and Airdome. Realizing that six shows are entirely too many for a town of 30,000 population, he has closed all except the Airdome and Lyric for the summer. Mr. Berry certainly has the right idea on the show business in small towns.

Cullimore Goes to Houston.

Houston, Tex.—Fred Cullimore, who has been assistant manager of the Mutual Film office at San Antonio, has been transferred to the Houston office of the same company, and will act as assistant manager to Mr. Tomes.

Theater for Colored People.

Houston, Tex.—Miss E. Johnson, owner of the Key theater at Houston, Tex., is building a new theater at the corner of Milam and Travis streets to be called the Lincoln, and it is to be for colored people only. This is the most expensive house for colored people on record in the South.

Byron Johnson with Mutual.

Houston, Tex.—Byron Johnson, until recently with the Enterprise Film Company of Houston, has been employed by the Mutual Film office at Houston as shipping clerk. Mr. Johnson has been in the film business in the territory for several years and is well known to exhibitors.

Among Texas Exhibitors.

Wichita Falls, Texas.—M. Poise, of the Gem theater at Wichita Falls, was in Dallas May 16-17. Mr. Poise has recently bought the Gem theater, and it is rumored that he is figuring on another.

Bridgeport, Texas.—E. L. Turnbow, of the Little Gem theater at Bridgeport, Texas, is figuring on remodeling it at an early date.

Anson, Texas.—Graves & Purifoy have opened the Cozy airdome at Anson, Texas, recently with Universal service and Bluebird features.

Bremond, Texas.—Ed Muret has purchased the Rosary theater of Bremond, Texas, for S. D. Patterson.

Hearne, Texas.—J. W. Pinkerton, of the Queen theater at Hearne, Texas, will not use his airdome this summer as he has installed a cooling system in his theater.

Franklin, Texas.—The Gem theater of Franklin, Texas, has been purchased by E. T. Book. The same policy of exclusive pictures will be followed as in the past.

Brenham, Texas.—The New Queen theater at Brenham, Texas, has reopened. This theater has been closed for several weeks.

Galveston, Texas.—The Crystal, Vaudeville and Crystal Majestic theaters of Galveston, Texas, have closed for the summer. It is reported that both of the houses will open in the fall with exclusive pictures.

Victoria, Texas.—The Gem theater at Victoria, Texas, has been reopened by its manager, C. A. Dayvault, and reports good business. The theater has been reopened after a bunch of repairs and remodeling.

After all, there is only one moving picture paper that you really need, and this is IT, conducted by the largest and most experienced staff of editors and correspondents.

Houston, Texas.—The Union theater at Houston, Texas, under the management of S. R. Hall, is being remodeled. The Union is one of the best equipped and modern suburban theaters in the State.

Longview, Texas.—J. M. Wells, of Denison, has recently purchased the Garden theater at Longview from H. R. Yates, and has been in Dallas looking over service for his new house.

New Castle, Texas.—S. P. Wood has recently bought out the Majestic theater at New Castle, Texas.

Haskell, Texas.—Dick Nolan, of Haskell, Texas, has put his theater in charge of a manager, and he and wife are away on a two months' vacation trip.

Dension, Texas.—L. M. Ridout (the man with the smile that won't come off), of the Star theater at Denison, Texas, was a visitor to Dallas the 25th.

Stamford, Texas.—H. L. Neece, owner of the Cozy theater at Stamford, Texas, closed his theater for the summer May 22, and has opened the new Cozy airdome. It is one of the best equipped in the city.

Big Springs, Texas.—Joe G. Carter has closed the Gem theater at Big Springs to have same remodeled, and about June 15 will open it up on a larger scale.

Stamford, Texas.—Pete Chopolas, of the Candy theater at Stamford, Texas, was in Dallas May 16 and 17 booking features.

Port Arthur, Texas.—J. A. Holton of the Port Arthur Amusement Company, was in Dallas the week of May 15-20.

Clarendon, Texas.—J. H. Mulkey was in Dallas week of May 15-20, at which time he purchased a 1916 Motiograph from the H. K. Barnett Film & Supply Company for his theater.

Merkel, Texas.—H. F. Gronne, of the Lyric, was a visitor to Dallas week of May 15-20.

Bryan, Texas.—W. R. Fairman of the Dixie was in Dallas May 14.

Forney, Texas.—A. W. Riter of the Childress paid Dallas a visit during week of May 15-20.

Kingsville, Texas.—R. D. Jones was in Dallas recently and purchased a 1916 Motiograph for his theater.

Denison, Texas.—C. F. Colby, who formerly had charge of the Mirror theater at Denison, and recently sold it to J. V. Smith, was in Dallas May 16. Mr. Colby will probably take a much-needed rest this summer, but in the fall expects to be in the game again. He is on the lookout for a desirable location.

McKinney, Texas.—Chas. Kimball of the Pope and Lyric theaters was in Dallas during week of May 15-20, making some changes in his film service.

IN CALIFORNIA.

Sol Lesser Visits Branch Exchange.

San Francisco, Cal.—Sol L. Lesser, head of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., and the All-Star Feature Distributors, Inc., is making a trip to Los Angeles to arrange for bookings on "Where Are My Children?" being accompanied by "Mike" Rosenberg. This production is to be shown here shortly at the Tivoli for an indefinite run. The Golden Gate Film exchange has secured the California, Nevada and Arizona rights for the Slaughter-Lamson films recently shown with great success at the Empress.

Exchange Management Changes.

San Francisco, Cal.—D. J. Chatkin, vice-president of the United Film Service Corporation, was a recent visitor here and appointed M. Epstein, formerly head booker for the California Film exchange, manager of the Pacific Coast interests of the concern. Dave Tompkins, who has held this position for some time, plans to go to Los Angeles shortly.

Fox Coast Manager Visits San Francisco.

San Francisco, Cal.—E. R. Redlich, Western representative of the Fox Film corporation, was a recent visitor here, coming from Seattle, where he makes his headquarters. He characterizes Seattle as the city of heavy moving picture advertising, San Francisco as the home of amusements and the possessor of the finest suburban houses of any city in the world, and Los Angeles as the city of small theaters.

Exhibitors Visit Southland.

San Francisco, Cal.—Emil Friedberg, of the Lyceum theater and secretary of the Exhibitors' League of San Francisco; William Nasser, of the Palace theater; George Nasser, of the Castro theater; H. C. Schmidt, of the Markee theater, Palo Alto; and Mr. Roy, of the Burlingame theater, Burlingame, left recently for Los Angeles and vicinity by auto to visit the leading studios. A great time is predicted, for a more jolly combination would be hard to find, and after giving the inimitable H. C. Schmidt the "once over" the producers there may be expected to announce a "find."

San Francisco Business Newslets.

Ford & Myers, who recently bought the Acme theater from George Knowles, have also taken over the Vicksburg theater at Twenty-fourth and Vicksburg streets and the new Palmer theater, located between these houses. The Acme and Vicksburg theaters have been closed, except on Sundays, while the Palmer will be conducted all the time.

Ackerman & Harris have booked the Pathe serial, "Who's Guilty?" for their houses in San Francisco, Oakland, Portland and Seattle.

S. S. Hutchinson of the Mutual was a recent visitor here, making a stay of a few days.

E. H. Emmick has returned from a trip to Los Angeles and other southern California cities, where he did a great business on the Mutt & Jeff comedies.

A. A. Richards of Modesto, Cal., was a recent visitor here and purchased a motor generator set from G. A. Metcalfe.

Leon Bories is now covering the Sacramento and San Joaquin valley territory for the Universal, and I. N. Cohen is touring the Sacramento valley in the interests of Bluebird.

"Doc" Gardner, an old-time exhibitor of Marysville, Cal., was a recent visitor here renewing old acquaintances.

Louis Hyman, of the All-Star Feature, is making a trip through the San Joaquin valley and upon his return will go to the Yosemite valley for his vacation.

The Western Pacific railroad is now showing moving pictures at Feather River inn, Blairsden, Cal., twice a week, using World features.

Film Trade Board Moves

San Francisco's Film Exchange Board of Trade to Be Located in Hewes Building at Sixth and Market Streets—Will Now Have an Assembly Hall for Its Meetings—Companies That Have Joined.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North St., Berkeley, Cal., Special Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—The Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco has made arrangements to move its offices from the Merchants National Bank building, 625 Market street, to the Hewes building, Sixth and Market streets. This change is being made in order that more room may be secured and to get closer to the film exchanges. A large office has been selected on the seventh floor and the organization will have the use of an assembly hall for its meetings. A number of new members have been added of late and the membership now includes the following concerns: California Film Exchange, Morris L. Markowitz; Mutual Film Exchange, X. K. Stout; Pathe Exchange, Harry W. Oviatt; Metro Film Service, Louis Reichert; Golden Gate Film Exchange, Sol L. Lesser; Progressive Film Exchange, Herman Wobber; Fox Film Corporation, William J Citron; World Film Corporation, M. E. Cory; International Film Service, H. L. Knappen; Triangle Film Corporation, Ben F. Simpson; Globe Film Exchange, I. H. Lichtenstein, and the All-Star Feature Distributors, Inc., Sol L. Lesser. Fred S. Peach is manager and Maurice L. Asher is attorney for the organization. The Film Exchange Board of Trade has been very active in the fight against censorship here and has secured financial assistance for the work from all but two exchanges in the city. It is lending its support now to an ordinance that is being prepared and which is designed to end for all time the agitation for censorship by placing moving picture houses on an equal footing with regular theaters.

VICTORY IN RAILROAD CASE.

Railroads Cancel Order Against Carrying Films on Trains and Boats.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco and the exhibitors in the suburban districts have won a signal victory in their fight against the order of the railroads that moving picture films could be carried no longer on trains and boats as hand baggage, but must be shipped by express. Several meetings were held that were attended by exchange men, exhibitors, representatives of the railroads and the National Bureau of Explosives, and the matter was discussed from all angles. It was agreed that conditions here were different from those prevailing in almost any other city in the country, in that films are carried but such a short distance on boat and train. The cities of Berkeley, Alameda, Oakland, Richmond, Albany and Emeryville are parts of San Francisco in all but name, a state law preventing their consolidation, and but few films are carried by exhibitors outside the limits of the Greater San Francisco. At a hearing before the State Railroad Commission on May 22 the railroads agreed to cancel their former order, provided that in the future all moving picture film be encased in a metal fiber-lined box under lock and key during transit from the film exchange to the theater. Exhibitors are being warned to use the utmost care in carrying films and printed notices of what is expected of them are being placed in every box.

WHAT A FEATURE IS.

It Is Quality Not Footage That Makes the Feature—New World Films Better.

San Francisco, Cal.—A jury in the court of Judge Edward P Shortall recently brought to a close the suit of the World Film against the Turner & Dahnken circuit to secure the payment of $14,900, alleged to have been due for feature film productions under contract and incidentally rendered a very interesting interpretation on the question of what constitutes a feature film.

Contracted for Features.

About a year ago the Turner & Dahnken circuit signed a contract with the World Film whereby it was to receive fifty-two feature films and to pay for the same at an established price. When deliveries of the films commenced the exhibiting firm contended that a number did not come up to the standard that was expected and refus d to either run or pay for them, using but a few of the fifty-two contracted for. The World Film Corporation then brought suit to compel payment under contract and the Turner & Dahnken circuit brought a counter suit for damages in the sum of $10,000, claiming that a loss was suffered from the films that were run and that the distributing company has also broken its contract in various ways.

What Is a Feature.

A large part of the testimony during the trial, which lasted two weeks, hinged upon what constitutes a feature moving picture. The attorneys for the Turner & Dahnken circuit contended that mere length of film did not make a feature picture, nor any one single element, setting forth that a single reel might be a brilliant feature. They set forth that a feature must have a star performer of prominence, a continuous story with an appropriate ending, good photography, proper settings and an efficient cast. Many of the subjects under discussion were analyzed and the weak points discussed, among these being "Mliss," "The Moonstone," "The Fairy and the Waif," "The Arrival of Perpetua" and the "Master of the House." The case reached its climax when the judge ordered that some of the productions be shown on the screen at the Fairyland theater. The jury decided that these were not feature films in the strict meaning of the term and found for the defendant. However, it also found that the Turner & Dahnken circuit was not entitled to damages in the counter suit filed.

New World Film Productions Better Than Old.

These suits have not interfered with the showing of World Film productions at the Tivoli theater, as the Brady pictures are being exhibited there regularly and are giving good satisfaction, the new releases being of a much higher order than the ones refused by Turner & Dahnken.

Supply House Doing Fine Business.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Breck Photoplay Supply Company, which recently took over the supply business of George Breck, is enjoying a splendid volume of business. Among the late sales have been two Simplex machines for Michelsen Brothers, who conduct the Clement theater here; two Simplex machines, two Caille ticket selling machines and change makers for the new Reliance theater at Oakland, Cal.; a Power's No. 6A for the U. S. ship "Cleveland," and an Edison Kinetoscope for another battleship; a large dissolver for the Portola theater, and an Edison machine to J. H. League of Turlock, who will use it in connection with a traveling outfit.

Shows Too Long

Exhibitors Complain of Tendency to Lengthen Programs—Say That Long Shows Will Eventually Hurt the Business—People Do Not Want Long Shows or Free Admissions—Mixed Programs Welcomed.

By Abraham Nelson, Portland Correspondent of the Moving Picture World.

PORTLAND, OREGON.—People do not want long shows, and the exhibitor who adds one reel after another to his program to meet the other fellow's competition by quantity instead of quality is hurting the whole film industry in the city, declared several of the prominent exhibitors, having in mind presumably the new policies of long shows that have been recently put into effect in Portland territory.

E. J. Myrick, of the Columbia, when questioned on the subject, said that it had never come to his knowledge that any demand had been made by the people for a long show nor for free admissions, yet shows are steadily being lengthened, and some theaters persist in giving free admissions under certain circumstances. Long shows will soon become tiring, said Mr. Myrick, and people will lay their lassitude to the photoplay as a class of entertainment and the whole industry will suffer.

Graham T. Holtzclaw, of the Circle theater, also stated that people were complaining of long shows and that an hour for a nickel and an hour and a half for a dime was giving the people their money's worth, which was all they wanted. Mr. Holtzclaw decried the scarcity of good short subjects, and declared that mixed programs are in public favor and would come back to their own the minute good pictures could be had.

CENSOR COLWELL ALERT.

Caught Sight of Uncensored Scrap of Film in Vaudeville Act.

Portland, Oregon.—J. A. Johnson, manager of Pantages theater, was arrested on May 26th for showing an uncensored film. Julia Rooney, sister of Pat Rooney, used a short piece of film to hold the stage while changing her costume in her act with Walter Clinton. The entire film took about a minute and a half to show and had been used by Miss Rooney in her act in every part of the United States for the past five years. It had only been censored once, in Canada, where five dollars had been paid to have the official stamp affixed. The act had nearly concluded its week's run when Mrs. Colwell discovered the presence of the short piece of uncensored film in the city, and, after viewing it with another member of the viewers' committee, its seizure resulted. Mrs. Colwell stated that, personally, she could see nothing wrong with Miss Rooney's film, and that the sole reason for its seizure was that it was being exhibited without a permit, in violation of the city ordinance. Miss Rooney was highly indignant over the treatment accorded her, declaring that she had no notice of the ordinance. She said she had taken the matter up with the White Rats, who had wired her that the assistance of that organization would be forthcoming, if required.

Mutual Exchange Notes.

Portland, Oregon.—W. J. Drummond and J. S. Woody came down from Seattle recently to attend a meeting of the Mutual exchange managers of the Pacific Northwest held here. The purpose of the meeting was not divulged. The Mutual moved into its new quarters at Ninth and Davis streets May 27.

Louis Amacher, former booker for Universal at Seattle, has been employed by the Portland Mutual office, and H. S. Hastings, formerly booker for Mutual at Seattle, has become bookkeeper and cashier at Portland.

Code Travels by Auto.

Portland, Oregon.—C. H. Code, booking "Mary Page" in this territory, took a trip into the wilds of central Oregon recently and made several hundred miles across this rough country in a racing machine, making better than train time. Although the towns are small and far between, Mr. Code reports good business in the Central Oregon territory.

Musicians May Fix New Wage Scale.

Portland, Oregon.—It is understood that at a meeting of the musicians' union, to be held in June, the question of an increased wage scale will be raised. The growing popularity of showing a vaudeville act occasionally with pictures is said to be the cause of the raise, and the proposed new scale contemplates a substantial increase where vaudeville acts are shown with pictures.

Heard on Film Row.

Enterprise, Oregon.—S. A. Gardinier, who recently acquired the Peoples' theater, is remodeling the house and extending its length 50 feet to accommodate a new stage and additional seats.

Pendleton, Oregon.—Deary and Chandler have sold the Alta theater to Gulick and Cooper, who also run the Cozy.

The Dalles, Oregon.—Manager Bettingen of the Grand theater has taken over the Pastime, recently closed, and will renovate the house.

Cottage Grove, Oregon.—W. J. White, who recently bought a theater in Springfield, has also acquired two theaters here.

Portland, Oregon.—W. J. Haight, an old-time exhibitor, has opened the Woodlawn theater. Emil Erickson, formerly booker and road man for Universal in Portland and Butte, has returned to Portland.

Picture Houses Follow Mining Boom

Near Nederland, Colorado, Discovery of Valuable Tungsten Deposits Bring Many New Picture Theaters.

By E. C. Day, Denver Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

DENVER, Col.—The tungsten mining boom which has made wealthy scores of poor miners and has attracted to Colorado hundreds of prospectors from all parts of the country has been followed by a moving picture boom that is only second to the mining excitement itself.

Six months ago the Nederland district, located about 30 miles north of Denver, was as quiet as a churchyard. The town of Nederland was the supply station for the surrounding community and it was the only settlement in the vicinity. It had a hotel, a general merchandise store a blacksmith shop, but little more. It had no theater or other variety of amusement.

Suddenly new uses were found for tungsten, the black metal which abounds in the mines of the district. The price of the ore took a sensational leap. Activity grew. There was an influx of people. New buildings sprung up everywhere, and among them was a moving picture theater. Then other settlements were established around Nederland. Lakewood, the first of these, four miles above Nederland, has its film opera. Stevens Camp, another settlement three miles below the town, is to have a photoplay theater as soon as one can be built. As another development in the moving picture boom, a second theater is being completed in the town of Nederland at a cost of $10,000.

Six months ago this district which claimed a population of a few hundred struggling miners and had no moving picture show now is throbbing with humanity and is supporting two thriving theaters and waiting for two more to be completed and opened.

B. F. Long, owner of the first theater at Nederland, has been compelled to add 40 feet to his playhouse to accommodate the people. R. L. Humphrey, the Lakewood exhibitor, is contemplating enlarging his house. Mrs. E. B. Tenton, who is financing the building of the $10,000 theater, declares that it will be the most modern and up-to-date ever built in a mining camp. N. M. Mills, of the Hub Clothing Company of Nederland, has been engaged to manage the place. Vieno and Hamilton is the name of the firm which is building at Stevens Camp. They completed arrangements with the Mutual Film Exchange in Denver this week for complete equipment for their playhouse.

At Nederland quite a town has been built up in the few months since the boom struck the district, but at Lakewood and Stevens Camp there are few buildings. Stevens Camp, the newest of the settlements, consists now of a mill, a mine building or two and a newly-built store and the foundation or skeleton of the new motion picture theater. The mountains which rise on each side of the camp, however, are dotted with tents. They are the homes of the miners and prospectors, and they extend for miles in every direction. It is from these that devotees of the film drama pour each evening, and it is to accommodate these amusement seekers that four theaters have sprung up within six months in a radius of six miles.

Prosperity in Arkansas Valley, Colo.

The prosperity of the moving picture business in the Arkansas Valley, south of Denver, is reflected in announcements of the completion of two new theaters in the district.

Manzanola, Colo.—Fred Russell at Manzanola has just finished work on his new opera house and opened it to the public for the first time June 15 with a program of high-class pictures.

Rocky Ford, Colo.—F. W. Todd, an experienced showman of Rocky Ford, has leased the old postoffice block there, and work of remodeling it into a theater is now in progress When completed it will be operated as a photoplay house. The plans call for seating accommodations for 600.

C. R. Gilmour in Minneapolis.

Charles R. Gilmour, former manager of the World Film Exchange in Denver, has gone to Minneapolis to take charge of the World office there. Gilmour has completely recovered from his recent illness, due to an operation for appendicitis.

New Theaters and Changes.

Raton, N. M.—J. B. Yeager, owner of the Princess theater at Raton, is remodeling his theater for the purpose of increasing its capacity 150 seats.

Yuma, Colo.—The Gem theater at Yuma, Colo., was partially destroyed by a cyclone which caused several deaths, injured many and did great property damage. A. B. Conant, proprietor of the house, immediately began work of rebuilding the theater and expects to be operating again in a few days.

Crosby, Wyo.—Dr. S. G. Moser, of Denver, purchased equipment through the Mutual exchange for a moving picture theater which he will open at Crosby, Wyoming. The town is at present without a theater. Dr. Moser has spent several months learning the business under the tutelage of Rass Burtis, so that he will be prepared for any emergency.

A. J. Conway With V-L-S-E.

A. J. Conway, former assistant manager of the V. L. S. E., has joined the Pathe staff in Denver as a road representative.

BRITISH COLUMBIA LETTER.

By E. C. Thomas, Special Correspondent, 821 Rogers Bldg., Vancouver, B. C.

Manitoba-Saskatchewan Censor Board.

WINNIPEG, MAN.—The joint moving picture censor board for the provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan has just been appointed by the Norris cabinet, acting in conjunction with the officials at Regina. The board comprises John W. Horn, chairman, who has been serving on the old board under the Winnipeg city government; Mrs. H. R. Patriarche of this city, recommended by the Local Council of Women; and Charles Robson, who is retained on the new board as the representative of Saskatchewan. Alberta declined to join in the inter-provincial arrangement proposed, but will, it is stated, accept the rulings of the new board.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan will divide either the surplus or deficit resulting from the work of censoring, although with a tax of $2 per reel there should be no danger of incurring a deficit. The board takes up its duties on June 1, and for the present will use the same projection room which has been used by the city board, at the corner of King and James streets.

An appeal board of two men will also be appointed within a short time. No salary is provided for the appeal board members, but they will be paid a fee for each occasion on which they are called upon to review rejected films.

New Sign Regulation.

Winnipeg, Man.—As the result of the havoc created by the severe wind storm of a few weeks ago, during which the Strand theater's big electric sign fell to the sidewalk, the present Sign By-Law is to be so amended as to provide severe penalties for those who fail to erect or maintain their signs in a thoroughly substantial manner. The matter was brought up before the board of control following the receipt of a communication from the insurance brokers, informing the city that the policy under which the city was insured had expired.

Mayor Waugh stated that the necessities of the situation would not be covered by bonding those who maintain signs, as the object of any legislation in this connection would be to protect citizens from bodily harm, rather than to protect the city's finances in case of possible damage suits.

A Beautiful Theater Lobby.

Edmonton, Alberta.—The Empress theater lobby has been completely transformed for the summer season, and is now a beautiful bower of flowers and plants—artificial, but so naturally made and arranged that the illusion of reality is complete. A fountain has also been installed in the foyer, and in addition to giving a very pretty effect, has the additional advantage of cooling the air. The house has adopted the sub-title of "The Garden of Flowers."

Takes Lease on Maple Leaf.

Vancouver, B. C.—William Brown has recently taken over the lease on the Maple Leaf theater, formerly held by the National Amusement Company. The admission has been reduced to five cents, and the program is changed daily instead of semi-weekly, as formerly. This gives Mr. Brown three houses in Vancouver—the Maple Leaf, Majestic and Crystal—all with the same price and policy. James Brown is in active charge.

Changes at Local World Film Office.

Vancouver, B. C.—C. B. Price, Canadian general manager for the Mutual Film, arrived in Vancouver recently on a trip of inspection covering all Mutual offices in Canada, and will probably remain in the city for two weeks or more. Mr. Price has accepted the resignation of A. E. Vince, former manager of the local office, and C. R. Dippie has been installed in his place. Mr. Dippie is personally acquainted with practically every exhibitor in the British Columbia territory, having previously been in the service of the Mutual, and should make a popular and efficient manager. W. G. Carruthers continues as booker, while E. F. Carruthers remains in charge of the shipping department.

Mr. Price announced that hereafter about fifty reels per week would come into each western office, giving a selection about twice as great as formerly and allowing of an extension of Mutual service to a larger field of exhibitors throughout the territory. It was explained that the Mutual productions have been sent over a circuit of the various branches, being allotted a certain length of time in each office. This circuit having been completed, the films are now on the second round, for older service, while a new lot of first-run pictures is on its first round. Mr. Price stated that the Mutual's business in Canada is showing a steady increase, due partially, of course to the release of the first Chaplin subject, but not entirely so, as the bookings on films aside from "The Floorwalker" have been heavier than for some time. "The Floorwalker is booked up solid for four weeks, without the loss of a day, and Mr. Price states that the subject is sweeping the country. Eight prints are being used in Canada, and are available from each office on the regular release day.

Alterations are now being made in the Mutual offices here, as a result of Mr. Price's visit, and involve the re-arrangement of some of the departments, as well as the removal of all ground glass partitions, with the substitution therefor of clear glass.

W. F. Barrett, formerly in charge of the Universal office at Winnipeg, has just joined the Mutual forces, working out of Toronto as special representative of the head office.

E. J. Huttelmayer Goes East.

Vancouver, B. C.—E. J. Huttelmayer, operator at the Colonial theater and business agent of Vancouver Local, No. 348, I. A. T. S. E., will leave shortly for Niagara Falls, Ont., where he will have charge of the Queen theater.

Amend Ontario Patron Tax

Ontario Authorities Make Changes in Rate of Tax on Bought Theater Tickets—Now Only One Cent Asked on 15-Cent Tickets and Two Cents on Tickets Up to Fifty Cents—No Change in License Fees.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard St., E. Toronto, Special Correspondent.

TORONTO, Ont.—Immediately after the Amusement Tax Act went into effect in Ontario, whereby patrons of all moving picture theaters and other places of entertainment have to pay a war tax in proportion to the price of a ticket, the Provincial authorities revised the schedule of taxation. According to the original rates an admission ticket not exceeding ten cents required an extra one cent. Under the revised arrangements a five, ten or fifteen cent admission ticket requires a one cent tax and two cents must be paid into the Provincial treasury for admission tickets costing from fifteen to fifty cents.

The change makes a big difference, it is declared, for the theaters in outside centers which charge a regular admission of fifteen cents per adult.

The Provincial licenses for moving picture theaters for the year expired on June 1, and regardless of a previous announcement there is no change in the schedule of fees for such licenses. In municipalities of over 15,000 population the annual license fee in Ontario for a picture house is $150; in centers of 3,000 to 15,000 people the moving picture fee for the year is $100, and exhibitors in towns of less than 3,000 people must pay $75. A new operator must pay $5 for his first annual license and $3 for each renewal. Apprentices pay $1 during the year of their training. Film exchanges pay a yearly fee to the Ontario government of $150, with additional fee of $1.50 for each reel of film submitted to the Ontario Board of Censors. Under the new regulations a municipality is compelled to issue a license to the holder of a Provincial license for exhibitors. Incidentally the Provincial fee for a traveling license is the same as for a moving picture theater license for municipalities of over 15,000 population, namely, $150 for the year.

The latest regulations to this act require a restriction in the amount of vaudeville which is included in the offerings of a picture house. This vaudeville cannot consist of more than one act and not more than two people can appear in the act. The time limit for the act is fifteen minutes and there can be no change in scenery during this period. These regulations go into effect this year.

Admits Three on One Ticket.

Toronto, Ont.—One Toronto exhibitor has discovered a way to "beat the government" in connection with the sale of war tax tickets to patrons of his house, yet his plan is perfectly legitimate and above-board. The Provincial authorities require that a war tax coupon be sold with every admission ticket used. There is nothing in the law, however, which directs that only one person shall be admitted on each seat ticket. This theater manager has arranged to hold special Saturday matinees for which a mother and three children are admitted with one ten-cent admission ticket. The latter requires a one-cent war tax. If each adult and child had to use a separate ticket the war tax would amount to four cents.

The announcement of the theater with regard to the special Saturday show reads as follows: "We would like the mothers to take advantage of our special Saturday matinees for the children. The price is very low—mother and three children, ten cents. War tax, one cent extra."

The theater in question is the Classic theater, Redwood and Gerrard street East. This house is running the Pathe serial "The Iron Claw" and other features, including Pathe, Gold Rooster, Famous Players and Biograph releases.

Films at Hamilton's Savoy.

Toronto, Ont.—The Savoy theater, Hamilton, Ontario, has switched from burlesque to moving pictures for keeps. Bluebird, Red Feather and Universal program pictures are being shown.

Paramount Leases St. John Opera House

St. John, N. B.—The Paramount Pictures Corporation, with headquarters in Toronto, have leased the opera house in St. John, N. B., where the company is running its own pictures.

The first exhibition of a Goldberg Boob Weekly in Canada was given at the Strand theater, Toronto, during the week of May 29. This theater also had the third installment of the Strand Topical Review, the new Canadian news pictorial which is produced by Mr. M. S. Marvin, manager of the Strand. It consists of views of Canadian events exclusively.

OTTO THE COBBLER (June 12).—The cast: Otto (Davy Don); Katie (Patsy De Forest); His Wife (Emily Lowry); Schmoltz (Bernard Siegel); The Counterfeiter (George Egan); His Wife (Florence Williams). Adapted and directed by Edwin McKim.

Otto is a cobbler. He has a shop in a basement under a millinery store. Otto and two old cronies delight in watching the ankles of the people that stop to look in the millinery window above. At Otto's home, Willie is courting Katie, Otto's daughter. Maggie, Otto's wife, disapproves of Willie as a son-in-law.

Willie catches Otto flirting. He threatens to tell Otto's wife and Otto, to insure Willie's silence, approves of him as a son-in-law and invites him back to the house. Maggie orders Willie out. Otto declares he shall stay. They argue the point and Maggie chases Willie. Otto counts his money and becomes resigned to the fact that he has not enough to uphold the dignity of being "Boss of the House."

A counterfeiter, being pursued by the police, runs past the entrance of Otto's shop and drops a suit case full of bogus bills down the area way. Otto finds the suit case and thinks he is a millionaire. He gives his business to one of his cronies, goes to a store, where he gets himself togged out in a swell suit and a plug hat, and starts for home.

Willie, meanwhile, has received word that he is to inherit $500 of real money and Maggie now approves of him as a son-in-law. When Otto comes hame, Willie's joy is cut short, for Otto disdains to notice him, except to assume Maggie's former attitude and orders him out. He ejects Willie and then shows Maggie and Katie the suit case full of money.

Willie, meanwhile, is telling neighbors of Otto's behavior and when Otto with Maggie and Katie appear in the doorway, the neighbors are struck with awe and wonder. On the way to the bank, the counterfeiter is attracted by the excitement and recognizes the suit case. One of the neighbors tells him the meaning of the procession and he goes to head the party off.

At the entrance to the bank, the counterfeiter meets Otto and introduces himself as an official of the bank. He takes the suit case and accompanies them up the steps. As they go up, the counterfeiter darts through the crowd and runs off with the suit case. Otto, Maggie, Katie, Willie and others give chase. The police catch the counterfeiter in front of Otto's shop. Otto and the others come on and Otto claims the suit case. The police inform him it is counterfeit and Otto is stunned.

ESSANAY.

ORPHAN JOYCE (Two Parts—June 6).—The cast: Joyce, the little orphan (Joyce Fair); Mason, a grain speculator (John Cossar); His wife (Marion Murray); Jenks, the butler (John Thorn); Jim Vaughin, burglar (Jack Milton).

The loss of their little girl has saddened Mr. and Mrs. Mason. The day after the funeral the latter unexpectedly meets Joyce, whose only home is the nearby orphanage. She is struck by the resemblance of the child to her lost daughter. She appeals to her husband and they decide to adopt her. The child is delighted with her new home and the couple with her. The girl, however, resents the selection of a new butler and exhibits a distrust of Jenks. She is right.

Jenks is but the tool of Jim Vaughn, the notorious leader of a daring band of burglars. At the close of business one day Mason finds that he must produce $5,000 next morning or be declared insolvent. He goes out in the evening to his office. Jim Vaughn, for whom large rewards are offered because of the numerous robberies attributed to his gang, breaks into the house. Joyce, awakened, hears him removing valuables, aided by Jenks. Desperate, she grasps her foster-father's revolver and covers the two men. While holding them at bay she phones Mason and shouts a few words which explain her predicament. He comes with the police and Vaughn is captured. The $5,000 reward is given Joyce and she immediately turns it over to Mason to save him from bankruptcy.

VERNON HOWE BAILEY'S SKETCH BOOK OF BERLIN AND SCENIC (June 7). This split reel offering is suggested as an extremely timely release. The German controversy has created a tense interest in the capital city of the Kaiser's empire and the sketch artist has to offer in motion drawings, a picture of the city more clear than any photographs. His pencil has caught the principal government buildings, where the emperor's aids are now directing the great war, together with the famous palaces are located have been transferred to the screen by this versatile artist who has made repeated trips to Germany. This release is highly instructive and at this time will satisfy a natural American's curiosity concerning the city of Berlin. Scenic from western America shares the reel.

FOOLS' GOLD (Three Parts—June 10).—The cast: Ralph Rowe (Darwin Karr); Helen Rowe, his wife (Nell Craig); Gilbert Judson (Patrick Calhoun); Lois Bedford, his accomplice (Marion Murray).

Gilbert Judson and Lois Bedford live by their wits. Cards furnish them with their principal source of income. Helen Rowe, wife of a wealthy young business man, is their prey at the time the story opens. She is delighted with them as friends and participates in their games, winning, as the beginner always does. Her luck changes, however, and she begins signing I. O. U. slips for Judson. She gets in deeper than she can afford and becomes desperate.

Her husband purchases an expensive piece of jewelry for her. It contains an unusually large diamond. A new maid is employed. She is the accomplice of another crook, who places her in the house for the purpose of robbery. She notes the diamond piece and the wall safe in which it is kept. One night the safe is broken and the maid disappears. Mrs. Rowe is relieved. She had purchased a paste imitation of the diamond and placed it in the safe. Her husband thinks the jewelry stolen.

She goes to Judson with the real one and offers it to him in payment. He suggests there are other ways of paying. Gunther, a detective, who found one of the I. O. U. slips, comes in to save her. He recognizes Judson as wanted for several other crimes. He lets the criminal go, takes the diamond piece and returns it to Mr. and Mrs. Rowe, keeping the latter's escapade secret from her husband. But Mrs. Rowe has learned her lesson.

CANIMATED NOOZ PICTORIAL NO. 11 (June 14).—Canimated Nooz camera men have recorded the opening of the baseball season, showing how the baseball bug works. Some terrible examples of its sting are shown. The only picture of Villa taken since his flight is offered. The sleve-like appearance of his body, if he has been shot as often as reported, is shown. A consignment of three gallons of gasoline is shipped to Miles O. Doe, the millionaire, and is placed under heavy guard. Dreamy Dud has another horrible nightmare. He goes to school in his pajamas and his best girl sees him. "I hope you appreciate my embarrassment, for I guess most everyone of you has dreamt the same thing yourself," says Dud. This is a split reel with scenic.

PUTTING IT OVER (Two Parts—June 13).—The cast: Vincent Evans (Harry Beaumont); Bernice Chelmsford (Marguerite Clayton); Mrs. Chelmsford (Camille D'Arcy); Calico Jake (Charles Stine); His Wife (Marion Skinner); Lemuel Z. Hawksberry (Mark Smith).

Vincent Evans, a very new attorney, gets Mrs. Chelmsford, a friend of his mother's, as a client. She decides that he must live at her home while handling the case, warning him that her niece Bernice, is engaged to Mr. Lemuel Z. Hawksberry, a wealthy butter merchant. The warning is unheeded. An amateur theatrical is planned in which Mrs. Chelmsford's famous emerald necklace is to be used. Beatrice insists that Vincent be given the leading part instead of Hawksberry, and the two youngsters, each with a copy of the play in their hands make love under the eyes of the unsuspecting aunt. Calico Jake, with fraudulent introductions, gets part in the play and steals the necklace. It happens that Vincent and Bernice, eloping, choose Jake's getaway automobile and all end up in a police station. The gems are recovered, a wedding celebrated and everybody is happy except Mr. Lemuel Z. Hawksberry.

THE PROMISE LAND (Three parts—June 17).—The cast: David Hunter (Bryant Washburn); Margaret Jamison (Marguerite Clayton); Charles Griswold (Edmund F. Cobb).

David Hunter is a bashful suitor for the hand of Margaret Jamison, Charlie Griswold, a young traveling salesman, comes to the little town and promptly wins the girl's affections. She elopes with him. Some years pass and David, the drug clerk, has become Dr. Hunter, the surgeon. The Griswolds live in the same city. Charlie has taken up gambling and drinking and Margaret and her baby are destitute. The baby becomes ill and Hunter is called. He saves its life and there is mutual recognization between its mother and himself. Charlie, who has deserted the family, is killed in a train wreck. David Hunter shows Margaret that the promise land is their little home town, rather than the city and they return together.

VITAGRAPH.

CAREW AND SON (Broadway Star Feature—Three Parts—June 3).—The cast: Silas Wheatley (Charles Kent); Emily Lewis (Mary Maurice); Bob Carew (Walter McGrail); Jack Lewis (Gordon Gray); Jane (Belle Bruce); Col. Carew (Charles Wellesley); Mrs. Weston (Mrs. Kohler); Mr. Lewis (Frank Chapman). Author, Katharyne W. Filkins. Produced by Harry Davenport.

Bob, son of Colonel Carew, a life-long friend of the Lewis family, is given a position with Lewis' firm, where the latter's son, Jack, also is employed. Jack is in sore straits because of the exorbitant demands of Jane, whom he loves, but who is leading him on merely for the sake of the luxuries with which he supplies her. Jane is not a bad sort, but her love for the good things of life asserts itself prominently. When Jack introduces Bob to Jane, the two are attracted to each other. After some tome Bob proposes to her, telling her that he will be unable to touch his fortune for at least two years, and Jane is surprised to find that she has learned to love him, despite the fact that she has been mistaken about his wealth.

She consents to the marriage. Jack, down and out, comes to Bob for a loan. The latter goes out to get some money to help him out and meanwhile leaves the payroll in his desk. When he returns he finds that Jack has disappeared with the firm's money. Knowing that Jack's mother, Emily, who has been almost a mother to himself, is seriously ill, and that the knowledge of her son's crime would kill her, Bob assumes the responsibility for the theft. Wheatly, Lewis' business partner, learns the truth about the robbery, and his memory goes back many years to the time when Emily had spurned him.

The spark of vengeance is born within him and he determines to prosecute Jack to obtain satisfaction for his mother's treatment so long ago. He goes to the Lewis home to accuse him of the crime, but when he sees his former sweetheart for the first time since his proposal had been refused, he realizes that he still loves her and the sight of her has driven from him all thoughts of revenge.

NEW YORK, PAST AND PRESENT (June 5).—Father Knickerbocker personally conducts a tour through the great metropolis. We see all the familiar landmarks—milestones in the rapid flight of time—such as the site of Washington's headquarters, Van Courtland Mansion, Trinity and St. Paul's churches, Bowling Green, in fact, all points of interest in the city. These views fade out and in their place we see the same site as it appeared back in the Colonial days, when the historical event for which the spot is noted, took place. Characters and locations of the days of Washington are reproduced. Washington and other notables, dear to the hearts of all true Americans, are shown in their favorite haunts. The reel closes with a wonderful panoramic view of the city, taken from the pinnacle of the Woolworth Building.

SHE WON A PRIZE (June 9).—The cast: Molly Moore (Edith Storey); Charles Adams (Antonio Moreno); Grace Belknap (Josephine Earle); Mrs. Belknap (Mrs. Pillsbury); Enrico (Donald McBride); Pearl Perkins (Florence Natol). Written by Epes Winthrop Sargent. Directed by George D. Baker.

All that glitters may not be gold—but Molly Moore, "steno" to Charles Adams, certainly does glitter as if she had gold, when she appears at Lakewood. After winning $1,000 in a scenario contest, Molly decides to have a good time. With the aid of a blonde wig, the make-up box and some swell clothes, she makes a noise like an heiress and gets away with it. Her boss comes to Lakewood and fails to recognize her in her finery. When the boss' fiancee becomes infatuated with a count and returns his engagement ring, Molly tries to console him and he becomes interested in her. Later, Molly exposes the count as a waiter and he does as much for her by removing her wig and "showing her up." Back in the office once more, Adams sees that Molly has supplanted his former fiancee in his affections and she gladly accepts a second-hand engagement ring.

A STRANGE CASE (Broadway Star Feature—Three Parts—June 10).—The cast: Burnham and Lefty (Harry Morey); Nan (Adele Kelly); Weldon (Frank Holland); Rogan (Ned Finley); Tony (Edward Elkas); Louis (Charles Edwards). Authors, Jane Dixon and Roma Raymond. Director, Eugene Mullin.

"If we could only get in touch with Burnham, we'd have this Lefty behind bars in jig time." In the one sentence, Weldon, the District Attorney, voiced the sentiments of the whole gathering. Weldon called a special meeting of his staff to get them out after Lefty, the clever crook, who baffled the entire New York police force.

Some months before, Burnham, a detective, after carrying out one of his sensational raids and capturing Rogan's gang, has disappeared mysteriously and had never been heard from since. Soon after the raid, Rogan, true to his promise, had waylaid and stunned Burnham with a blackjack, intending to do away with him. When Burnham awoke, Rogan could see that his memory was lost, and decided to use him for his own purposes.

Burnham readily became as famous as "Lefty," the crook, as he formerly had been as "Burnham, the Sleuth." In all his "jobs" Lefty had been highly successful, and now, seeing the District Attorney's activity, he decides to "show him where he gets off" by robbing his own home. He takes his sweetheart, Nan, one of the band, to help him. In making his getaway, Burnham falls and re-opens the wound in his head. Nan is captured, but released for lack of evidence. The shock restores Burnham's memory of things prior to his start in a life of crime, but does not recall his life as Lefty.

Weldon sees Burnham and is overjoyed, for he now can prophesy Lefty's capture. Burnham starts out on the trail and, from Nan learns the truth about himself. He captures Rogan and Nan is shot in the fight. Burnham turns himself over to the District Attorney, who willingly arrests him for his many crimes, knowing that no jury could convict him. In the hospital, Nan is rapidly recovering and the light of love shines on the horizon for her and Burnham.

HER LOVING RELATIONS (June 12).—The cast: Dorothy Rich (Mary Anderson); Grandma (Anne Schaefer); Uncle Rabb (George Kunkel); Larry Good (George Lawrence). Author, William E. Wing. Producer, Dave Smith.

"I'll see whether or not my money is the key to their affections." With these words, little Dorothy Rich leaves to visit her relatives. Dorothy's father had just died, leaving her his fortune, but before allowing anyone the benefit of her money, she determines to find out which are deserving. Shabbily dressed, she calls on one of her aunts with a hard-luck tale of how her father had lost all his money in the stock market. They show her little sympathy, and finally order her out of the house.

Her grandmother, who, though very poor, is supporting an adopted son, sees her plight and takes her into her own home, depriving herself that Dorothy may have the necessities of life. Dorothy now sees which of her relations really love her, and tells her grandmother that she need no longer want for anything which money can buy. When her loving aunt hears the truth, she becomes very apologetic, but, having seen her true character, Dorothy is not deceived by her bright, polished manner.

HAROLD THE NURSE GIRL (June 16).—The cast: Harold (William Dangman); Marion (Florence Natol); Henry Peck (George O'Donnell); leading man (Richard Turner); manager of theatre (Harry Mayo). Author, Edward J. Montague. Director, Frank Currier.

Minding babies at so much down and so much an hour, according to the disposition and lung power of the infant, is a new occupation. When Harold sees that there is good money in the business he decides to get some of it, and goes to work. When Henry Peck's wife goes to the theater and gives him instructions to take care of baby, Peck does not relish the job. Harold comes to the rescue, and the baby is given into his care.

At the theater, just as the villain is struggling with the fair heroine for the possession of the chee-i-ild, Mrs. Peck recognizes her darling offspring, which a "prop" boy "borrowed" from Harold without that worthy's knowledge, and after a struggle she rescues the infant from the villain's clutches. At home, hubby confidently takes her to the cradle, thinking that their child is peacefully reposing there. On removing the covers, he discloses—a pickanniny, which Harold has given him in exchange for his own kid. The noise that follows is enough to make a 42-cent. sound like the breaking of the breakfast dishes.

ASHES (Broadway Star Feature—Three Parts—June 17).—The cast includes Corinne Griffith, Jack Mower and Anne Schaefer. Written by William E. Wing. Produced by William Wolbert.

Lavishing all his love and devotion on his gentle wife, Miriam, won after hardships and toil, Gordon Bennett is plunged into darkness and hatred of all mankind by her death at the birth of his daughter. Denouncing the innocent baby as a murderess, Gordon leaves the sacred precincts of his home to wander aimlessly.

For eighteen years his conscience is dulled and his is an unhappy existence, despite financial success. At last, "from somewhere out in the light" Miriam comes to him in a vision and asks him why his arms are empty. Overcome by this vision. Gordon at last summons courage to touch the little volume, kept inviolate all these years, from which Miriam had read to him every evening in their happy married life. It is the means of disclosing a long-hidden letter from the sweet-souled Miriam. The letter revolutionizes Gordon's feelings, and at last he starts to find his baby daughter, after eighteen years. Chance throws a clue in his way in the person of a nurse who had charge of Miriam's baby. He follows this slight thread, and seems at last to have found the object of his search.

The girl, already drawn to the lonely-heartsick old man, seeks counsel of a friend, and together they decide that to tell him his search has failed would only be to plunge him deeper into the ashes of his hopes. So she decides that silence is best—and the old nurse dies with the unrevealed secret of his daughter's fate on her lips. But Gordon has found peace and happiness, and the girl feels that she has done the right thing for both of them in guarding the secret of Gordon's error.

BIOGRAPH.

THE SPIRIT AWAKENED (Reissue—June 12).—The cast: The Daughter (Blanche Sweet); The Discarded Girl (Mae Marsh); The Mother (Kate Bruce); The Father (W. Chrystie Miller).

The girl, her father and invalid mother toil to keep their small farm which is mortgaged. The mortgage falls due, and, gathering together their earnings, they find the sum not quite enough. On the farm are two farmhands—one a true Christian, who is the butt of the other, a renegade. The renegade imposes upon the Christian boy, regarding him to be without spirit.

The boy learns of the family's need, and gives his mite, which increases their store sufficiently to pay off the mortgage. The renegade learns of the mortgage money, and, having victimized one of the young women of the village, decides to get this money and go away. It is now that the Christian boy shows his spirit and after an exciting chase and fight, succeeds in recovering the money.

LIBERTY BELLES (Three Parts—June 14).—The cast: Dorothy (Dorothy Gish); Jack Everleigh (Jack Pickford); Margery (Gertrude Bambrick); Phil Fuller (Reggie Morris); Capt. Ketchum (David Morris); Jasper Pennyfeather (Spotiswood Aitken); Justice of Peace (Charles H. Mailes); Mrs. Sprouts (Kate Toncray).

Margery Pennyfeather and Jack Everleigh, Dorothy Ketchum and Phil Fuller are sweethearts and chums. Margery's father, Jasper Pennyfeather, is of an inventive turn of mind and is trying to build a hydroaeroplane, which he intends to sell to the government. Captain Hiram Ketchum, Dorothy's father, is preparing to sail to a desert island in search of a treasure in which he believes lies his fortune. The Pennyfeathers and Ketchums are neighbors in a small New Jersey town. The fathers of the girls object to the boys, Jack and Phil.

Jack and Phil are preparing to leave for college, but before leaving they plot to get the girls into a young ladies' boarding school in the neighborhood of the college. The boys write letters to Mrs. Sprouts, the principal of the school, for prices and particulars, to which they sign the names of Jasper Pennyfeather and Captain Ketchum. Upon receiving the information from the school, the fathers of the girls are so favorably impressed that they decide to send their daughters to Mrs. Sprouts' school.

In the meantime, the fathers of the girls have fallen in love with Mrs. Sprouts and are striving hard to win her affections, she believing herself a widow, her husband having been lost in a shipwreck.

The girls at the school are taken by the swimming teacher to the beach, but Margery and Dorothy are left behind. The boys secure bathing suits and with the two girls go to another part of the beach. Mrs. Sprouts misses the girls and goes in search of them. When she discovers them she proceeds to drag them back to the school, where they are punished by being deprived of their dinner. They manage to inform the boys, who hoist refreshments up to them via. the window. The belles of the dormitory hold a secret feast and invite their schoolmates to join them. The boys scheme to play a joke on the girls and disguise themselves as burglars in order to gain admittance to the feast. At sight of the two supposed burglars the girls are thrown into a panic. The boys are soon recognized, however, and are given a hearty welcome by the girls.

The party is resumed. The boys are teaching the girls to dance. It is not long, however, before Mrs. Sprouts is disturbed by laughter and shuffle of feet. Suspecting something is wrong, she arouses the janitor from his slumbers, who in turn gets the town constable. The boys resume the role of burglars to avoid compromising the girls. They are arrested and taken to the town lock-up. The girls are reprimanded by Mrs. Sprouts.

During the course of these events, Captain Ketchum, who has sailed for the desert island, has landed and is digging for the treasure, while Jasper Pennyfeather is busy at work on his invention. The girls, realizing the plight of the boys, plan to get them out of jail. They call to see them and by fondling the jailer manage to steal the keys. They free the boys, and the four young people decide to avoid further trouble, so proceed to get married. Not having any means of support, they start a cooking school.

Captain Ketchum finds his supposed treasure and also finds a shipwrecked sailor who later turns out to be the husband of Mrs. Sprouts. The captain with his treasure sails for home, also taking with him the shipwrecked sailor. Jasper Pennyfeather has perfected his flying machine, and has it nearly built on the water edge.

Mrs. Sprouts has discovered that the girls are married. She sends a note to Mr. Pennyfeather telling him that his daughter has eloped and is married. He hurries to the school and there meets Captain Ketchum, who has arrived with his chest containing the supposed treasure. Jasper Pennyfeather is disturbed on finding Captain Ketchum calling on Mrs. Sprouts, who is the object of his attentions as well as of the captain's. They both make love to her, and in order to decide which shall exhibit his wealth first, they toss a coin.

Jasper Pennyfeather wins and he invites the party to the shore to see his flying-boat perform. But it refuses to move. Very much disgusted, they return to the school. Highly elated at the thought of winning the hand of Mrs. Sprouts, the captain exhibits his treasure, which, when opened, is found to be a hoax, for it contains nothing but a horseshoe and a couple of lemons. In the meantime, Mrs. Sprouts recognizes her husband and takes him back. Jasper Pennyfeather and the captain gaze at each other mournfully and, realizing their failure, go away very disconsolate. The young people in their cooking school are prosperous by this time and win the blessings of the old folks.

THE SEA DOGS (June 8).—Basking in the rays of the sun, Plump and Runt are rudely awakened by some overworked sailors and offered work. "Who ever worked, while the larder was full?" answers Plump, showing their larder, a two-week old weeny. Disgusted, the sailors plan to shanghai the two loafers and our two heroes, some days later, awake to find themselves at sea. They are put to work now, but, diving overboard, after a three days' swim land on a desert isle, where they meet a family of castaways. Here an ideal life is led.

Between intervals of eating the tropical fruits and sleeping, the pair make love to the daughters of the family and everything goes happy as the marriage bell. One day a small boat is sighted and the whole crowd embark, only to find that the oars are missing. What is to be done? An idea strikes one of their number. A rope is tied around Plump's neck, and, much against his wish, he is pushed into the water and the long voyage starts. After several days the loiterers on a distant shore observe a boat approaching with no visible means of propulsion. Nearer and nearer it comes and, to their amazement, a head appears from the depths, followed by the big body of Plump, terribly tired, but happy after his long walk on the ocean's bed.

so much about the wonderful charms of music, Pokes decides to present his sweetheart, Ethel, with a piano, in order to win her love. On her birthday, Jabbs, another suitor for Ethel's hand, appears at the home of his beloved with a large bouquet of flowers. Pokes, in the meantime, has invested his entire capital of $1 for a piano, to be paid for on the installment plan of $1 per week. When the piano is installed, to the disgust of Jabbs, who seeks to avenge himself upon his hated rival.

The smoke issuing from the chimney of Ethel's home gives Jabbs an idea of how he can secure his revenge, and immediately he begins upon his nefarious scheme. By sitting upon the chimney he succeeds in forcing the smoke back into the parlor of the house. Here Pokes and Ethel are spooning, while Ethel's mother is executing some harmonious selections on the piano. When the smoke fills up the room Pokes' first thought is to save Ethel, while the mother rushes for help. However, the awful thought of paying $1 a week for the rest of his life for a piano that is about to be lost decides Pokes' conduct, so he forgets Ethel, thinking only of his beloved piano.

Dropping Ethel on the couch, Pokes drags the piano outside, when Jabbs from the roof above begins to spill water down on top of the piano. Pokes covers up the piano to protect it, but more trouble comes to him when the mother returns accompanied by two white wings armed with a street cleaning hose. Acting under the instructions of the revengeful Jabbs, the white wings turn the hose upon Pokes and his piano and sweep them down the street, over the dock and into the river.

KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURE.

THE STAINED PEARL (Three Parts—June 9).—The cast: Captain Ray (Henry King); Hawkins (Charles Dudley); Paul (Harry Southard); Bella (Katherine Burke); Pietro (George Theilan); Tonio (Richard Johnson); Guido (Frank Erlanger); Burns (Don Bailey). Directed by H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer.

Whence came it? No man knows. On the full tide it came to land in the pocket of a drowned man's coat. Tonio slew Guido for it, and was killed in his turn by Pietro, who, fleeing, came to the ship of Captain Ray and got employment as a seaman. Mate Hawkins saw the gem and coveted it, but Captain Ray took the pearl, "for safe keeping," as he said. And in a quarrel he struck down the mate and hid the body in a great sea chest. Stowed away in the hold was Paul, who loved the captain's daughter. He it was who found Hawkins near death, and hid him in the hold, whence he reappeared as a ghost to Captain Ray. In his sleep the captain had hidden the pearl in a shotgun, and with that strange bullet, in his terror, he fired at Mate Hawkins and killed him. So the great pearl was lost forever, and the girl found her lover again amid death and desolation.

THE TWO ORPHANS (Three Parts—June 12).—The cast: Henriette (Kathlyn Williams); Louise (Winnifred Greenwood); Chevalier Maurice De Vaudrey (T. J. Carrigan); Count De Linieres (Charles Clary); Countess De Linieres (Myrtle Stedman); Marianne (Adrienne Kroell); La Frochard, the hag (Lyllian Leighton); Jaques Frochard, an outlaw (Leighton Stark); Pierre Frochard, the cripple (James O'Burrell).

Diane Elanor De Vaudrey secretly weds a man who is beneath her station in life. A child is born to this union, Louise, the blind girl. Infuriated, Diane's aristocratic father kills his daughter's husband, and forces her to wed the Count De Linieres, who is kept in ignorance of Louise's existence. Louise is secretly placed in charge of a peasant woman, who has an only daughter, Henriette.

Eighteen years later, the peasant woman dies, and the two orphans start for Paris. When they arrive in the city, the Marquis De Preales sees Henriette, is attracted by her beauty and decides to kidnap her. In the meantime, Henriette sees Marianne, an outcast, about to take her life and rescues her. Henriette is abducted by the Marquis.

Louise, one of the two orphans, now left alone, is saved from a watery grave by Pierre Frochard, the crippled brother of Jaques Frochard, an outlaw. La Frochard, an old woman beggar, lives with her two sons, Pierre and Jaques, and Louise now falls into their hands.

The Marquis brings Henriette to a garden fete, given in honor of the Chevalier Maurice De Vaudrey. Henriette, desperate, appeals to the Chevalier's honor to save her from the Marquis. In an ensuing sword battle, De Preales is killed. Henriette tells of the loss of her supposed sister, Louise, and a search is instituted for the missing Louise.

The Count De Linieres, now Minister of Police, discovers that there is in existence secret archives containing the histories of noble families. The Countess tells the Chevalier the story of her early marriage and of her baby Louise. The Count overhears enough to make him suspicious of his wife, but the Chevalier tears out the incriminating page, and burns it.

The Chevalier is in love with Henriette and arouses the King's displeasure by proposing to the girl, but she refuses him and he continues his search for the missing Louise. Meantime, Louise, clad only in rags, is forced by Frochard, the outlaw, to sing on the snow-covered streets.

The Countess pleads with Henriette not to marry the Chevalier. Henriette hears the voice of her blind sister in the street below and attempts to rush to her, but is arrested. Louise is dragged away by Frochard.

Henriette is exiled, but Marianne, the outcast, changes places with her. The Chevalier's valet, Picard, locates Louise in the old boathouse occupied by the Frochards. Picard carries the tidings to Henriette, and the Chevalier summons the aid of the Count and soldiers. Henriette arrives at the Frochards, discovers her sister, but when they attempt to escape, Jaques, the outlaw, bars the way. Pierre has previously determined to free Louise, and now he engages Jaques in a knife fight. Just as Jaques overcomes his weaker brother, the soldiers arrive, batter down the doors and arrest La Frochard and Jaques. Pierre is rewarded and Louise is restored to her mother, the Countess. Henriette placed her hands in those of the faithful Chevalier, and once more life takes on a golden hue.

THE COWPUNCHER'S PERIL (June 17).—The cast: Tom Meyers (Tom Mix); Betty Thompson (Victoria Forde); Pat Chrisman (Pat Chrisman); Slim Padgett (Joe Ryan). Written and produced by Tom Mix.

Tom Meyers and his partner have a little claim near a little western town. When Tom goes to town for supplies, he falls in with Slim Padgett, a bad man, who wagers that he can outride Tom. Tom races Slim and the contest is viewed by Betty Thompson, a ranch girl.

Slim angered at being defeated, follows Tom to his mine, and discovers that Tom has found pay dirt. With another desperado, Slim overcomes Tom, gets the mine papers and starts for town. Betty Thompson sees the theft and starts to head Slim off. Betty beats Slim to the office and registers the mining claim, and as Slim approaches, he is arrested by the sheriff. When Tom finds what Betty has done for him, he asks her if she won't be his life partner, and she consents.

HER WONDERFUL SECRET (June 13).—The cast: Colonel Fairfax (J. E. Nichols); Edith Fairfax (Edith Roberts); Beverley Spottiswoode (Alexander Shannon); Raoul Pinckney (Harry Benham); Rastus (Jack Ridgeway). Written by William Addison Lathrop. Produced by J. Winthro- Kelley.

Colonel Fairfax, an old-time Southern gentleman, and his sixteen-year-old granddaughter, Edith, find themselves at the close of the Civil War with a large and much run-down estate. They are poor beyond description. One servant, old Rastus, more than seventy years of age, and loyal to the core, has remained in their service.

A letter arrives that has been delayed at the postoffice, from which the Colonel learns that Beverley Spottiswoode, his boyhood friend, whom he has not seen in years, is due that very day. In a nearby town, the wealthy Mr. Spottiswoode tells his nephew, Raoul Pinckney, who is to inherit his fortune, that he will be delayed for several hours, and sends him to the Fairfax plantation to make excuses for his delay. Edith is about to kill "Daniel Webster," the only chicken left of their big stock in order to provide dinner for Spottiswoode when Raoul arrives. He asks Edith if she needs any help. She is so disconcerted at the presence of the stranger, that she allows "Daniel" to escape. Raoul introduces himself, but does not specify that he is Mr. Spottiswoode's nephew and traveling companion. Edith explains that she was about to sacrifice the rooster, though he had been a pet for many years, as they expect a distinguished guest for dinner, and there isn't anything else available. Raoul assures her that, under the circumstances, the distinguished guest would be greatly disturbed at the sacrifice of "Daniel," and persuades her to let him live.

Raoul is then introduced to the Colonel, and while Edith is out of the room, he requests him not to divulge to her that he is Mr. Spottiswoode's nephew, and the Colonel agrees to keep his identity a secret. Raoul then takes Rastus into his confidence and provides him with ample money to secure provisions. Edith and Raoul ransack the trunks in the old attic for some suitable attire. By this time Mr. Spottiswoode arrives they have Rastus arrayed in a gorgeous coat with brass buttons and a collar that nearly chokes the old man to death. The Colonel is fitted out in keeping with his station, and Edith herself is resplendent in a dress that had been grandma's in days before the war.

Of course, the denouement had to come sooner or later, and Edith is much abashed when she finds out that Raoul is Mr. Spottiswoode's nephew, but she readily forgives the deception under the influence of the dinner. In the evening, when the Colonel and Mr. Spottiswoode are chatting by the fire, Edith and Raoul are seated over by the old piano in the shadow, talking in low tones and seeming very much interested in each other. The two old men look at them and smile at each other. There is every evidence of a match in the making.

THE DEVIL'S IMAGE (Two Parts—June 16).—The cast: Henry Delaney (Hobart Henley); Rex Delaney, his brother (Tony Mero); James Mortimer (Curtis Benton); Blanche Griswold (Irene Hunt). Written by J. Grubb Alexander. Produced by Hal Clarendon.

Blanche Griswold is engaged to James Mortimer. He ascertains that his late father's estate is bankrupt and feels it his duty to release Blanche from her engagement until he is a success, as he fears he cannot support her in the luxurious style to which she is used. Alvin Griswold, Blanche's father, has become involved in some big deals which are turning out disastrously for all concerned. As ruin faces him he remembers the admiration evinced by one, Henry Delaney, a wealthy bachelor, for his daughter Blanche. Through the pleadings of her father Blanche marries Delaney.

James Mortimer, having opened an office as an architect in a distant city, hears of the marriage and, resolves to put Blanche out of his thoughts. Delaney, on one of his trips abroad, has become inoculated with a serious form of tropical fever, and uses drugs in small quantities to ward off the recurrent attacks. Rex Delaney, his brother, discovers his growing habit and seeks to dissuade him from the use of the drugs, but without avail. At the first anniversary of his wedding, Delaney feels the lack of his accustomed dose of morphia. Nervousness overcomes him, and he returns home to take the drug for which he craves.

Rex follows and realizes that his brother has become a drug fiend. After his brother has left the house Rex takes the remaining drug and returns to the anniversary reception. Later that night Henry returns to his home. His wife has retired, and he steals out into the darkened library for a dose of the drug. He finds the cabinet empty, and accuses his wife of taking the drug. She denies this in amazement, never having even known that he used a drug. Delaney sits through the night fighting the craving which he cannot satisfy. He reads a newspaper on the table and ascertains that the Harrison Anti-Drug Act is now a law, and that it will be impossible for him to obtain any more drugs.

Realizing that he cannot get any more drugs through the usual channels, he becomes a nervous maniac by morning, when a fierce fight ensues between his brother Rex and himself. Delaney is overcome, and in his weakened condition, he is rushed to a sanitarium. In the meantime James Mortimer has become a successful architect, and his plans are accepted for a new building in New York. Delaney has recuperated slightly in the sanitarium, but the drug terror has not left him. He manages to bribe his nurse to procure drugs from the office, and, alone in his room in the sanitarium, he takes large doses of the drug. A vision of his wife appears before him, and he resolves to return home.

That same night James Mortimer, having arrived in New York, attends a ball, and there meets Blanche Delaney. They are both shocked and embarrassed at the meeting, and he escorts her to her home. Delaney, drunk with morphia and whiskey, enters his house and sees Blanche and James Mortimer together. He puts a wrong construction on this and insults James Mortimer. An angry scene ensues, and Blanche flees to her bedroom, locking the door, while Mortimer leaves the house in angry disgust.

Delaney beats upon his wife's door, and, failing to obtain admission, he seats himself at the table and indulges in large doses of drugs, followed by gulps of whiskey. While he is drinking he looks across the table and sees the image of his other self, standing in front of him. His other self advises him to murder his wife. Delaney fiendishly agrees. He enters his wife's bedroom and leans over her. His hands start clenching and unclenching toward her throat. Blanche sits up in bed and, seeing her husband's face, sinks back in terror. Then Delaney turns on his other self, draws a revolver and fires. His other self fades out, and he falls to the floor dead with a self-inflicted wound. James Mortimer, fearing to leave Blanche alone with her insane husband, has waited outside. Hearing the shot, he rushes in, and the picture fades out with Mortimer and Blanche in each other's arms.

NESTOR.

THEIR AWFUL PREDICAMENT (June 12).—The cast: Mr. Grey (Harry Rattenberry); his niece (Ethel Lynne); Cousin Mary (Billie Rhodes); her young man (Eddie Lyons); Jim Slick (Ed. Burns); Potts (Lee Moran).

Mr. Grey and his niece invite their cousin, Mary, and her sweetheart to pay them a visit. Billie phones to her sweetheart, Eddie, to stop at the drug store for a package, telling him she will meet him at the depot. Jim Slick, a crook, steals a necklace from a large jewelry firm and is being closely followed. He manages to get into the drug store at the same time Eddie is making his purchase and adroitly exchanges the two packages. Slick is overtaken by the police, but as the jewels are not found on him he is allowed his freedom.

Meantime Eddie meets Billie and hands her the package, which she places in her grip. The officers search Eddie but cannot find the jewels. When Billie opens the package she finds the jewels and thinks that Eddie is a thief. One of Slick's pals is keeping close to them, so as to get the jewels. Grey's butler, who is working with Slick, makes the excuse that his mother is so ill that he cannot get away. He sends one of Slick's pals to take his place. Eddie and Billie arrive at uncle's, but Billie will allow no one to touch her grip, which Ethel thinks rather queer.

A detective, Potts, has been engaged on the case and informs Grey that the crook is in his home. Potts talks with the crook who he thinks is the butler. Billie and Eddie discover a notice of the robbery in the paper, and Billie faints. The detective is watching, and Eddie leaves hurriedly. Billie has hid the jewels in her waist, but takes them out just as Eddie happens to look through the curtains. Eddie, seeing her suspicious actions, thinks that she has stolen them. He rushes up stairs.

Meanwhile, Potts is searching her room, but hearing Eddie coming, hides in the closet. Billie comes on and hides the jewels in the grip again. Then she thinks better of it and hides them in her waist, which Potts sees through the keyhole. Billie seeks out Eddie and tells him that she thinks there is a detective in the house and says the best thing for the thief to do is to return the jewels to the firm. Both are greatly worried. The crook and Potts are examining Billie's grip and the crook-butler finds the jewels, which Billie has again hid in the grip, and puts them into his pocket. But when Potts accuses him, he slips them back into the grip, where Billie later finds them and places them in her waist. Potts meanwhile searches Eddie.

Billie wraps the jewels in some paper and gives them to the butler-crook to take to the jewelers. Potts then puts the handcuffs on Billie, and when Eddie tries to fight him, he puts the other handcuff on Eddie, in which plight they are discovered by uncle and Ethel. Each accuses himself to save the other. But a confederate of Potts had been keeping his eye on the crook-butler, and as he leaves the house grabs him. Explanations follow and Billie and Eddie become engaged.

ALMOST A WIDOW (June 16).—The cast: Mr. Gordon (Neal Burns); his wife (Betty Compson); her friend (Ethel Lynn). Story by Robt. McGowan. Produced by Horace Davey.

Gordon has to take a boat trip but misses the boat, and during the time which he has to wait for the next one is persuaded by his friend Eddie to play a little game. His wife and her friend decide to go slumming that night. The police also decide to make a raid, and catch Gordon and his friend, and in spite of their protests, take them off to jail and lock them up for the night. In the opium joint in which the wife and friend are, the police come on and arrest the whole bunch; but the wife manages to hide behind an officer and makes her escape.

The next morning the wife is astounded by the news that the ship upon which her husband was supposed to have taken passage had been sunk. She dons widow's weeds and sympathizing friends send flowers. Gordon and his friend are in a quandary when they hear the news, but decide they will tell the wife that he is the only surviving passenger. She is overjoyed to hear this, but just at this point her friend appears with a later edition which announces that the ship has arrived safely in port. The wife is very angry and is berating her spouse when the maid announces a policeman at the door to see her. She is obliged to confess to her husband that she had evaded arrest in the opium joint on the night before. When the officer is admitted, he gives the wife her purse, which she had dropped while shopping. "Never again" seems to be the favorite motto of the young couple now.

GOLD SEAL.

THE MELODY OF LOVE (Three Parts—June 13).—The cast: Jack O'Brien (J. Warren Kerrigan); "Hardpan" Henry (Buck Connor); "Diamond" Dave (Norbert A. Myles); Mary (Ethel Phillips); Vera Lou (Nell Shipman); Biddy Malone (Mary Talbot); "Rattlesnake" Pete (W. H. Mullen); Sheriff (T. D. Crittenden). Written by Nell Shipman. Produced by J. Warren Kerrigan.

Jack O'Brien comes to the mining town of El Dorado with nothing but his pluck and his music. Biddy Malone was the first to hear his singing, and it won a place for the lad in her heart and a job at her woodpile to pay for his board, while Mary, who lived with Biddy, looked and listened, and learned to love the big singer. Hardpan Henry, who owned the Lucky Strike claim, and who was really Mary's father, also hears the troubadour's song, took a fancy to the lad and showed him the sights of El Dorado. In a saloon brawl, which followed an insult, cast by Diamond Dave, a gambler, upon the name of Mary, Jack fought with Dave, and Hardpan, by shooting up the lights, saved the lad and took him to his own cabin on the Lucky Strike claim.

Time passed, and Jack became Hardpan's partner. This did not please Dave, who wanted the mine and who also desired the girl, Mary. Dave did not know that Hardpan was Mary's father; but one night Jack found the old man with the pictures of Mary and her mother, and Hardpan confessed that he had quarrelled with his wife and she had left him. Following the first clean-up at the mine, Jack O'Brien carried his share of gold to Mary, and there asked her to be his wife. But Dave had caused the girl to believe that the gold did not belong to Jack, and she repulsed him. Jack went to the Last Chance saloon and to Vera Lou, a dance hall girl, who loved him.

Realizing her mistake, Mary wrote to Jack, begging him to return, but the message fell into the hands of Dave, who ordered Vera Lou to take Jack to her own home and keep him there until morning. Dave then sent his tool, Rattlesnake Pete, to the Lucky Strike, and while Jack lay in a stupor at Vera's home Hardpan was shot. At dawn Dave led the sheriff's posse to the cabin and then to Vera. "Jack O'Brien came at dawn and begged me to hide him," said the woman. Then, her better nature aroused by Jack's plight, she aided him in his escape from the sheriff, holding the posse back while Jack galloped on horseback to Mary's house. He commanded her to come with him, and the girl obeyed. When they reached the cabin, Hardpan, though very weak, was still alive, and Mary learned for the first time that he was her father.

Realizing his danger, Jack sought a hiding place in a deserted hole. Here he found Rattlesnake Pete. The murderer, escaping the scene of his crime, had fallen into the hole and had broken his arm. After a struggle, Jack dragged Pete before the sheriff, and the man confessed to the murder. Dave was accused as the real instigator. The gambler and his tool were arrested. Before Hardpan died he said to Jack: "I leave you my little girl."

LAEMMLE.

HER SOUL'S SONG (Two Parts—June 15).—The cast: Mary Salsbury (Dorothy Davenport); Paul Chandos (Emory Johnson); baby (Baby Kerrigan); nurse (Virginia Southern). Scenario by Calder Johnstone. Produced by L. B. Carleton.

Mary Salsbury loves Paul Chandos, who is trying to make a start in life in a small town. Paul asks Mary to be his wife, but she tells him she will never marry until she has either made a failure or success of her voice. She leaves for the city to have her voice trained.

Five years later, Paul, now a successful business man, is induced to witness a great star's performance, and there he again meets Mary, who is now known as Valeria Salsbury. After many meetings, Paul again asks Valeria to become his wife, and she consents on one condition, that any time she wishes to return to the stage he will allow her to do so. Paul consents. A year later, when Valeria gives birth to her child, she loses her faculty for singing. The doctor examines her throat, and he tells Valeria that she will not be able to sing any more. As days go by she becomes moody and despondent.

Finally she can stand the desire for her former life no longer, and decides to leave for Europe to receive treatment for her voice. Valeria and Paul separate after a heated conversation, leaving the child in his care. In Europe Valeria is advised by physicians that there is positively no hope, and that she had better return home to her husband and child. This advice makes Valeria brood, and in a vision she sees her baby ill. Realizing she has given up everything for nothing, she decides to return home. When Valeria returns to Paul's home, she finds her baby at death's door. Paul at first refuses to allow her to see the child, saying that it is her fault the child is ill, having had no real mother's care. But she pleads, and he allows her to see the baby Terror-stricken, she asks the doctor if there is any hope. The doctor says there is none. Then she becomes like an insane woman. She picks up the child, screams that no one shall take it from her, and then soothes the crying baby by humming a lullaby. As she sings, she realizes that her voice has come back. With this realization, she fights more and more to save the child's life. Paul looks at her sadly, believing it is beyond all hope. Late that night Valeria it still seen at the bedside of the child. Next morning, when the doctor comes he finds the child much better, and tells the parents that with real mother love the baby may live. A touching reconciliation follows between husband and wife.

ROMANCE AT RANDOM (June 18).—The cast: Arthur Botts (Rupert Julian); Mrs. Sullivan (Elsie Jane Wilson); Tom Sullivan (Marc Fenton). Scenario by E. J. Clawson.

Arthur Botts is a fastidious dresser. One day as Arthur is lounging in a park, his attention is attracted by a well dressed woman who has the air of a woman in the best of circumstances. She steps from an automobile and starts along the walk. Arthur becomes interested, and follows her. The woman appears to be faint, and Arthur, hurrying to her side, offers his services. The woman accepts his escort and Arthur goes home with her. Upon arrival at the house, Arthur starts to leave and the woman asks him if he knows the number of the house and the street where they are. She tells him that if he will promise not to try to discover either, she will offer him a glass of wine for his kindness. Arthur gladly consents and the two enter the house.

The woman appears to regret her action in bringing him in, and shows him a letter from an attorney stating that she has no legal grounds to get a divorce from her husband, but if she can make him believe there is another man in the case, he will take action against his wife. Arthur then learns that his companion is married and bitterly upbraids her for using him as a cat's-paw. The woman appears to relent for using Arthur and urges him to hurry away, and states that her husband is liable to hurt him if he finds another man in the house. This appeals to Arthur's vanity and he says that he has never deserted a woman in distress, and promises to aid her in any way possible. The woman leaves the room and Arthur is left to his thoughts.

While seated near a table, he picks up an album and idly looks through it. The book is devoted to pictures of one Tom Sullivan, prize-fight promoter, and pictures of prize fighters he has trained. Sullivan's picture is of a strong man, and Arthur begins to feel pangs of uneasiness. When the woman returns Arthur suggests it would be a good plan for him to "run along." But before he can leave some one comes in the front door. The wife says it is her husband and Arthur nearly collapses. The husband comes to the door and Arthur, hastily grabbing a weapon, prepares to defend his life. Sullivan comes in. He is a small, sickly man, about four feet in height, and he looks from his wife to Arthur in an inquiring way. The woman runs to him and pleads with him to keep his temper. Arthur looks at the man with blank surprise and drops his weapon. Seeing how small the man is, Arthur swaggers up to him and tells him he is a friend of his wife's. Sullivan greets him with a smile and invites him to make himself at home.

WHEN THE WOLF HOWLS (June 14).—The cast: Ralph (W. V. Mong); Elsie (Cleo Madison); Mark Marmus (Bertram Grassby). Scenario by W. V. Mong. Produced by Cleo Madison and W. V. Mong.

Ralph Gardner is an artist. His wife is about to become a mother. Things haven't gone well with Ralph and his landlord has ordered him to vacate their studio. Elsie, the wife, broods over the situation. Obsessed with the idea that she is a millstone about the neck of her husband, she decides to eliminate herself as a troublesome factor. To this end Elsie leaves the studio, intending to kill herself.

During her absence, a messenger boy brings Gardner a note from an art collector as well as a check with the information that it is an advance on the purchase price of the picture. Gardner is overcome with joy at the sudden change in his fortune. Hoping to please and at the same time to astonish his wife, he hides the check in a little sock, which his wife had made in anticipation of the arrival of the little stranger, and then retires to an adjoining room. The wife enters and, not seeing Gardner, and thinking he has gone out, prepares to drink the contents of the bottle, nrst sitting down to write a short note to Gardner.

Gardner, in an adjoining room, is impatiently awaiting the discovery of the check. In the other room the wife finishes the note and is about to drink from the bottle, when Gardner, unable to stand the suspense any longer, rushes into the studio. Elsie, in her nervousness, has dropped the bottle of poison. Ralph senses that there is something wrong but does not discover his wife's attempt at self-destruction. He joyfully tells her the good news and puts the little sock containing the check in her hands.

THE FINER METAL (Two Parts—June 18).—The cast: Jerome Hartley, a banker (Ben Wilson); Hester Hartley (Dorothy Phillips); Stephen Carlton (William Welsh); Grimes (Charles Ogle); Marcia (Leonora von Ottinger). Scenario by Harry Dittmar. Produced by Raymond L. Schrock.

Hester Hartley still feels the call of youth and enjoys society and dancing. Her husband is devoted to his business interests, and often refuses to escort Hester to evening functions. Stephen Carlton, who is Hartley's assistant at the bank, through his many calls at Hartley's home, becomes infatuated with Hester, and finally succeeds in getting her to elope with him by telling her that her husband has been receiving secret calls from a beautiful woman. She elopes, misses the train by two minutes, and, as the next one does not leave for two hours, Stephen suggests to Hester that they stop at a hotel. Hester is nervous and wants to go home, but Stephen dissaudes her.

Just as Stephen is registering a boy from Hartley's bank enters the hotel to deliver a letter. He spies Stephen. After Stephen has gone the boy notes that the bank clerk has signed the register as "Mr. Morton Glover and wife, Pittsburgh." In the meantime, a bookkeeper hands a ledger to Hartley, showing him certain figures. Hartley asks for Stephen. The bank boy is dispatched to find Stephen, and he tells Hartley he saw him go into the hotel and mentions the name that Stephen used on the register. Hartley goes to the hotel, asks for Stephen, and is conducted to the room where Stephen is. Stephen answers the knock at the door, and Hester sees who it is just in time to hide behind the curtains. She is cringing with fear, believing that Hartley has been home and has found her note, which she has written him telling of her elopement. Stephen, too, thinks Hartley has come to prevent their elopement. Hartley tells Stephen he knows all and has come to save him. Hester shrinks in fear behind the curtains. Hartley goes on to tell Stephen that he knows of his embezzlement of bank funds—that he has come to save him before the directors find it out and imprison him.

When Hester hears this, she realizes her husband's nobility of character. Stephen asks Hartley how he found out about the embezzlement, and the banker tells him that Marcia, Stephen's former mistress, gave him away out of revenge. Marcia was the beautiful and mysterious woman who had visited Hartley in his private office. Stephen recently quarrelled with Marcia, and she told Hartley that Stephen was taking bank funds. Hartley doubted the truth of this accusation until Grimes, the bookkeeper, showed him the ledger. Hartley assures the bank clerk that he will pay back the missing funds and give him another chance. Stephen is overcome with his employer's magnanimity, while, Hester, realizing her mistake, sobs softly behind the curtains.

It is imperative that Hester rush home to get the note she left there before her husband reaches the house. How can she get out of the hotel room? Hartley hears her crying, and accuses Stephen of having secreted a woman in the room. Stephen pleads guilty, and begs that Hartley let the lady get out of the room without being seen. Hartley agrees to this, and Stephen switches off the light. Hester makes her way out of the room in the darkness, and rushes for home. There she destroys the note, powders her red eyes and changes her gown. When Hartley returns home for dinner, he finds Hester waiting for him with open arms.

THE GOLDEN BOOT (June 16).—The cast: Miser's Wife (Mary Haines); Miser (Ed. Brown); Weary (Albert McQuarrie). Scenario by Olga Printzlau. Produced by Wm. Bowman.

In a little house lives old Miser Tight and his wife. They are at breakfast. Miser Tight stows some money in an old boot, when his wife is from the room, and hangs it back upon the wall. Then he sets out to collect more rent from his tenants. Near the house Weary Blink, a tramp, is reposing upon an ash heap. He awakens and sets out in search for food. He calls at Miser Tight's house, but the wife refuses to aid him, and, after repeated attempts to secure food, she becomes exasperated and flings out the old shoe at the tramp. He finds the money in the shoe and sets out for the town to spend it. He tries repeatedly at the different stores, but the merchants, alarmed at the sight of the roll of bills, think that he has stolen it, and they send for the detectives, who follow Weary Blink.

Miser Tight arrives at the home of a poor laborer and demands his rent. The wife tells him that her husband works on the building opposite the little house, and Miser Tight sets out to get his money. Weary Blink leads the detectives and the police a merry chase, and in the officers' scramble for the money he gets away. It happens that he drops a bill directly beneath the scaffold on which the poor laborer is at work, and in the scramble for the money the scaffold falls and the man is injured. In the commotion the tramp is forgotten, and the hurt man carried into his little home. Miser Tight, not at all touched by the pathos of the scene, follows the crowd there and demands the money.

When the crowd has left, Weary Blink, who has sneaked into the rear of the house for protection, hears the brutal miser hounding the injured man. Blink enters the room, pays the landlord off and deposits him on the street below. Then, realizing that he has caused the accident to befall the man, he showers the remainder of the money on the bed and goes on his way, leaving the little family rejoicing. In the lumber yards, where he sits down to rest, he looks at the boot which contained so much—and yet so little for him, and falls asleep.

BIG U.

BETTY'S HOBO (June 15).—The cast: Edward Farrington (Malcolm Blevins); Betty (Zoe Bech); Old Bill (Thomas Jefferson); Governess (Marjorie Ellison). Written by Calder Johnstone. Produced by R. H. Cochrane.

Edward Farrington is elected magistrate in a city in Southern California. Of late the community has been overrun by hordes of tramps. It is therefore decided to arrest each hobo coming into the territory, and to sentence each one to the chain gang. Judge Farrington has a boy and a girl, the former in his early 'teens and the latter a tot of five years. A widower, his children are his greatest love, and little Betty is his pet.

One day while Betty is romping in the garden an old tramp comes to the gate and asks for food. Betty gives him a big plate full. Before he leaves, he gives her a silver whistle as a remembrance. The whistle is engraved with a peculiar coat of arms. The next day Betty goes for a walk with her dog, and goes up into the nearby foothills, where she lies down for a nap and falls asleep. Night comes on, and when she tries to find her way home she becomes lost. Her father and brother go in search of her, but are unable to find her. Early in the morning she is found by Old Bill, the tramp she has fed, and he takes the little child to her home. Her father and brother ask her where she has been, and she tells of the kind old man who, before taking her back home, gave her as much food as he could. But Old Bill, knowing the new edict against tramps, has taken the advice of his cronies and hurried off.

A few days later in a nearby town Old Bill is arrested with his two pals and brought before Judge Farrington. All three are sentenced to sixty days on the chain gang. The old man takes it pretty hard, and when he is finally led to the road where the gang is at work, the toil soon proves too much for him, and he tries to rest when the deputy is not looking. But for this he is driven to harder work, until he falls from exhaustion.

Betty is motoring with her brother Teddy at this time and passes the gang just as Old Bill falls to the ground. She has the car stopped and goes to succor her rescuer. Betty and her brother demand the release of the old man, but the deputy refuses. That evening the children tell their father about it. Betty shows him the silver whistle the old man gave her, and when he looks at it he gasps with astonishment. Memories return and he wonders how the tramp came into possession of the engraved toy. The next day he sends to the sheriff and orders the old tramp brought to his home.

When the tramp is led to the gate and sees the judge, he fears some new calamity has befallen him. But the magistrate treats him kindly, and sends for his daughter. Betty comes out with Teddy, and the old man looks at the boy with wondering eyes. The judge questions Old Bill, and asks him where he got the whistle. The tramp tells his story: Years before he had been a servant in the home of John Farrington—"way back East"—and one of his chief duties was to look after his employer's son. The father gave to each a silver whistle, so that when they were out hunting or on long tramps, if they got separated they could call to each other. His employer failed in business, and Old Bill lost his position. He worked at various trades, but with the on-coming years he had become physically unable to do hard labor, and, knowing no skilled trade, he had had a hard time of it and had gradually fallen into the ways of a tramp.

The judge listened to the story, and when he is through asks Bill if he doesn't remember him. The judge tells Old Bill that he (the judge) was the boy he looked after years before, and that from now on he can watch over his boy and girl. The judge rises and goes into the house, leaving the children with Old Bill. He returns and shows the mate to Old Bill's whistle. He gives this to the old man, and tells him to use it as in other days, and that Betty will carry the whistle Bill has given to her.

L-KO.

HOW STARS ARE MADE (Two Parts—June 14).—The cast: Lillian Russell (Alice Howell); the janitor (Ray Griffith); the devil (Dick Smith).

She was just a poor, but honest girl, out looking for a job, when she happened to see the L-KO Film Company offices, and dropped in to secure a job. They did not think much of her work in a tryout as an actress, but when she told them of the number of little mouths she had to feed the manager took pity on her and gave her a job as janitress.

Her ambitions were far above the job, and when she discovered an old discarded newspaper, telling of a big floral parade in which the L-KO Company was to participate, she decided that with the assistance of the head janitor they ought to be able to walk away with the parts to be portrayed.

After some persuasion, the janitor decides to join her in the impersonation. They arrive at the scene of the parade after donning the apparel of the other actors and actresses. But there was something doing when the actors and actresses who had been chosen by the L-KO to do the work discover that some one had stolen their wardrobes.

JOKER.

LOVE QUARANTINED (June 17).—The cast: Lil (Lillian Peacock); Pa (Wm. Franey); Ma (Gale Henry); Doctor (Milburn Moranti); Heinie (Chas. Conklin). Produced and written by Allen Curtis.

Lil and Moranti, a young dentist, are in love, but Pa has other plans. His choice is Heinie, but mother favors Moranti. Moranti asks the hand of Lil, but Pa refuses and tells her she must marry Heinie that very day, much to the latter's joy. Pa orders Lil to her room to get dressed for the wedding, but Ma tears the wedding dress.

Moranti, who has been kicked out by Pa, returns to his office and confides in his partner. They return to Lil's home, where, through the window, they tell her of their plan. Ma paints spots on Lil's face and Lil starts screaming, bringing her father to her room to see what the trouble is. He finds Lil very sick and phones for the doctor, who pronounces it smallpox and orders the house quarantined.

Meanwhile, Heinie has gone for the minister, quite an elderly man; but when they arrive at the house and try to enter, the doctor prevents them. When they try to force their way in, the doctor calls a cop and the two are thrown out.

Father is distractedly pacing the floor upstairs when he stumbles over a rug, causing his tooth to ache. He tries to leave the house, but is prevented by the cop and the doctor. Finally Pa climbs out the window, falling upon Heinie and the minister, who are trying to effect an entrance to the house through Lil's room. The cop starts in pursuit, Pa with his hand to his face.

Then the doctor, Lil and the mother start for Moranti's office, where later Pa rushes in demanding that Moranti attend to his tooth. This Moranti will not do until he has gained Pa's consent to their marriage. Pa reluctantly consents and Moranti calls Lil from the other office, just as Heinie and the cop with the minister come on. Explanations follow and Moranti starts pulling Pa's tooth.

RED FEATHER.

WHAT LOVE CAN DO (Five Parts—June 12).—The cast: Calvert Paige (C. N. Hammond); John Morris (O. C. Jackson); "Brad" Hamilton (Kingsley Benedict); Matthew (H. F. Crane); Tony (Harry Mann); Lil Magill (Adele Farrington); Johnnie Paige (Mina Jeffries); Aunt Mary (Mrs. Jay Hunt). Scenario and production by Jay Hunt.

The wife of Calvert Paige died while he was still a young man. When he emigrated to the West he left his baby daughter in charge of his sister Mary. Years later we see him the owner of a number of mines and of a leading newspaper.

Several years before the story opens, Lil Magil had arrived in the town and secured work on the paper. Paige became fascinated with the girl. Morris, also an employee of the paper, loved the girl. Lil became infatuated with Paige, but he was not inclined to marry a woman unless he could secure her in no other way. Lil, being free and democratic, virtually became the mistress of Paige. Morris hated Paige for his possession of the girl, but he was her true and loyal friend.

At the time this story opens, Lil had gained the reputation of being one of the brightest newspaper women in the game, and was the author of several books. She held Paige more by her independence and personality, but in spite of this he had begun to tire of her. In his dealings with his miners, Paige was grasping and unprincipled. They began to show signs of discontent, and appealed to "Brad" Hamilton, a lawyer, for advice. Hamilton takes the matter up with Paige, but with no success.

Paige's daughter, now a young lady, desires to be with her father, but he prefers the unfettered life of a bachelor. Johnnie Paige, his daughter, has sent her father a picture of herself and Brad sees this prominently displayed. Johnnie and her aunt visit New York, and while there become acquainted with Brad, who has come East on business. The two become friendly. Lil realizes that Paige is tired of her and the two are beginning to have quarrels. One day, Lil, visiting the house, is looking at Johnnie's picture. This action arouses the anger of Paige, especially when Lil speaks of the daughter. She resents this attitude and he tries to soothe her wounded feelings.

Paige writes Lil a note breaking the engagement. At the same time he writes a letter to his daughter and in sealing them, the two become mixed. Lil receives the letter intended for Johnnie, and after reading the first line or two realizes there has been a mistake. The next day she takes the letter to Paige. He is much worried over the effect of the letter that Johnnie will get, and his fright touches Lil. She tells him that he need not worry, that he would hardly write anything to her that he would be ashamed to have his daughter read. Paige's irritation at his own mistake turns to violent anger against Lil. He says things to her and humiliates her to such an extent that the break between them grows wider.

In the meantime, the strike has become serious. The strikers are bitter against Paige, and a deputation, led by Tony, the sweetheart of the girl whose father has been killed in a riot, calls upon Paige, vowing vengeance. Paige is not at home and they leave. Johnnie receives the misdirected letter. She knows of Lil through reading stories of the latter in different magazines. She begins to understand the woman's relation to her father. She determines to surprise her father, and she and her Aunt Mary start out for the West.

Lil knows Rosa, the daughter of the killed striker, and is able to be of help to her in her distress. Paige orders his hireling, Fleming, to discharge Lil. Fleming realizes how useful Lil is to them and tries to get around this, but Paige is obdurate. Lil is "fired," and when Morris hears of her discharge he resigns. Telephoning to Paige's house, Lil learns that he will be home that night, and she determines to have a final understanding with him.

Brad and Morris meet each other in the hotel. The latter learns that Paige's daughter is on the way and that Brad intends to ask for her hand that night. Hammond goes to Paige's house and finds Lil there. Lil, realizing her condition from the glass of whiskey that she took before leaving the house has a sudden fear of herself, because before leaving home, in a moment of anger, she brought the revolver with her. Hamilton urges her to return home, but she announces her intention of going upstairs and awaiting the arrival of Paige. As Hamilton starts to leave, Johnnie and her aunt arrive. Lil, meanwhile, remembers leaving her handbag downstairs and decides to go and get it. She has taken off her shoes, and, not stopping to put them on, hurries downstairs. She enters the library thinking no one is there, but Johnnie and her aunt see her first. Lil, feeling the humiliation of her position, demands an introduction from Hamilton. Hamilton urges Lil to go. She points to her shoeless feet, and Matthews is sent upstairs for her shoes.

Hamilton has persuaded Johnnie to stay at the hotel instead of the house on account of the strikers. Lil tries to put on her shoes, but is unable to do so. Johnnie helps her on with them. Her father enters at this point and flies into a rage on seeing his daugther on her knees before the woman he has begun to despise. Lil, in her fury, tries to shoot Paige, but Hamilton frustrates her efforts. The strikers have surrounded the house. Tony breaks through the guards, and entering the room, rushes upon Paige. The latter attempts to protect himself with the revolver taken from Lil, but Tony wrests it from him and fires. Lil throws herself in front of him and saves Paige's life. Morris sends out the inside story of the strike to the newspapers. During Lil's long illness, Paige, realizing that she has saved his life, when she finally recovers her health he proposes to her and there is a reconciliation.

BISON.

A RAILROAD BANDIT (Two Parts—June 17).—The cast: Jack Russell (Lee Hill); Mary Kendall (Marie Walcamp). Written by Wright Roberts. Produced by Henry McRae.

Jack Russell, a young construction engineer on the "San Barna Division," with his construction train and crew, arrives at the Ridge Rock Station just in time to interrupt a hold-up. The "Limited" was to stop at Ridge Rock for the shipment of bullion from the mine of Jacob Kendall, but, fearing a return of the outlaws after the departure of the construction train, at the earnest solicitation of the Ridge Rock operator, Russell consented to take the bullion on his train and meet the "Limited." As Russell, who is driving the engine, turns a sharp bend, he is stopped by a young woman, who says she is Mary Kendall, daughter of Jacob Kendall. She explains that her father's "Special" is on the "Nantook" siding, from which point she had undertaken to ride in the electric handcar, which, unfortunately, had become disabled. Russell gives Mary permission to ride with him in the engine cab. While Russell is relating the details of the hold-up, the fireman calls his attention to a man standing on a pile of ties, trying to flag the train. As the train comes on, the man on the ties realizes that the engineer does not intend to stop, and jumps from the ties just before the train crashes into them.

Mendosa's men now rush in and open fire on the train. The engineer is shot in the head. Fearing for the safety of Miss Kendall, he hides her in the sand box. Mendosa leaps from his horse into the cab. While he and Russel are struggling, another of the outlaws leaps from his horse into the cab and throws back the lever and stops the train, just as Mendosa delivers a heavy blow which renders Russell unconscious.

The outlaws escape with the bullion. A number of the outlaws and trainmen were killed. When Russell comes to his first thoughts are for the safety of Miss Kendall. He tries to start the engine, but it will not move, for it has been disabled by the outlaws. The electric hand car is fixed. Russell instructs his fireman to get the engine in shape and takes the train to the siding. Just as Russell and Mary are about to get away on the hand car, Milton, Jacob Kendall's private secretary, who has been hiding under the mattress in the bunk in the caboose, orders Russell to remain with his engine, and says that he (Milton) will take Miss Kendall to her father's car. Miss Kendall tells Milton that Mr. Russell is wounded and needs attention, so all three ride back on the hand car. Mendosa and his gang appear again as the electric car is starting, but Russell manages to get away, but not before he gets another wound. Around a curve they see the "Special" backing on the main line. Mary gives her father a graphic account of the hold-up and of Russell's fight, first, for the bullion, and later for his protection of her.

Kendall takes Russell aboard his car as his guest until he recovers from his wounds. Russell tells Kendall that the sheriff has been notified and is now on his way to Nantook to run down Mendosa. Kendall goes to Nantook to give the sheriff what aid he may desire. A week later the "Special" is still at Nantook. Russell, who has recovered, and Mary have become friendly. This enrages Milton, who decides upon revenge. He tells Kendall that Russell's intentions are not good and points to Mary and Russell entering the woods. Kendall expresses regret and sends Milton after Mary. At a picturesque spot Mary and Russell pause. Mary does not resist Russell's attention. This is too much for Milton. He rushes into their presence and accuses Russell of taking advantage of Miss Kendall's sympathy and of her father's hospitality. Russell resents and Milton strikes Russell. Mary is horrified and faints when she sees Milton pull out his gun. In the struggle Russell gets Milton's gun from him.

Two of Mendosa's scouts, who have been reconnoitering, see the combat from a distance, and, recognizing Russell, decide to get even. One of the outlaws fires, intending to hit Russell, but in realty wounding Milton. Russell fires at the outlaws, bringing one of them down. The other, firing a last shot, attempts to escape, but Russell takes the horse of the fallen bandit and pursues his companion. The sheriff and his men find Mary and Milton lying on the ground. Milton tells the sheriff that Russell was insulting Miss Kendall, and he interfered, and that Russell then shot him and made his escape. Mr. Kendall, who has just arrived, hears the explanation, and orders the sheriff to get him. But before the sheriff can execute his orders, Russell comes riding in with the second bandit lying across his horse. He gives an account of the shooting of the bandits, and thereupon Murray informs him that he is his prisoner for the shooting of Milton. The wounded bandit clears the situation, telling them he himself shot Milton, although intending to shoot Russell. Miss Kendall then gives her version of the affair, denying that Mr. Russell was insulting her, but accusing Milton. Russell is released by the sheriff. Kendall orders Milton and the bandits taken to the car. He apologizes to Russell, and walking on ahead, leaves Russell and Mary to walk together to the "Special."

THE STAR OF INDIA (Two Parts—June 17).—The cast: Grace Radnor (Margaret Gibson); Lord Ashdown (William Clifford); Sir Lionel West (Frederick Montague); Arthur Fitzallen (Al D. Blake); Con Magee (Louis Durham); Rajah (Charles Gay); Shung (Dave Allen). Directed by Charles Swickard.

In the year 1756, the slaves of a certain Rajah of India unearth a remarkable diamond, which, on account of its enormous size, is christened "The Star of India." The gem is handed down as an heirloom to the Rajah's descendants. In the year 1912 the gem is mysteriously stolen and the blame is shifted onto the shoulders of one Sir Lionel West, a wealthy collector of jewels.

Previous to the theft, Lord Ashdown, an Englishnobleman, to escape the numerous traps of the many fond mothers who are desirous of marrying their daughters to him, takes up his residence in India, where he falls in love with Grace Radnor, a niece of Sir Lionel West. Arthur Fitzallen, Sir Lionel's nephew, desires to marry his cousin. Sir Lionel has observed the reckless and dissolute habits of Arthur, but does not openly show his displeasure until his nephew announces the fact that he seeks the hand of Grace.

Sir Lionel states his objections frankly and to the point and to avoid any possibility of Grace being annoyed by his unwelcome attentions, drives Arthur from his home with a demand never to return. Thrown upon his own resources, Arthur subsequently accepts a proposition from a crafty and unscrupulous Indian Prince to secure for him the celebrated diamond "The Star of India." Success in this and his mission accomplished, Arthur now plans to abduct Grace, so by means of a decoy letter she is lured to an unoccupied cabin which was formerly the headquarters of the conspirators who aided in the theft of the diamond.

Con Magee, Lord Ashdown's valet, witnesses the abduction, hides on the trunk rack of the auto and rides off with the party to the cabin in the jungle. Arriving at the journey's end, Con appropriates the car and drives off to spread the alarm. At the cabin, Grace and Arthur are attacked by a lion. Grace flees to an adjoining room and Arthur, with a chair as his only weapon, attempts to defend himself. In the struggle with the beast the lamp is overturned, the cabin catches fire, and the sparks ignite the surrounding jungle.

Lord Ashdown and his friends, guided by Con Magee, have considerable difficulty in reaching the burning hut. Grace has escaped from the cabin, only to be met with a wall of fire. As she turns back to escape the fire she is confronted by the lion, which has also escaped from the cabin. Lord Ashdown arrives in time to snatch the girl from the ferocious beast. Trapped by the fire, the conspirators flee for their lives, but are intercepted by the rescue party, who overpower them and recover "The Star of India."

Jerry has boarded a freight and has successfully secluded himself from the watchful train crew. He is about to alight at a station when the town constable detects him. There is no way of escape and as he is about to give up, a bright idea comes to Jerry. He has with him a big roll of stage money and with it he bribes the "law." Making for the town tavern, Jerry believes that he can fool the man behind the bar with his fake money.

Meanwhile, the constable gathers his cronies together and as they make merry the bartender discovers that the bill handed him by the guardian of the law is a fake. A fight results and in the mix-up Jerry escapes. In his wild dash for liberty Jerry comes across a settlement of moonshiners. He hides until all are out of sight excepting the pretty daughter of one of the band. A flirtation follows and the girl accepts Jerry's advances. Soon the mother appears, and the girl, frightened, runs away while Jerry is looking in another direction. The mother takes her place, as Jerry continues his scene, unaware that the girl has left.

The father arrives upon the scene to find a strange man making love to his wife. Jerry sneaks off, reaches the cabin, and is admitted by the girl, but, fearing her father's anger, she induces Jerry to hide in the attic. The moonshiners join the father in the hunt for the stranger, but the girl will not betray her new flame. The angry men start firing off their revolvers in every direction and several bullets pierce the ceiling, one of which smashes a bottle of wine which Jerry is drinking.

The liquor leaks through a crack in the floor and drips to the floor below, divulging Jerry's hiding place. The moonshiners rush upstairs, but as they show their heads above the flooring, Jerry greets them with bottle after bottle, well aimed. Revenue officers who are searching for the moonshiners are attracted by the shooting. Jerry sees them from a window and decides to escape, when, noticing the constable with them, changes his mind and comes down stairs, and, after a small riot manages to get out of the cabin, only to run into the arms of the revenue officers.

To save himself, Jerry offers to show them the way to the moonshiners' camp. His invitation is accepted, and the revenue men capture the moonshiners and the father. As they are led away, Jerry shows pleasure, believing that he will be left to woo the pretty daughter, but the constable recognizes Jerry as the man who gave him the bad money and a moment later our hero is also a prisoner. Jerry and the captives are chained together and carried away, while the daughter and mother tramp along behind, weeping bitterly.

BEAUTY.

BILLY VAN DEUSEN'S OPERATION (June 7).—The cast: Billy Van Deusen (John Stepling); Nurse (Carol Halloway); Doctor (John Sheehan); Sick Friend (Dick Rosson); A Nut (Robert Klein).

Billy Van Deusen was standing in front of his club, while a Fair One was endeavoring to crank a "Ford" that refused to be cranked. Billy went to assist the lady. He cranked and cranked, and then he realized that perhaps there was no gasoline in the tank. When he found that that was the trouble he went out and purchased a five-gallon can of gasoline and started the lady's flivver for her. In starting the crank got back at him by slapping him on the wrist. The lady got sympathetic, bound up his hand, and suggested that Billy ride with her to his home.

On the way Billy became amorous and insisted on holding the lady's hand. She couldn't guide the machine and control a man's advances at the same time, so she decided to play Billy a trick. She stopped the flivver and told Billy to get out and get under. While Billy was fiddling with the car's intestines she made a sudden start and left Billy biting the dust.

Arriving home, Billy found a messenger perched on his steps. Billy took the telegram and read with sorrow that his friend Jack Ainsley had been hurt in an auto smash and was confined in the hospital. Jack was lying on the bed when Billy rushes in and became demonstrative in his condolence. The nurse admonished him to be a little quiet in his actions and when Billy turned to tell her where she headed in, he staggered. The nurse was none other than the Fair One who had been troubled with flivveritis. Billy tried to recall the incident but the Fair One was all for duty and paid all her attentions to Jack. Then Billy left.

In the hospital hall, from the Harmless Ward, strolled a weeping "nut" who was searching for his lost clam. He garnered Billy near the elevator shaft and wailed out a sobbing tale about how he had lost his "poor little pet clam!" Billy gasped and tried to get away, but the nut was after him—until Billy fell down the elevator shaft. The crash was heard all through the building and poor Billy was put in bed, a bandaged but not muchly injured invalid. The "nut" took the "anaesthetic sign" from another invalid's door and hung it on Billy's entrance. The internes came down the hall, saw the sign, entered the room and drugged the sleeping Billy; then dragged him off to the operating room to be cut into sections. But Billy suddenly awakened and refused to be cut up. The doctors and the internes fought with him and subdued him.

The "nut" strolled the hospital hall and whimpered while the Fair One tended Jack. The "nut's" incantations came to the ears of the Fair One and she rushed out to learn the cause. She soon realized that a grave mistake was being made in the operating room and she rushed there. The doctor was just about to begin the slaughter when the Fair One rushed in and announced the truth. Billy was revived quickly while the "nut" was being taken to the "padded cell." Billy came to, and, calling the Fair One to his side, announced that in return for her rescue he would marry her. She laughed, but the doctor laughed louder, and when Billy inquired the cause of the mirth, the doctor informed him that he admired his taste, but being that the Fair One was already Mrs. Doctor, Billy couldn't possibly marry her. So Billy reached for the ether bottle and put himself to sleep!

THINIM STOUT! (June 11).—The cast: Stout (Orral Humphrey); Mrs. Stout (Lucille Ward); Thinim (John Gough).

Thinim is the chief of a great thinning establishment organized to make fat people thin and thin people thinner. Little Stout and Mrs. Stout are hardly a matched pair, since Mrs. Stout is stouter than Stout. Stout's idea of "class" is the thin woman, and Stout makes no secret of it to his spouse. She catches him flirting with one of the thin 'uns and weeps copiously, but he pacifies her and takes her to the park for an airing. Here they come across an advertisement in a paper and discover Thinim's advertisement. The Stouts decide to call on him.

Thinim has no trouble impressing the Stouts with his wonderful system. Mrs. Stout enrolls in the class, but first insists that Thinim try the course on her husband. Stout is loath to be the "fall guy," but Thinim and his flunkey helper hold him and force him to drink some of "Thinim's Thinning Fluid." Once the stuff is in his system they take him to the Apparatus Room for the rest of the cure.

Stout is thrown into the steam room and enveloped with steam under pressure. Mrs. Stout commences to feel doubtful about her husband's health and watches him through the glass peephole in the furnace floor. Thinim soon decides that Stout has been "steamed" enough and lets him into the "Dry Room," a place full with heat and little air. Stout soon dries up and sags under the ordeal.

Mrs. Stout pleads that Thinim allow her shriveled hubby to come out into the open and offers the thinning magnate many sheckels if he will comply. Money does not move him, but when the fair lady weeps many tears Thinim's heart softens and he opens the door to Stout.

But the Stout that staggers out is not the Stout that was forced in. He is thinned to the bone and the once nicely fitting clothes hung to him like so many rags. Thinim helps him to the office, where he falls into a chair completely unnerved. Mrs. Stout looks at the shadow of her former husband and threatens to go into hysterics. Again she pleads with Thinnen to help her, and restore to his former rotundity her poor little hubby.

So Thinim breaks the rules and takes from his safe his "Anti-Thin Fluid," one gulp of which brings fat and strength. He gives Stout a dose and lo! and behold! The shriveled person slowly resumes his former shape. Thinim turns his head upon the sad scene of a happy reunion, but Stout, imbued with fat and strength, cannot forget his harsh treatment and wreaks on Thinim a hearty vengeance.

VOGUE.

A PLANE STORY (June 6).—The cast: The Chief Mechanic (Rube Miller); The Aviator (Arthur Tavares); Colonel Brown (Joseph Ray); Colonel Brown's Daughter (Madge Kirby); The Spy (Henry Huckins); His Confederate (Alice Neice. Scenario written by Thomas Delmar. Produced by Rube Miller.

Col. Brown, Chief of the Aviation Service of the U. S. A., receives a copy of the new code of the service. The spy has orders to get a copy of it, so tries first to bribe Rube, who is Chief Mechanic of the Corp. Rube is insulted, so makes it rather warm for the spy. Later the Aviator is approached. As Rube has cut him out for the favor of the Colonel's daughter Madge, he thinks to get square with Rube, also to get the big money. Rube is intrusted with the book, therefore, Art is more than willing.

He engages a couple of rough necks that are also employed in the service and they attack Rube. At first they are unsuccessful. Rube, fearing another attack, and thinking that Madge will not be suspected, gives it in her charge. He is seen by the Spy's confederate, who tells the Spy. Rube is then assaulted, his clothes taken from him and donned by Art.

Madge is taken up in a plane with Art. She, of course, thinks it is Rube. Up in the air, Art tries to get the book from Madge. They struggle, and both fall out of the machine. Madge happens to grab a parachute, while Art saves himself by grabbing a rope hanging from underneath the machine. Art has the book. Madge lands safely. Rube finds her, they hurry to the office of the Spy and find that Art has just arrived. He is showing the book, when Rube enters, regains the book, and puts them all to flight with the aid of a revolver that he finds during the fight, then to the office of the Colonel where Rube is rewarded for his bravery with the hand of Madge.

HIS BLOW OUT (June 11).—The cast: The Crook (Arthur Moon); His Accomplice (Rena Rogers); Bill (Paddy McGuire); Bloggie (Ben Turpin); The Plumber (Jack Connelly); A Frenchman (Edward Sedgwick); His Wife (Louise Owens).

Bungling Bill and Bloggie read that Murphy, a rich plumber, is willing to let two capable men conduct his business on a commission basis while he is on his honeymoon. They succeed in getting the job. Murphy's fiancee is the pal of a crook, and when he gives her the necklace, she distracts his attention and jumps into an auto.

Murphy is prevented from following by Slim, her accomplice, who knocks him off the running board of the car, and he is picked up by a cop, who thinks he is drunk. Murphy bribes the cop by putting his hand in his pocket, and the cop releases him, but the wily plumber, instead of giving him some money, hands him a wrapped slice of cheming gum, and makes off before the cop realizes his trickery.

Arriving home, Slim and the girl, whose name is Dora, find that a water pipe is leaking in the wall. Dora informs the janitor, who phones for Bloggie and Bill. Before they reach Dora's apartment Bloggie and Bill have a number of unfortunate occurrences. Bill's efforts to stop the flow of water prove unavailing, and he starts out of the room, when he sees the stolen necklace. He takes it and starts out with Slim following him, as Dora has seen Bill's theft, and she informs her accomplice. Bill, knowing that Slim is following him, hides in the hall, and Slim thinks he has entered Romany's apartment. When he goes in Bill flees.

Romany's wife screams and Romany throws Slim out. Slim strikes the hallway floor with a gripping thud, and then hears screams in his apartment. He finds Bloggie trying to force his girl to kiss him, and he and Bloggie start a battle. While this is going on, the janitor is sweeping off the front of the apartment house, and Bill is again in his apartment trying to flirt with the wife. Bill promises to do so after she kisses him, and he accomplishes this by giving her the necklace, and as they kiss, the janitor, her husband, enters. He grabs a gun. Bill, in fleeing from him, enters the apartment of Romany, and the wife screams again. Romany, who is in the bath tub, starts out and comes into the room in his bathrobe. He throws Bill out of the hall at the same time that the janitor, who, searching for Bill, enters Dora's apartment, and helps Slim subdue Bloggie, and throws Bloggie out. Bill and Bloggie meet

Artistic Projection

Large sums of money, the best artists available, and the most particular care may produce a truly artistic film.

But its success or failure depends largely on the way it is projected.

Maybe you're trying to get perfect results from an alternating current light. It can't be done.

Any operator who has used both will tell you that the best results can be obtained only by using direct current. It alone produces that steady restful light so much desired.

A Westinghouse-Cooper Hewitt Rectifier Outfit

will give it to you. Furthermore, it will give you regulation of light to suit the very dense and colored films. Operation of outfit is simple and noiseless. Nothing complicated to get out of order. Folder 4205-B will give you further information. Write for it.

TRIANGLE PLAYS

KEYSTONE COMEDIES Are Released Only by TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION

MEMORANDUM

May 31st, 1916.

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION,
1459 Broadway,
New York City.

Gentlemen:-

I've just had a last look at "The Love Comet", the latest Keystone which is being shipped today, and it's one of the best yet. I doubt if I can make Comedies any better, but now I am going to try to make more of them.

By the way, this is the 56th Keystone we have finished for TRIANGLE exhibitors and we're all at work completing ten more. At the present time there are fifteen companies in the field, and before the summer rolls around I hope to have twenty working.

Last November when we first began shipping Keystones everyone said we could not keep up the fast work -- that either the quality or quantity would have to go, and that we could never live up to the reputation we had attained for producing the best comedies in the business.

Now we are willing to stand on what we have accomplished. Fifty-six comedies in seven months is almost a record, and I personally have received enough letters from exhibitors and moving picture fans to assure me that Keystones are now and will continue to be the most popular comedies.

Sincerely yours,

Mack Sennett

You should read the above note from Mack Sennett, the man who made Keystone Comedies famous. Don't you agree that 56 comedies in the past seven months is a record to be envied?

The making of a good comedy is a man-sized job—far harder than the production of a large feature film—for it's extremely difficult to have continued action so funny that the audience will be kept laughing, combined with a good story.

Years ago Mack Sennett discovered the knack of producing a comedy that could be guaranteed to furnish screams of joy, roars of laughter, and he has kept up the good work ever since, until now Keystones are even better than ever, if that is possible.

Now he has a special formula which is often used. Proved to get desired results at all times, it is something like this:

"Take one perfectly good dramatic plot, soak in several gallons of fun and laughter, pour in one villain and mix thoroughly. Add one favored sweetheart, and stir the contents until it is com-

Many Have Tried But All Have Failed To Equal

letely twisted out of shape into a hilarious tangle f fun and frolic."

Time, expense, effort or inconvenience are never pared in the making of Keystone Comedies. The rders are to make the best pictures possible, re- ardless of cost. The wrecking of an expensive au- omobile, the burning of a two-story house are rifles. A dip in an icy lake at the top of a snowy nountain or a leap from a moving train are details, while a journey of five or six hundred miles for a pecial location at which to take a few scenes is all n the day's work.

The proper selection of a program is all important o the successful theatre. It is always necessary to urnish a good comedy or two to give the bill the roper balance.

Keystone Comedies are acknowledged to be the best Comedies today; and the exhibitor who can show these pictures to his patrons is sure to give them a laugh and send them home in the very best of spirits. Keystone Comedies are released only through The Triangle Film Corporation as a part of TRIANGLE PLAYS and on a regular program.

If you are not running Triangle Plays, drop us a line now for information regarding their presentation. It is just possible that we may be able to show you how to increase your box-office returns.

head on in the air in the hallway, and they both go out.

Murphy, meanwhile, has come upon Slim's auto standing in front of the apartment house, and he enters the janitor's, where he gets into a fight with the janitor and his wife.

Upstairs Murphy enters the apartment of Romany, and when the Frenchman's wife sees him, she faints. Murphy starts searching for his necklace, and opens the bathroom door as Romany finishes dressing. The sight of another intruder is too much for him, and he faints. Murphy, who thinks everybody is crazy, then goes to Dora's apartment, and runs everybody out. The janitor's wife calls in a cop, the same one Murphy tricked, and when he sees Murphy, he starts to beat him. The janitor's wife throws the necklace down, and flees with Blogie and Bill to the apartment beneath that of Slim and Dora. There they find the crook, Slim, and Dora, and as they all start an argument, the sounds of Murphy battling with the cop is heard in the apartment above. They are about to start out when the ceiling falls with Murphy and the cop. The flow of water is stopped by the janitor, who hammers a wooden plug into the hole in the pipe.

LOVE, BURGLARS AND A BULL DOG (June 13).—The cast: Old resident (Rube Miller); his wife (Alice Neice); the new neighbor (Arthur Tavares); his wife (Madge Kirby). Directed by Rube Miller. Scenario by Thos. Delmar).

Rube, the old resident, whose principal work is sitting around reading while his wife does the work, is engaged at his regular task one day, when the new neighbors move in. Rube hurries over to greet the wife. Alice, his wife, sees him over there and promptly chases him home. Arthur, the new neighbor, also objects to Rube talking to his wife, because he is jealous. Later, when they are settled, Rube and the new neighbor's wife have a flirtation from their windows. Of course, they are caught and punished by their other half.

One day the laundry man makes a mistake and leaves the laundry for the new neighbor at the house of the old resident. While his wife is out, and the new neighbor is also absent, Rube takes the laundry over, but leaves a part of it at his own house. His wife comes home and finds this. The new neighbor also comes home in time to catch Rube and his wife together. In the meantime a couple of crooks that have seen an open window climb in and are going to rob the place. Rube, when he is caught, jumps out of the window. The new neighbor's dog chases him. Rube climbs in his own window and the dog follows him. The new neighbor and the wife of the old resident discover the crooks and chase them in a closet. The new neighbor goes for the police. Rube, failing to shake the dog in his own house, runs to the new neighbors. The crooks have gotten out of the closet and locked up the new neighbor's wife in it. Rube, to get away from the dog, gets in the closet and shuts the door on the dog. There he finds the wife. Then the husband returns with the police. Shots are fired through the door, etc. The crooks are caught by the dog. Rube convinces the new neighbor that he caught them, and everything is all serene.

AMERICAN.

JEALOUSY'S FIRST WIFE (Two parts—June 5).—The cast: Homer Withington (George Periolat); Helen, his wife (Vivian Rich); Randolph Truax (Alfred Vosburgh); Margaret Stone (Louise Lester); Captain Calkins (Robert Klein). Directed by Carl M. Le Viness.

The green-eyed monster is depicted here in the mind of Homer Withington, a successful business man, because he used his brains, and in an unsuccessful husband because he failed to use them. His wife, Helen, leads a terrible existence because of his jealous fears, and his little daughter Beatrice lives in the midst of turmoil and suspicion.

Homer is so obsessed with the fear that his wife is entertaining someone else, that he leaves the office and rushes home to spy upon her. On another occasion he accuses her of flirting with Randolph Truax, a social favorite, who, up to that moment she does not even know. One day Homer catches his wife Helen writing a letter. He snatches it violently from her hand, only to find that it is to her mother. His frequent apologies satisfy each time, but leave a taint of bitterness.

Later on, Truax's auto knocks Helen down. Truax takes her in his machine to her own home. He places her on the davenport and makes her comfortable. Homer, snooping around, enters by the back stairway, and just as Truax is placing the pillows under Helen's head, Homer enters and sees. Magnifying the situation in his jealous anger, Homer seizes a heavy cane, and sneaking upon Truax strikes him unconscious. As Helen tries to explain, Homer strikes her in the face, accusing her of sending the child out with the maid so that she could be alone with her lover.

Banished from her home by her infuriated husband, Helen seeks rest in the park. She is lured to an apartment and robbed of her clothes. Not knowing where to turn for assistance, she hastily scribbles a note and drops it out of the window. It falls into the hands of Truax, who rescues her just in time. He takes her home to her husband, forces Homer to listen to the truth and then Helen refuses to longer live with him. The lesson comes too late for Homer, who by his cruel treatment, has forfeited her love forever. Later on, Truax meets Helen, and woes and wins her for his own.

CONVICTED FOR MURDER (Two Parts—June 12).—The cast: Elliott Reynolds (Edward Coxen); Bob Kingdon (George Field); Louise Helm (Lizette Thorne); Gordon Helm (Charles Newton); Pete Donovon (Jack Farrell); the butler (Harvey Clark).

Elliott Reynolds, handling politics for the "Call," receives an assignment from Bob Kingdon, Elliott's closest friend and the city editor, to investigate charges of graft against the city administration. Inasmuch as Gordon Helm, the father of Louise, Elliott's fiancee, is the power behind the political machine, Elliott anticipates trouble, but accepts the assignment as a matter of duty.

In order to play fair with Helm, Elliott warns him of the purpose of the "Call." Helm, believing that Elliott is notifying him in a roundabout way of his determination not to press the investigation too closely, makes light of the warning and tells Elliott to go as far as he likes. This results in certain charges being brought home to Helm and proof furnished to the district attorney.

Helm's right-hand man, Donovon, learns that the expose is to be made immediately by the "Call" and gives Helm an advance copy of the story. Elliott begs Bob to hold the story until he has seen Helm and has explained his position fully. Bob does so, and asks only that Elliott phone him immediately after his interview with Helm, so that the story may go through at once. The interview between Helm and Elliott results in a violent quarrel. Elliott and Louise, who has taken his side, leave the house, when Elliott remembers his promise to Bob, and returns to call him up. A few moments after he has left Louise, she and the old family butler are startled by a shot and rush into the house to find Elliott in Helm's library standing over his dead body. The butler having overheard the quarrel, accuses Elliott of the crime and he is arrested. At the trial the butler's testimony with that of Donovon, only too glad to see Elliott out of the way, ends in Elliott's conviction.

Louise is prostrated, and Bob's efforts to aid Elliott are vain. Upon the morning of the date upon which sentence is to be passed, the butler at work in the library, trips and catches hold of the portieres, pulling one of them down. He picks it up and finds a note behind it. The note is from Helm, written immediately after Elliott's departure and explains that a phone call from Donovon has convinced him that exposure is inevitable, as a result, he has taken the only way to save Louise the disgrace of being the daughter of a convicted felon. The butler goes through a struggle, but word that Louise is in a critical condition, determines him. He hastens to the court, arriving just as sentence is about to be passed, and gives the message to the judge. Bob grasps the situation and explains the possible chain of events leading up to Helm's death. His story of the phone message from Donovon, Helm's decision and suicide and the falling of the message behind the curtain when Helm clutched the table cover after shooting himself, is accepted by the judge and prosecution. Elliott is cleared and returns to Louise.

MUSTANG.

A MAN'S FRIEND (Two Parts—June 2).—The cast: Nell (Nita Davis); Jim, Her Husband (Lawrence Peyton); Tom, Her Brother (Tom Hanan); Hal, an Old Friend (Art Acord).

Jim and Nell are married, unhappily for her part. Jim spends most of his time drinking and gambling and the rest in abusing her. In a nearby town lives Tom, Nell's brother, whose best friend is Hal, a trapper. One day Tom comes to visit his sister and learns of her unhappiness. He tells her that she must come with him, and she does so. Jim is furious. Tom introduces Nell to Hal, and there is at once a mutual attraction between them. Later, after Nell has obtained a divorce from Jim, she marries Hal.

A year passes and a child is born to them. One day Hal finds a dog in one of his traps. Its leg is broken. He takes it to his cabin and nurses it back to health. Meanwhile, Jim is in serious difficulty in the town where he lives. The citizens there decide to get rid of him.

Perched on a rail, he is escorted to the outskirts of the town, and there informed that if he ever comes back he will be shot. So Jim starts across the hills to another town.

Night comes on, and, seeing a cabin in the distance, he goes towards it. But before knocking he chances to look in a window, and there sees his former wife Nell, with Hal and the baby. This sight arouses his jealousy, and as a means of revenge he manages to reach in the window, while Hal and Nell are in another room, and obtain the baby.

Returning to the room, the baby is missed and Hal and Nell become frantic. The dog takes up the trail and finally comes across Jim, just as he is crossing a stream. He sees the dog following and becomes frightened. Slipping on a rock, he falls into the stream and is being carried away. The dog sees the baby in the water, snatches it out, and takes it to a nearby deserted cabin. Under this cabin a mother dog is nursing a family of pups, and Hal's dog brings the baby in and leaves it, then returns to get Hal and Nell. Dripping wet, Jim comes to the same cabin, and, finding no one at home, enters.

Meanwhile, Hal and Nell are frantically scouring the country for their baby. While at their cabin the dog is awaiting their return.

Jim endeavors to sleep, but always he hears the faint cries of the baby, and thinks that it is haunting him.

Morning comes, with Nell and Hal still searching through the woods. The dog returns to the second cabin, just as Jim, now half maddened by the crying and moaning of the baby, is leaving. The dog pounces on him, and a furious fight follows. In the end Jim is killed. Again returning to Hal's cabin, the dog finds Hal and Nell just entering, having searched all night. He leads them off, bringing them to Jim's body. And then he leads them to the second cabin, where, in care of the mother dog, they find the baby.

THE PILGRIM (Two Parts—June 9).—The cast: The Pilgrim (Frank Borzage); Jim Niles (Dick La Reno); Nita Dudley (Anna Little); Little Eva (Mary Gladding); Joe Mex (Jack Richardson).

The pilgrim first makes his acquaintance as he trudges on his weary burro in the trackless wastes of the desert, approaching a western settlement. He is one of the ordinary sights. He gains but scant attention from those he meets. Pausing at a saloon, the first chance to indulge, he swaps a pair of spurs for a drink and sits down at a table to enjoy it. He makes a hit with Jim Niles, foreman of Dudley's ranch, and is hired as a cow-puncher. Nita Dudley, the daughter of the ranch owner, comes home from school, creating a flutter of pleasurable excitement about the ranch.

The pilgrim takes everything calmly, registering no excitement over the arrival of Nita, and still less over the act of striking down Joe Mex with a blow, when that worthy attempts to interfere with his drink and his comfort in the saloon and dance hall. Joe Mex is found after the melee, lying prone on the floor, stabbed with his own knife. The pilgrim mounts his horse and rides back to the ranch. In the brush near the ranch house the pilgrim grimly rolls a cigarette while the cowboys search for him.

Nita, hearing of the fight, dons her western attire, takes her emergency kit and starts off to the aid of the injured Joe Mex, knowing he will need help. Losing her way, she meets the pilgrim, who escorts her safely to the side of the wounded Joe. The pilgrim clears the room and in a cool, calm manner assists Nita in caring for the wounded man. His rare courage is rewarded by her friendship and in the days that follow Nita and the pilgrim enjoy many lone walks and rides together.

And one day, when the pilgrim, emboldened by her attitude, declares his love for her, she takes a picture from her dresser and hands it to him with the simple announcement, "We are to be married next month." True to his cool nature, the pilgrim accepts the information blankly, lifts his hat, nods a calm farewell, and joins again the great army of pilgrims, riding, scouting, working, floating throughout the vast cowlands of the West.

MUTUAL MASTERPICTURE

WHISPERING SMITH (Signal Film Corp.—Five Parts—June 5).—The cast: Marion Sinclair (Helen Holmes); Sinclair's Friend (Belle Hutchinson); Whispering Smith (J. P. McGowan); Murray Sinclair (Paul C. Hurst); Du Sang (Leo D. Maloney); Karg (F. M. Van Norman); Rebstock (Samuel Appel); Williams (Walter Rodgers); Ed. Banks (Sheriff Thomas G. Lingham);); Deputy Sheriff (E. Howland); Bartender at the Three Horses Saloon (William Behrens); Tom Smith (C. U. Wells); Rooney, Chief Despatcher (J. E. Perkins); J. S. Bucks General Manager (N. Z. Woods); B. O. Daley, Superintendent (G. H. Wisschussen); G. McCloud, Superintendent (Chance Ward); Wickwire (William Brunton); Clerk in Superintendent's office (Hugh Adams); Roadmaster (Slim Roe). Directed by J. P. McGowan.

Whispering Smith is a virile, fearless type of the true American whose theory of life is to give every man a chance to show what is in him. There is nothing of the bully or braggart about him. He is only a man who knows instinctively what is right and never falters in his steps to see that justice is given where it is deserved and crime punished on the same basis.

Whispering Smith loved Marion, a carefree and beautiful Western girl. His love was that of the strong, clean living man, who knows no physical danger, but is reticent and bashful in his love affairs. Lacking as a suitor the characteristics that made him esteemed and feared among his fellow-men, he was beaten out for her hand by Sinclair, a dashing devil-may-care sort of fellow among the women, but an unscrupulous and vindictive man at heart.

Marion's life with Sinclair was not all joy and happiness. Slowly he was killing her love for him, but in the manner of his kind he believed that harshness was the way to rule women. When the story opens, Sinclair, who is foreman of a wrecking crew on a mountain section of a transcontinental railroad, is living in one of the company's cabins in the small division terminal, "Medicine Bend," a typical Western railroad and mining town. This town was located at the foot of a steep declivity, noted for the frequency of the wrecks occuring there, particularly among freight trains.

The officials of the road were worried at the great number of the wrecks, but were more concerned with the robberies that took place after each collision. No trace of the thieves could be found. The railroad detectives had about given up in despair when Whispering Smith was sent to "Medicine Bend" to put an end to the robberies. Sinclair was never suspected. Smith, however, discovers soon after his arrival that Sinclair is the brains of the gang engaged in looting the freight cars. Smith, to save Marion the disgrace of having her husband branded as a thief, does not expose him, but causes the division superintendent, McCloud, to discharge him.

Life for Marion soon becomes unbearable and she leaves him. This arouses to frenzy the desperate man, who plans to get revenge on the railroad by burning the "Smoky Creek" trestle. Assisted by several of the band who had been engaged in looting the cars, Sinclair sets fire to the trestle, causing a disastrous wreck. Smith, determined to capture the men responsible, discovers that Sinclair is at the bottom of the plot. Again his love for Marion induces him not to expose her husband until he talks with her. He effects a reconciliation between Sinclair and Marion and upon the former's promise to lead a better life and to leave "Medicine Bend," Whispering Smith lets him go with his wife, and the girl he still loves.

THE SECRET OF THE SUBMARINE.—The release dates for the first and the subsequent episodes of this serial have been changed since we printed the synopsis of the first installment in the issue for May 13. Under the new schedule the first episode of this serial was released on May 22, and a synopsis of it was printed on page 1220 of May 13 issue. No. 2 was released on May 29, and a story of it was published in the same issue and on the same page as the story of episode No. 1. A description of installment No. 3 can be found on page 1394 of the May 20 issue. This was released on June 5. These stories contain the old release days, and the exhibitor is cautioned in using them to see that he affixes the new date. Synopsis of No. 4 will be published in a subsequent issue. A complete list of the first six releases of this serial with their revised dates is published in this issue in the pages containing the release days of all pictures.

PATHE NEWS NO. 43 (May 27).

Jourdanton, Texas.—Hundreds of snakes are rounded up when this city celebrates its own novel kind of "clean-up" week. Subtitles—A Snake King shows how to catch a rattler. Texas children handle rattlers as if they were kittens.

Sheepshead, N. Y.—Rodman Law, the daredevil king, defies Fate once more as he demonstrates for military authorities how to escape from a balloon if shot in mid-air. Subtitle—At a height of 1,000 feet he explodes the balloon and makes the descent with a parachute.

Coast Artillery Fort.—Great twelve- inch mortars guarding the United States Coast are given a through test to insure their efficiency in time of need. Subtitles—The shell weighs 1,045 pounds and is carried seven miles. Ten-inch disappearing guns, which play a prominent part in the European War, are also kept ready.

Great Lakes, Ill.—The call for Citizens' Preparedness is answered by the Great Lakes Academy, whose students are given thorough training in naval tactics. Subtitle—More such boys as these and this Nation need not fear.

Paris, France.—Heartened and rested, remnants of the heroic Belgian army march proudly on their way to reinforce the Allied front at Verdun.

New York City.—President and Mrs. Wilson arrive to attend the marriage ceremonies of his medical aide and friend, Surgeon General Cary T. Grayson. Subtitle—Dr. Grayson and his bride, who was Miss Alice Gordon.

El Paso, Texas.—All hands cheer as the last post is placed on the Elephant Butte Dam, the largest project in the world. Subtitle—The total capacity of the lake is 862 billion gallons.

Bellefonte, Pa. — Followers of Izaak Walton find health and excitement as the trout fishing season opens.

THE FATAL PIE (Pathe—June 5).—We're going to let Goldberg, the cartoonist, tell the story of his picture cartoon, by printing a few of the subtitles of the film.

Well then: "Lotta Mincemeat," the beautiful heroine of his romance, admired for her charm and refinement, eats soup without walking the baby and does not look for gold-fish in the fingerbowl.

Nut Sundae, an honest soda clerk, betrothed to Lotta, has amassed a fortune of $81.30 by putting sawdust in the ice cream soda.

I. Pickup, a prosperous junk dealer, who is determined to steal Lotta from Nut, has tempted her with a nickel's worth of chewing gum and a horse-car ride, but she sticks to Nut.

Julius Mincemeat, father of Lotta, who makes pies for a living, but who gets his income from his hardware business through which he sells hammers and axes to make an impression on his pies, sees Pickup in the act of forcibly showering his attentions and hands on Lotta, and delivers himself, as follows: "My child is being attacked. I hope she doesn't scratch the furniture in the struggle," etc., etc., until Nut Sundae, falsely imprisoned, has "a sudden inspiration." He disguises himself as an orange phosphate and spills through the bars to liberty—and Lotta.

SOME FRESH WATER FISHES (Pathe—on same reel as foregoing).—The first picture shows the stickleback, a little fish about three inches long, inhabiting the cold rivers. It gets its name from the spikes which project from its back and sides. It is a greedy little fish and a great fighter. The next picture shows the green tench, a fish about a foot long and much sought as food. It has small, deeply imbedded scales and is most tenacious of life. At one time the touch of the tench was believed to have miraculous curative powers. The carp, next shown, is readily domesticated and is usually bred in ponds. It was originally introduced in this country from Europe. The length of life of the carp is proverbial.

THE ZINC MINES OF LANG HIT (French Indo-China June 5).—Lang Hit is in French Indo-China, and the method employed in taking zinc from the mines is different from our method, and is highly interesting.

Much of the mining machinery is operated by electricity, generated in the power station shown in the film. Hand drills are still used in some parts of the mines. The ore is conveyed to the works on a cableway, and a primitive wheel supplies water for washing it.

How the ore is washed, crushed and ground is clearly shown. Then we see the zinc ore conveyed to the smelting furnace. The calcined ore is shown being broken up by hand before being placed in sacks for shipment. It is then carried on a long journey through jungle and rapids, before it reaches the coast for export.

AROUND MOUNT FUJI (Picturesque Japan—On same reel as foregoing).—Mount Fuji (also called Fujiuama and Fusiyama) is a dormant volcano in the Island of Hondo, and is the loftiest summit of Japan. Lake Kawaguchi, which is at its base, is one of the most noteworthy parts of the surrounding landscape. The white peak of the great mountain is reflected from its height of 12,390 feet in the waters of the lake below. The nearby village of Funatou; natives threshing corn to be stored as winter food; scenes near Mount Fuji's crater; Lake Hakone; Lake Montusu, another beautiful body of water near Mount Fuji, and a general view of Mount Fuji and Lake Sholi are also shown.

WHO'S GUILTY? NO. 5 (Sold Out"—Arrow—Two Parts—June 5).—This picture tells of Leila Austen, a wealthy girl, who leaves Halsey Brent, a young suitor, to marry Tom Carter, a mining engineer. Mrs. Austen was more than merely a rich mother; she was a good mother, devoting her life to Leila's growth. Rather than interfere with what seemed the choicest desire of their daughter's heart, her parents finally consented to Leila's marriage to Tom, though preferring Brent as a son-in-law. Mr. Austen even gave Leila a ten-thousand-dollar check as a wedding present, in order that she might continue to enjoy the luxuries to which she was accustomed.

Leila and Tom establish themselves happily near the mine that Tom owned and was developing, and Leila sank her ten thousand in her husband's property. In return she received stock certificates. Tom's mine, through lack of development, failed, and Leila's parents, indignant at the sight of their daughter doing real work, dragged her back to the city with them. Then Leila, thinking to help Tom, offered to sell her stock to Brent whom she permitted to see her often. Brent learned Tom's mine was at last a success, and failing to inform Leila of this, bought the stock at a ridiculously low price.

Just after she delivered the certificate to Brent, Leila learned of his deception. Brent refused to return the stock except on impossible conditions. Then Tom entered the house, unknown to either Leila or Brent. He heard details of the transaction that left him bitterly suspicious, details that goaded him to madness, and resulted in tragedy. Was Tom guilty? Was it Leila? Was it her mother? Was it Brent? Or were they all guilty? The picture raises this question.

THE IRON CLAW NO. 15 ("The Double Resurrection"—Feature—Two Parts—June 5).—The mysterious veiled stranger steals the treasure from Legar, and the Claw, irate at his loss, attacks one of his henchmen, who doubts his sincerity. The latter, maddened, and approached by the veiled woman, offers to barter the secrets of the criminal for half of the fortune. The veiled woman then goes to Margery and her father, and asks them to be present when the traitor hands over the confession. They are suspicious, and the frightened girl orders the stranger to reveal her identity. She and her father are astounded beyond measure when Davy's face appears below the lifted veil.

But Legar and his confederates are at hand and manage to capture Margery once more. An exciting motorboat chase follows. The villainous Legar, having landed, commandeers a flat-car and rushes off with the girl, who is bound and gagged. Davy, Golden and the detectives follow in an automobile, and when Legar sees this he throws Margery to the tracks. A train, traveling at express speed, threatens the girl's life, and the Laughing Mask, resurrected, does a trick at the switch.

LUKE LAUGHS LAST (Rolin—June 5).—Luke is a butler. He doesn't like his work, but he likes his job. It gives him a chance to wear a dress suit. He's a bum butler, too. Snub, a gallant, who is sweet on the madam's maid, runs afoul of Law and Order, two cops, and takes refuge in the house of his own true love. Trouble. Then in strolls a cop fond of the cook and fonder of her pantry.

Luke and Snub have dealings with the cop. More trouble. Then in comes a burglar. He knows there's nothing in the place worth stealing—he just busts in so's he can be arrested. He's tired of paying room rent. He gets up into the room of the lady of the house, and with the assistance of a professional brother, scares the lady out of her bed and into a fit. Still more trouble. Then the crowd below makes an unenthusiastic attempt to get the gunmen above. Most trouble. Luke gets his hands on a brace of regular revolvers and while he's worrying about what he's going to do with them, the burglars walk into them and—Luke laughs last.

WHO'S GUILTY? No. 6 ("Sowing the Wind"—Arrow—Two Parts—June 12).—Cyrus Turnbull employs both Hugh and Henry Scott as confidential employees. Both are deeply in love with Marjorie Turnbull; but, despite her father's faith in Henry rather than Hugh, Marjorie loves the younger brother. Old Turnbull gives some valuable bonds in Hugh's care, and the latter, eager to meet Marjorie and be clandestinely married, misplaces them. Henry tries to cover his brother, but Turnbull believes Hugh has stolen the bonds. Weakly permitting himself to be persuaded into a hasty departure by the well-meaning Henry and Marjorie, Hugh runs away. Then, when he reads in the newspapers the next day of the general belief of his guilt, he feigns suicide. Marjorie and Henry, believing Hugh dead, are married. Later Hugh comes back. Bitterly he accuses Henry of charging him with the theft so that Henry could marry Marjorie. In a struggle between the brothers, Turnbull is accidentally killed. And then, too late, the bonds are found. But for all this who was really guilty? Was it one of the individuals concerned—or can the tragedy more properly be blamed on a too general proneness to judge seeming circumstances as fact?

THE IRON CLAW (No. 6, "The Unmasking of Davy"—Feature—Two Parts—June 12).—Jules Legar, the Iron Claw, sends emissaries to get the fortune which he has recovered and which is secreted in a woods some distance off. But when they arrive there, they are confronted by a revolver in the hand of Laughing Mask and are ordered to hand over the instructions for finding the hiding place. A battle ensues, and the paper flies from the hands of the man who holds it. As one of his companions jumps for it, Margery appears on horseback and dashing past makes a daring pick-up. In the mix-up the Mask is shot in the left hand. Margery returns home and there meets the detectives in search of the Laughing Mask. Davy appears with his left hand swathed in bandages and is arrested. But just as the handcuffs are slipped on his wrists the Mask appears in the doorway, announces the innocence of the prisoner, and fools us to a fare-you-well. The next episode is called "The Vanishing Faker."

AN AWFUL ROMANCE (Mittenthal—June 12).—Heinie and Louie wake from their slumber and after a quarrel about the division of their stolen breakfast, they set out to seek their fortunes in an unsympathetic world—and spoil a valuable painting in the hands of Don Mendez, an art connoisseur, who is out with his sister.

Don Mendez is a fiery don who was raised on a bottle of tobacco juice, and he tells the boys they will work out the damage or die. "You shall watch this door of my sister's room, so that her American sweetheart can't spirit her away," he tells Heinie. "And you this one," is his command to Louie. But sister's sweetheart comes in through the window, and together he and sister plan our heroes' downfall. Sister entices first Heinie into her room and then caresses him with a brick. Louie is next and receives the same attention. Then the sweethearts elope and leave Heinie and Louie to the mercies (?) of the paprika person who awakes in due time and furnishes the hard luck twins with the excitement to which they are accustomed.

A $100.00 PICK-UP EVERY MONTH

If you are exhibiting to an average of a thousand people a day, you can add $100 a month to your income—and do it easily.

Here is a money-maker that is as good—thousands of theatre patrons the country over think—as a "feature." It is a feature—with brisk, interesting action, live subjects, laughable cartoon effects, and a lot of entertaining tricks to please the crowd, tied to the most modern motion-picture advertising ideas to please your local business men.

You don't have to be an advertising solicitor to sell this service. It sells itself. Just show a scenario to one of your business friends—show him what the feature is like—have him try it one month—and you've made a friend and customer.

ANIMATED Camel Films ADVERTISING

The most important thing about these films is that the public likes them. They give you a source of increased revenue without drawing the criticism of the crowd. They are not to be classed with slides, because they are a part of the entertainment itself, and spectators seldom walk out when they are being shown.

Camel Films have revolutionized motion picture advertising. They are prepared with the good will of the public in mind—and they represent a kind of advertising that is so valuable that any live business man is a favorable prospect when you present the proposition to him.

Here is the Animated Advertising the people like—the kind that advertisers appreciate. We make the selling of this service easy. We send you complete, understandable scenarios for banks, drug stores, jewelers, etc., and you can soon interest one or more to the point of giving the service a trial.

Add this attraction to your program now; get it for your house before some other exhibitor has skimmed the cream.

Here is good money—easy to get; a service that will grow after you have shown your patrons what it is like.

Write for complete particulars—also ask for booklet, "Putting Life in Your Advertising," which tells all about this service.

greatest dog trainer in Alaska, prepares to ship a consignment of dogs from Nome to France via the United States.

Lieut. Rene Haas, of the French army, who selected the dogs for army use, inspects sleds before shipment. The dogs are chained to a long rope, and led in packs to the steamship. A train of more than 100 dogs on a 350-foot-rope is probably the longest dog team ever seen. The dogs are placed on the scow from which they are taken by aerial trolley to the steamship.

THE GORGES OF COLORADO (Picturesque America) (on same reel as the foregoing).—The film shows the Arkansas River, which has cut an impressive gorge through the mountain barriers. This scenic wonder, known as the Royal Gorge, is one of the grandest sights of the Rocky Mountain region. The canyon of the Arkansas River is surpassed in magnificence only by the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, beautifully photographed in this film.

A MATRIMONIAL MARTYR (Pathecolored—Gold Rooster—Five Parts—June 19).—Erma Desmond lives with her uncle and aunt on their large estate on Long Island. She is in love with Chester Clynch, but her uncle frowns upon her choice and the two decide to elope. Meanwhile, Mrs. Hugo Stanley, wife of a scientist and a lady of very uncertain temper, is holding the fort against her husband and daughter. She is in one of her moods, and the family fights shy of her.

Erma plans to elope, but balks at the last moment and decides not to go. Her uncle, however, learns of her plans, and in his anger insists that she carry them out. She goes to the city and takes up her abode with a friend. Later, she leaves to accept a position as companion to Mrs. Stanley. The latter notes the marked likeness between the girl and herself and hires her. Mrs. Stanley then, her husband and daughter having gone off, leaves for a pleasure trip, installing Erma as head of the house and leaving her a check of large proportions to cover the expenses. There is a house party in progress at Stanley's at the time, but even the guests and servants fail to recognize Erma as the former employee, thinking that she has gone off. The only change they do note is in the remarkably sweet disposition of their mistress.

Sometime later, Stanley and the suitor for his daughter's hand, to whom Mrs. Stanley objected, return. Then the daughter comes home from boarding school, all of which greatly complicates matters and creates some highly dramatic and laughable situations. Stanley falls in love with his "wife" (who isn't his wife at all) and Gilberta, the daughter, smothers her "dear mother" with kisses. It's a lovely fix.

Matters finally are straightened out, but not without many absorbing complications. Finally a message from the real Mrs. Stanley, who had fled to Reno, announcing that she has secured a divorce, clears the road for Stanley and Erma who wish nothing more.

Triangle Film Corporation

THE PRIMAL LURE (Ince—Five parts—May 21).—The cast: Angus McConnell (William S. Hart); Lois LeMoyne (Margery Wilson); Richard Sylvester (Robert McKim); Pierre Vernaisse (Jerome Strom).

Angus McConnell is factor of the outpost of the Hudson Bay Company, which is dignified by the name of Fort Lu Cerne. The summer has been disastrous for the trappers, and they are deeply in the company's debt for provision. Angus keeps account of what they owe in a little book, and one night this precious book disappears. Angus vows all manner of vengeance on the culprit who has taken it. He keeps close watch on the office, and at last he beholds Lois Le Moyne, belle of the outpost, rummaging about his desk.

Unknown to him, she has come to make him a gift of a beautiful pair of moccasins, made with her own fair hands, so he concludes she is the thief, and has her thrown into the gaol. Then Richard Sylvester, the company inspector, comes to Fort Lu Cerne on his rounds. He sees Lois, falls in love with her, and has her released. On his promise that he will have Angus dismissed as factor and himself appointed, she agrees to wed him. This he accomplishes, and Angus takes to the trail alone. But before the wedding can take place an epidemic of sickness breaks out, and in terror the cowardly Sylvester flees with his bodyguard.

Angus, who has heard that the Blackfeet Indians are about to descend on the outpost to demand a white person to be sacrificed as an offering to the god who has brought down the plague, happily returns at this time and resumes the reins of authority. The Indian attack takes place, and after a thrilling fight, in which the whites are greatly outnumbered, Angus goes forth to offer himself as the victim. He is miraculously saved, however, and returns to the fort. But he finds that all the garrison have gone save Lois; and with these two great enemies alone in a terrible situation there comes about a great finish to a remarkable film.

A CHILD OF THE PARIS STREETS (Fine Arts.—Five Parts—May 21).—The cast: Mme. Dufrane (Jennie Lee); Judge of the French Court (Carl Stockdale); Eldest Son (Tully Marshall); Julie (Mae Marsh); Young Artist (Robert Harron); Nurse (Loyola O'Connor); an Apache (Bert Hadley).

Mme. Dufrane, queen of the Paris apaches, pleads with the judge of the French Court to spare judgment on her son, who is arraigned before him charged with theft. But he is deaf to her entreaties, and sentences the youth to the gallows. Heartbroken, Mme. Dufrane, who loves this boy better than her life, retires to the den of the apaches, determined that the judge shall suffer. Then, with the assistance of her eldest son, she kidnaps the judge's infant daughter, Julie, and escapes with her to the den.

Julie is raised as an apache. She is taught to steal with such expertness as to escape the shrewdest of the police. But, with her instinctive refinement, Julie rebels against her teachers, and is severely beaten, and threatened with death by strangulation. Made desperate, she packs her few belongings, and takes shelter in the studio of a young American artist, for whom she has posed several times. These two fall in love, and he attempts to protect and safeguard Julie; but one day she ventures out on the street, and the apaches seize her and carry her back to the den. Mme. Dufrane, her hatred aroused, orders her band to strangle her.

Meanwhile Julie's old nurse, who has been reduced to the position of selling trinkets on the streets, has seen Julie carried into the house of the apaches at 17 Rue Mort, and warns the judge, her father. Also the young artist learns of her danger, and rushes with the gendarmes to the stronghold, where Julie is rescued just as the apaches are about to put her to death. Of course, the artist is entitled to some reward for his goodness, and he proposes that the judge let him have Julie's hand in marriage. And being a good father, if a stern justice, he gives his daughter to the young man with his blessing.

MR. GOODE, THE SAMARITAN (Fine Arts—Five parts May 28).—The cast: Alphonse Irving Goode (De Wolf Hopper); Shorty Sal (Fay Tincher); Shifty Ed (Edward Dillon), Montgomery Fox, alias Foxy Monte (Chester Withey); Evelina Goode (Margaret Marsh); Mrs. Goode (Lillian Langdon); Butler (Max Davidson).

Mr. Goode, a wealthy old gentleman, takes his wife and daughter, Evelina, out for a spin in their automobile, but throwing in the wrong lever the machine backs into the side of the road and burns up. They continue their journey on foot. Meanwhile, Foxy Monte, a polished crook, has stolen a beautiful car that has been left standing at the curb in a nearby town, and as he whizzes by he sees the Goode family. He stops and offers them a lift. Of course, they gladly accept. And while the ride is continued he persuades Mr. Goode to buy the roadster. Mr. Goode is so easy, in fact, that Monte determines to impose on him again.

When Goode is called out of town on business he makes the trip in his new machine. As an alarm has been sent out to the police by the original owner of the car he is immediately apprehended and thrown into jail. His family, believing he has been detained on business, make no inquiry about him, but go on entertaining Foxy Monte, who has come into their circle disguised by a full beard and another alias.

Ever making the best of his condition, Goode has the jail refurnished and otherwise contributes to the comfort of the inmates. Upon leaving at expiration of his sentence, he invites Shifty Ed and his best girl, Shorty Sal, come to the Goode home to pay that visit just as Mrs. Goode is entertaining a very fashionable house party, Monte in the number. Sal recognizes Monte, and he, realizing he is in danger, informs the hostess that Ed and Sal are notorious crooks. Then he persuades Evelina, whose hand has been refused him by Mr. Goode, to elope with him. It is at this point that Ed and Sal make a big return for the kindness of Mr. Goode, and there is a thrilling finish.

THE MARKET OF VAIN DESIRE (Ince—Five parts—May 28).—The cast: John Armstrong (H. B. Warner); Helen Badgley (Clara Williams); Count Bernard d'Montaigne (Charles Miller); Mrs. Badgley (Gertrude Claire); Belle (Leona Hutton).

John Armstrong, a young minister, is called to a great metropolitan church from a small country parsonage. He has been there but a short time when he is utterly disgusted with the sham and hypocrisy of the fashionable persons of his congregation who affect religion. That is, he is disgusted with all save Helen Badgley, daughter of the millionaire patron of the church.

But one day he is asked to announce from the pulpit the engagement of Helen to the repulsive Count d'Montaigne, and convinced the man is all that is loathsome in manhood, he protests to Helen. She readily admits she does not love the Count, but declares that love marriages happen only in story books. Pondering this situation in a walk about the streets, he encounters a woman of shame, and there dawns a mad idea whereby he may solve the problem. He bids this woman come to his church on the Sabbath and he will pay her well. Eventually she agrees.

Next morning, in the church, he takes for his theme the degredation of marriage. And calling Belle, the woman of shame, from the vestry, he draws a parallel which no one can mistake between the case of the girl who peddles her pitiful body for gain and the girl who barters her beauty in the market of vain desire. The scandal that follows breaks up the match of Helen and the Count. With all his wrath at the new minister, Millionaire Badgley has discerned truth in his words, and he orders the Count from his home. But not before he learns that his wife has actually contracted with the nobleman to marry Helen. The Count goes, threatening suit.

Armstrong is reading in his study when the Count enters and demands that he accompany him to the side of Helen's mother, and retract his words. Of course, Armstrong refuses, and as he turns to his chair again the Count strikes him a heavy blow over the head with his cane. Horror-stricken at what he has done, the Count flees the country. The directors of the church, calling to inform Armstrong that his resignation is automatic, find him lying upon the floor. They send for a doctor, and for Badgley, who arrives, accompanied by Helen, who has found that Armstrong means much to her. The outcome is swift and satisfying.

GOING STRAIGHT (Fine Arts—Five parts—June 4).—The cast: Grace Remington (Norma Talmadge); John Remington, her husband (Ralph Lewis); their children (Ninon Fovieri, Francis Carpenter, Fern Collier); Mrs. Remington's Maid (Ruth Handforth); Jimmie Briggs (Eugene Pallette); the Ragged Waif (George Stone); Mrs. Van Dyke (Kate Toncray); Her Children (Violet Radcliffe, Carmen Derue).

John Remington, a respectable real estate man, goes down into the slums to negotiate the purchase of a warehouse for a client, and there meets Jimmie Briggs, a gangster. Briggs recognizes Remington as his former partner in crime, Higgins. Remington and his wife, Grace, used to work with Briggs in many house robberies, although for the last Remington and Briggs served time in prison. When they were released Remington found that Grace had borne him a baby, and for the baby's sake, determined to live straight.

Briggs blackmails Remington until he has no more money to give him. Then he demands that Remington aid him in one more big deal, or he will expose Grace for her complicity in by-gone crimes, and have her sent to prison to do her "bit." Remington loves his wife, and for her sake, although without her knowledge, he agrees. Unaware of his danger, Grace has gone to spend the week-end at the home of a wealthy friend, the very place, it so happens, that Briggs has selected to burgle.

In due course Remington and Briggs jimmy open the library window and enter. The former tackles the safe in his old dexterous manner, and Briggs goes upstairs to see what loose jewelry he may "lift" from bureaus and the like. Briggs happens to enter the room where Grace is asleep in bed. She hears him and awakens. She attacks the intruder, and a desperate struggle takes place. Meanwhile, Remington has completed his job at the safe and follows Briggs upstairs. Seeing him struggling with his wife, he knocks Briggs to the floor unconscious.

Of course, this has aroused the other guests, and as they throng into the hall Remington's escape has been cut off. Grace's quick wit saves the situation. She plants her husband's mask, gun and jimmy on the unconscious Briggs and tells the guests that her husband followed her to the place in time to save her from a desperate burglar, the injured man lying on the floor.

Unfortunately, Briggs escapes in the excitement, and his desire to be revenged on the man who has double-crossed him leads to a smashing finish.

THE BUGLE CALL (Ince—Five Parts—June 4).—The cast: Billy (Willie Collier, Jr.); Capt. Wm. Andrews (Wyndham Standing); Mary (Anna Lehr); Sergeant Hogan (Thomas Guise); Lame Bear (Joe Goodboy).

Billy, who is the little son of Captain Andrews, commandant of a Western army post, has one ambition in life, and that is to become a good soldier. This he has confided to his friend, Sergeant Hogan, and the sergeant takes pains to foster the idea. He really needs all his courage to face a new situation that has come up in his life. His father is going to marry again. While he knows absolutely nothing about his prospective stepmother, he can conceive of no one worthy of taking the place of his beloved mother, who lies in the little cemetery outside the fort.

In spite of Billy, however, the wedding takes place. The newcomer tries in every way to win over the little fellow, but beyond politeness his friendship stops. Soon after the wedding his father is called at the head of his regiment to quell an uprising of the Sioux Indians, forty miles away. He leaves his bride in little Billy's care.

The distant trouble is but a ruse on the part of Lame Bear, the Indian chief, and now, with his picked braves, he swoops down on the weakened garrison at the fort. The defenuers of the fort are so few in number that it is but a question of time before they must surrender. Billy, bearing in mind the admonition of his father to take care of his stepmother, takes her away from the fort by a secret passage and hides her in a cave in the hills.

Suddenly he observes the wavering men at the stockade. Bethinking himself of his bugle and hoping to lead the Indians to believe that his father and the regiment are returning, he blows the signal to charge from a distant knoll outside the fort. The outcome of that bugle call saves the garrison and draws Billy and his stepmother together.

REGGIE MIXES IN (Fine Arts—Five parts—June 11).—The cast: Reggie Morton (Douglas Fairbanks); his Valet (Joseph Singleton); Agnes, the Girl of the Slums (Bessie Love); Tony Bernard (W. E. Lowery); the Cabaret Proprietor (Wilbur Higby); his Right-Hand Man (Frank Bennett); an Admirer of Miss Fleming (A. D. Sears).

Reginald Morton is a wealthy idler of athletic tendencies. He has become bored with the shallow social set in which he moves, although he is engaged to marry Dorothy Fleming, a member of it. Dorothy is engaged to Reggie mainly because of his money, and is flirting desperately with all comers.

While out in his automobile one day Reggie chances upon a lost little girl sitting on the curb. He takes her back to her home in the slums and there he sees and falls in love with Agnes Shannon, a sweet young girl of good family now compelled to earn her living in a cheap cabaret. He then discovers that Dorothy is faithless to him and breaks his engagement, leaving him free to pay court to Agnes.

His rival for the affections of Agnes is Tony Bernard, the leader of the gangsters of the neighborhood, and Bernard has instructed one of his henchmen to bring Agnes to him. Reggie frustrates the scheme, beats up the henchman, and the owner of the dive in which Agnes works hires him as his bouncer.

But Bernard has not given up the idea of possessing the girl, and as Reggie is the only obstacle in the way of getting her, he orders him shot. They way-lay Reggie, but he beats them up one by one. Cornered at last, Reggie challenges Bernard to enter a room alone with him and have it out, the man who survives the battle to get the girl. Bernard agrees.

A fight takes place. The light is smashed, but it continues until the two men, their shirts stripped from their backs, are too exhausted to go on. By a supreme effort Reggie deals the final blow and staggers out, where he is attacked by the band. But the police have been tipped off. How Reggie finally wins Agnes is the culmination of a romance.

THE SORROWS OF LOVE (Ince—Five parts—June 11).—The cast: Beatrice (Bessie Barriscale); Guido Barli (William Desmond); Contessa Angelica de Vecchio (Ora Carew); Prince Candoni (Herschel Mayall); Carlo Parodi (Wedgwood Nowell).

Beatrice, who is a nun and who is known to the rest of her sisterhood as the "Lily" because of her great goodness and purity, hears for the first time in her life of the real wickedness of the world without the convent walls, when the Prince Candoni brings his ward, the Contessa Angelica de Vecchio, to the place for refusing to give up her low-born lover, Carlo Parodi. The Contessa dies, pining for her lover. And Parodi is released from prison where he has been kept because of his marriage.

Beatrice steals away from the convent one night and meets Parodi just as he is being released. She tells him of the sad death of the Contessa; and his heart filled with the desire for revenge, he takes Beatrice with him to a meeting of workmen led by Guido Barli, an atheist. These workmen are laying plans for the overthrow of the tyrant Prince Candoni. Beatrice calls Guido to task for his atheism, and they fall in love. She converts him to religion.

Then, when Guido is consoling the wife of a comrade who has met with misfortune, Beatrice sees him holding the woman in his arms, concludes that he is faithless and leaves him. Finding her gone, Guido becomes bitter and returns to his old beliefs. He goes to his eager band and bids them storm the palace of the prince. Beatrice hears of their intention and warns the prince that they are coming. He at once summons the soldiers and a bloody battle takes place in which most of the workmen are killed. The future has but one solution for the dying Guido and the remorseful Beatrice; and how it works out is the finish of the film.

BOBBIE OF THE BALLET (Five parts—June 12).—The cast: Bobbie Brent (Louise Lovely); Jack Stimson (Jay Belasco); Mrs. Stimson (Jean Hathaway); Velma Vrooman (Gretchen Lederer); Henry Fox (Gilmore Hammond); Hook Hoover (Lon Chaney); Mrs. Hoover (Lule Warrenton). Scenario written by Ida May Park. Director Joseph De Grosse.

Bobbie Brent is a chorus girl who supports her invalid mother and her little brother and sister. Jack Stimson, just out of college, is lavishing his inheritance on Velma Vrooman, leading woman of the company in which Bobbie is employed. Young Stimson meets Bobbie and becomes interested in her, much to the disappointment of Velma.

Stimson's mother is a settlement worker. In her meanderings among tenement dwellings, she arrives at Bobbie's home, discovers the dying mother and her two children. When her mother suddenly dies, Bobbie removes the children to another tenement, adopts for herself the guise of a widow, that she may keep her little brother and sister under her own protection.

Mrs. Stimson discovers that Bobbie is known in her new quarters as a widow with two children, and having also discovered her son's attachment for Bobbie, discloses to him what she considers to be the chorus girl's deceit. Straightway he terminates the friendship between Bobbie and himself.

Matters fare badly with Bobbie and her two dependents and but for the assistance surreptitiously rendered by Hook Hoover, a mild sort of criminal, who has found refuge from the police by one day dropping into Bobbie's "apartment" through the skylight, the two children might have starved or else Bobbie would have been required to forego the promise made to her dying mother.

Velma Vrooman in revenge sets a trap for Bobbie. Under pretense of securing her an engagement, Bobbie is instructed to call at Velma's home, where the manager of Velma's company likewise appears. Velma makes an excuse and meets young Stimson to partake of one of their customary banquets. Alone in Velma's apartment with the theatrical villian, Bobbie is compelled to resist his forced attentions.

While at dinner with Stimson, Velma cannot refrain from taunting him that Bobbie is at her apartment alone with Velma's theatrical manager. Stimson is suspicious and goes at once to Velma's apartment, arriving there in time to rescue the girl.

The noise of the quarrel between Stimson and the theatrical manager reaches the street and the police break in, arresting both men together with Bobbie. Subsequent developments disclosed the fact that Bobbie is protector of her little brother and sister and the court orders that the children shall be turned over to Mrs. Stimson's society of settlement workers and that Bobbie shall go to a reform school.

The closing incidents of "Bobbie of the Ballet" discloses how Hook Hoover rescues Bobbie from the reform school, after which young Stimson obtains a marriage license and they live happily ever after.

THE MASKED RIDER (Quality Five parts—June 12).—The cast: Bruce Edmunds, a revenue detective, and "The Masked Rider" (Harold Lockwood); Grant Carr (H. W. Willis); Tom Monjar (John MacDonald); Patrick Hart (Harry Berkhart); Mrs. Hart (Clarissa Selwynn); George Edmunds (Harry Linkey); Squid Archer (Lester Cuneo); Jimmy Jamison (Howard Truesdell); Jill Jamison (May Allison). Written and directed by Fred J. Balshofer.

Bruce Edmunds takes a place in the revenue service to help rout the moonshiners in the hills of North Carolina and to avenge the murder of his brother, George Edmunds. George, who was a landscape painter, had selected the picturesque locale in the south for his work, and while there became infatuated with Jill Jamison, a mountain girl, and daughter of Jimmy Jamison, owner of the Bat Cave Hotel. The friendship between the girl and George, aroused the enmity of Squid Archer, boss of the moonshining gang. On two occasions Squid and George quarrel over the girl. George is found dead with a bullet wound in his head and his body buried in the mountains.

Bruce arrives at Bat Cave disguised as a parson. Jill's father is away, when Bruce arrives and the mountaineers headed by Squid, are taking advantage of his absence. Bruce quells a disturbance they have started and immediately wins the respect and favor of Jill. After that Jill and Bruce are often seen together. Squid only hides his anger at this situation because of Bruce's ministerial garb.

The following day Jill takes Bruce for a walk, during which he learns much of his brother's life there. He does not disclose his identity and has difficulty in controlling his emotions. One night, soon afterwards, the moonshiners are startled by the appearance of a mysterious masked rider, dressed in a white, buckskin suit and riding a white horse. By his actions the moonshiners know he is not a bandit. They fire at him and give chase, but he eludes them.

While Jill is riding near a mountain stream she surprises the masked rider who is watering his horse. The masked rider is so startled that he covers her with his revolver before he realizes who she is. Recovering quickly he bows and profusely begs her pardon. Jill's fears are allayed, and she smiles when she finds the terrible masked rider so gallant. Touching her golden curls Bruce tells her she can have her freedom for one curl. The next day Jill learns the parson and masked rider are the same person, when she finds her lock of hair in the parson's room behind his mother's picture.

That night Bruce leads a group of government agents in the moonshining district. The illicit distillers take refuge under ground through secret passages. They are driven out when Bruce explodes a heavy charge of dynamite, blowing up their catacomb. Squid manages to escape. He hurries to the Jamison Hotel, overpowers the proprietor and attempts to force Jill to accompany him in his escape. Bruce arrives in time to prevent him and a terrific struggle between Bruce and Squid follows. They roll down a flight of stairs and Bruce loses his revolver. Squid, retreating toward the door, fires at Bruce, who is prostrated upon the floor. The bullet enters his right shoulder and disables him. As Squid starts to fire a second time Jill crashes a chair over his head and sends him unconscious to the floor. The moonshiners are made prisoners and Jill nurses Bruce until he recovers sufficiently to accompany her to a real parson.

17 Madison Ave., N. Y. City

THE most telling advertisement of the Sealpacker-chief handkerchief reads "You can teach a parrot to say 'Just as good,' but it won't know what it means." The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the leader in its line not because it says it is, but because manufacturers and exhibitors KNOW through long experience that it is accurate, reliable and informed. It is not of mushroom growth, covering lack of knowledge with plausible but specious words. It is founded solidly upon experience and knowledge. It is recognized everywhere as the sole authority on matters pertaining to the craft. It is consulted and relied upon. It is as essential to business as the theatre is to the exhibitor, the studio to the manufacturer. It is a very part of the business it represents. It has helped hundreds of exhibitors to success through advice and caution. It is helping hundreds of others to attain the same result. It places at the disposal of the exhibitor in the desert the experience of the Broadway manager, and brings to him, in turn, the clever ideas of the man who must be clever to exist in a limitless field. It is the exchange for ideas for the entire business, and where but one paper is read, this is the paper that is found in the hands of the subscriber. The circulation field of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD is not the waste basket. It forms the chief and most valued part of the exhibitor's working library. It is the cyclopedia of business kept constantly up to date, and it is indispensable.

child of five. Richard has in his employ a man addicted to gambling. After repeated warnings, he discharges him, fearing that some day he may have a losing streak and take some of the firm's money. Being of a moody, vindicative turn of mind, he vows revenge.

The same evening the Bartons are giving a party and it is arranged that Mrs. Barton will recite for her guests. Charles Burham, a theatrical manager, is present and, charmed with her elocution, tells her there is always a position waiting for her should she ever desire to go on the stage. The party is abruptly ended when Richard receives the news that his plant is on fire, having been set by the discharged employee. Richard assists the firemen, gets drenched and catches a severe cold, which turns to tuberculosis. The litigation over the insurance of the plant has forced the little family to hard circumstances and they are compelled to seek cheaper quarters in which to live.

During all this time, Howard Barton, a wild, young brother of Richard's, who has been seeking his fortune in Australia, has at last achieved success, and decides to return to New York. He has written Richard at the plant, but when he arrives there, finds the place in ruins. He tries in vain to locate his brother's present whereabouts.

Richard is discouraged, and during this strenuous time, his wife is like a guiding star, taking discomforts cheerfully and giving him the loving care, tender sympathy and moral support that only a good woman can give. He, however, has not much moral stamina, and adversity breeds peevishness and irritability. After a time they are so impoverished she has to pawn her jewelry. While in the pawn shop one day, she meets a stranger, who is greatly impressed by her beauty, and, listening to her pitiable tale, tells her that if she will but let him entertain her that evening, she will not have to want in the future. Helen rebukes him, but not until he has given her his name and address.

When she finds later that she cannot raise any more money and must have money to buy medicine, she dresses up for the sacrifice, and goes to Howard's apartment. A few days later, Howard's letter reaches Richard, who sends for his brother. Both brothers are happy at seeing each other, but when Richard introduces his wife, Howard recognizes her and she meets his brother's wife as well as the visitor to his apartment.

Howard arranges for the little family to go into the mountains. He sees them off and makes all sorts of excuses for remaining away, until Richard insists that he come, as he has been injured while out sleighing. The presence of Howard is a trying ordeal for Helen as well as himself. Being unable to quell his passions, he resolves to leave for Australia, but while talking about the past, Richard steps into the room and hears the terrible truth. Angry, he turns his wife from the house.

She goes to Burnham and obtains a position on the stage, at the same time caring for her child. She is cast in a play very similar to that in which she has figured in real life. Richard and Howard, now both in New York City, are present the first night. When he sees Madame Bondorti on the stage, Richard is struck by her resemblance to his own wife, but when he hears her speak, he is sure it is her. A few days later, after Richard learns the great depths of the sacrifice his wife made for him, he realizes how he had been unjust to her, and through Howard's efforts, they are brought together through the pleadings of their child, Bess, who has been in an orphanage during these years of estrangement. After the loving union of the three, Howard leaves for Australia, never to return.

THE MAKING OF MADDALENA (Oliver Morosco Photoplay Co.—Five Parts—June 8).—George Hale, a rather good-for-nothing son of wealthy parents, is engaged to marry Marie, a young society girl. She refuses to marry him until he has made good. Young Hale's chum, Augustus Foster, an art student, induces Hale to join him in his studio in Rome. To win the admiration of his sweetheart, Hale accepts his chum's offer and starts his career as an artist. Being of a carefree, happy disposition, he dallies with his work. Here he meets Maddalena, a very beautiful young Italian girl, who poses as his model. Her father, a rough and muchly-dissipated Italian of the poorer class, has abused his daughter most shamefully, using the money she earned selling flowers to buy his drink. Young Hale is greatly attracted to the beautiful Maddalena. One night at the studio, where a number of his friends were celebrating the Fourth of July, in true American fashion, the studio gayly decorated with American flags, bunting of red, white and blue, a letter is received by Hale from the American sweetheart denouncing him and announcing her engagement to Signor Pastorelli, a great artist, who was then living in America.

Leaving her home because of her father's abuses, Maddalena seeks refuge in the studio of Hale. In a fit of rage over the news of his sweetheart's betrothal to Sig. Pastorelli, Hale announces to his friends his intentions of marrying his beautiful model, Maddalena. He marries her, a son is born to them. Hale finds the struggle for existence a very difficult one and seeks employment. He becomes ill, loses his position. Hale's father, who has learned of his marriage and illness, decides to go to his son and bring him to America, to his mother, who is grieving for him. This he does, takes his son away until he is well enough to go to America. He would like to take the child, but the mother will not give him up. Maddalena's brutal father, seeing an opportunity to get a few dollars from the elder Hale if he should bring him the child, kidnaps the baby.

Grandfather Hale, with his son and grandson, leave for America. Months later, Hale's chum, Augustus Foster and his aunt, Mrs. Wright, go to find young Hale, only to learn from poor little broken-hearted Maddalena of her desertion. Mrs. Wright takes the girl as her companion to Paris. Here she is educated. They finally come to America. Here Maddalena becomes interested in settlement work, meets Dr. Comstock and interests him in her great work among the poor. She becomes a trained nurse, nursing in the homes of these poor people. An epidemic breaks out in the city, a most dreaded disease and one day she learns through the newspaper that her child has been stricken with this disease. She goes to the home of the child's grandfather, acts as nurse to her child. The child becomes very ill, the elder Hale does not recognize the young nurse as his daughter-in-law, and thinking the child is dying, says: "Oh, if the child's mother was only here!" Hale, who has been out of the city, has been called home because of the seriousness of his child's illness, comes into the room and recognizes his wife. A reconciliation takes place, the elder Hale recognizes the great change in the girl, sees the noble character, and takes her into his home.

INTERNATIONAL FILM SERVICE.

MYSTERIES OF MYRA (Seventh Episode—Two parts—June 5).—The Master of the Black Lodge is still bent on the destruction of Myra Maynard. He tells Varney that it is easier to materialize spirits under red light and orders Varney to place a red light in the Maynard home. Mrs. Maynard entreats Dr. Alden for the sake of Myra to make peace with the Black Lodge, but he refuses to do so. Myra tells Dr. Alden not to think about her and not to weaken in his determination to exterminate the Black Order. Mrs. Maynard hands Dr. Alden a slip of paper on which is written the address of Bert Reese, the clairvoyant, and suggests that Alden see this man who can communicate with anybody living or dead. Dr. Alden states that he knows Reese. Myra says she will go with him and they leave together.

Varney arrives at the Maynard home and is admitted by the butler. While he is waiting for Mrs. Maynard, he cautiously removes the red electric light bulb from his overcoat pocket, places it in his coat pocket, tiptoes upstairs to Myra's room, and places the red light in a closet. When Varney learns from Mrs. Maynard that Myra and Dr. Alden have gone to consult Bert Reese, he telephones the news to the Black Master. Alden and Myra arrive at the Reese Studio, where they make known their errand. Mr. Reese thinks he can communicate with the Master of the Black Lodge, and Dr. Alden asks him to deliver the following message, "If you stop your attacks on Miss Maynard and others I will agree to leave you in peace." Meanwhile, the Master retires into a lead lined chamber which is supposed to shut out all occult influences. Reese endeavors to communicate with the Master, but confesses that there is an obstruction, and that he cannot get his message through to its destination.

The Master opens a small slide in the door of his lead lined chamber, and placing a black crystal in the opening, reads Dr Alden's message. He refuses the truce and his message is communicated to Dr. Alden through Bert Reese. Myra and Dr Alden agree to fight the Black Powers to a finish. The Master prepares for action; he brings in a small table and a hypnotizing machine which he places on the table in front of a chair. Varney meanwhile, reading a book on the Maynard library, hears Alden and Myra returning. He hides as Alden starts to say good-by to Myra. Alden confesses his love, but Myra refuses, showing Alden Varney's engagement ring. Alden leaves and Myra tells Varney that she cannot marry him. Varney gets a fiendish idea and leaves quickly.

Dr Alden spends the evening testing his new mercury vapor lamps. Varney arrives at the lodge of the Grand Master and receives permission to materialize Myra's spirit, his love for her having turned to hate. The Master sends Varney's spirit to Myra's home. The spirit enters her bedroom and then her clothes closet where he materializes under the red light. Entering Myra's room he picks up a pair of shears and catches a reflection of himself in a mirror. Unable to bring himself to the point of killing Myra he turns out the light and closes the bedroom door. Re-entering the clothes closet his astral body dematerializes and upon leaving the house he awakes to his natural form. Mrs. Maynard smells gas escaping and with the assistance of the butler breaks down the door and rescues Myra from asphyxiation.

Next morning Alden can find no clue to the mystery of the previous night. Myra discovers a red light in her clothes closet. She starts to remove it but is restrained by Dr. Alden who installs a set of mercury vapor lamps in her bedroom. These lamps are so situated that their light falls directly upon anyone standing under the gas jet.

That night the Black Master resolves to end Myra's life himself. He sends his astral body to the Maynard home. Materializing under the red light in Myra's closet he walks around the room hunting for a weapon with which to complete his ghastly work. He can find nothing. Starting to pick up a chair he finds he has not sufficient strength to swing it. He then decides to turn on the gas and in the attempt plays directly into Dr. Alden's hand. He turns on the mercury vapor violet rays under which he dematerializes in agony. Mrs. Maynard enters the room and Myra informs her that the Master has been destroyed by Dr. Alden's violet rays.

THE DESTROYERS (Vitagraph—Five Parts—June 5).—The cast: Josephine McCloud (Lucille Lee Stewart); Peter God (Huntley Gordon); Lawlor (John Robertson); Philip Curtis (Richard Turner); Coralie (Virginia Norden); boarding house keeper (Florence Natol); police sergeant (Harry Mayo). Author, James Oliver Curwood. Director, Ralph Ince.

"My leg had been badly crushed by the bear trap and I was unable to move about. The kind old hermit nursed me back to health and when I left him, I loved him like a brother, but he would tell nothing of his past. All I know about him is, that his name is Peter God."

Philip Curtis, of the Northwest Mounted Police, was telling the story of his adventure to Josephine McCloud, a young woman whom he had met near his cabin. Although only mildly interested at first, the name of Peter God visibly moved her and she begs to be taken to him. Curtis informs her that the trail is covered and they cannot follow it until the thaw comes. He tells her of his love for her, but she implores him not to speak of it again. For her sake, he takes up the trail and agrees to carry a letter to Peter. Through the deep snows, he travels by dog team, lonesome as man has ever been, and at times, tempted to return and tell her that Peter God is dead, but he pushes forward despite all hardships until he reaches the cabin. Outside the red flag is hanging, a warning to all that the "red death" lurks within.

Disregarding the warning, Philip enters and finds the lonesome hermit, apparently waiting for the hand of death to claim him. He delivers the letter and the stricken man's intense grief is clearly shown by the twitching of the muscles of the face. Then Peter tells him to listen while he tells the cause of his mysterious silence.

"First, Curtis, I must tell you that the woman you love is my wife. Years ago, my name was Richard Steele then. Josephine and I were as happy as mortals could be. Lawlor, a friend of mine, was running for mayor, and I found that he had been connected with various crooked deals. It was a question of friendship or duty. As a respectable citizen, I thought it my duty to keep him out of the mayor's chair. I gave him a fair chance by telling him to quit the race, but he refused. I presented my evidence and it defeated him. Some time later, through a ruse, I was brought to a house on the outskirts of the city, where I was drugged. When I awoke, I found a woman, Coralie De Gar, whom I had known for some time, confronting me with hair disheveled and clothing torn. I asked her what had happened and she denounced me for enticing her to the house and assaulting her. I knew it was a plot of some sort and scoffed at her, until a policeman entered and arrested me. The papers, next day, had glaring headlines, proclaiming my perfidy to the public, and I was ashamed to look my fellow-men in the eyes. After the matter had blown over, I saw Coralie entering Lawlor's office, and followed her. By listening at the door, I heard enough to prove that Lawlor was at the bottom of the dastardly plot. I entered and got Coralie out of the room, determined to fight it out with the cur. He grabbed a gun and fired, but I deflected his aim and the bullet went through the door, killing Coralie. Then I shot Lawlor and ran out. I wrote a letter to my wife, telling her that I would hide under the name of Peter God—and here I am. Now, Curtis, you know all. Will you go back to Josephine and tell her that she must not come here, as I am dying, and when I am gone, if she loves you, I—I wish you lots of luck together."

Then Josephine, who had followed close after Philip, stepped through the door. The grief-stricken fugitive tried to hold her off, for he feared she would be infected with the malady, but she insisted on coming to him. After the first shock of the reunion she shows him a newspaper with the confession which Lawlor had made before his death, clearing Steele of guilt. Though happy at the reunion, Curtis still loves Josephine, and starts out on a hunting and trapping trip, hoping that in the sombre timberlands he will forget his great sorrow. With careful attention and nursing at the hands of Josephine, the signs of the pestilence have vanished from Steele's body, and, with a clear conscience he prepared to return to civilization with his wife.

KERNEL NUTT'S $100 BILL (Vitagraph—June 5).—The cast: Kernel Nutt (Mr. Frank Daniels); Cornelia Van Asterfeller (Miss Adele De Gardo); Miss Betty Green (Miss Alice Washburn). Author, L. Case Russell. Director, Jay Williams.

Satisfying a champagne taste with a beer pocketbook is rather a difficult proposition—but a cute little century note comes to Kernel Nutt's assistance. Nutt finds the hundred bill on the sidewalk and proceeds to spend it, but is unable to do so, as no one has change—that all insist on "chalking it up." Out with a pretty young heiress, Nutt was showing her a good time on the hundred he had found, just when things were coming along fine, all Nutt's creditors find change for the bill and besiege him for payment of their debts.

After the young fortune has vanished, he still finds half his bills unpaid, and then, to help matters along, the owner of the hundred gets after him, too. They start condemnation proceedings on his person and divest him of watch, hat, coat, vest, etc., in payment of their debts. When Nutt spreads the glad tidings that Cornelia Van Asterfeller, the millionairess, had promised him her hand, they all become very apologetic and return his belongings.

THE REDEMPTION OF DAVE DARCEY (Vitagraph—Five Parts—June 12).—This subject was originally scheduled for release on May 22, but was postponed until the above date. A description of it was printed on page 1583 of the May 27 issue. "The Suspect," a five-part Vitagraph picture, was released on May 22.

KERNEL NUTT IN MEXICO (Vitagraph—June 12).—The cast: Kernel Nutt (Mr. Frank Daniels); Mrs. Nutt (Miss Alice Washburn); Estralla (Miss Adele De Garde); Manuel (A. Lloyd Lack). Author, Frank Koch, Jr. Director, C. Jay Williams.

Why go to war when there is a fine cafe, and a pretty senorita handy? No, no, Nutt prefers to make his permanent headquarters where the red wine flows and the girls amuse him with their wiggly dances. Just when Nutt is enjoying himself with petite Estralla, her husband comes in, armed to the teeth and out for blood, but when Nutt nonchalantly bends a rubber dagger, hubby is dismayed and seeks healthier quarters. Alone once more, Nutt turns to caress his Spanish beauty, but wakes up and finds himself making love to his own wife in his comfortable flat in old New York. Wifey sees the lay of the land and starts a real war right at home.

THAT SORT (Essanay—Five parts—June 12).—The cast: Diana Laska (Warda Howard); John Heppell (Duncan McRae); Doctor Maxwell (Ernest Maupain); Philip Goodier (John Lorenz); Mrs. Heppell (Marion Skinner); Maureen Heppell (Betty Brown); An actress (Peggy Sweeney).

John Heppell, a wealthy young man about town, falls in love with Diana Laska, a noted actress, and marries her. After their child is born he tires of her and goes back to his old way of living. Infuriated at his neglect, Diana leaves him and goes abroad with Philip Goodier. He also tires of her in time, and she becomes a notorious character on the continent. Finally she awakens to the evil of her life and tries to reform. She finds her path strewn with thorns as the world holds her for what she has been. A longing is kindled in her heart for her daughter. Her first husband has remarried and refuses to permit her to see her.

Sick of life, she attempts suicide. She is attended by Doctor Maxwell. He instills hope into her by promising to aid her in her attempt to see her daughter. Maxwell is an old friend of Heppell and partly by persuasion and partly by threats Diana Laska is received into the Heppell home as the governess for Heppell's son by his second wife.

She meets her daughter only to find that she is engaged to Philip Goodier, the man who had cast her off. Horrified, she tells the Heppels her daughter must not marry him. Goodier denounces Diana, while admitting his relations with her, but cannot understand why she should have an influence over the Heppells. Finally, Diana tells him that the girl to whom he is engaged is her daughter.

He consents to break the engagement only on condition that she leave the house and never see her daughter again. The woman who has developed under Doctor Maxwell's influence, then makes the supreme sacrifice of giving up her daughter to save her from her own shame. And through this sacrifice she wins atonement for her sins.

The G-E Mercury Arc Rectifier

is a profitable investment. It is the simplest, most dependable and most efficient device for transforming a. c. into d. c.—and you know how necessary direct current is for projection. The clear, bright, white non-flickering pictures you can get with the G-E Mercury Arc Rectifier tells in the long run at the box office. And the big saving in current bills is another strong point in favor of your investment.

The BIGGEST MOTION PICTURE PROJECTOR

Buy of Today is

THE LATE MODEL MOTIOGRAPH

Every exhibitor when purchasing a Projector should take into consideration QUALITY, PROJECTION and PRICE.

The MOTIOGRAPH is made only of the best material, is unequaled in projection and is priced for conservative buyers.

Ask the man who is using a Late Model MOTIOGRAPH.

Write for literature.

Think from the Patron's Standpoint

Write today for booklets "GHOSTS" and "STANDING ROOM ONLY."

Put yourself in his position. Ask yourself if you would be pleased to be drawn to a theatre with a strong programme and then have the picture flicker and jump before your eyes.

Your patrons enter your theatre, after reading your advertisements, anticipating a pleasant hour or two—an hour of recreation and rest. If they leave your theatre with smarting eyes, disgusted, or ill-humored, how can you expect them to return?

Let us tell you how to send them away smiling: how to make EVERY PATRON A REPEATER. Let us tell you what WHITE LIGHT can do for you —what it has done for others.

OUR FORESIGHT MEANT YOUR PROTECTION!!

Ten days after the outbreak of war we received the largest stock of French-made condensers ever shippedinto this cou ntry

That's why we are able to offer you now

THE KLEINE WHITE LABEL CONDENSER

at before-war-time prices. Foreign factories formerly engaged in the manufacture of optical goods for the entire world now devote their sole energies to war merchandise for their own countries, thus making possible the distribution of inferior, cheaply made and costly-in-the-long-run-domestic substitutes.

KLEINE WHITE LABEL CONDENSERS are ground from pure optical glass. They do not discolor—no green, pink or purple effects after a brief use. They are the only satisfactory condensers on the American market today. If you are not using them you are not obtaining maximum results from your projection equipment.

PRICES:

TO ALL MANUFACTURERS and DISTRIBUTORS of FEATURE FILMS

On behalf of WILLIAMSON-WADDINGTON PICTURES, L'T'D OF AUSTRALASIA, whom I represent exclusively in this country, I beg to announce that they (WILLIAMSON-WADDINGTON PICTURES L'T'D.) are at all times prepared to consider and arrange for the purchase each week of significant feature films of the best and most attractive type, requiring at least fifty-two (52) big features yearly, for Australia and New Zealand. If you are prepared to deal with me HERE, to supply their requirements, I will be glad to hear from you at once, as to what you have to offer, what arrangements you would propose, and upon what terms, etc.

I am fully authorized and prepared to conclude all such business for this concern by direct dealing HERE IN AMERICA, rather than through any foreign office or connection.

New Money For Every Theatre

Even in the smallest towns, scores of motion picture theatres are making $600 yearly and over from this self-running BUTTER-KIST Pop Corn machine that stands anywhere and draws folks from all directions. Big houses making up to $3000 NET profits per year and more. We'll send you plenty of signed sales records from men on your own side of the wicket to prove it beyond a doubt.

Pay From Your Profits

One hour after this machine arrives you can start it coining money. Delivered on part payment. Balance soon paid from Butter-Kist earnings.

Capacity 70c. to $4.00 per hour. You make 3½c. NET profit from every bag.

On the sale of only 80 bags a day you make $1000 NET per year. Theatre in Coffeyville, Kan., writes: "Average $3 NET per day."

BUTTER-KIST Pop Corn Machine

now a regular feature of theatres, stores, etc., all over America. Pops, removes the unpopped kernels, and butters evenly—with pure creamery butter. Then superheats each fluffy white morsel to an appetizing crisp!

This process gives crackling Butter-Kist its tempting toasty flavor. Folks tell it blindfolded from all other pop corn made.

Increases Attendance

Motion of machine makes people stop and look—coaxing fragrance makes them buy—exclusive toasty flavor brings them from blocks around for more! Attracts scores who read Butter-Kist advertising in powerful magazines. Ties up your theatre with a well-known national success.

"Little Gold Mine" Book FREE!

Send the coupon today and read in this famous book the actual letters, and proof of profits from theatre men in towns the size of yours.

See photos and full details of machine, low price and easy terms. Remember, you're losing real dollars in profits every day you delay. No obligation—SEND NOW!

THE MASTER MODEL MOTION PICTURE MACHINE

The only projector to buy for durability, least cost of operation, splendid service—the American Standard Motion Picture Machine, the MASTER MODEL.

Built of comparatively fewer, but bigger and better parts. This insures you against breakdowns, and big repair bills, and is a warranty against short life. Many American Standards have been and still are running that were installed six to eight years ago. They give good service, too.

The many practical features which are exclusively found on the MASTER MODEL make for greatest ease in operation. When your operator can completely control the machine without having to fuss about with a dozen annoying details, he can devote more of his time to the artistic projection of the film on the screen. This is a point your patrons will appreciate; and they will show their appreciation by becoming regular visitors.

Write for complete particulars about the MASTER MODEL.

A NEW CHAIR

That Enables Everybody to See and Be Comfortable

Can be changed from an adult's chair to a child's chair by pressing the catch and raising as illustrated. Returns to adult's position and locks just as easily.

It provides a child with a seat proportioned to his body, a foot rest the right height and puts the child's eyes on a line with those of adults, enabling him to see without annoyance to others or discomfort to himself. The offers theatre owners something for which there is a real need. Fortunately it is not an extra expense but an added source of profit because it—

Does away with the free kids.

Increases the patronage of children; also the adults who come with children.

Attracts patronage of adults who won't now attend because of discomfort of holding children on their laps.

Attracts patronage from theatres not equipped with Foco chairs.

FOCO Chairs cost new only a few cents more than ordinary chairs. Made in all sizes and finishes. Old chairs can be converted into Foco Chairs at considerably less than the cost of new chairs. Leading chair companies are licensed to make Foco Chairs and can supply you.

Write for booklet showing reel of actual chairs in use.

MOTION PICTURE
HANDBOOK

Published by
THE CHALMERS
Publishing Co.

The third and latest edition of this valuable work has just come from the presses.

It is bigger, better, and more helpful than have been either of its predecessors by the same able author.

In daily touch with practical operators throughout the country by reason of his connection with THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, in which his PROJECTION DEPARTMENT is featured, Mr. Richardson is especially well qualified to deal with the problems which are constantly confronting the motion picture mechanics upon whose skill the industry depends so largely for its healthy growth.

RICHARDSON'S MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK is a carefully prepared guide to perfect projection.

It is an invaluable help to every single individual in the trade who has to do with the mechanical handling of motion picture film.

There are more than 400 Pages of Text and the illustrations—of which there are many—have been especially devised for this particular publication.

Substantially Bound in Red Cloth $4.00 the Copy.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST COMEDIES, STARRING THE COMEDY KING OF THEM ALL

CARTER DE H

AT LAST — the big event in Filmdom has arrived—and as usual, the UNIVERSAL — as in every other great enterprise that has given better films to the world—takes the lead.

This is the event that thousands of Exhibitors throughout the world have been wanting; the event that millions of photo-play lovers have been clamoring for.

CLEAN COMEDIES without the vulgar stuff; without the disgusting slap stick; and minus the cheap clap-trap.

CARTER DE HAVEN, the King of modern day comedy, will play the lead in a series of subjects that will establish, once for all, the fact that comedy films can be produced without the slam bang usually presented in the very ordinary, mediocre comedies of today.

This series will be elaborate, distinctively different, and distinguishable by numberless points of vast superiority in every detail. From script down to the last finishing touch of masterly direction, this series of comedies will stand out from the mass of offerings on the market today, as a genuine pearl stands out from all rank imitations.

The series will be directed and produced by Wallace Beery. No expense will be spared to give the public the rarest of treats and surprises that will mark the most radical departure yet conceived in this branch of the moving picture industry.

Watch for the first release. It will be announced soon. Watch for all the following releases. You'll see something new, different, distinctive. A series of convulsion producing pictures that will herald themselves from one corner of the earth to the other. Your nearest Universal Exchange can give you more facts and figures. Better investigate.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

Here's a States Rights campaign based upon conservatism and truth.

We are firing our opening shot only after having carefully investigated every detail of existing conditions.

We know that the country is flooded with so-called "features."

We know, too, that, with scarcely a single exception, these features are as much alike as two peas in a pod.

We know that the public is being bored to death with spineless plays made only to exploit some "star" of doubtful ability.

We know that there is a great and growing demand for screen performances that will grip the feelings—performances that tell their stories in quick, lively action that is easily understood.

We Are Offering A Really Big Feature

—A feature that is big because it has been made to satisfy a big public demand.

—A feature that fairly teems with the kind of action that no solitary individual with red blood in his veins can resist.

—A feature that is full of startling surprises.

—A feature with an appeal for all classes of picture patrons.

—A feature that sweeps its audiences along with it at break-neck speed.

We Are Selling "The Jockey of Death"

at prices that cannot fail to make our proposition attractive to every State Rights buyer in the country.

We are determined that each man we sell shall make money.

The scale of prices we have established are based upon just what the feature will bring back to the buyer—and the figures which mean his making a substantial profit also mean the financial success of our enterprise.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG
THE EMBODIMENT OF GLORIOUS FEMININITY AND EXQUISITE ART
MANY AN EXHIBITOR THINKS HE IS PLEASING HIS PATRONS WHEN HE IS ONLY PLEASING HIMSELF
Lewis J. Selznick

Read What the George Kleine's Greatest Miss BILLIE BURKE

(By Arrangement With F. Ziegfeld, Jr.)

A Motion Picture Novel by Mr. & Mrs. Rupert Hughes.

"A STORY THAT WILL FIND ECHO IN EVERY HEART."

—Kitty Kelly in Chicago Tribune

"Gloria's Romance" is the story of a little girl who grows up. Miss Burke has mirrored with exquisite precision the adolescent unfolding skillfully indicated by the Hughes. Through her youthful hoydenism peep glimpses of aspiring young ladyhood, but her attitude is mostly of rebellion and effervescent mischief. Along with her mischievousness Miss Burke is mistress of a naive selfishness that finds particular scope in some of the moonlit scenes where she wanders through lovely gardens or scrambles slyly over the veranda balustrade. "Gloria's Romance" is the human kind of a story that will find echo in hearts in every city street and village home.

"SOMETHING FINE AND DISTINCTLY DIFFERENT."

—Dorothy Day in Des Moines Tribune

I went to the Palace yesterday along with a lot of other fans, to see something different—something wonderfully fine—Billie Burke in Gloria's Romance—and like all the others I came away satisfied. I had seen Billie Burke and something fine and distinctly different.

"A TENDER, SYMPATHETIC AND BEAUTIFUL STORY."

—Indianapolis Star

With Billie Burke as the star and the advent of the first "motion picture novel" called "Gloria's Romance" the Keystone turned hundreds of people away yesterday. "Gloria's Romance" is a tender sympathetic, and beautiful story that affords Miss Burke an opportunity to do some really striking acting.

"SETS A NEW STANDARD OF LITERARY QUALITY."

—Oakland (Cal.) Tribune

This new screen novel sets a new standard in literary quality of motion-picture stories, for it is logically developed, carefully plotted and an intense, compelling tale of the romance of a young society woman.

"PICTURE RECEIVED BY RECORD-BREAKING CROWDS."

—Seattle Post Intelligencer

"Pretty Billie Burke in 'Gloria's Romance' at the Rex is just as delightfully dainty as she is on the stage. Miss Burke has a personality that fairly beams out on the screen. Manager Hemrick of the Rex is much gratified with the reception the picture received by record-breaking crowds yesterday."

"BILLIE BURKE CHARMED THOUSANDS."

—Portland Oregonian

With Billie Burke, the "star supreme," in "Gloria's Romance," the million-dollar film novel, as the headline attraction on a program of exceptional merit, the T. & D. theater, the Portland home of Turner & Dahnken motion pictures, opened yesterday. Billie Burke charmed thousands just as she did in "Peggy" and the two reels of "Lost in the Everglades" are full of Billie Burke pranks.

"TAKING MOTION-PICTURE FANS BY STORM."

—St. Louis Globe-Democrat

This screen novel by Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes is setting an absolutely new standard in literary merit of motion-picture stories. Miss Burke is bubbling over with good spirits and cheerfulness. The film is taking the motion-picture fans by storm, and the Columbia is presenting the story to capacity houses from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m.

"ATTRACTIVE BACKGROUNDS AND FINE CAMERA WORK."

—New York Morning Telegraph

Billie Burke fastened her grip even tighter on New York audiences last night when she appeared in the first two chapters of the George Kleine photoplay serial "Gloria's Romance" at the Globe theater. The serial proved to be a happy combination of well-chosen cast and interesting surroundings. The picture is a personal triumph for Billie Burke, and she is excellently supported by Henry Kolker. Without being spectacular, "Gloria's Romance" is entertaining and exciting. The beauties of Palm Beach form an attractive background for the action, and fine camera work is responsible for some admirable photographic effects which materially add to the finish of the production.

"BILLIE BURKE BROKE HOUSE RECORD SATURDAY."

—Houston Chronicle

Billie Burke, at the Queen theater Saturday, broke the house record for a Saturday attendance. Manager C. A. McFarland said the crush was the heaviest he had experienced since the house was opened, and that the crowds jammed the lobby throughout the day, and in some parts of the day blockaded the sidewalk. Billy Burke appears in a picture that peculiarly fits her talents and makes an impression that lingers.

"GLORIA'S ROMANCE AN OUT OF THE ORDINARY SERIAL."

—Canton (Ohio) News-Democrat

Kleine is making an out of the ordinary serial in "Gloria's Romance," the first chapter of which is now being shown at the Lyceum. It is unusual in its story, in the excellence of its cast and in the elaborate manner in which it is being staged.

"BILLIE BURKE IS ALTOGETHER CUNNING."

—New York Times

An interesting experiment was begun last night at the Globe theater with the first exhibition of the first chapters of a new movie serial entitled "Gloria's Romance," with Billie Burke as the star. Miss Burke proved herself a good screen subject. She is winsome and girlish looking, and when she dons the clothes of a boy she is altogether cunning.

"MISS BURKE DEVELOPS CAPACITY FOR MISCHIEF."

—New York Sun

In her present play Miss Burke, who is in the role of a tomboy daughter of a millionaire, develops an infinite capacity for michief. This leads her into a variety of escapades from which most of the comedy action of the picture is drawn.

"NO MORE POPULAR PICTURE HAS EVER BEEN SHOWN."

—Indianapolis Star

No more popular picture has ever been shown than "Gloria's Romance," which, featuring charming Billie Burke, is packing audiences into the Keystone. Week by week interest in this charming serial grows, until it seems that ere long the theater will not be large enough to hold all who want to follow the fortunes of Gloria.

"BILLIE BURKE GIVEN WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITIES

—Minneapolis Tribune

In order to accommodate admirers of Miss Burke, the "Gloria's Romance" production is shown at least six times a day at the New Palace. The doors open at noon, and "Gloria's Romance" is run until time for the vaudeville program, between the matinee and evening shows, and then again between the two evening vaudeville performances. Billie is given some wonderful opportunities to display her ability in the gymnasium with boxing gloves, with the foils in a fencing bout, as the hostess at a chafing-dish party, as a girl graduate and as her own natural, playful self.

"BILLIE BURKE MORE WINSOME THAN EVER."

—Tulsa (Okla.) World

If Billie Burke is to appear in more exquisite gowns than those worn in the first chapter of "Gloria's Romance," she will have to call in the services of a fairyland sartorial wizard and to use a colloquialism, "there ain't no such animile." In "Gloria's Romance" Miss Burke is ravishingly beautiful and more winsome than ever before.

"PICTURE LOOKS LIKE IT COST A FORTUNE."

—Detroit News

Radiant Billie Burke in a new serial film opened yesterday at the Majestic theater; and Billie, who is introduced to us as a little girl, doesn't look a bit over twelve. The serial is said to have cost a million dollars, and from the introductory episode one guesses readily that the press agent is no faker.

"MAKING A HIT WITH MOTION-PICTURE PATRONS."

—Seattle Post Intelligencer

"Gloria's Romance," with petite Billie Burke playing the part of Gloria, is making a hit with motion-picture patrons of the Rex. Rupert Hughes has written a story that fits Billie Burke like one of her own gloves. She just revels in it. And this diminutive comedienne has no competitor when it comes to reveling. She is the real spirit of joy. It is easy to see that she is having as much fun in the screen as her auditors are out of it.

"A PRETTY STORY; A NORMAL LOT OF CHARACTERS."

—New York Mail

Judging from the first two chapters of "Gloria's Romance," something different in a serial is being developed. All serial pictures heretofore have been built of weirdly impossible and thrillingly melodramatic incidents, but this serial is made up of subtler things; a pretty story, a normal lot of characters who are neither thorough villains nor thorough heroes and complications of a sort which will not make the sensible person writhe with laughter at their absurdity.

"GRAND OPERA HOUSE PACKED TO THE LIMIT."

—San Antonio Express

The Grand Opera House was packed to the limit Friday to see "Gloria's Romance," the new Rupert Hughes story, in which Billie Burke is the featured star. A hand-to-hand conflict with a real Seminole Indian is the big thrill in chapter two of the George Kleine motion-picture novel, and the fight appeared to be no make-believe affair, but the real thing.

"BILLIE BURKE OUTSHADOWS EVERYBODY ELSE."

—Houston Chronicle

Billie Burke has already established herself as a foremost screen star, just as she has long been beloved on the speaking stage. She photographs perfectly—so perfectly, in fact, that one can almost see the sunset red gold of her hair and the wonderful blue of her smiling eyes—and "camera consciousness" is a term wholly unknown to the little player. Miss Burke's support is excellent in every way, but Billie so outshadows everybody else in any and every production in which she appears.

"MOST EXPENSIVE FILM NOVEL EVER PRODUCED."

—Savannah News

The Odeon gave the Savannah amusement public several sensations last week, principal among which was the presentation of the most expensive serial ever produced, Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance." Those who saw the first episode of this production need not be assured of the high character of the new film novel.

"GLORIA'S ROMANCE ENTHUSIASTICALLY RECEIVED."

—Sioux Falls Leader-Press

"Lost in the Everglades," chapter one of "Gloria's Romance," Kleine's 20-part photoplay serial featuring Billie Burke, Henry Kolker and other stars, was enthusiastically received at the Colonial on Wednesday, and the opening of the elaborate film novel gave new insight on the work of Billie Burke.

"AUTOMOBILES LINE STREET, PEOPLE BLOCK SIDEWALKS."

—Omaha Bee

Automobiles lined the streets and people blocked the sidewalks in the vicinity of the Muse theater Friday night, when the first chapters of "Gloria's Romance," featuring Billie Burke, were shown at that theater, and "Lost in the Everglades," the opening chapter of the story was up to the expectations aroused.

"DESPITE HEAVY RAIN THEATER WAS PACKED."

—Atlanta Journal

Admirers of Miss Billie Burke flocked to the Piedmont theater Monday to see the first chapter of "Gloria's Romance." Despite the heavy rain, the Piedmont was packed from the opening reel at 11:30 o'clock in the morning, until the doors were shut at night. Miss Burke, as a mischievous girl (she grows up in later chapters), charmed her audience on the opening day, and they went away to tell their friends, so that Tuesday was another busy day at the Piedmont.

"GLORIA'S ROMANCE PLEASES LARGE CROWDS AT LYRIC."

—Springfield News-Record

Billie Burke, the most charming actress in filmdom, came to the Lyric Thursday in her latest offering, "Gloria's Romance," and it pleased large crowds at the theater. Many who saw the production declared that Miss Burke appears to far better advantage than in her first movie play.

"THEATER LOBBY PACKED—HUNDREDS TURNED AWAY"

—Milwaukee, Wisconsin

With the theater packed, the lobby jammed and hundreds turned away, Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance" was welcomed at the Merrill theater Sunday.

"INTEREST SO KEEN EXTRA SHOWS NECESSARY"

—Minneapolis Tribune

Despite the fact that the vaudeville program this week at the New Palace theater is one of the best ever presented at that theater, Miss Burke holds her own in the film portion of the program. The patrons demonstrate their interest by remaining after the vaudeville to view the serial, and so keen has the interest been that it has been necessary to run the film after the last performance at night, to accommodate those who came late.

"PACKED OUTSIDE DOORS OF REX THEATER."

—Seattle Times

Billie Burke is certainly a favorite with the women in this city, for every afternoon at the Rex theater they are packed outside the doors of the Rex theater in their efforts to see this famous little star in the latest and greatest of her successes, "Gloria's Romance." There is only one Billie Burke, and there will be only one, for her clever little mannerisms cannot be duplicated.

"MOST LAVISHLY PRODUCED SOCIETY PLAY OF YEAR."

—Peoria Star

The Apollo today has the second chapter of "Gloria's Romance," in which Billie Burke has achieved the climax of photoplay production—the most lavishly produced and whimsically delicious society play of the year.

"THRONGS GREET BILLIE BURKE AT STAR THEATER."

—Illinois State Journal

Yesterday throngs greeted the arrival of the fascinating little star, Billie Burke, at the Lyric in her latest and greatest film success, entitled "Gloria's Romance," and her appearance on the screen can be appreciated as though she were appearing in person.

"GLORIA'S ROMANCE IS SHOWING UP BEAUTIFULLY."

—St Louis Globe-Democrat

"At the Columbia the George Kleine film, 'Gloria's Romance,' with Billie Burke, the star supreme, and an excellent cast is showing up beautifully. Miss Burke has the most engaging part in her career."

"BILLIE BURKE A STAR OF SCINTILLATING CAPACITY."

—Pittsburgh Press

Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance" is surely a star of scintillating capacity. Her charming actions, her sweet smile and her clean-cut acting have made for her a reputation to be envied by stagefolks the world over.

"BILLIE BURKE MORE LOVELY THAN EVER BEFORE.

—Dallas News

Billie Burke is more lovely than ever in the third chapter of "Gloria's Romance," for she appears as a school girl who plays basketball, tennis, fences and holds chafing-dish orgies in her room.

"AN ACHIEVEMENT IN A CLASS BY ITSELF."

—Norfolk (Va.) Pilot

Billie Burke in her 20-week serial came and saw and conquered. If the subsequent installments of "Gloria's Romance" measure up to the first one, revealed yesterday at the Wells, Miss Burke's serial is going to be set down in the annals of motion pictures as an achievement in a class by itself.

"PRODUCTION A MARVEL OF BEAUTY AND EXCELLENCE."

—Worchester Gazette

If Worcester was ever treated to a genuine screen feast it had it today at the Pleasant theater, where Billie Burke was shown in the first chapter of "Gloria's Romance." The production is a marvel of beauty with a strong and rapidly moving story of deep interest.

"GLORIA'S ROMANCE TO BREAK ALL RECORDS."

—Milwaukee News

Billie Burke, in "Gloria's Romance," threatens to break all the records she set when she appeared in "Peggy," some months ago. "Gloria's Romance," which opened at the Merrill on Sunday, is an excellent play and gives Billie Burke no end of opportunities.

THE ZEPPELIN RAIDS ON LONDON AND THE SIEGE OF VERDUN

A stupendously spectacular production staged at the cost of a million lives. These are the only authentic pictures ever taken of the Zeppelin Fleet's Arrival in England—their attack on London—the trail of destruction in their wake; "Deadman's Hill" and the historic siege of Verdun —as exhibited under the auspices of The New York Globe to turn away audiences at the Park Theatre.

"Shoes"—the work of these three notable women—is the nearest approach to screen perfection ever presented.
It is an intensely human story of a working girl who "sold herself for a pair of shoes."
It is greater than drama. It is a chapter from life. It is a photoplay masterpiece. Maintaining the BLUEBIRD standard "Shoes" is a perfect photoplay.

The Absolute Test of All Photoplays

Every photoplay must meet the final test of sales power.

If it does not, it is a failure. If it cannot attract the public it is useless, as no photoplay is of any value on a shelf.

Essanay's short subjects have met this test; its actors are known the world over; its plots carry the fundamental element of human interest that appeals to all.

Essanay plays sell; they please.

"Stung"

ONE-PART COMEDY. RELEASED MONDAY, JUNE 19th

Sometimes there is a "back-fire" when a practical joker overworks his ingenuity. So it was with Hopper, who had made everyone's life miserable with his pranks. To cure him of his peculiar sense of humor, his wife turned a little trick on him that made Hopper's jokes look like kindergarten work. Oh yes, Hopper was cured.

"Curfew at Simpton Center"

ONE-PART COMEDY. RELEASED FRIDAY, JUNE 23rd

The married ladies of Simpton Center were going to have "some party,"—one of those fancy dress affairs like they have in the big city, by heck! They were all going to dress up like school girls and the men had strict orders to stay away. But before the party was over a hurry call was sent out for the men. "Children under sixteen must be in bed when the curfew rings at nine" said the law, and each husband had to pick out his own school girl wife and prove she was over sixteen.

Selig Service Praised in England, as Well as in America

The Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly says: "'The Blood Seedling,' a Selig production in three reels, is a remarkable production in several respects; uncommon and out of the ordinary in style and treatment, and a plot treated in so masterly a fashion as to keep one in excited wonder to the last moment, for the secret is not divulged until the final scene, and then in a most extraordinary manner. The old world atmosphere and the manners and customs of half a century ago are a welcome change from some of the super-up-to-date productions of which we see so many. Of course, it contains the usual elements of love, hate, jealousy, vice and virtue, but they are so disguised and presented in such a charming manner as to be almost unrecognizable. The photography is exceptionally good and the acting all that could be desired. The picture is one we can strongly recommend to Exhibitors who are on the look out for something novel, for it is a subject that cannot fail to be a success on any program."

Stop! Look! Listen!

A MAN in Pennsylvania received $10,000 for suggesting the use of these words by the railroads.

They will be worth equally as much to you if you apply them to the conduct of your business.

Stop!

Consider the drawing power—the box-office value—of each picture for your theatre before you book it. You would not pay the same for a mixture of copper, silver, and gold that you would for pure gold. Neither should you pay the same for all pictures, regardless of whether they are good, bad, or indifferent.

Look!

See every picture screened before you book it, and then select only those which you know will please your patrons. Don't buy "a pig in a poke." All pictures are not of equal appeal. Do your booking on a basis that will permit you to take what you want and what your patrons want, rather than what someone else wants you to take.

Listen!

Keep your ear to the ground for your patrons' comments and then pass these on to the manufacturer. In short, use your position to have pictures made to their (your patrons') order. All of which, when summed up, simply means—

"I know not how to govern our own course save by the proven experience of others."

Homestake Opera House

M. C. KELLOGG, Manager

Lead, S. Dak., May 20, 1916.

V.L.S.E., Inc.,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

I trust you will not take as flattery, nor as a forerunner for some special concession, the few true facts as I see them, and as expressed below:

I have been an exhibitor of V-L-S-E features ever since they were first released in this territory, which is over a year. There must be a reason:

First of all, would say that if honest and square dealings, well balanced programs, with clean and wholesome subjects, are to be considered as assets, the V-L-S-E certainly has them.

Your open booking policy is a boon to every exhibitor, for the tastes of various communities are bound to vary, so it is up to each exhibitor to study his patrons and cooperate with your exchanges.

The plan of scaling the price of each subject is a splendid one and most equitable. Every subject can't be as good as another even though the directors and actors try to make them so. It's the box office statements that tell which are the best. In other words, the public has its likes and dislikes, and all you or I try to say or do can't change them.

In this day of so-called chaotic film conditions, it is apparent that the producers who stick closest to the real commercial side of the business, are those that will withstand the much talked of "over production."

Yours respectfully,

M. S. Kellogg

Manager.

BY KITTY KELLY.

"LA VIE DE BOHEME" is a photoplay that fulfills the things we have been told characterized the "Brady-made" films. It is a wonderful treatment of a difficult subject

As the opera "La Bohme," is tragic so is the photoplay, though the film version is based on the story rather than the opera, it is said. However, events follow the opera, though with greater freedom permitted by the more elastic medium of the photoplay, so closely as, in the case of "Carmen," to elucidate the music story to the masses. No concession was made to the joy folks and the film ends with the death of Mimi, though the mortal agonies are brief and, in truth, beautiful.

Atmosphere is the outstanding quality of the picture. Capellani, the wizard of the celluloid, whose touch invariably transplants one to Paris, has vivified into actual individuals the light hearted, deep loving, tender irresponsibles of this Bohemia, where sorrow and death creep in to wring the hearts and chill the joy of the world.

The Bohemians, artist, musician, author, and their sweethearts frolic with a fine old world spontaneity. Rudolph and his Mimi love and lose each other and sorrow sadly. It snows and Mimi comes back, racked—but not unpleasantly to view—wit hthe cough that closes the door of life to her.

Quaint settings, entirely apart from our country, quaint interiors and costumes and behaviors, make the film, while alive, a picture of a different world than today. A glimpse to linger long in the visual memory is the scene of the street with the snow falling. The veil of poetical imagination has been drawn over the whole production wrapping it in a gentle protection from the rough edges of life's materialism. Things go easily or they go hard, but they go poetically.

Around the principal players is gathered a corps of most efficient assistants, for some reason unnamed, who contribute quits as much to the general effect as do the principals themselves.

More words would simply repeat what has been said. It is an able film, effectively played, beautifully photographed, produced with finesse. A lot of ne

HELEN HOLMES SERIES

WHY

Astute showmen will instantly grasp the soundness of these reasons WHY the new Helen Holmes series of Mutual Star Productions will be one of the surest and greatest financial successes of the times:

As the heroine of the recent Mutual serial triumph "The Girl and the Game", Helen Holmes made countless friends of picture fans throughout the land.

HELEN HOLMES has charm which unfailingly registers on the screen. She has superb histrionic quality which is the result of natural gifts developed by practical experience in the best dramatic productions of the last ten years.

All theatres which played "The Girl and the Game" will be certain to play to capacity with future HELEN HOLMES features.

Theatres which missed that sterling serial will benefit by the splendid reputation HELEN HOLMES achieved through her feats of unequalled daring and intense dramatic acting during the unfolding of its many scenes.

The plays in which HELEN HOLMES will be presented are from the pens of celebrated authors and for the most part adapted from the most famous novels of the day.

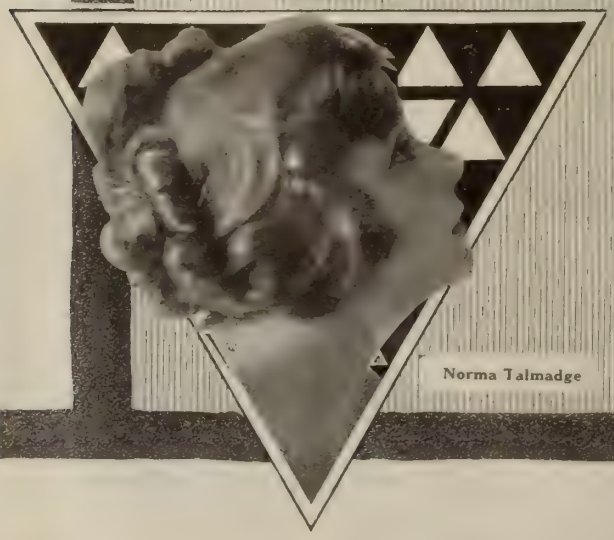
TRIANGLE

Motion Pictures are successes or failures because the public patronizes them or withholds patronage. If a picture achieves financial success it is either because it is a bad picture depending on crude sensationalism, or because it is a good picture made according to high ethical standards by talented men and women with a definite purpose behind it.

TRIANGLE PICTURE PLAYS are of this latter class. Their aim has been to portray the big things of life, to bring to the screen the greatest possible quality and quantity of entertainment, until now TRIANGLE PLAYS have earned first place where all good things are appreciated by merit alone.

The actual cost of making TRIANGLE PICTURES is never considered. The orders are to make the best and then beat that in the next picture—to spare no effort to get just the right effect—that indefinable touch of perfection so noticeable in TRIANGLE Productions.



Norma Talmadge

Bessie Barriscale

PICTUREPLAYS

TRIANGLE PLAYS are the very latest word in the production of motion pictures. They show you miles upon miles of wonderful natural country; peoples you have read about only in books.

They don't hold you to one set of emotions, either, but rush you swiftly through the gamut of them all. They give comedy, tragedy, laughter, tears, all in rapid succession. Their magic carries you delightfully through space and time.

You spend an hour among the marvels of the beautiful North, its ice and snow and wonderful scenery. Then, whisk! You are on the blazing Mexican battlefields holding your breath as a horde of savage soldiers descends on a defenseless city. Another change and you roar with laughter at the ridiculous complications of some Keystone Comedy.

If you are an exhibitor and are not running TRIANGLE PLAYS why not drop us a line for information regarding their presentation.

Facts and Comments

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD urges the fullest possible attendance of delegates to the National Convention of the Exhibitors' League to open at Chicago on July 11. At present the exhibiting branch in the industry is the only one with a considerable organization. The industry will soon be confronted with struggles and problems of many kinds and there will be need for a strong organization within the ranks of the industry. In the impending battles against censorship in Washington and in various states the aid of the exhibitor is indispensable. This aid can best be given by the organized exhibitor. The whole industry looks forward to the Chicago convention with great expectations. We look for much valuable constructive work.

ONE of the biggest South American buyers of films heretofore located in London announces his impending removal to New York. The South American market is knocking at our doors more loudly every day. Europe is utterly unable to furnish the needful supply. The monopolistic conditions now existing in South America depend for their continuance entirely upon the European supply. The conclusion from these premises is obvious enough to be drawn by a child. What we need is a little study, a little enterprise, a little progressiveness on the part of American producers and distributors. If you are interested let us tell you that Cine-Mundial, the Spanish edition of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, will point the way if you care to invest two cents in postage.

OUR esteemed contemporary and namesake, the New York World, amiably suggests that some of Shakespeare's plays might be made into films. Quite so. Our records show that the Vitagraph Company has filmed most of the great and popular Shakespearean plays in 1908 and in 1909. We are hungry for good suggestions; let the distinguished editor try again.

THERE will be a very lively and spirited contest for the presidency of the National League when the great hosts assemble in Chicago to elect a successor to Frederick J. Herrington. We have no doubt that the best man will win. We feel that the election may safely be left to the delegates without newspaper advice or assistance.

AN energetic young exhibitor in Utica, N. Y., publishes a neat little weekly the feature of which is a friendly chat with his patrons. He always has something of interest to say to them and the patrons read these weekly chats eagerly. There ought to be a special bond of good feeling between every exhibitor and his audience, and our Utica friend has reached an ideal condition. We heartily commend his example to all other exhibitors who want to try something original in advertising.

THE Motion Picture Board of Trade, it is reported, is about to end its activities. We will not defy the tradition which forbids criticism on epitaphs and in obituaries. The failure of the organization of course proves nothing against the principle of genuinely representative trade parliament, in which all interests are treated fairly and equitably. THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD five years ago earnestly advocated the formation of such a parliament, calling attention to the similar institutions in France and Great Britain. We hope that the next effort to organize such a body will meet with success. In this hope we are confirmed by the sight of the dangers which confront the industry. The next six months will make it very plain to every man in the industry that a strong and united organization commanding the confidence of the whole film world is an absolute necessity.

Stealing Plays

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

THAT authors are plagiarizing is a general complaint of producers. That producers are appropriating from scenarios submitted to them for approval and as regularly rejected is a general complaint of authors. The usual excuse offered when the steal is discovered does not commend itself strongly to charitable consideration. There is not the slightest doubt that two men do have the same idea for a play at the same time and develop it along similar lines. There is also not the slightest doubt that comets now and then appear in the sky.

Honorable producers, like honorable book publishers, are aiming high. Their purpose is to establish a reputation for superior quality. They are constantly on the lookout for original compositions executed in a masterly way. They are employing men of discriminating intelligence to examine scenarios and eliminate all but those worth the risk and expenditure of thousands of dollars for visualization. A letter from one of these reputable houses recently came to my attention and I have taken the liberty of quoting from its contents. It was in general an encouraging letter to an author whose script was returned.

"It is against the policy of this company to buy scenarios or synopses from any source outside its organization unless we know the man or woman from whom we buy it. This protection is necessary in film procedure because plagiarism is an every-day occurrence, and it is also possible for a writer to sell the same idea to two or three producers almost simultaneously if the idea is good enough. We would not be inclined to buy even an exceptional story from an unknown writer because we should not be able to protect ourselves."

Now the unknown author may have a corking good story, all his own, worked out intelligibly for the screen. How is he to market it under such conditions? I called on the producing concern responsible for the above statements and was further enlightened. Said the writer of the letter: "There is another reason why we would not buy from a writer whom we do not know, namely, that a man who has sent a scenario sky-rocketing to various studios can never be certain that he owns his own product, that some scenario man in some one of these studios, with a smaller sense of honor than is proper, might take a vital theme or punch out of the synopsis or scenario and then reject it. Then the innocent and properly qualified purchaser of this scenario might find himself face to face with the situation of having produced a stolen story."

The fact that the original scenario writer is innocent would hardly make the producer feel any better about having run into such a situation. Nor is the author benefited in the long run, in spite of the payment made for his hard work. He is bound to suffer a loss of reputation, the very thing he most cherishes, on which his success must eventually depend. Through contemptible pilfering, made possible by lax studio methods, an honorable producer is robbed of valuable property and the author, at the same time, robbed of good repute.

The problem of getting away from stories not-worthwhile, based on some devitalized subject or hackneyed situation, neither original in composition nor skilled in arrangement, may seem simple enough, but there are involved more complicated problems, those of encouraging fine authorship without involving a serious loss to the producer through plagiarism.

The high-class producers who took the pains to send a letter to the author who had taken pains in writing a scenario submitted to them for examination are justified in their attitude. They did not discourage the author. They simply enlightened him as to their policy and their principles, and they made it possible for him to establish himself in confidence. A step in the right direction has been taken, and there is little doubt that other reputable concerns will rise to the necessity of fair treatment and straight dealing within the near future, with a hoped-for result that crooks will be gradually eliminated from the business.

But listen to what the New York Evening Sun has to say: "Said the movie men to the Authors' League, 'we can't pay you writing fellows any big royalties. The reports of our profits are greatly exaggerated.' Said the movie men to the public, 'Come and see our marvelous million-dollar production. We spare no expense. We equip great studios. We buy vast Western ranches. We pay our stars $50,000 to $600,000 salaries.' But the ingenious men and women who furnish the ideas that give life to all this furniture get $25 to $50, or on a higher level $500."

For a capable author to imbibe and perfectly understand what is of deep interest to our people at the present moment is an immensely difficult matter in itself. For him to study his audience and discover how they must be addressed means mental effort. For him to contrive and construct through long weeks a story that shall at once be vital and entertaining, that lends itself to exposition both clear and artistic, means more than I can briefly tell—it means that he has entered the hardest profession on earth.

The hardest profession in the world is not becoming easier. Besides broad comprehension of his subject, wealth of invention and discriminating taste, the author of screen stories of the better sort must have a knowledge of what structural arrangement best suits screen presentation. Then if he merely submits a synopsis and leaves the rest to be worked out, he permits another man to write his story, and he cannot become known to producers as a dependable quantity, an author who has mastered his craft. The best introduction an unknown author can have is a scenario of masterly composition.

The scenario of today is a complete working scheme, carefully studied out in advance, so that it may be executed without costly delay. A masterly scenario is not only a great instrument of economy in the cost of production, it is the first and foremost essential to artistic and financial success. If it is all right to pay directors large sums for the supervision of story visualization, and actors adequate compensation for the interpretation of roles, there does not seem to be any reason why the author who creates, not steals, a story should not be compensated as he is in literature and the drama except that that work of his mind can be easily stolen.

A reaction against those lax studio methods which permit stealing is found in the dearth of good stories on the screen. The entire moving picture industry is mainly supported by story value. That support cannot be replaced by makeshifts, and to rot that support with wormy peculation is to endanger its future safety for the sake of a small temporary advantage. If producers do not protect the author, it will only confirm that men are seldom blessed with good fortune and good sense at the same time.

The British Film in America

By W. Stephen Bush.

THE CINEMA, our young and lively British contemporary, in a recent issue prints "An Open Letter to The Moving Picture World." The object of the letter is stated in these words: "Wanted: 'Reciprocity' for British Films." The letter no doubt reflects the feelings of most British film men, and we have therefore thought it worth while to reproduce all its important parts. This, however, is not the only reason we have for reprinting the substance of the appeal. The severe handicaps which now beset the British producer, the period of storm and stress through which the entire industry is passing in Great Britain and her colonies, are eloquently described in the letter. We think it is not without its historic value.

We are only too glad to comply with the request contained in this remarkable appeal. We are aware of its merit. Let us recall to the memory of our esteemed contemporary that The Moving Picture World has in the past on more than one occasion urged the special claims of British-made films upon the American public. We have on such occasions dwelt upon the bonds of language and literature and common traditions. We have spoken of the splendid possibilities of good British films in this market. We are pleased indeed to be able to add that the British producers have completely verified our predictions of success. Four and five years ago British producers could scarcely find a market for their films in their own country, today no foreign film is more popular here than the film of British origin and none sells as readily. This is no idle optimism. Only a few days ago the representative of a new but enterprising film producing company in London left these shores after having disposed of all of his feature subjects to one of the biggest American companies at prices eminently satisfactory all around. We, of course, have always tried to do our share by giving these good productions the favorable notice they deserved and we shall continue to pursue this policy.

Credit for the growing success and popularity of British-made films is of course due mainly to the merits of these films. While British producers keep on giving us such splendid productions as "The House of Temperley," "The Middleman," "Bootle's Baby," "Brother Officers," "England's Menace," "How Britain Prepared" and "David Copperfield," we can do little more than join in the general applause. The reason we happen to remember these features out of the multitudes which oppress our memory is plain: Of all the foreign-made features the ones just named were the only ones shown in such big houses as the Strand and the Broadway, etc. The Moving Picture World does nothing more than voice the general and hearty welcome which the American public has always been ready to accord to the British-made film of merit.

As matters stand today and as they have always stood in this country the British-made film has a shade the best of it compared to other foreign-made films. We do not know whether our friend of The Cinema would call this reciprocity, but whatever you may call it it seems to us like a solid substantial advantage. We would like to have a representative of our esteemed contemporary come over and spend a few evenings at the Screen Club or in any other place where film men "most do congregate." We have little doubt that he would join the friendly chorus of British film men whom we are always glad to welcome. Let him interview any of his countrymen who have ever been our guests here and be convinced that our neutrality is not at all chilly but decidedly benevolent.

The most interesting part of the text of the letter follows.

My Dear World: You are a journal with a wide circulation throughout the cinematograph industry and you enjoy an enviable and well-deserved reputation for disinterestedness and reliability. You have been described as the "Film Bible," and we are disposed to agree that the exaggeration is pardonable. Without laying claim to "divine inspiration" your influence is far-reaching and dignified and comes as near to being Authority as one could hope for in the sphere of trade journalism. With one notable exception, practically every important aspect of the cinematograph industry has been materially developed by your instruction, guidance and encouragement.

That exception is the status of the British film in America and the measure of reciprocity which, we venture to think, is due, particularly at this juncture, from the American to the British industry.

Your editorial silence on the peculiar position which has sprung up between the American and British trades is all the more remarkable in that at least one other leading cinema trade organ in the States, and several American representatives on this side, have not only realized what is due from America to Great Britain in this matter, but are each "doing their bit," as we say here, to rectify to some extent the balance of cinema trade between this country and yours. To this movement, a commendable but somewhat belated one, the World, hitherto, does not appear to have lent its editorial support. The British cinema industry asks "Why?" and recollects certain editorial comments in the World which might almost suggest an attitude of very chilly neutrality towards the British industry.

A fig for neutrality! The time has come for the American industry as a whole to recognize that its fortunate position in the British market, owing to the war, calls for, if it does not necessitate, a measure of reciprocity for British films in the American market. * * *

While the British producer fights, is it not reasonable to expect that his films should earn as much money as possible on behalf of his dependents, and, perhaps, even provide him with some capital to promote a fresh start in business on his return?

This, my dear World, is where you "come in." You—and none better—can point out to the American film men that the highly favorable position which they enjoy in the British market is due to the fact that the war has deprived them, and will increasingly deprive them, of competitors, and that it would be a very dignified, a graceful and a sportsmanlike act on their part if they made arrangements to see that while British producers, actors, and film men are fighting to keep British markets open for American films, the American industry, in return, gave British films a fair show in American theaters. That would be better than a "neutrality" which merely keeps the British producer's seat warm for him, but takes away the cushions.

It is certainly "up to" you, my dear World, and we feel sure that you will respond with a stirring editorial calculated to send American buyers hot-foot in quest of British films. The search will repay them, and the British producer will be able to devote himself more thoroughly to the task of penning in the Huns on this side of the Atlantic. Who knows but that, if allowed to escape, they might assault even the bulwarks of America?

With respectful greetings, my dear World,

Believe me, yours very fraternally,

THE CINEMA.

Film Men Discuss Organization

At Luncheon Attended by Unusually Representative Body Committee Is Appointed to Report on Plan for a Successor to Board of Trade.

By George Blaisdell.

ONE of the most thoroughly representative gatherings of film men ever grouped about one board sat down to a luncheon at Delmonico's on Thursday, June 8. The invitations which brought out the threescore men had been signed by Walter W. Irwin as chairman and Edward Earl as secretary. Among the objects stated in the call was "the determination of definite policies on matters affecting the industry as a whole." The luncheon had been under way but a few minutes, however, before Mr. Irwin made the definite announcement that the Motion Picture Board of Trade had not been able to fulfill its objects, and that the meeting had been called for the purpose of considering the formation of an association which would be representative of the entire industry and one that would gain the confidence of everyone in it. He said the board was willing to amend its charter in any way to meet the wishes of those around the board. It was willing to go further than amendment—it was willing to dissolve. The speaker pleaded for a militant organization which would be able to present a concerted front on any question affecting the industry, and that without in any way lessening the effectiveness of any organization now existing or that may be formed in any particular branch of the trade.

The announcement came as a surprise to a great many of his hearers. Seated around the board were many manufacturers and exhibitors. At the conclusion of Mr. Irwin's remarks—he spoke for twenty minutes—Commodore J. Stuart Blackton talked briefly. The president of the Board of Trade expressed his conviction that the one big question of the day is whether the industry needs a trade organization, and he added that question should be settled. If the body should decide an organization was not needed, there was no use wasting time talking. "Let us go right on as we have done in the past," he said, "and suffer as we have done in the past—and we will suffer a great deal more in the future, I believe.

"The present board is perhaps a nucleus, and I will reiterate what Mr. Irwin has said, that every man in the board will eliminate himself from any office he holds, if for the good of the industry it is necessary that this be done." Mr. Blackton expressed the opinion that the recent misunderstanding over trade shows would prove to be a blessing in disguise, in that all who had to do with either had realized the futility of trying to run a divided house.

Following a standing expression as to the advisability of forming an organization, in which only two men remained seated, the chairman was formally instructed to appoint a committee of twelve to draft a plan. The first action was taken as the result of a motion offered by J. E. Brulatour. Mr. Brulatour called attention to the nearly unanimous action of the meeting and then asked W. W. Hodkinson, who was one of the two who had failed to arise, how he stood on the proposition. The president of the Paramount replied that he wished to know more about the purposes of the organization before going on record. A lively discussion ensued, in which W. A. Brady also tried to learn the position of Mr Hodkinson. Mr. Irwin called attention to the fact that next year thirty-eight state legislatures will meet, which emphasized the need for organization.

James Delves, national secretary of the exhibitors, was asked by Mr. Irwin if he believed the proposed association would in any way interfere with the exhibitors' organization. Mr. Delves said he could express only his own opinion, and added that the question should be submitted to the executive committee. He added that in Pennsylvania there was a censorship law, and in that fact was found one reason for his presence at the meeting. He said, in answer to Mr. Irwin, he believed such an organization as that proposed would on questions affecting the whole industry receive the co-operation of exhibitors.

After another long colloquy between Mr. Irwin and Mr. Hodkinson, the latter said he was in favor of anything that would advance the interests of the industry, provided from his viewpoint it was feasible or workable. Asked as to whether he knew of any reason why the industry could not develop an effective organization, he replied there seemed to be no reason beyond the fact that the industry is in a state of flux. Not directly answering a query as to whether he would be willing to abide by the decision of the majority, Mr. Hodkinson said he would like to attend the meeting at which the committee made its report, and if he found the plans such as he could sympathize with he would be very glad to come in. After much more discussion, he agreed to serve on a committee to investigate the feasibility of bringing about the formation of an organization that will be helpful to the industry.

Mr. Irwin, answering an inquiry of Mr. Blumenthal as to the genesis of the meeting, said it was called as a result of the last meeting of the directors of the Board of Trade; that the board had recognized the fact that it had not obtained the confidence and the support of the entire industry, and that for the general welfare it was necessary to have an organization that would. To that end invitations had been sent out to representative men asking them to come to the luncheon.

Objections were entered to the composition of the committee as it had been named by Mr. Irwin. One man was opposed to lawyers on general principles—and that brought the laugh on Mr. Irwin, in which he joined—while others thought the exhibitors should have a larger representation. After deciding to elect the committee that will take up the drafting of a report on plan and scope, there was a reversal of opinion, and Mr. Irwin was empowered to appoint a fresh committee, one that will comprise representatives of the supply men, the exhibitors, the trade press and the manufacturers. The following were later appointed:

J. E. Brulatour, Nicholas Power, J. H. Hallberg, Lee A. Ochs, John J. Wittman, L. L. Levine, W. Stephen Bush, William A. Johnston, Tracy Lewis, W. W. Hodkinson, Jesse Lasky and W. W. Irwin.

It was decided to meet again three weeks from date at the same place. The meeting had been in session for two hours and a half. The atmosphere had been somewhat heated at times, but at the close the best of feeling seemed to prevail.

Here is the list of the men present: Walter W. Irwin, J. Stuart Blackton, J. W. Binder, Terry Ramsaye, Tracy Lewis, Paul Gulick, J. C. Graham, Samuel M. Field, Paul H. Cromelin, Lee A. Ochs, W. Stephen Bush, L. B. Jennings, J. C. Flinn, Carl H. Pierce, J. M. Solomon, Jr., J. H. Hallberg, Arthur Leslie, John Manheimer, William Brandt, Samuel Lesselbaum, Louis H. Levine, P. A. Parsons, Fred Beecroft, Carl Anderson, Lloyd D. Willis, Ralph Ince, Benjamin Lyons, George Blaisdell, E. K. Gillette, William A. Brady, Adolph Zukor, Charles Urban, Max Oestreicher, Harry A. Cochrane, Edward Earl, H. T. Edwards, John H. Wittman, Henry Cole, John C. Bolte, Herman Pollak, W. W. Hodkinson, Raymond Pawley, C. R. Macauley, William M. Seabury, William N. Seligsberg, Jack Edwards, P. A. Powers, J. I. Schnitzer, Leslie Mason, C. V. C. Van Deusen, Albert S. Le Vino, J. A. Berst, W. E. Schallenberger, David Horsley, Charles Condon, Cranston Brenton, Samuel Goldfish, Arthur S. Friend, Albert H. T. Banzhaf, Samuel Spedon, Sam Trigger, Ben Title, A. J. Barthell, Louis F. Blumenthal, James Delves, Arthur James.

Statement by J. W. Binder.

J. W. Binder, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, after the meeting gave out this statement:

"I am much gratified at the representative attendance at the meeting. I believe the action taken is wise and along constructive lines. The original plan of organization and the budget of the Board of Trade were never considered by me as being permanent. The plan was tentative and the budget intended to suffice only for the organization period, until the full membership had been secured. When it became apparent that, from whatever reason, the full strength of the different branches of the industry could not be enrolled, I at once began work upon a broader plan, a larger budget and a more equitable method of raising the same. Under the former procedure, a few concerns bore the brunt of the expense connected with the board's work.

"I am sure that the committee appointed will work out a plan which will be fair and equitable and which will enlarge upon the beginnings made by the Board of Trade. I do not feel, nor does anyone, I believe, familiar with what the board has accomplished, that it has in any sense been a failure. I have only to point to the splendid fight made against the Federal Censorship bill in Washington, the achievement of the Wilson dinner and to the fact that in the eleven states in which the legislatures met this year, out of sixty-four bills hostile to the motion picture industry introduced, only eleven became laws, to prove this assertion.

"It is a source of keen regret to me that I shall not be here to take an active part in the organization to be built. I am sailing for London on Saturday to execute a private commission of an extremely important nature, which it is a great honor to have been asked to undertake. I shall be absent until July 15. If the committee has not completed its labors at that time, my best efforts and as much time as I can give will be at its disposal."

Ask Receiver for General Film

Percival L. Waters and James B. Clark, Acting as Protective Committee of Preferred Stockholders, Bring Action in Supreme Court.

ALLEGING gross mismanagement and a systematic dissipation of assets of the General Film Company, Percival L. Waters of New York and James B. Clark of Pittsburgh, acting as a protective committee, have commenced an action in the Supreme Court of the County of New York against Albert E. Smith and others constituting the directors and owners of the common stock of the General Film Company. The summons and complains were served upon the defendants Monday, June 12. The plaintiffs are represented by Cadwallader, Wickersham & Taft. An accounting and a permanent receiver are asked for.

The summons is a lengthy one—it contains over 30,000 words—and recites the history of the Motion Picture Patents Company and the General Film Company and includes the license agreement under which those concerns were operated. As a resume of the history of the licensed motion picture companies for the past half dozen years the document makes most interesting reading.

After going into these particulars the plaintiffs demand judgment in the following terms:

1. That the loss sustained by the defendant General Film Company by reason of the wrongful acts of the other defendants here, as hereinbefore more particularly alleged, be ascertained and determined.
2. That the defendants other than said General Film Company be directed to pay said sums severally to said General Film Company, and that judgment be entered against them in favor of said General Film Company for the sums so ascertained.
3. That an accounting be had against each of the defendants other than said General Film Company respecting said payments and credits and every other matter that may be necessary to be so determined.
4. That it be decreed that the improper and illegal credits hereinabove referred to are not lawful liabilities of the said General Film Company and that the same be canceled upon the books of said company, and that all further payments of said amounts as so credited be enjoined.
5. That a permanent receiver of the property and assets of said defendant General Film Company be appointed, with all the rights, powers, duties and liabilities of permanent receivers in such cases, and that the officers and directors of said defendant General Film Company be enjoined and restrained from transferring, disposing of and interfering in any way with said property and assets, and from doing any acts which may interfere in any way with said receiver.
6. And that the plaintiffs may have such other and further relief in the premises as may be just, besides costs.

After enumerating various resolutions of the board of directors bearing on larger financial transactions the complaint sets forth:

"That pursuant to said resolutions said defendants not only have caused said sum of $2,396,397.50 to be paid in cash, but have also caused large credits to be entered upon the books of said defendant General Film Company in favor of the defendants, Biograph Company, Kalem Company (Inc.), Pathe Freres, Lubin Manufacturing Company, Melies Manufacturing Company, Vitagraph Company of America, Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, Selig Polyscope Company, Thomas A. Edison, Inc., and Kleine, and said George Melies, on the following dates and in the following amounts respectively:

During the calendar year 1910.....	$134,863.11
During the calendar year 1911.....	1,055,579.98
During the calendar year 1912.....	1,678,268.23
During the calendar year 1913.....	510,552.95
During the calendar year 1914.....	1,133,437.56

as alleged net profits so payable under said contracts for the years 1910, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, and alleged accrued interest thereon, of which aggregate sum of $4,636,562.37 said sum of $2,396,397.50 so paid in cash formed a part."

The complaint sets forth the years and the amounts in which the latter sum was said to be disbursed, "leaving an alleged balance on the books of said defendant General Film Company to the credit of the aforesaid defendants of $2,240,164.87," it adds.

The plaintiffs aver that this "credit balance is an erroneous, improper, wongful and illegal credit and that the said defendants and none of them are entitled to any part of the above-mentioned credit balance standing in their favor upon the books of said defendant General Film amounting to $2,240,164.87."

The complaint further alleges that the sum of $2,396,397.50 already paid in cash to the defendants "or a large part thereof is due and owing from the said defendants to said defendant General Film Company, together with interest on the said sum from the dates of the various improper payments."

As among the "negligent and wrongful acts" the complaint charges that the defendants, to the "great loss and injury of said General Film Company and its preferred stockholders, decided upon a policy disastrous to said company but favorable to the competitors of said company, many of whom were then accustomed to distribute said 'feature' motion pictures—to wit, the elimination of all 'feature' motion pictures from the distributing programs of said General Film Company, and in pursuance of said policy did so eliminate such 'feature' motion pictures."

Among the specifications in regard to the foregoing are the institution by George Kleine of a feature service, the organization of the V-L-S-E, Inc., and the discontinuance of releases through the General Film Service of the Kleine and Edison subjects. It is charged that this action constituted a "gross discrimination" against the General Film Company in violation of Paragraph 6 of a contract dated April 21, 1910.

The complaint is dated June 6, was sworn to on June 10 and served on June 12. The defendants are given twenty days in which to make answer to the complaint.

Dixon Denies Race Prejudice

Says German Strain in His Own Blood and Sense of Fairness Exempt "Fall of a Nation" from Charge.

BEFORE going to Los Angeles this week to start "The Fall of a Nation" there, Thomas Dixon, its producer said: "In view of the criticisms of certain scenes I wish to reiterate the statement that "The Fall of a Nation" is not directed against any nationality, class or racial element in this country. My friend S. Stanwood Menken is quite mistaken in saying 'Your picture is manifestly anti-German.' Against Mr. Menkens' expression I would put the opinions of the local German press which are uniformly as favorable to my play as the great majority of the English language papers. The entire point of the play is that the nationalities here, whether British, Irish, Teutonic, French, Italian or Eastern European, should be fused into an united Americanism.

"It is alleged that the large number of German faces in the hosts of the invading army and in the cast in The Fall of a Nation convicts the author of cherishing anti-German prejudices. On the contrary, I chose these men because they were out of work and hungry. Five hundred Germans, many of them reservists, applied to me for work in the battle scenes of the picture, and I was glad to give it to them. They represented fairly well the varying types of the imperial confederation of Northern Europe which I imagined to be attacking America. My greatgrandfather, a Prussian, Colonel Frederick Hambright, fought in the Revolutionary War at King's Mountain. The German strain in my blood, as well as my inherent sense of fairness to all the components of Americanism, would prevent me from singling out the Teutons for attack. My quarrel is with imperialism whether pro-Ally or pro-German. And my desire is to uplift the ideal of true American democracy, which is in danger of being lost sight of by the partisans of the overseas quarrels."

RALPH HERZ MARRIES.

Ralph Herz, the Metro star, who will make his debut in motion pictures on the Metro program in "The Purple Lady," which has just been completed, has been quietly married to Miss Frances M. Logan, a society favorite in Washington, D. C., and the daughter of the late Major William Richard Logan. The wedding, which grew out of a romance that had its beginning last winter, was solemnized in the presence of a few friends at the Shoreham Hotel, Washington. Mr. Herz and his bride are spending their honeymoon in Atlantic City and New York City.

Projection Department Man Meets Exhibitors and Operators in Waterbury and New Haven.

Waterbury.

WHATEVER else may be said for or against the members of Local 304 at least it must be conceded that they know how to "get busy" and produce results on short notice, as I learned by my greeting here. Local 304 has twenty-two members. It is officered by live, progressive men, and that, let me tell you, is more than half of the fight in any labor organization. The Waterbury local has secured a remarkably good scale, going as high as $30 a week, the lowest being $20. This is decidedly above the average here in the East, and it follows that it is up to the Waterbury boys to deliver the goods on the screen. The projection department has long since taken the stand that in order to do justice to the photoplay it is absolutely necessary to have well paid men in the operating room, because you can't get real ability and brains for nothing; it has also taken the stand that the men who receive good salaries must either produce the goods in return or get out and let in somebody who will. I am a great believer in fair play, and managers who pay good salaries are entitled to good results on the screen, always assuming that they will provide the equipment necessary to enable the operator to apply the knowledge he is expected to possess. It must not be presumed, however, that the best operator in the world can put on high class projection with a No. 4 Power or an Edison Exhibition model machine, because it can't be did. There "ain't no such animal." On the other hand, given the best equipment in the world the incompetent operator can not put on real high class projection, and put it on at a reasonable cost, all of which is not to be taken as in any way reflecting upon the members of 304. It is an unfortunate fact, however, that some (not all) of the Waterbury managers are asking their operators to "make bricks without straw," in other words asking them to project high-class pictures with their equipment in sad need of repair. Also, I am told that some of the Waterbury managers require the projection of five reels in forty-five minutes, or, in other words, nine minutes to the reel, which, if true, is nothing short of outrageous.

Some of the men it was my very genuine pleasure to meet during the afternoon were J. Corrigan and Peter Murphy, respectively president and secretary of Local Union 304; Jean Belasco, manager Poli's Strand theater; Walter Griffith, manager Poli's theater; J. H. Nichols, manager of the Scenic; Frank Frauer, manager of the Star, and Charles E. Gradwell, editor of the Sunday Mail.

In sizing up the whole thing I find Waterbury seems to be distinctly above the average, both from the operating and managerial point of view. Take, for instance, such men as Mr. Nichols, Mr. Belasco and Mr. Frauer. They represent the future of the moving picture business simply, wholly and entirely because they are willing to learn—are progressive and not hide-bound. Managers who represent the other extreme are those who will not listen to argument, who have no real knowledge of the height, depth and breadth of the motion picture business, or the business of exhibiting, or the business of projecting pictures and who absolutely refuse to accept knowledge from anyone. I am told that Waterbury has one or two examples of this kind of manager, and if so they constitute a brake or a drag on the industry in that city, the one consolation being that in due course of time they will eliminate themselves.

At 11.30 practically all the managers and operators in and about Waterbury gathered at Poli's theater on East Main street and listened attentively to yours truly for one and a half hours, after which a buffet luncheon was served on the stage.

The general consensus of opinion was that, considering the difficulties due to non-delivery of a notifying letter, the affair was decidedly successful and all expressed themselves as well pleased.

New Haven.

The New Haven local is one of the really live wires. It contains such men as John Griffiths of Ansonia, and Charles Hyde, who justly style themselves projection engineers. A goodly percentage of the members are progressive and study both the practical and technical end of their business. The union demands of its members that they deliver the goods on the screen, so far as is possible under the conditions the individual works under—for not all New Haven managers, I am sorry to say, supply up-to-date equipment. In fact I saw one Power's Six still grinding away, and its little lamphouse and inefficient (by comparison) little lamp looked rather queer beside the large lamphouse and lamp of modern projectors. The retention of such equipment is a very poor business policy. It does not pay you, Mr. Manager, from any possible point of view.

The Simplex and Power's machines are both very much in evidence in New Haven, but H. B. Coles, president of the Coles Moving Picture Machine Corporation, was in the city preparing to place the new Coles machine on the New Haven map.

During the evening, under the guidance of Brother W. H. Upton, I was gasoline buggied out to the Dixwell theater, Dixwell avenue, of which W. H. Whitan and W. H. Wood are proprietors and managers. I found Brother Nick Vallan projecting a really splendid sixteen-foot picture, using two Simplex machines and a Hallberg motor generator set. The latter had been through a fire and was not working very well. Vallano was using 50 amperes with a 60-volt arc. The picture was on a calcimined screen bordered with black and surrounded by a shadow box. The projection left but little to be desired. The picture was not too large, yet amply large enough, and stood out, clean-cut and beautiful. Messrs. Whitan and Woods are progressive managers and Operator Vallano is delivering the goods on their screens.

New Haven Moving Picture Local 273, I. A. T. S. E.

At the Winchester theater—F. W. Hart, manager; John Richardson, operator—was another excellent picture. The equipment is two Simplex projectors and a Wotton Rexolux. Brother Richardson has a most excellent operating room. The front wall is black and the spot shaded with amber glass. The observation ports are of ample size and the ventilation excellent. All the operating rooms I saw had incandescent lights burning, which is bad.

Printed invitations brought out practically every operator, theater manager and exchange man in New Haven, as well as several from other towns, to a reception to the World man. It certainly did credit to the local.

F. H. RICHARDSON.

MUTUAL'S PRESIDENT IN CHICAGO.

John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, is spending the week in Chicago, looking into the affairs of the Mutual in the Middle West territory.

Douglass Fairbanks in New York

New Star of the Screen Will Remain in the East for Three Months—Through with the Stage, He Says.

By George Blaisdell.

JUST spent a quarter of an hour with Douglass Fairbanks. You know who I mean, that good bad man Reggie. Take my word for it, he is every inch all that he looks—and any one who has seen the player on the screen knows that he looks like a man—a regular fellow, one who "belongs," and in any company. The stage player who became a famous screen actor on one production — "The Lamb" — walked into his hotel on the afternoon of the day he arrived in New York. The smile with which he greeted an awaiting friend made unnecessary the identifying remark of the hotel clerk to the effect that "Here he is now." To one who had within a week seen "Reggie" it was the last word in naturalness. It was ten minutes before the World man saw fit to introduce himself — there was a bunch around the actor. Norma Talmadge, passing through with her mother, greeted her fellow-player. Master Fairbanks, as husky as his dad, stopped long enough to be introduced to the group. Mr. Fairbanks in talking to his friends was seated on a big circular table, nonchalant, indifferent to the easy chairs a few feet away. It was interesting to sit back and observe the maner of man this Fairbanks is when not before the camera.

Douglass Fairbanks.

The player's visit to New York meant his first sight of Broadway in six months. While in Los Angeles he has worked in seven pictures, six of which have been released. Come to think of it, that means thirty-five reels in twenty-six weeks—a record which bears no earmarks of "temperamental stuff." And there's an eighth picture well under way. The man, in fact, is without frills. His bearing is just what an admirer of his work and his personality pictures it —wholesome, frank, hearty. His conversation sparkles—the words flow fast and free, and so do the chuckles as he talks of his experiences the past half year. Asked as to the possibility of his return to the stage, both hands go up. "I've ducked the stage forever," he replies emphatically. "And I am goin to have a ranch," he adds.

Mr. Fairbanks' last subject is "In the Carquinez Woods," one of Bret Harte's stories. The player seems to think it has "got it on" "Reggie." He didn't say just that, but he expressed the opinion that it ought to be a rattling good picure. The exteriors were photographed in Calaveras County, up among the California big trees. The forest rangers to the number of ten helped out the seventy members of the company by starting a fire and burning over several hundred square yards for the benefit of the picture.

We were speaking of "Reggie Mixes In," or the writer brought the subject into the conversation. The latter had told of what happened in the Rialto on the previous Friday night. In the showing of the fight in the saloon in which the two men swing over a table, one powerfully lunged man in the balcony yelled "Oh!" It upset the house, already on edge.

"Yes," said Mr. Fairbanks. "my opponent accidentally got hurt in that muss, too." The player spoke of strangle holds and half nelsons; something went wrong and the picture was held up for half an hour while the injured man was fixed up. The "gangster" who broke the fall of Reggie from the roof, too, was unfortunate in the result of the fight that ensued.

"We had some professional "pugs" in the making of that picture," said Mr. Fairbanks. "Griffith was opposed to their employment through fear of my getting hurt, but I told him I would take chances. I told the boys in the beginning it was going to be real fighting, nothing easy about it at all. Nor was there. I got a bit gouged up myself. I've been told there were one or two fellows really looking for me since, too, but I guess that's not so.

"Do you know in the picture business money comes in from all directions. I've collected $1,800 in accident insurance since I went to the Coast. But it's great, though. I've been working outdoors for four months. I can hardly walk in ordinary shoes, these low-heeled affairs. I feel as if I was going to fall backward. I was just getting used to the big, high-heeled sort. No more for me the old days in New York—get up late in the morning, a stroll around to the Lambs, a ride in the park, a nap in the afternoon, then the theater and supper afterward. Now I am called at 5 o'clock, see the doctor and get bandaged up; then out on location. If by luck we escape the doctor and ambulance it is dinner between 5 and 6 and then to bed."

"Where did you learn to ride a horse?" was the somewhat personal question shot at the player. The writer was thinking of the remarkable horsemanship in "The Good Bad Man," where Mr. Fairbanks seemed to out-cowboy the cowboys. "Why, I used to play polo, but I had never ridden a western horse," was the reply. "You know when I first went out the cowboys said they would get me a nice easy horse. I told them I wanted nothing of the kind. I wanted a regular horse. They got me one. In this last picture they furnished me another regular one, too. I think I rode everywhere on that animal but on his back. For recreation I rode a bucking broncho. I got what I was looking for. I also tried roping a steer in this last picture. For five months I have been rehearsing with a rope—yes, the fancy stuff. I am going to try it on New York tonight at the Allied Bazaar."

A small copper—or was it gold?—button in the lapel of the player's coat caught the eye of the writer. The well-known expansive smile was in evidence.

"You know Catalina?" he said. "Yes? Well, that button means a twenty-eight-pound yellowtail. It took me an hour and ten minutes to get him in. And all the while Bill Farnum was smoking a big black pipe that nearly made me sick—that is, when the fish didn't. I have scrapped with Indians and Mexicans among others, and it hurt to feel I was being licked by a fish."

"Since seeing your last two pictures I have been thinking what unusual possibilities there would lie in a ten-reel western picture with you and Bill Hart together," said the writer. "I don't mean playing against each other, but as pals; a regular man's story, leaving the women out of it, perhaps, or largely so. You've met Hart?"

"Have I?" And Fairbanks was serious. "He's one of my best friends. The boys gave me a dinner at Los Angeles just before my departure. Bill Hart sat on my right. Alan Dwan in his speech said he would like Bill Hart and Dug Fairbanks to do a picture together. Hart remarked that he was agreed. I told them I was going into big training in New York for three months, but under those circumstances I would have to confine my diet to beef, bullets and blood."

We talked of men we admire on the screen and how sometimes the regard for the personally unknown is confirmed when meeting them in the flesh. "Take it from me," said the actor, "anybody on the screen that you love has got to be a pretty fine man to register. If you like Bill Farnum and Bill Hart it is because down deep, basically, they are fine men. It is not what they assume, it is what they are. If on the screen you dislike a man it is because there is in his composition something that does not ring true, he's not a real man. At the dinner of which I have spoken every one of the hundred men was in fine jovial spirit when Hart began his speech. His remarks took a serious turn—you know that quiet, even tempered way of his. In a minute and a half he had us all in tears. These are the kind of men that make friends off the screen as well as on it."

Mr. Fairbanks' first work in New York will be the completion of a subject started in the West, a story combining the atmosphere of the Atlantic with the Pacific. Following his three months' stay here he said there might be a trip to South America—it was "on the lap of the gods." The player paid compliments to Mr. Dwan, his present director, and to John Emerson, a former director. Both are in New York, Mr. Emerson having arrived a few days ago.

UNITY SELLS TERRITORY TO VARIETY.

Andrew J. Cobe, vice-president and general manager of the Unity Sales Corporation, announces he has just consummated a deal whereby the states' rights to the entire state of New York and northern New Jersey have been acquired by Louis Rosenbluh, president of the Variety Films Corporation, for the two Unity features, "My Country First" and "The Pursuing Vengeance."

Vitagraph Taking on New Players

Peggy Hyland and Virginia Hammond to Be Featured in Larger Company's Forces.

A Greater Vitagraph Company of America is the slogan recently adopted by the Vitagraph Company whose representative heads, Albert E. Smith and J. Stuart Blackton, are bending every energy, backed by an experience dating from the inception of motion picture production in this country, to accomplish this result. In the immediate future a number of new faces will be seen on the screen, fathered by this famous company, while new personalities and different methods of expression will add a distinctive attractiveness to the already popular picture stories enacted by the "old guard" of the Vitagraph Stock Company.

Heading the list of new players appears E. H. Sothern, whose fame on the legitimate stage dates from his first introduction to an audience at the Park theater, New York, September 8th, 1879, up to a few weeks ago when he retired from the stage for good.

Perhaps the next new player of importance to be signed by the Vitagraph is Peggy Hyland, who, although new to American audiences, is popular in England. In pictures Miss Hyland has played in "The Love of an Actress," "John Halifax, Gentleman," "Infelice," and "Caste." Her first work under the Vitagraph banner will be as Mr. Sothern's leading lady.

Alice Joyce, a well known and popular player who also has won fame both on the legitimate stage and in pictures, is another recent and valuable addition to the Vitagraph roster. She is now working in "The Battle Cry of War."

Barney Bernard, representative of the better class of comedians who impersonates Jewish characters, is also a new Vitagraph player, who bids fair to become as popular in pictures as his Abe Potash was in "Potash and Perlmutter," on the legitimate stage. Mr. Bernard's initial work as a photoplay star will be in a character similar to Potash in which the humor and pathos of the Jewish race is exemplified.

Virginia Hammond, who has been leading woman for Sir Henry Irving, E. H. Sothern, William Courtenay, under the Frohman management and many other notable players is the latest legitimate stage star to join the Vitagraph forces. Miss Hammond's stage experience has embraced almost every kind and variety of work from comedy to tragedy. Her first appearance as a Vitagraph player will be in a feature written especially for her by Cecilie B. Pettersen. Thomas Mills, Miss Hammond's director, has just been appointed to the position he now holds, having been raised from the ranks of stock player, where his work received more than usual attention.

NEW COMPANY FOR FLORENCE LAWRENCE.

For some time rumors have been afloat with regard to a new moving picture company to be headed by Florence Lawrence. These rumors have now taken such definite shape it is said, that the contracts governing the movements of the company have been drawn up and await only the signatures of those concerned. Some delay on the preliminaries has been caused through the temporary illness of one of the prominent members of the organization. A large capitalization has been placed behind Miss Lawrence in her new venture, and the services of one of the finest directors in the country is to be procured. The best of vehicles will also be placed at her disposal.

NEW SCENARIO EDITOR FOR UNIVERSAL.

Eugene B. Lewis, who recently came to the Pacific Coast from New York to write feature scenarios, has been made head of the scenario department of the Pacific Coast studios of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company by General Manager Davis. Mr. Lewis is an old time newspaper man. Before becoming associated with the Big U organization he was connected with the Biograph Company.

"INDIANA" SUBJECT PLEASES STATE OFFICIALS.

The preliminary presentation of "Indiana," the historic motion picture filmed by the Selig Company to commemorate the history of Indiana as a state, was given in Indianapolis State House on Wednesday evening, June 7. A select audience was present, including the Indiana State Historical Commission, the Governor of Indiana, members of his staff, and other state officials. All expressed their great satisfaction over the worth of the motion picture. "Indiana" will be shown in all parts of the Hoosier State and elsewhere.

Abrams Head of Paramount

New England Exchange Man Elected Head of Big Distributing Group—James Steele of Pittsburgh is Secretary and Treasurer.

THE first change in the administration of Paramount Pictures Corporation since its organization two years ago was brought about on the afternoon of June 13, at the annual meeting of the company. Following a meeting of the stockholders at which were elected a new board of directors, Hiram Abrams of the Famous Players Film Company of New England, was elected president. William L. Sherry of New York was elected vice president and James Steele of Pittsburgh secretary and treasurer. These, with William W. Hodkinson, the former president, and Raymond Pawley, constitute the new board of directors.

Hiram Abrams.

Mr. Abrams who is now brought so prominently into the film world, has been connected with film exchanges for six or seven years. His entrance into the field was as manager of the W. E. Greene exchange of Portland, Me., he later becoming a part owner. Mr. Abrams and Mr. Greene three years ago organized the Famous Players Film Company of New England, of which the former is president and the latter treasurer. A year later on the formation of the Paramount company the concern took over the New England territory on that program. Mr. Abrams has been a director of Paramount from the beginning. The new president of Paramount will make his home in New York.

Immediately after his election Mr. Abrams notified Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Company; Jesse L. Lasky and Samuel Goldfish, president and treasurer respectively of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and the heads of the Pallas and Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company of the change of administration. The executives of these companies, which release their productions through Paramount, promised their co-operation in making the new administration attractive to the exhibitors and the photoplay public.

Asked for a statement Mr. Abrams said:

"The constantly growing interest in the motion picture throughout the country permits us to anticipate a most active era for the Paramount Pictures Corporation in the future. The heads of the various producing companies releasing through Paramount have assured me that they will make every effort to surpass their artistic standards. On the roster of these companies are the most noted stars of the stage and screen, including Mary Pickford, Geraldine Farrar, Marguerite Clark, Marie Doro, Pauline Frederick, Blanche Sweet and many others.

"I was very gratified to receive these offers of continued co-operation from the producers. It is obvious their united support is essential to Paramount's success. Their statements to me today set at rest all rumors of the possibilities of their affiliation with any other film interests."

When Mr. Zukor was asked if he had anything to say in regard to the new administration in Paramount, he replied that Mr. Abrams was right when he said the producers would give every support to the newly elected officers.

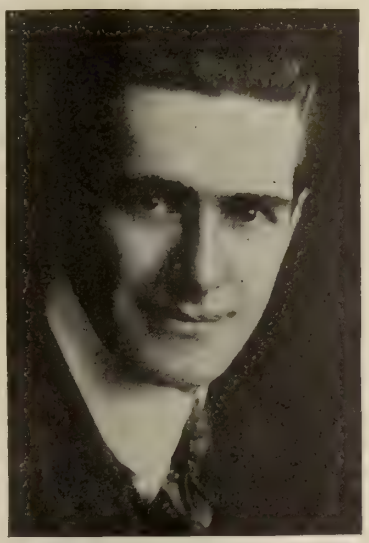
Mr. Hodkinson, when a World reporter called at his office, sent out word that there was nothing especial to say, that the action indicated no change in ownership or policy so far as he knew. He declared there had been no disagreements and that everything had been harmonious. He would retain his interests in his western exchanges, he said, which distribute the Paramount program.

Mason Opens New York Office

Australasian Specialist Has Completed Picture of New York Which He Will Exploit.

C. POST MASON, known throughout England and Australasia as a manager of international tours, being formerly associated with Hugh D. McIntosh, Australasian Films, and the Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Company, has opened a New York office in the Candler Building, New York City, from which he will operate his Australasian tours.

Mr. Mason has just completed a three-reel feature, the American rights of which will be sold on the state right basis, entitled "The Wonder City of the World — Greater New York—By Day and By Night," which shows places of interest, including over a billion dollars' worth of world-famed buildings, theaters, bridges, hotels, etc.; depicting in reality slum and tenement life; Chinatown, Little Italy, the Bowery, Coney Island, the Great White Way by day and by night; marvellous night scenes of the Woolworth and Singer buildings illuminated.



C. Post Mason.

The Australasian rights are not for sale, being retained by Mr. Mason for the Post Mason Travelogues, with which he starts on a world's tour in the near future. The production has been arranged to be presented in its entirety or as a series. Mr. Mason is open to arrange and finance Australasian tours for big features or to buy the Australasian rights of them.

Two features which Mr. Mason brought from Australia, "The Martyrdom of Edith Cavell" and the Official Australian Navy pictures, showing the sinking of the Emden at Cocas Island, will also be released shortly on the state right basis. The Canadian and English rights of these two productions have been secured by the Famous Players Film Service, Toronto, Canada.

Berst Distributes Bonuses

Seventy-two Employes Receive Checks from Pathe Executive Awarded Under Profit-Sharing Plan.

PLAYING Santa Claus in June is the unusual role which has fallen to J. A. Berst, vice president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc. Mr. Berst celebrated the first day of the month of roses by signing seventy-two bonus checks drawn to the order of seventy-two hustlers in the Pathe branch offices who earned this money over and above their salaries. These checks are the first to be sent out under Mr. Berst's new profit-sharing plan which has been responsible not only for greatly increased business for Pathe but also greatly increased earnings for many of the sales force. Members of the staffs of thirty offices will receive these checks which range from amounts representing "vacation money" to large sums.

C. R. Seelye, the Pathe business manager, who is now making an inspection tour among the various Pathe offices, reports that Mr. Berst's bonus system has everyone digging.

ACTON DAVIES DIES.

Acton Davies, for many years dramatic critic of the Evening Sun, and associated with the Edison Company during the years 1914-15, died in the Lakeview Hospital, Chicago, on June 12. He had been stricken about a week previously with rheumatism of the heart. Soon after resigning his place on the Sun, Mr. Davies became actively interested in scenario writing, his first important work being a series of newspaper stories produced by the Edison Company with Mary Fuller as the star. Later Mr. Davies was engaged by Edison to act in an advisory capacity in the selection of scenarios.

Owen Moore With Famous Players

Well-Known Player Is Re-engaged as Co-star with Hazel Dawn in Adaptation of Big Stage Success.

OWEN MOORE, one of the best known players on the screen, has been re-engaged by the Famous Players Film Company, under a long term contract, and will shortly be co-starred with Hazel Dawn in an adaptation of a great stage success on the Paramount Program, the title of which, when announced, will undoubtedly create great interest among the trade and public. Mr. Moore has been a popular figure on the screen ever since the pioneer days of the motion picture and has been identified with several notable productions. He has just completed a most successful engagement with the Triangle Film Corporation.

Owen Moore.

In his previous connection with the Famous Players Mr. Moore appeared in support of Mary Pickford, and played opposite her in the first photoplay in which she was starred by that company, "Caprice," as well as in several subsequent successful pictures. Their joint appearance under the Famous Players' banner marked the reunion of Miss Pickford and Mr. Moore since the old Imp and Biograph days, when they first appeared together.

Mr. Moore has won his spurs chiefly by his delightful impersonation of whimsical, romantic young lovers, but in his forthcoming appearance with Miss Dawn he will play one of the most forceful characters which has been seen on the New York stage within the last few years. It is the first time Miss Dawn and Mr. Moore have been associated on the screen.

Miss McCoy to do Three-Reelers

Important Announcement That Already Four Manuscripts Have Been Accepted as Starring Vehicles for Her—First Release in July.

THE pronounced success scored by Gertrude McCoy in the Gaumont feature, "The Isle of Love," has influenced General Manager F. G. Bradford to give exhibitors of shorter photoplays an opportunity to feature Miss McCoy in their houses. Hence Miss McCoy will be seen in a number of three-reel Mutual pictures. Four manuscripts have already been prepared for her. The first picture will be Robert Burns' story of New York life, "Gates of Divorce." It will be released July 20.

No expense is being spared in giving Miss McCoy stories which have been fitted to her talent. Robert Burns has gone over his story, "Gates of Divorce," to fit it to her personality. John B. Clymer will provide the following photoplay, "The Wonderful Desire," to be released August 3. Rennold Wolf is the author of the picture starring Miss McCoy August 17. A strong company has been assembled from the Gaumont players to support her in these photoplays.

"THE JOCKEY OF DEATH" READY.

"The Jockey of Death," big "thriller," with its action and atmosphere smacking of the circus, is about ready for the market after a number of weeks of careful editing intended to make it a sure-fire success for state rights buyers throughout the country who are looking for exciting screen stories to attract and keep the interest of their summer audiences.

The picture is being handled by Signet Films, a company recently organized by J. L. Kempner and having offices in the Candler Building, New York City. Mr. Kempner and his associates express the opinion that they have "something different" in the picture line and expect "The Jockey" to achieve great popularity.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

CHICAGO CONVENTION AND EXPOSITION.

Wide Interest Is Shown Throughout the Country in the Big Event—Various Committees Are Working Earnestly in Preparation.

AT a meeting of the Convention and Exposition Committee of the Sixth Annual National Convention and Exposition, held in Room 1413, Masonic Temple, on Thursday, June 8, it was decided that the object of the Beauty Contest will be the selection of the best looking woman and man in action before the camera. The contest will be open to aspirants from all sections of the country, though the larger number naturally will be confined to Chicago. A committee of technical experts selected from men in the producing business will be the judges.

The selection of a hotel for convention purposes has not yet been decided, but the announcement will be made next week. It will be either the Hotel La Salle or the Hotel Sherman.

The contract for badges was awarded to Street & Wright of Chicago.

The contract for posters will be let on Friday, June 9.

The mail arriving at headquarters in the Masonic Temple is growing in bulk every day. The letters are from manufacturers and supply houses in all parts of the country, with inquiries concerning space, while a great many are from exhibitors throughout the country, asking for information regarding the amusements, entertainments, etc., that will be offered during convention week.

Following is a list of film manufacturers and machine manufacturers and supply houses, who have already contracted for space at the Coliseum:

General Film, Pathe Exchange, Inc., Universal, Mutual, Metro, World Film, International, Selig, Essanay, Vitagraph, Ivan, American Standard Motion Picture Corporation, Emerald Motion Picture Corporation, Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, Bluebird, Melies, Monarch Film Producing Company, Nicholas Power Company, Midwest Theater Supply Company, Chicago; J. P. Seeburg Piano Company, Chicago; Bartola Musical Instrument Company, Chicago; National Cash Register Company, Dayton; E. E. Fulton Company, Chicago; National Carbon Company, Cleveland; Mirror Screen Company, Shelbyville, Ind.; Exhibitors' Supply Company, Chicago; Sosman & Landis, Chicago; Bell & Howell, Chicago; American Seating Company, Chicago; American Photo-Player Company, Chicago; Amusement Supply Company, Chicago; Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, and Mills Novelty Company, Chicago.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE CONVENTION.

Big Preparations Under Way, and June 26, 27 and 28 Promise to Be Memorable in Film History of Keystone State.

THE State Convention of Pennsylvania Motion Picture Exhibitors will be held on June 26, 27 and 28 at the Moose Temple, 628-634 Pennsylvania avenue, Pittsburgh. Committees have been busy for the last month or two in preparing a first-class event. An invitation has gone out to every exhibitor in the Keystone State, and a very full attendance is looked for, as the responses from every section have been most gratifying. Not only Pennsylvania but West Virginia will be represented at the Pittsburgh convention. While the convention will, of course, be one of business mainly, the social features have by no means been neglected. The Trade Exposition, held in connection with the convention, promises to be an unqualified success.

Every exhibitor will receive a hearty welcome, and Pittsburgh will take care of him and his wife to his entire satisfaction. A special Ladies' Committee will help the wives of the exhibitors see and enjoy Pittsburgh on its social and entertaining side.

At this writing, A. J. Barthell, president of the Pittsburgh local, and James Delves, state secretary of the Pennsylvania league, are in this city making final arrangements, being a special committee appointed for that purpose. Mr. Barthell and Mr. Delves have been hard at work securing the presence of distinguished film stars of both sexes for the state convention and have met with a good measure of success after much hard work.

Matters of supreme importance will come up for discussion during the business sessions of the convention. The question of censorship will not be the least important. Ways and means will be considered to secure a repeal of the obnoxious Breitinger law. The convention will invite the producers to co-operate in the campaign against censorship. For this reason alone there ought to be an impressive attendance at the convention. Another topic to be discussed will be the question of exhibitors' grievances. Mr. Delves points to the success of the convention at Albany and says that Pennsylvania ought not to lag behind New York in this respect. There will be the fullest and freest discussion, a fact which will be readily believed, for Pennsylvania has stood for free discussion at every state and national convention. The all-important question of projection will likewise be one of the big topics of the convention, and on June 28 Frank H. Richardson, the projection expert of the Moving Picture World, will deliver a lecture on this subject.

The convention promises to eclipse the historic gathering at Harrisburg. Delegations of big size are expected from eastern Pennsylvania. Western Pennsylvania will be represented at the convention as never before. The watchwords will be "Harmony and Co-operation" and "All for One and One for All."

President Ben H. Zerr of Reading is particularly anxious to have a creditable showing of eastern exhibitors at the convention. Realizing the many live-wires in the western part of the state Mr. Zerr is endeavoring to have the eastern part show up equally as well.

Among the locals to be represented at the convention will include Philadelphia, Reading, Wilkes-Barre, York, Harrisburg and the new local in the coal regions. President Zerr urges every exhibitor in the state, whether a member of the league or not, to attend this convention.

INDIANAPOLIS HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING.

Ike Beitman Is the New President—Organization of Screen Club Under Discussion.

THE Indianapolis Motion Picture Exhibitors' League held its annual meeting and elected its officers for the ensuing year. Ike Beitman, owner of the Savoy, Empress, Victoria and part owner of the Tacoma, was chosen president, succeeding Joseph Gavin. Roy Bair succeeds himself as vice president. Harry Cook, manager of a string of houses owned by Frank Rembusch, is the new treasurer, and A. C. Zaring, who long has been a leader in moving picture doings in Indianapolis, succeeds himself as treasurer. Mr. Zaring is the guiding hand in the office of the organization.

The Indianapolis league is one of the livest in the country, maintaining a fine suite of offices in a downtown building where the exhibitors may go and come as they please, talk over business affairs, and even enjoy themselves in a social way. The association was organized several years ago, when the motion picture field broadened out in Indianapolis, and it has proved a big help in the development of the business in the city. It has been one of the things which has contributed to the record Indianapolis holds—that of being the biggest motion picture theater city in the world when considered from the standpoint of population.

There was some talk at the last annual meeting of forming a screen club here, but no definite action was taken. There were some members of the league who favored the reorganization of the Exhibitors' League to make it into a screen club to which the managers and owners of film exchanges, their employes, film reporters and others would be eligible to membership. This plan did not meet with general approval, however. It was pointed out that the league was originally designed to become a help to exhibitors, and that under the present form of organization it had been successful in accomplishing that. It was feared by the opponents of the plan that the taking in of other branches of the film industry would tend to disrupt the organization perfected by the exhibitors, and this was a thing not desired.

It is possible, however, a screen club will be organized in Indianapolis. There is a need for some organization to bring the exhibitors and film exchange men into closer touch with each other and a screen club would fill the bill.

"I believe a screen club would be all right in Indianapolis if it was built around the social idea," said Mr. Beitman, the new president of the exhibitors' league. "I personally do not favor the other idea. While no definite action has been taken relative to forming a screen club it would not be surprising if meetings of the organization soon resulted in the forming of such a club."

BRONX EXHIBITORS MEET.

Lee A. Ochs Speaks on Proposed Standee Ordinance—Six New Members.

THE Cinema Exhibitors' Association of Bronx County held a well attended and highly enjoyable meeting at its headquarters, 1243 Southern Boulevard, on the night of Thursday, June 8. John Wittman was in the chair, while James J. Haggerty acted as secretary. The meeting was addressed by Senator J. J. Dunnigan and Alderman H. Robitzek. The subjects discussed were the standee law, the increased license fee (bill now before the Board of Aldermen) and the admission of minors. State President Ochs was present and spoke of the prospects of getting the Board of Aldermen to enact into an ordinance the principle of Judge Gaynor's standee rule. He reported progress and said that great efforts were now being made by the Manhattan organization to get such an ordinance through the Board of Aldermen. W. Stephen Bush of the Moving Picture World made a short address urging the exhibitors of Bronx County to continue their splendid efforts to advance the cause of organization and promising them the support of the Moving Picture World. The following new members were received into the organization: John Shelberg, Webster theater; Joseph Sobin, Billiken theater; John Mainaro, Tremont Casino; L. Ostend, Elkwood theater; J. Lowrie, Model theater; H. Rottenberg, Pequatorian theater, and Richard Brady, associate member. Recruiting has been uncommonly good, owing to the tireless efforts of Organizer Henry Cole.

At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served and heartily enjoyed by the big crowd of exhibitors.

MANHATTAN EXHIBITORS CHOOSE DELEGATES.

Name Men Who Will Represent Local at Chicago—Beefsteak Dinner for Lee A. Ochs.

AT a meeting held by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, Local No. 1, at their offices at 218 West 42nd street, on Monday evening, June 5, arrangements were made to send a big delegatioin to Chicago, and the following were elected as delegates:

Lee A. Ochs, Samuel H. Trigger, Louis F. Blumenthal, Benjamin Lyons, Max Oestreicher, I. N. Hartstall, William Hilkemeier, J. J. Wittman, Samuel Rothapfel, Morris Needle, Charles Steiner, Adolph Weiss, Charles Haring, Otto Lederer, Gus Koenigswald, Ed. Gorman, Samuel Rhonheimer, Henry Haring, Joseph Klein, Albert Harstn, Frank Peters, Max Tischer, William Bigall, A. B. Samuelson, Herman Mayer, Mr. Bock, Louis Rosenthal, Charles Fisher, David Picker, C. R. Martineau, Philip Menschel, Al Jutkowitz and Messrs. Glynn & Ward. Arrangements have been made to engage a special train on the New York Central.

The committee reported final arrangements regarding the beefsteak dinner to be given to Lee A. Ochs on June 28, at Reisenweber's, Brighton Beach, and judging from all appearances and the great demand for tickets the affair will be one grand success. For tickets, apply to I. N. Hartstall, 218 West 42nd street.

A Legislative Committee has been appointed to take up the matter of adverse legislation.

An elaborate luncheon was served and the meeting adjourned at 3.30 A. M.

H. C. MOONEY AMONG NATIONAL DELEGATES.

Through a regrettable error in the report of the recent meeting of Brooklyn exhibitors the name of H. Clark Mooney of the Triangle Theater of Brooklyn was omitted in the list of delegates to the National Convention. Mr. Mooney, who has always taken a most active interest in organization matters, was elected unanimously.

KANSAS CITY HAS A SCREEN CLUB.

Eighty Exhibitors and Exchange Men Organize New Film Men's Club on June 9.

ONE of the largest meetings the Kansas City moving picture men ever held took place at the Hotel Baltimore Friday, June 9. This meeting accomplished a preliminary organization of Kansas City's much-talked of Screen Club. The dinner was held at 10.30 that evening, and was attended by nearly a hundred. This included exchange men, exhibitors, supply house representatives and members of the press.

From the enthusiasm and spirit shown it looks as if the organization will be a great success. There has been much preliminary work on the proposed club and much credit is due to E. C. Mills, Joseph H. Gilday and E. R. Pearson for the progress made through the past month. These three men have sent out a number of letters and have done much personal work, with the result that they have the satisfaction of seeing an organization of the local industry formulated and on the road to success.

The officers elected are E. R. Pearson, temporary president; Charles W. Harden, secretary, and C. S. Edwards, treasurer. A committee was appointed on permanent organization and the club will meet again in two weeks.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of June 11 at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses.

Marguerite Clark at the Strand

Marguerite Clark was the screen star at the Strand theater for the week beginning June 11, in "Silks and Satins." The story is one peculiarly fitted to Miss Clark. There are two phases of the photoplay, one dealing with today and one of the long ago. Felicite, the little girl Miss Clark plays in the picture, is in some doubt as to the advisability of the marriage arranged for her by her parents. Finding an old diary of one of her feminine ancestors she lives through her trials and in this ancient person's history finds a lesson for her guidance. The photoplay was produced by the Famous Players Film Company.

On Monday the Strand offered Charlie Chaplin in his latest comedy release, "The Fireman." Other pictures on the program were the Strand Topical Review, an educational film, and a Mutt and Jeff cartoon comedy. A violin solo by Jan Rubini and numbers by Emma Ecker and Bruce Weyman were features of the musical program.

"The Making of Maddalena" at the Broadway.

Edna Goodrich in the Morosco-Paramount feature, "The Making of Maddalena," was the star attraction at the Broadway theater. Most of the scenes are laid in Rome, the picturesque atmosphere of student life surrounding the story of a beautiful Italian model, played by Miss Goodrich. Charlie Chaplin in his latest Mutual-Chaplin two-part comedy, the Broadway Weekly, scenic studies and cartoons completed the bill.

"The Apostle of Vengeance" at the Rialto.

William S. Hart in the role of a clergyman was the star of "The Apostle of Vengeance," a photoplay with scenes laid in the back woods of Kentucky and moonshining and a family feud figuring in the plot. In spite of his ministerial role, Hart becomes thoroughly "riled" as the story unfolds and starts out on the warpath until the still, small voice of conscience brings him back to the fold. The Rialto also included on its program news events, travel and scientific pictures, comedy features and solos by Mme. Jeanne Maubourg, Mr. De Frere and Cristeta Goni.

Eighty-first Street Theater Program.

At the Eighty-first Street theater another series of Triangle Films were shown. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Bessie Barriscale in "Sorrows of Love," and Fay Tincher, in "The Two O'Clock Train," were featured. On Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday Douglas Fairbanks in "Reggie Mixes In," and Harry McCoy and Peggy Pearce in "Bubbles of Trouble" were the picture numbers of the program.

D'ANNUNZIO SIGNS WITH AMBROSIO.

The Authors Film Company, Inc., American representatives of Ambrosio, announces that Gabriel D'Annunzio, Italy's greatest poet, has signed a long-term contract with Ambrosio for the filming of all his works, past and to come.

Chicago News Letter

Louis J. Selznick and Aaron A. Jones Close Big Deal.

A BIG deal between the firm of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, of this city, and Louis J. Selznick, president of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, was closed in Chicago on Friday, June 9. Contracts were signed giving to the firm mentioned a five-year franchise for all the Clara Kimball Young productions in the territory embracing Illinois, Indiana, southern Wisconsin and western Kentucky. This means that Jones, Linick & Schaefer will have exclusive control of all the Clara Kimball Young features in this territory. This is considered one of the most important film deals, from a money standpoint, yet transacted in Chicago. While the money consideration has not been named, it is rumored that it goes well up into the six figures.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer, with the Ascher Brothers and Alfred Hamburger, control the largest circuits of theaters in this city, and they are not only owners of the houses, but they operate them as well. It is expected that the first release of the Young Company will be made some time in October. This will be "The Common Law," in six reels. It is understood that the following subjects will be of the same length, and that the releases will be made at intervals of about thirty days. The name of the firm through which the Clara Kimball Young productions will be released has not yet been named, but it is understood that the Central Film Company of this city will do the booking.

"I am extremely pleased with this deal and with everyone concerned in it," said Mr. Selznick after the contract was signed. "The Clara Kimball Young pictures will strike a new gait which will be difficult for others to follow." Mr. Selznick promised that Miss Young, his star and the part owner of his business, will be present at the Sixth National Exposition and Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, held in Chicago from July 10 to 18

An Appreciation That Is Just as Warmly Appreciated.

The following letter, bearing the date of June 2, from William Koenig, secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of the Northwest, was recently received at this office:

Dear Sir.—As secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of the Northwest, I desire to express to you the sincere thanks of the members of our organization for the assistance you rendered in making our exposition a success. We particularly desire to express our appreciation of the kindly attitude you assumed toward our exposition and toward the motion picture exhibitors.

Trusting that at some future time we may be able to reciprocate, we are, etc.

It is very gratifying to receive such a communication, but the policy followed is one that has been made possible only by the earnest desire of the Moving Picture World to serve moving picture exhibitors and the moving picture industry in all its branches in any and every way that will contribute to the best interests of all concerned. That has been the policy of the Moving Picture World since its first issue in 1907.

Miss Bessie Eyton Inspires Devotion During Vicksburg Visit.

Charming Bessie Eyton, in the role of Virginia Colfax, the beautiful southern belle in "The Crisis," won the hearts of a host of admirers down in Vicksburg, Miss., who witnessed the filming of the big spectacular war scenes by the Selig Company that were taken on the original spots in that city where the events took place during the Civil War.

The Vicksburg press devoted many columns to the visitors, and one newspaper man, more intrepid than his fellows, contributed the following stanzas to the Vicksburg Herald, in singing Miss Eyton's praises:

Perhaps you do not realize
Just in a day or two,
You have really captured Vicksburg,
We are all in love with you.

Your gentle girlish modesty
Your smile—and oh, such eyes!
Your acting of "The Southern Girl"
Are things that hypnotize.

"There's dear Miss Bessie Eyton!"
One can hear the ladies say;
While they gaze in admiration
At your poses in the play.

Do linger here for just as long
As you can make your stay;
For there will be some aching hearts
When you have gone away!

Chicago Film Brevities.

E. S. Bowman, traveling representative of the Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company, recently opened a Chicago office for that concern in the Steger Building. During a conversation with a Chicago representative of the Moving Picture World Mr. Bowman remarked that in all his travels throughout the United States in the interests of his company he could not recollect having met an exhibitor who did not read the World. Mr. Bowman states that in many instances he found exhibitors who had a complete file of the publication from the first issue, in 1907. Mr. Bowman reports fine business for his company in this territory.

I am glad to report the triumphant re-election of Superior Court Judge William Fenimore Cooper. The judge led all the other candidates in the first, ninth, eighteenth, twentieth and thirty-third wards. He received a total vote of 89,277, and stood fourth on the list, the first candidate receiving 95,673, and the sixth, 82,912.

F. H. Clifford, operator at the Beach theater, Harper avenue and Fifty-first street, this city, renewed his subscription for the World last week. "The Ne'er Do Well" was presented at the Beach on May 25 and 26, at 25 cents admission, and showed to capacity houses. H. W. Sams is house manager of the Beach, while Max Schwartz takes care of the bookings. Manager Sams and the cashier are also subscribers and readers of the World. The cashier reads it, he says, in order to be able to answer intelligently the questions asked by patrons concerning the features run at the theater. The Billie Burke moving picture novel is also having a heavy run at this theater.

Douglas Fairbanks, of Triangle-Fine Arts, stopped over in Chicago between trains on his way from Los Angeles to New York City. Miss Pauline Bush was another stop-over visitor, also proceeding from California to the metropolis. Another short-time visitor was Miss Valentine Grant, of the Famous Players forces, who was on her way to her home in Seattle, where she will spend a vacation with her family. In about a month she will return to New York to engage in another picture by the Famous Players.

J. K. Moore and C. B. Ryson, officers of the Vitascope Film Corporation, with quarters in the Marquette Building, this city, were held to the grand jury on Monday, June 5, under $1,500 bonds, by Judge Caverly, in the South Clark Street Court, on charges of operating a confidence game. The complainant was Bruno Jasinski, of this city, who testified that he answered an advertisement of the company, in which they agreed to make a moving picture actor of him. Their terms required him to pay $100 for stock, in addition to $50 for a course of instruction. Jasinski testified that after he had paid his money, Moore and Ryson failed to give him the course of lessons, and kept changing their offices from place to place so that he was unable to get back the money he had paid for shares of stock.

Director Marshal Neilan began work in New York City on "The Prince Chap" on Thursday, June 8. Miss Bessie Eyton, Cecil Holland, Leo Pierson and other Selig players are under Mr. Neilan's direction. Special scenes will be filmed in Gotham, after which the company will return to Chicago, where work on the photoplay will be continued. Mr. Neilan will not only direct "The Prince Chap," but will play the leading role.

James L. McGee, general manager of the Selig Pacific Coast studios, spent several days in the city last week on his return from Vicksburg, Miss., where big scenes of "The Crisis" were completed. He will return to Los Angeles in a few days. Mr. McGee was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Selig at their home on Lakeview avenue on Wednesday evening, June 7, when his birthday anniversary was celebrated. His brother from Milwaukee was also a guest on the occasion.

Director Colin Campbell, who has also returned from Vicksburg, will remain in Chicago for some time superintending the cutting and trimming of the big "Crisis" film, which will be in about twelve reels when completed.

Jack Wheeler, editor in chief of The Selig-Tribune, did some very enterprising work in filming the Preparedness parade in Chicago, Saturday, June 3. A special Selig Preparedness film was all ready for exhibition in numerous Chicago theaters Saturday evening, while the parade was still in progress. The Republican Convention at the Coliseum, which occupied the week beginning June 5, has also been filmed under Mr. Wheeler's direction. Among the special cameramen assigned to convention work were L. J. Simons, of Washington, D. C., Fred M. Delaven and John J. Pasztor.

Chicago Branch Manager Holah, of Pathe Exchange, Inc., also deserves credit for his enterprise in getting moving pictures of the great demonstration and finishing them in time to be shown in several Chicago theaters while the parade was still going on. Orchestra Hall and the Pastime theater in the "Loop" district showed the pictures to crowded houses, and other theaters in outlying districts also showed the pictures before the marchers disbanded. The Pathe News cameramen were Joseph Rucker and K. W. Fasold. The technical work on the Pathe News pictures was done at the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company's plant.

The following programs have been announced at the prominent downtown theaters in Chicago for the week beginning Sunday or Monday, June 11 and 12.

Studebaker—"Gloria's Romance"—sixth chapter, "Hidden Fire" (George Kleine); Edna Wallace Harper and Frank Sheridan in "Perils of Divorce" (World), and the Pathe Weekly.

Fine Arts—"The Whirl of Life" (Cort Film Corporation), with Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, has proved so popular that it will be continued for another week.

Ziegfeld—"The Bondman" (Fox) has been retained for another week by Mr. Hamburger. This film has proved a big attraction and business getter.

Strand—Second week of the Casino Club players in the society film "Cousin Jim" (Van Dee Producing Co.) Mutt and Jeff cartoons, and other pictures.

Orchestra Hall—Marguerite Clark in "Silks and Satins" (Famous Players), Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoons, "Fountains and Palaces of Rome" and "Scenes Religious," travelogues (Swasticka). Nellie and Sara Kouns will be the soloists.

La Salle—Sixth week of "The Little Girl Next Door" (Illinois vice film).

Interested and Friendly Audience Gets Many Laughs from "The Fall of a Nation"—Praise for Herbert's Music.

ALTHOUGH critics differ widely as to the dramatic and technical merits of Thomas Dixon's propaganda motion picture production, "The Fall of a Nation," the large and friendly gathering which crowded the Liberty theater, New York, on the evening of Tuesday, June 6, to witness the first public presentation of that remarkable subject found lots to interest and amuse as the story was unfolded on the screen.

As first shown the picture was excessively long and it was nearly midnight before the finale appeared, but length did not seem to tire, for there was plenty of enthusiasm left at the finish to demand the appearance of the author and producer, together with the writer of the music, which contributed so largely to the success of the entertainment.

A noteworthy feature and one which aroused the curiosity of the audience at the start were the uniforms of the young women ushers—beautiful white costumes of military cut, including trousers and puttees, and altogether becoming. The significance was revealed later when it was shown in the picture that such was the uniform of the "Loyal Legion," an organization of patriotic women which was mainly responsible for turning defeat into victory according to the author's scheme of things.

Mr. Dixon's characterization of several men of affairs in the United States drew laughs and hisses from the audience, and some of his title and "cut-ins" were the cause of merriment. Throughout the more serious passages tense interest marked the attitude of all present and the beauty of some of the scenes elicited hearty applause.

As the light faded out on the last scene insistent calls for the author brought Mr. Dixon in front of the curtain. He briefly thanked the audience for their kind reception of his work and then gave way to Victor Herbert, the composer of the accompanying music. Mr. Herbert assured the audience that his part in the entertainment had been most delightful to him, as he was personally heart and soul for preparedness.

The audience was one of considerable distinction. His honor Mayor Mitchel and party were conspicuous, together with many other distinguished men and women in private life. The trade was well represented. J. Stuart Blackton, Jesse L. Lasky, H. E. Aitken and others equally prominent were there. During the first intermission "Long Tom" Dixon and "Short Tom" Ince met and exchanged congratulations. Altogether it was an auspicious opening for a most interesting picture.

Milwaukee Exhibitors Entertained

Chicago V-L-S-E Force Holds for Them Three-Day Reception.

MILWAUKEE exhibitors are still talking of the three-day reception held by the sales forces of the Chicago office of the V-L-S-E on June 1, 2 and 3, in that city, and of the novel and efficient manner in which the service of that distributing organization was brought to their attention. Gordon Laurence, publicity manager of the Chicago office, and Frank Redfield, assistant manager, who as salesmen had been in close touch with the Milwaukee exhibitors for years, engineered the conclave. Several days in advance of the actual invasion by the Big Four forces of the Milwaukee territory, Mr. Laurence sent to each exhibitor in that territory a letter announcing the purpose of the reception, primarily one of better acquaintanceship.

Mr. Laurence then went to Milwaukee and engaged a large suite of rooms and the parlor floor of the Wisconsin Hotel. The day before the arrival of the salesmen, he telephoned each exhibitor in the territory, urging him to be the guest of the V-L-S-E during the reception. As the result, on the opening day and every day thereafter of the reception, the large suite of rooms was thronged from morning until night with interested exhibitors who had been impressed with a desire upon the part of the Big Four to cooperate with them to an even greater degree and to learn more intimately their problems and their needs.

Each morning those exhibitors who called at the V-L-S-E headquarters were taken to the Strand theater, where Big Four features were shown for their benefit. A five-piece orchestra was engaged so that the features would be reviewed to their best advantage.

A Dutch lunch for exhibitors was the feature of the second day's program, and on the night of the third day a supper was given.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

REAL REEL ROMANCE.

Kathlyn Williams, Selig Star, Weds Charles F. Eyton, Manager Morosco Studio.

STAGE lovers, film fans, and friends of Kathlyn Williams, Selig featured star, will be agreeably surprised to learn of her marriage, which took place in Riverside, near here, on Friday, June 2. Charles F. Eyton, a well-known picture manager, is the bridegroom. Mr. Eyton and Miss Williams, accompanied by relatives and close friends, departed for Riverside at noon and were married at 5:30. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. I. D. Van Arnan in the rectory of the First Methodist Episcopal Church. The bridal party comprised Juan De La Cruz, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Von Saxman, Mr. and Mrs. Al Filson and Mr. and Mrs. Ed. J. LeSaint.

Miss Williams is one of the bright stars of filmland, beloved from the Atlantic to the Pacific by that great army of Americans who march daily upon the moving picture theaters of the country. Mr. Eyton is one of the owners of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, and has been connected with the local show world for the past sixteen years.

The marriage was the culmination of a romance that had its inception in Salt Lake City some ten years ago. At that time Miss Williams was a member of the Willard Mack Stock Company, which was playing in the Utah city. Fate sent Mr. Eyton there to overlook a new play, in which Mr. Morosco was interested. He met Miss Williams and was greatly attracted by her ability and beauty. Shortly afterward they became engaged and the wedding day was set, when the inevitable "lovers' quarrel" occurred and they drifted along different paths, only to meet again in this city about a year ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Eyton left for an extended trip through the Eastern States. Upon their return they will be at home to their legion of friends at their home, 858 Bryan street.

FILM FOLKS FROLIC.

Americans at Santa Barbara Have Lots of Fun Between Scenes—Thirteen Owls Club Entertains.

The Thirteen Owls Club was responsible last Saturday evening for one of the most enjoyable parties ever given in local filmdom. One hundred and fifty couples, members of the "Flying A" companies and their friends, assembled at Unity Hall, to be part of a hard times function, which members of the Owls had cleverly planned.

Nothing could possibly have been more appealing than the Owls themselves, as ragged country children. The following members fully maintained their reputation for cleverness in carrying out the general impoverished effect: Misses Carol Halloway, Peggy Perkins, Genie Forde, Nell Franzen, Vivian Rich, Opal Eason, Audrey Munson, Jude Martin, Teddy Eason, Marty Martin, Sally Newsum and Jodie Frame.

The "Flying A" quartet, Walter Beale, Jack Sarrell, Oscar Gerard and Bowman Johnston gave several musical numbers. Early in the evening and prior to the dance the Cliff Dwellers had a Dutch lunch in the western town at the end of State street. The Cliff Dwellers compose the technical department under Mr. Langley. but there were many guests, the party numbering sixty.

EXHIBITOR QUINN A LIVE ONE.

To Show "Preparedness" or "Battle Cry of Peace" During Preparedness Parade Week in Los Angeles.

Los Angeles has one live wire picture showman and he is J. A. Quinn, ex-manager of Quinn's Garrick, and until recently manager of Quinn's Superba.

In commenting on the ability of Quinn as an exhibitor, who is always springing some new and exciting pleasures for his host of patrons, the Times says:

"Coincident with the announcement that the big preparedness parade is to be held on June 14, comes the interesting news that the full week commencing Monday, June 12, is to be celebrated as Preparedness Week at Quinn's Empress theater. J. A. Quinn has again showed his enterprise as a film impresario by securing exclusively for those seven days the gigantic Vitagraph production, 'Preparedness,' or 'The Battle Cry of Peace.' In order to interest the youth in serving the flag, special matinees are to be held for school children, while military organizations of Southern California are writing Mr. Quinn for special nights at which they can attend in a body."

Mr. Quinn is building a formidable looking fort on the front of the theater building. Here will be stationed patrols, wireless station, aeroplane landing and many other things to attract attention.

ANOTHER BIG PRODUCING FIRM.

"The Spirit of '76" Is to Be Made by the Continental Producing Company.

Another film company has been started in Los Angeles. The ideas and prospects of the firm, as outlined by the president, Robert Goldstein, well-known coast costumer, are broad. It is the intention of this company to produce a new motion picture production in twelve reels, the title of which is to be "The Spirit of '76," to reproduce the American Revolution, including the picturization of the causes which led up to it—the production to be perfect as to historical accuracy and detail, with an entirely original and sensational story closely interwoven.

Robert Goldstein, president of the Goldstein Theatrical Costuming Company of Los Angeles and San Francisco, is one of the stockholders in the Epoch Producing Company, which produced and own "The Clansman"; the Wark Producing Company, which is now making D. W. Griffith's largest production, "The Mother and the Law," and is otherwise associated with D. W. Griffith in a business way. Mr. Goldstein is also connected in a practical, artistic and business way with most of the large film producing companies in Southern California. George L. Hutchin, secretary and manager, is president of the Festivals Association of the Pacific Coast; was manager of the Portland Rose Festival, and later was engaged to plan, design and build the great pageants, spectacles and parades for the Exposition at San Francisco. He is also a writer and dramatist, having had theatrical experience.

The director of this production will be George Siegman, whose position as director in D. W. Griffith's companies, together with his experience in Mutual subjects, fits him for the position. In the "Clansman," Mr. Siegman played the part of Silas Lynch, one of the most important in the production. He has sixteen years of independent directing and acting to his credit.

Santa Barbara Welcomes Miss Minter.

Led by the Mayor and various of his official family, Santa Barbara, Cal., residents gave a rousing reception to little Mary Miles Minter, the American-Mutual child star, on her recent arrival at the southern Californian city to begin work on her first Mutual feature release.

Long before the arrival of the train at the station numerous of the city's stanch residents were on hand. Accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, Miss Minter appeared on the rear platform, and after a brief address of welcome delivered by the Mayor she was escorted through the crowd and rushed to the American-Mutual studios, where the celebration continued.

As a token of comradeship members of the American-Mutual playing forces insisted that Miss Minter be delegated to open the new concrete dressing quarters at the plant. In the parade from the depot to the studio exactly 162 autos took part.

"Civilization" Car Wins the Ascot Races.

As stated briefly in these columns last week, Arthur Hansen, of the Ince forces, won the ten-mile event at the Ascot races for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America. Hansen, piloting a big Mercer flying the colors of "Civilization," made a spectacular race which earned him the Barney Oldfield trophy and the film championship of America. He negotiated the ten-mile distance in ten minutes and six seconds, defeating Ashton Dearholt, of the American Company, in a car entered by William Russell, and Wallace Beery, of the Universal, in another.

The race was a sensational climax to a sensational program. Leading almost from the start, Hansen maintained a consistent pace and never once was in danger of being passed, though there were some exciting brushes. A thrill was furnished in the sixth lap when Beery's car threw a rear tire and threatened to turn turtle. The driver handled the wheel with skill, however, and piloted the machine to safety.

Admiral Winslow Visits U City.

Admiral Cameron Winslow, commander of the Pacific fleet of the United States Navy, accompanied by a number of his officers, visited Universal City on Wednesday last week.

The Admiral was invited to take part as an "extra man" and agreed to become a spectator in a stock exchange scene.

Other distinguished visitors to Universal City during the week were Madame Marie Rappold, the famous grand opera singer, and Dr. Alfred Hertz, the well-known musical director.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

We made a trip to the beach this week and found that the Balboa has added Fred Huntly to its staff of directors. Prior to his present connection, Huntly put on photoplays for some of the leading producers. Another newcomer here is Edward Jobson, the erstwhile endman of minstrel fame. He's one of those big, fat, happy men whose very presence is cheerful.

Picture girls of Hollywood studios are going in for athletics and have formed a club to benefit of all actresses. As a result a conference was held with the young women, Mrs. C. H. Richmond and Miss Julia Tolman Lee representing the Young Women's Christian Association, and Mrs. H. T. Wright the women's clubs. The plan adopted was received with great enthusiasm. Lule Warrington talked on "The Value of Drama Study" and Miss Ella Stevens, physical director of the Y. W. C. A., conducted class work in gymnastic exercises and esthetic dancing. This week Allison Gow talked on "The Life of Ibsen," and Miss Stevens followed with the physical work. The Hollywood public library is being used as a meeting place at present, but it is quite possible that larger quarters will have to be provided.

Ever popular Ruth Roland and Roland Bottomley of the Balboa studio won a silver loving cup this week for being the best one-steppers in a free-for-all dancing contest. Several hundred couples entered and it was a nip and tuck affair. In the finale, the winners were pitted against Charles Murray, the Keystone comedian, and his wife.

Geraldine Farrar, the Lasky star, and her husband, Lou Tellegen, have arrived in Los Angeles to begin their annual summer engagement at the Lasky studios in Hollywood. It is expected Miss Farrar will do two pictures this summer. It has not yet been decided whether her husband will appear with her or in productions of his own. The Lasky company has secured the residence and grounds at the corner of Sunset Boulevard and Western avenue for the diva's home.

It is rumored in Los Angeles that fifty of the photoplayers are to organize a club with a star as its president. A number of picture athletes are going to pull off a little handball tilt for the championship of film men of the Los Angeles Athletic Club. Harry Ham, comedy lead man, with Al Christie, a popular member of the L. A. A. C., will meet Douglas Grey, of the New York Motion Picture Company. Grey is the challenger. The man who wins must stand ready to defend the honors against any man of the profession. Grey has started earnest training and expects to win easily. He is an exceptionally good handball player. Ham is well known in filmdom and in club circles. He formerly was connected with the Universal, but at the present time is playing leads in Nestor films.

H. M. Bunce, who recently came to Monrovia from Salt Lake City, has been secured by the Monrovia Feature Film Company to handle all detail work of the publicity campaign that will soon be launched by that firm in connection with its production of big feature photoplays. Mr. Bunce is an experienced newspaper man, having a practical working knowledge of all departments of the work.

Beverly Griffith, who, with Gilbert Warrenton of Universal City, was sent to the Mexican border by General Manager H. O. Davis to cover the news in film for the Universal Animated Weekly, believes in preparedness. Recently he wired from El Paso to Mr. Davis for a supply of flares which furnish light at night for the taking of scenes. When the two returned this week to Universal City they projected a number of fine night scenes. Beverly Griffith came into the World office to pay his respects and incidentally relate a few of his most thrilling experiences. He said when they were not dodging bullets they were being entertained by very high and gentlemanly Mexican officials. But they got the pictures.

One afternoon this week when the Rolin Players were out on location doing some big outdoor scenes for "Julius Caesar," sneak thieves entered the studio from the rear and went through several of the dressing rooms until they were scared away by an artist who was painting scenes for Caesar's home. Bebe Daniels lost a purse, together with a fine yellow sport coat. Miss Margaret Joslin discovered a pair of her good shoes had been taken.

The Balboa's annual plunge party in the Long Beach natatorium developed a new contender for swimming honors in Henry King, the film star, being located just a few blocks from the Pacific Ocean, the workers at this studio have daily opportunities to perfect themselves in aquatics. Mr. King had no trouble in pulling away from the bunch, and now he is thinking about entering the Pacific Coast championship contest, to be held this summer. The purse, hung up by the Balboa studio, which King won, he promptly turned over to the Actors' Fund. The women's race was won by Mrs. W. A. S. Douglas, who had just a shade the better of Ruth Roland.

Kenneth McGaffey, director of Lasky publicity, advises us that Marie Doro, the brilliant Lasky star, celebrated a birthday anniversary recently. Quite a party had been arranged for her at her Hollywood home. Among the presents was a complete motion picture camera, presented her by Charlie Chaplin. No sooner was the gift received than an automobile was dispatched to the studio, and some lights hurried to the Dexter home and a scenario was written and photographed with the little camera. Later in the week the scenes were projected in the basement of the house and promise to be a great success. The cast was an all-star one, including Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, Elliott Dexter, Miss Doro and others.

From Honolulu comes word of the activities of Helen Holmes, J. P. McGowan and the Signal Film Company. A number of scenes were taken on board the steamer, and while they were in Honolulu and during a hard trip into the interior of the island. It is said some wonderful scenery will be shown to the public for the first time as the result of this expedition. The company is expected back at the Los Angeles studios some time this week.

To work in the films one had to belong to an association, said the proprietors of the "Movie" Employees' Association, 719 West Seventh street, to all who answered their advertisement for 200 men for moving pictures. Then they proceeded to charge 50 cents for initiation to the association and 25 cents for the first month's dues. So many persons were caught by the advertisement and paid their dues without result that H. A. Cable, deputy state labor commissioner, who later applied to the association, paid his money and became a member. Then he arrested the man in charge of the office, Merrill Stearn, who was arraigned in police court, and pleaded not guilty.

Stearn alleges the real head of the association is missing, in company with $400. Commissioner Cable says he has received more than 400 complaints and believes the number of victims will exceed 1,000.

DICK EDMONDSON CAPTURES BLUEBIRD.

Congenial "Dick" Edmondson's latest triumph is the acquisition of the Bluebird program for the United Kingdom. This brand is meeting with favor in the trade across the pond, and with his unexcelled generalship will shortly rank with the best in the field.

Edmondson, a pioneer in the film industry, began his career in California as exhibitor and manufacturer of pugilistic events. He returned to his native land with the Johnson-Jeffries contest pictures and has since successfully exploited American productions, among which were the productions of B. A. Rolfe Photoplays, Dyreda Art Films, Masterpiece Film Corporation, Salisbury's wild animal pictures, California, Life Photo, Balboa, Equitable, and Frohman Amusement Corporation.

His main European offices are located at 118 Shaftesbury avenue, London, W.

Bessie Eyton Visits New York

Selig Actress Gets First Glimpse of Metropolis With Marshall Neilan's Company Making "The Prince Chap."

DIRECTOR MARSHALL NEILAN brought his company to New York a few days ago to get some exteriors for Selig's "The Prince Chap," not to conduct a sightseeing tour, although it happens that three members of the party—Bessie Eyton, Leo Pierson and Cecil Holland—are visiting the metropolis for the first time. Between trips to Connecticut and hours spent on New York's waterfront, where some of the action of the story transpires, the visitors may find time to learn whether the much advertised Fifth Avenue shops and the lights of Broadway fulfill expectations. But first impressions were inconclusive, if not disappointing.

The company arrived in the rain and everything appeared rather dark and gloomy on the morning that Miss Eyton looked from a window of the Great Northern hotel and confessed a readiness to be convinced of the beauties of the city. Meanwhile it was easier to talk about what she had done and hoped to do in pictures.

Miss Eyton is a product of Southern California, and one of the few actresses who has never broken her allegiance to the company that gave her a first engagement. Five years ago she started with Selig as an extra and today she is a star under the same management with a number of big pictures to her credit and others in prospect. She regards her work in "The Crisis" as the best she has ever done, for the story and the character she portrays offered ample opportunity for the kind of acting she likes best.

In speaking of her start as an actress Miss Eyton said that among her friends in Los Angeles were players who insisted that her features were ideally suited to screen needs. Without any previous stage experience she applied at the Selig studio and was employed as an extra, partially because of her usefulness in doubling for actresses who could neither swim or ride horseback, two accomplishments in which she is proficient. Presently, with the coming of an opening in the stock company, Miss Eyton was given a permanent place and since then she has been continuously busy.

"If I have any regrets," she said, "it is that my directors seem to believe that I am best adapted to serious emotional roles, when, as a matter of fact, there is nothing I prefer to light comedy, and I know that some of the most pleasing performances I ever gave were of that character. Perhaps I will get more similar opportunities in the future and still farther in the future I want to have a trial on the speaking stage, for it appears to me that the chances for young women will be better than ever in a few years."

Miss Eyton is a typical Western girl, fresh, vital and devoted to outdoor sports. When the present production is completed she will not regret returning to Los Angeles and her bungalow.

EDISON MAKING LOCKE'S "WHERE LOVE IS."

Ann Murdock, the famous Frohman star, and Henry Stanford, an actor best known to the American public by his appearance in the role of Jerry with Laurette Taylor in "Peg o' My Heart" for one thousand performances, are engaged at the Edison studios in New York in the production of a five-reel feature picturization of "Where Love Is," an adaptation of William J. Locke's novel of that name. The cast engaged in making the picture is composed, for the greater part, of well-known stars, for among the members of the company that is playing in the support of Miss Murdock and Mr. Stanford are Leonie Flugrath, Mabel Trunnelle, Bigelow Cooper and other Edison players who have wide reputations. The first scene of the picture was filmed on June 5, and it is expected that fully two months will be required to complete the elaborate and carefully made production.

William J. Locke, the writer of "Where Love Is," is one of the best-known of present-day English novelists.

Clubwomen and the Motion Picture

Views of Eleven Leaders of the Recent Biennial Gathering in New York City.

By Betty Shannon.

THERE are eleven departments in the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the biennial session of which has just closed in New York City, all headed by women who are leaders and authorities in their fields. Each woman feels keenly that the motion picture is a tremendous factor in the life of today. Some are in favor of Federal censorship. Most of them are not. The interest of the child of the nation is close to the hearts of them all, and they are sincere in their beliefs. The eleven chairmen have consented to give statements of their personal opinions of motion pictures. These statements follow:

Helen Varick Boswell.

The saloonkeepers were the wealthiest people in our town until the motion picture theater with all of its popularity came along. Now they have hardly enough business to keep them going. That one reason alone would be enough to make me enthusiastic over them. They have given the poor, as well as the rich, a place to go to with their families. I feel also that it is better for people to read anything, so long as it is not vicious, than read nothing at all.

And so I feel that it is better for people to see motion pictures as they are today in the picture theaters, rather than see none at at all. They are not up to the standard of perfection which they are striving for and will reach in the next few years, but to millions of people whose lives have been empty before they came they give things of beauty, of educational and social value to think about. There is much more good in them than many reformers are apt to credit them with. MRS. F. S. WARDWELL, Stamford, Conn., Chairman Music Department.

I believe the motion picture art is so young that it only has to be given time to develop into the sort of a power we who are interested in the welfare of the young want it to. We women may help in molding that art; indeed, we are helping mold it by the public sentiment and the public taste we are helping create. I believe legal censorship, which may become a political power, is unfair and may become pernicious. The only right way to obtain pictures that we want is to make the women and the men in every locality all over the land and all over the world ask for those pictures.
HELEN VARICK BOSWELL, New York City,
Chairman of Educational Department.

When my children were growing up they were constantly passing through various stages in their moral development which caused me sleepless nights for two weeks or more, when I would suddenly awake and find them entirely vanished. I feel the same is true to a large extent with the motion picture. We are spending sleepless nights, some of us, trying to adjust what we consider a great problem. The past two years have shown every thinking person that the pictures are so constantly changing that we cannot lay our fingers on any supposed weakness, for the minute after we do the weakness will have vanished or changed to something else. The pictures will go on developing and improving in spite of or along with our worry. The best we can do is to encourage. They will come out all right when they have been given time.
MRS. THOMAS G. WINTER, Minneapolis, Minn.,
Chairman Literature and Library Extension Department.

I am frankly fond of the "movies." I go very often, and I always find something which is instructive and good in them. It is my belief that the motion picture producers are giving us, the public, just as good pictures as we are permitting them to. They are businessmen. They will give us better pictures when we make it worth their while. The gospel of "better health" can and is being disseminated by the motion pictures, just as by the press. Their power is only being hinted at. The motion picture will more and more become allied with the better and higher interests of humanity.
MRS. BLAIR, Albany, N. Y.,
Chairman of Public Health Department.

Censorship, legalized, of motion pictures is in opposition to the laws of democracy. I do not believe that legalized censorship, if it were not so, would cause the production of motion pictures which are of a kind which mothers who are particular want their children to see. The women of the country must find it their share in this great amusement force to help create a demand for better pictures. Every paying demand will find producers to fulfill the demand. The great future of the motion picture cannot be estimated.
MRS. GEORGE ZIMMERMAN, Fremont, Ohio.
Chairman Civics Department.

Mrs. George Zimmerman.

There is no doubt the motion picture is the greatest educational and amusement force in the world today. And there is no doubt all thinking people—whether the people who go to see pictures or the people who produce them—are struggling for a better class of production. There is no doubt there are many harmful pictures produced which can and must be remedied if the producers and consumers can come to an understanding.

To me, one helpful solution would seem to be in the appointment of a federal commission to investigate all sides of picture production and consumption and to meet and consult with the producers and the National Board of Review, already established. I am not at all certain that legal censorship would be advisable, although I am not convinced.
MRS. FRANKLIN P. IAMS, Pittsburgh, Pa.,
Chairman Legislation Committee.

The power for ill or good of books is well known. And because motion pictures are visualizations of ideas which books may only present in words they are all the greater in their power for ill or good. I do not think producers know or realize how much harm the pictures they make can do to children. The women who gathered at the biennial meeting of clubs do, because they represent the mothers and neighbors of children who are being helped or harmed by pictures. I feel something must be done to improve the general standard of pictures which children are seeing. Federal censorship or state censorship I do not believe necessary. It must be a national feeling.
MISS HELEN LOUISE JOHNSON.

I believe in "Do's," not "Don't's." The finer side of the motion pictures should be emphasized, not the less fortunate. People should be taught to ask for better pictures, not to stop to criticise the poor ones in existence. I do not feel the present-day standard of pictures is by any means the highest they will reach. It remains for the public to say what kind of pictures it will pay for. The constructive thing for a body of women from women's clubs to do is to aid in the speedy establishment of a greater market for high-class film literature.
MRS. FREDERICK H. COLE, Omaha, Neb.,
Chairman Civil Service Reform Department.

The motion pictures have done much to aid in the work of my department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs—the Conservation Department. They have spread knowledge of forest and bird conservation especially, and have been invaluable in their demonstrations in fire-fighting and other conservation methods. Their educational power may not be estimated. Because the motion pictures are of such value to conservation they are also of great amusement value. The producers do not realize as yet the possibilities they have, or they would not create the cheap and vulgar pictures which unfortunately are most often seen upon the screen. The picture entertainment must become more worth while, or they will lose out. I believe that they will become more worth while.

MRS. JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN, Chicago, Ill.,
Chairman Conservation Department.

I think motion pictures to be of great educational force, but not a great art force. I have never seen a picture which impressed me as being a work of art. They have been too cheap and shallow in their appeal to be considered as having any connection, I believe, with art. .My advice to producers would be to have a real, inspired artist, a great moralist and a wonderful technician, in their employ. Motion pictures can never be real art until real artists who know true art values have a hand in t heir creation. The tawdry and cheap must be done away with.

The greatest offense which the motion picture can make is in its offense against good taste. Poor taste is being forced upon children in the photoplay. They are growing up with ideas given them in the pictures. It is vital that good taste be displayed in the majority of pictures and that the youth of the land be protected against evidences of bad taste.

MRS. MELVILLE F. JOHNSTON, Richmond, Ind.,
Chairman Art Department.

I believe there should be a federal board of censorship, because I think motion picture censorship should be standardized. State censorship is not satisfactory for the nation. Neither is censorship which is not legal. The calibre of pictures must be raised to a higher standard, and I think it can only be done through federal censorship.

MRS. JAMES W. REMICK, Concord, N. H.,
Chairman of the Industrial and Social Conditions Department.

PHILIP O. MILLS OFF FOR THE FRONT.

The many friends in the moving picture industry made by Philip O. Mills during his association with the Picture Playhouse Film Company will be interested in knowing that Mr. Mills sailed from New York Sunday, June 4, for France to take a commission with the American contingent of "soldiers of fortune" who are serving with the Allies.

In conversation with his friends months ago Mr. Mills expressed his determination to be on the ground in Europe when the present unpleasantness is brought to its close. That there was sincerity in his determination is indicated by the action which he has just taken. His commission is with the French ambulance corps.

Mr. Mills has always been active in military affairs, his liking for army life probably resulting from the fact that his father, now deceased, was an officer in the United States regular army and for a long time traveled in Europe studying military conditions there.

RIALTO FILMS EFFECT PERMANENT ORGANIZATION.

Jesse J. Goldburg, the general manager of the Rialto Film Corporation, returned Monday morning, June 5, from a trip to Detroit, where a meeting of the Board of Directors of that company was held and the plans for future operations of the company were definitely determined upon. Officers of the company were elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, I. Goldberg; vice-president and general manager, Jesse J. Goldburg; secretary and treasurer, S. T. Goldberg. Messrs. I. & S. T. Goldberg are the financial backers of the Rialto Film Corporation and are also the owners of the Lilies Cigar Company of Detroit, Chicago, Tampa and Havana, Cuba.

MISS TALMADGE HONORED BY JERSEY CITY.

Norma Talmadge, the charming young Triangle film star, has been chosen as the Jersey City Maid for the "Made in Jersey City Week," which the Jersey town began to celebrate on Monday, June 5. Besides being guest of honor at a banquet of over 700 men Miss Talmadge's face will peek out at you every time one of the official badges for the week flashes into view, from the cover of the menu for the banquet, and finally Miss Talmadge herself will appear not only on the screen but at the conclusion of the banquet as the personification of the emblem chosen by the Chamber of Commerce under whose auspices the week's celebration is being held. Yes, Miss Talmadge was born in Jersey City.

Davis Returns to Universal City

Executive Head of Big Picture Plant Carries Back With Him Rights to Many Stories.

WITH his trunks packed full of scenarios, his grips crowded with scripts and plots bulging from his coat pockets, H. O. Davis, director-general of Universal City, has left New York for Los Angeles. Mr. Davis' stay in the East was prolonged from time to time, for the principal object of his trip was to purchase scenarios, moving picture rights to books, past, present and future fiction hits, and in fact everything which offered good possibilities for screen production. The moving of the eastern companies of the Universal to Universal City naturally increases the demand for scripts and Mr. Davis has spent considerable time reading manuscripts and visiting the various book publishers and magazine editors in his search for good material. During his stay in the East he read hundreds of scripts, and in the last four weeks of his visit he purchased over $20,000 worth of scenarios and negotiated for the moving picture rights for some of the best books and magazine stories on the market today.

It is the intention of Mr. Davis to produce photoplays that uplift, instruct and educate, as well as amuse, and he has been guided by these elements in his choosing of scripts. He is absolutely opposed to the morbid melodramas and plays without morals, for he believes the public do not want to see unpleasant things.

A careful study of some of his purchases is interesting. Mr. Davis has purchased the rights to "The Pearl of Orr's Island," by Harriet Beecher Stowe; "The Rose Garden Husband," by Margaret Widdemer; "Idle Wives," by James Oppenheim; "The Measure of a Man," by Norman Duncan; "The Place Beyond the Winds," by Harriet Comstock; "If Any Man Sin," by Cody; "The Spotter," by Canfield; "The Mainspring," by Charles McLean; "Little Eve," by Edgerton; "Walda," by Mary Kincaid; "The Edge of Hazard," by George Horton; "The Light on the Hill," by Martha Gielow; "The Message," by Louis Tracy; "The Promise," by James Hendryx; "The Last Lady of Mulberry," by Henry Wilton Thomas.

He also bought scripts and rights to plays from, among others, Fred Jackson, Captain Leslie Peacocke, H. O. Durant, John Russell, Robert Wells Ritchie, Suzanne Buck, Albert Payson Terhune, Lawrence McCloskey, Kate Jordan, Anna Wynne, Andrew Soutar, Mary Rider, Helen Bailly, the Rev. S. C. Spaulding, Thomas Smith, Edna Schley, Robert Davis, Clarissa Mackie, Willard Bradley and Robert Innis.

The scenario department will continue its headquarters at 1600 Broadway for several weeks, where Helen Starr and her big staff will be engaged in disposing of the enormous quantity of material now in hand.

OBJECT TO TREATMENT OF CHILDREN.

The Children's Society has secured a summons for the studio manager of a New York film company for allowing a young boy to take part in a screen drama, without having obtained a permit from the Mayor. The boy entered a restaurant near the studio, with paint on his face, and attracted the attention of some members of the society who were present. They followed the boy back to the studio, and upon finding out that he was working without a permit went to the Children's Court and obtained a summons for the studio manager; also one for the boy's mother.

The superintendent of the Children's Society stated that cases have been brought to his notice where young babies were subjected to fright and bodily discomfort in order that some thrilling scene could be filmed, the parents submitting without a murmur, so long as they received the amount of the child's hire. This condition, he claimed, and the reckless manner in which the lives and limbs of older children are risked in the making of moving pictures have aroused the society to the necessity of taking decided action in the matter.

SHIFT IN EXCHANGE MANAGERS.

F. B. Kramer has resigned from the management of the Mecca Exchange, the Forty-eighth street distributing office for the Universal, and has taken over the management of the Bluebird Exchange at 1600 Broadway. With him goes his brother, Earl Kramer, who will in his new position continue to be assistant manager.

Hi Gainsborg, who has been assistant manager of the Twenty-third street exchange of the Universal, has been transferred to the Mecca. Sam Zierler will be the manager of the Twenty-third street branch. The changes take effect on Monday, June 12.

AUSTRALIAN NOTES

MONDAY, the 1st of May, was the release date of two good Australian pictures, "In the Last Stride," and "The 'Joan of Arc' of Loos." Martyn Keith, a prominent Australian producer, directed the former and assisted in the direction of the other.

"In the Last Stride" is a picture which will have a wide appeal in this country. The story includes a boxing match, a football match, and a race meeting. Les O'Donnell and Dave Smith, both well known professional boxers, take an active part in the picture. Harold Horder, one of the most prominent Australian League footballers, appears in the football scenes. The leading role is taken by Alma Rock Phillips, who has appeared in several Australian productions to date. The story is good, though the action is slow at times.

"The 'Joan of Arc' of Loos" has been already mentioned in my previous letters. It is a four-part war drama, with the locale in France. The scenes and locations have been so carefully chosen that it is hard to believe they were taken in Sydney. Big things may be expected from the George Willoughby Photoplay Company in the near future. They have just finished their second production, a screen adaptation of "The Woman in the Case," with several of the cast of the "Joan of Arc" picture.

Owing to the expiration of the leases, Union Theaters, Ltd., have lost two of their Sydney theaters this week. The first to close was the Colonial, which has been run as a continuous show. It was one of the first to be built by the man who founded continuous picture theaters and who did so much for the film trade in Australia, J. D. Williams.

Hoyts Ltd., a Melbourne picture concern, has secured the building on a long lease, and will remodel and reopen it in a short time. Additional seating accommodation will be fitted, making a seating capacity of over 2,000 persons. It is understood that the new theater when opened will also run continuously, from 10.30 a. m. till 11 p. m.

The other theater is known as the Glacarium, and has been controlled by Wests Ltd. (a branch of Union Theaters, Ltd.). The Waddington Pictures, Ltd., have secured this house, and have opened it as a continuous show. Heretofore only nightly performances were given. The Glacarium has seating accommodation for 2,000, all on one floor.

The Sydney film market seems to be experiencing a glut in features just now. Nearly all the shows in the city and suburbs are screening two features (of four or five parts each) on the same program. The J. C. Williamson Co. were the first to start this system at their Theater Royal about two months ago, when two Fox features were the standard attraction. This was followed up by the Triangle program at the night sessions of the Triangle playhouse—two five-part features and a two-reel Keystone. Now it seems to have spread to almost every picture theater in and around Sydney.

The Triangle program presented this week is lauded by critics as being the best balanced program yet. Two Ince subjects, "The Iron Strain," and "The Corner" were the leading attractions in the dramatic section, while comedy element was supplied in the Keystone "Fatty and Mabel Adrift."

Of the two five-reelers the audience seemed to like "The Iron Strain" best. Dustin Farnum is known to picture-goers in this country, having been featured in a Lasky production some time ago.

"The Corner" features three stars totally unknown to Australian audiences, Willard Mack, George Fawcett and Clara Williams. The fine acting, however, made a deep impression on all present. This picture is a gripping drama, the kind most enjoyed by picture audiences in this part of the continent.

The attendance this week has been the largest yet, and probably this is due to the fact that the Keystone features Mabel Normand, who is extremely popular here.

"Fatty and Mabel Adrift" is easily the funniest Keystone screened in Sydney yet. The fine photography in the picture has been widely commented on.

A picture company is at present engaged in New Zealand filming a multiple reel production to be entitled "The Test," from a scenario by a prominent Australian writer.

Triangle Plays opened in Adelaide, S. A., two weeks ago at West's Picture Theater. The first subjects to be screened were "The Coward," and "Crooked to the End." The films have been very well received, and are attracting big crowds. The prices of admission charged range from 6d to 2/6 (10 cents to 60 cents).

The Melbourne season of these productions starts on Saturday, the 6th of this month.

The big twelve-part patriotic war topical "Britain Prepared," has just finished very successful screenings in Melbourne and Adelaide.

A concern, known as the Reliance Photoplay Reviews, has been formed in Sydney with the object of supplying exhibitors in the country districts of Australia with a review of all features released by the various exchanges. Hal H. Carleton, a motion picture journalist, and Tom S. Imrie, Photoplay Editor of "The Mirror," newspaper, control the company.

During the past two years Australians have become great picture fans. Since features came to the fore about eighteen months ago, and people began to find that there was as good amusement in photoplays as in stage plays and vaudeville, all the picture houses have prospered. In the past two years no less than eight fine photoplay theaters have been opened in the city of Sydney alone, the smallest of which has seating accommodation for 1,000 persons.

Reports received by the Chief Secretary, Mr. Black, show that there are now 113 picture shows in the city of Sydney and the immediate adjacent suburbs. The average weekly attendance is 430,000. The whole population of the above district is about 700,000.

Taking the average charge of admission at sixpence, the attendance given means that £10,700 ($53,500) is spent each week in this form of amusement.

I had an interview this week with a country exhibitor who controls several picture theaters in various country towns in N. S. W.

He states that features are much in demand by his patrons, outdoor pictures being very acceptable. Society dramas and similar subjects do not catch on.

Serials are still popular in the country, "The Exploits of Elaine" and "The Romance of Elaine" being a big attraction at present.

This exhibitor has been drawing large crowds with Equitable productions and is procuring district rights for Triangle plays. In spite of the fact that very few country exhibitors are able to personally see, or get advice about, the pictures they book, the usual programs submitted by the exchanges are of a very high standard.

"The Birth of a Nation" was presented on Easter Saturday at the Sydney Theater Royal, and will continue for an unlimited run. The price of admission are the highest ever charged for picture entertainment in Australia, ranging to 6 shillings ($1.50). A splendid orchestra of thirty performers rendered the musical score. The huge picture has been favorably reviewed by the Sydney press, as may be seen from the following excerpts:

The Mirror: "This is a remarkable production and in it D. W. Griffith has eclipsed anything yet done in the making of motion pictures."

The Sun: "'The Birth of a Nation' is really a wonderful film, the most elaborate thing yet done in motion pictures."

The Sydney Morning Herald: "The captivating quality of this wonderful photoplay largely arises from the width of its outlook, and the manner in which it brings home to the mind the awful nature of the American Civil War, through the medium of vivid bird's-eye view of battles wide-spread over hills and dales."

Another new theater, the Haymarket, was opened in Sydney on Easter Saturday. The management claims that it is the largest "continuous" show in the southern hemisphere, as it seats over 2,000 people. The interior of the theater is beautifully decorated, the walls being painted with an artistic design on a brown background. The seating accommodation is very comfortable, tip-up seats being used throughout.

Broadway Features, Red Feather Photoplays and Blue Bird productions will be screened first-run exclusively at the theater. "Scandal" was the main attraction on the opening bill.

Newcastle, N. S. W., also has a new theater. This is the Strand, which was opened last week by the Mayor of Newcastle. Ashmead Bartlett's pictures of the Gallipoli campaign (released in America by Universal) were screened at the opening program.

Newcastle is the second largest city in N. S. W., having a population of about 70,000. There are many fine picture theaters.

Since the war began many companies in England and elsewhere have produced "patriotic" war dramas, with stories based on actual incidents from the front. Some of these have been very good, while others were just the opposite.

An Australian production, in three reels, entitled "Murphy of Anzac," released this week, is unfortunately one of the latter kind. The story would win a prize for inconsistency, while the direction is poor. The location is Gallipoli, and is a story of the life of Private W. Simpson (known as Murphy) who saved many wounded with the aid of a donkey during the battle on the Gallipoli peninsula. He met his death while doing this good work.

A fine Triangle program was presented this week at the Triangle Playhouse. This consisted of "The Disciple," an Ince production featuring Wm. S. Hart; "His Picture in the Papers," from the Fine Arts studio, with Douglas Fairbanks in the leading role; and a Keystone comedy, "A Game Old Knight."

Although the Fine Arts comedy was the best picture, "The Disciple" was billed as the star attraction. It is a rather slow moving drama, though a very suitable vehicle for Hart. "His Picture in the Papers" is a genuine comedy, and every Sydney paper has had much to say about Fairbanks' fine performance. "A Game Old Knight" is a two-part comedy on the usual Keystone lines.

On Good Friday sacred and educational programs were presented at most Sydney picture theaters. The Crystal Palace screened the eight-part London film "The Christian," adapted from the novel by Hall Caine. The Globe had "The Life of Christ," while other houses had "The Passion Play," "A Trip Through Great Britain," and "The Salisbury Wild Animal Pictures."

Mechanical Demonstration

Automobile Makers Use Pictures to Explain Intricate Motor Mechanism.

THE motion picture long since has been recognized as an aid to the development of science in its various forms. The Willys-Overland Company was among the first of the automobile manufacturers to look with favor upon the picture screen in connection with its work in disseminating knowledge of motor car construction.

A lecture descriptive of the Knight sleeve valve motor illustrated by 2,000 feet of motion pictures is being given in various parts of the country by an engineering expert of The Willys-Overland Company. The pictures are declared by exhibitors who have seen them to be remarkable examples of what can be accomplished by the modern manufacturer with the aid of the camera.

In the pictures are brought out details of the construction and operation of the Knight sleeve valve motor, and without the aid of the film the lecturer declares it would be extremely difficult to explain to the public many of the points that should be brought out.

How properly to illustrate a power curve on the motion picture screen is a problem overcome by the Overland people. When this part of the lecture is reached, there appears on the screen a square frame, up one side of which is indicated by figures various degrees of horse-power; along the bottom of the frame are figures indicating the number of revolutions per minute, and the frame itself is charted. While the lecturer is talking a small mark appears at the lower left hand corner of the animated chart, and as he proceeds with his explanation of power development in the Knight motor, the mark becomes a small line and slowly finds its way upward and across the screen.

Thus, the lecturer with the aid of the motion pictures is able to give what is declared to be the most vivid description of the power curve ever developed.

That the public is interested in an educational film of this kind has been demonstrated in every city in which the motion picture lecture has been held. In showing the pictures, it is the policy of the Overland Company to select the best available theater in the city. The house is leased outright for the day, a full orchestra is provided, a vocalist is secured, and as a preliminary feature a popular song film is projected.

In Quincy, Ill., the motion picture lecture was held at the Empire Hippodrome, where crowds were turned away; in Canton, Ohio, an audience crowded the Alhambra theater and 200 were turned away because of lack of room; in Kalamazoo, Mich., the lecture was held at the Fuller theater, in South Bend, Ind., at the Oliver theater; in Warren, Ohio, the Warren Opera House was chosen; in Fort Wayne, Ind., the Majestic theater; and the lecture also has been given in Syracuse, N. Y., Harrisburg, Pa., Indianapolis, Boston and before such educational institutions as Cornell University, University of Michigan, John Hopkins University, Catholic University of America, University of Illinois and University of Minnesota.

The lecturer, according to exhibitors, is particularly well fitted for this work, because of his long association with Mr. Knight and with the men who have done so much to develop this motor.

Miss Justice in Wider Field

One of Her Famous Film Stories Reissued by Essanay on May 30.

THERE have been so many requests made of the Essanay Film Company by those who saw and never forgot Maibelle Heikes Justice's beautiful, heart-interest story, "The Song in the Dark," for its repetition that the company reissued the drama in the two-reel original, May 30. This film, it will be remembered, was declared by many reviewers to be the most original story of 1914, and was woven around the touching and pathetic episode of the little canary bird which had been blinded by the cruel vendor who sold it, to make it sing better. Also how it sang so wondrously during the dark hours of the night to the amazement of the beautiful society girl who bought it, and how the tiny singer became the comforter in her life when she lost her own sight. In this unusual story, Richard C. Travers and Gerda Holmes are featured.

Maibelle Heikes Justice.

Miss Justice at the present time has entered into a wider field and is writing only long features. Coming into the photoplay field first as a successful writer of novels and fiction for Cosmopolitan and other magazines, she is now transcribing many of the strong, original plots she formerly intended to use for her longer novels, into complete scenarios for the screen instead, and by the original treatment of her material is accomplishing results which she has long cherished in the production of superior photo-drama.

Well-known Broadway stars have called upon her for original dramas to meet their requirements, so that lately several powerful features have issued from her pen. Miss Justice from the first, has been one of the very few authors who came over from the field of fiction to that of the photodrama, who has been able to write the finished, technical scenario, at the same time making her plot or story the biggest feature of her work. She writes wholly from inspiration, yet is a careful, conscientious writer, and has always declared that the screen drama will never reach its zenith of perfection until original photoplays alone are produced, to the exclusion of anything else. And so in order to establish the correctness of her principles, she has set out to accomplish much in a wider field. Miss Justice is at her home, 41 West Forty-seventh street, New York, but will leave for the north some time during the summer.

OBSERVATIONS
BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

AT LAST the various interests in the motion picture industry have taken the only course open to them for an effective and decisive campaign for its protection. This course has always been open to them, but lack of foresight on the part of some, lack of confidence in each other on the part of others, and an uncalled spirit of independence on the part of not a few who felt that they were qualified and equipped to manage their end of the business without assistance or interference from other branches of the industry, has prevented inauguration of a movement to combine all interests in one great co-operative body. The idea to bring all producers of photoplays and all exhibitors, exchange men, and manufacturers of and dealers in projecting machines, as well as the makers of the raw film stock, into one league, cannot fail to win the hearty endorsement of all who aim to protect and advance the welfare of the moving picture business. All these interests are dependent upon each other. An attack upon or injury to one affects all, and none can stand idly by and see another suffer through the acts of those whose aims are inimical to the business as a whole.

The declared policy of the new movement outlines a united and decisive campaign against official censorship in any form and for the introduction of a bill at Washington by which a Congressional committee shall be appointed to investigate the moving picture industry which, with its capitalization of half a billion dollars, ranks fourth in the industries of the nation. This voluntary movement for public investigation is designed to get before the people the real facts bearing upon the standing, conduct, operation, importance and rights of the great industry. The promoters hope thereby to bring before the public mind facts and conditions which they have been unable to adequately present in their contests against the aggression of their rights before the various state legislatures, the censorship boards and petty officials in municipalities throughout the country. The rulings against them, with few exceptions, have been so unreasonable and arbitrary that impression has been created that there is no national or state constitution in existence So arbitrary have the censors become that they have reversed the rule of law that the prosecution must provide evidence of guilt. In their eyes the producers and exhibitors of moving pictures are automatically guilty until they prove their innocence.

Through the united movement, followed by an impartial and the widest public investigation possible, the moving picture interests propose to convince the public that there is no need of local, state or national official censorship, and they also aim to obtain a convincing ruling that they are entitled to the same constitutional privileges that apply to the freedom of press and speech. At the same time they hope to conclusively show to the public that the official censorship agitators are not acting in good faith; that they do not represent conditions as they exist; that existing laws and municipal regulations are ample to attain what the agitators claim can only be secured through official censorship; that pre-censorship is a forerunner of political jobbery and graft; that censorship boards and their supporters have shown they cannot operate either impartially, conservatively or consistently. Governor Whitman convicted the latter when he refused to sign the Cristman-Wheeler bill and Judge Audenreid, of the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas, has just condemned a ruling of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors for an action he declares was "manifestly unreasonable and absurd." Judge Audenreid went still further and said the Board of Censors "abused its discretion and acted arbitrarily and oppressively." The decision must be the more humiliating to the censors and their supporters on account of it following upon the heels of a victory they secured in the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, which prohibited the lower courts from interfering with rulings of the State Board of Censors unless abuse of discretion could be shown.

The new movement for protection should be unqualifiedly and enthusiastically supported by all moving picture interests if for no other purpose than the maintenance of complete unity. Failure to secure Congressional investigation or defeat official censorship should not influence any interests in lagging. The magnitude of the industry justifies anticipating the development from time to time of great problems affecting its vital interests which can be successfully met only by united conferences and action.

The necessity of an unswerving unity of all interests and efforts to secure it is not based upon any plan to direct the great wealth represented in such a combined movement towards the improper attainment of that which should not be sought. Aside from legitimate expenditures, the financial resources have no bearing on the matter. What the promoters seek is a unanimity which will prevent the recurrence of a condition which now exists, but fortunately is not formidable enough to cause apprehension on the part of the majority engaged in the business. For instance, we find a few of the film producers favoring Federal censorship. They do not want official censorship, but have the opinion that by a Federal enactment the multitude of State and municipal censor boards may be wiped out. Taking the pulse of the moving picture business as a whole, it is more than probable that had the organization now sought been in operation a joint conference would have left the Federal bill without any co-operation from the moving picture field, even as an expedient. The same may be said of action taken by exhibitors at Cincinnati, O., who went on record in favor of Federal regulation of pictures because State censorship has not been a success. With complete unity and a conference it is doubtful if one of these exhibitors would have declared "Those who oppose it (Federal censorship) say it is un-American * * * but I maintain that censors are required for motion pictures as well as other things, because there is always a certain class who will take advantage of the freedom given them. And yet the Congressional minority report on the Smith-Hughes Federal Censorship bill states: "This bill violates the principal of the constitutional guaranty of a free press * * * it is utterly un-American in its character and in the highest degree dangerous from every point of view." It will thus be seen that through lack of that unity and opportunity for joint conference which is contemplated by the new movement we find some producers and exhibitors diametrically opposed in opinion to those who are operating in their behalf and for the welfare of the moving picture industry.

It is a noticeable fact that every time opportunity is afforded to practically test their claims the censorship agitators are discredited. They stoutly maintain that there are no existing laws and municipal regulations to regulate the character of moving pictures. This is successfully refuted by recent action of the municipal authorities in Newark, N. J. The Chief of Police and witnesses pronounced a moving picture as "unclean, unwholesome and immoral," and the license commitee of the Common Council suspended the license of the theater in which the picture was shown. For the present purpose it is immaterial whether the condemnation and action was justifiable. The fact is established that the authorities can suppress improper pictures and make clean the business with more keen effect than censorship can; and this can be accomplished after the people at large have had an opportunity to censor the picture. If a mistake has been made through faulty judgment, or otherwise, the aggrieved can have their day in court without being obliged to spend weeks in showing they were victimized through an abuse of discretion in pre-censorship. It is far better to take chances with the people and the municipal authorities than be the victims of the whims and prejudices of a handful of men whom a court of law brands for abusing its discretion and acting arbitrarily and oppressive. The municipal regulations, aside from the constitutional point of view, are preferable to the official censorship system because they not only administer a decisive blow in cases where it is shown to be warranted, but also serve as a forceful reminder to showmen and exhibitors to be cautious in their selection and booking of subjects. It would seem that this is the true keynote to the purification of the motion pictures. It is the arm of restriction that reaches the stealthy immoral producers and exhibitors, who ignore or defy censorship regulations and must ultimately drive them out of business, which the legitimate people have been trying to do. It is not the absence of regulations which has given the censorship agitators their slight foothold for complaints, but the failure of the municipal authorities to perform their duties and the failure of the agitators and other self-styled reformers to see that they do it.

FREULER RETURNS FROM CHICAGO.

John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, returned on Wednesday, June 7, from a hasty trip to Chicago. It is rumored that important announcements concerning Mutual are being held pending Mr. Freuler's decision.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Keeps Him Guessing.

WE ARE not going to name the exhibitor who wrote the following letter. We do not suppose that he would object, but there seems to be no need for it, and we can discuss it better without a signature. He writes:

> I am sending you several copies of my house organ which, I am sorry to report, is not exactly accomplishing its end. I would like to have you tell me wherein it fails. Seeking something of local interest, I took up the fight of local churches to oust saloons and as it has been accomplished it cannot have been an error and as business is slowly improving, my prohibition talk cannot have kept them away. As results are coming to me so slowly I begin to fear that I am taking my advertisers' money under false pretenses. My clientele does not seem to read. Have decided to try some very sensational pictures cutting out my regular service except on the days I run my two serials. These have doubled my business for those two days, but the better and finer my pictures are, the poorer the attendance. This little paper which is very carefully distributed in 2,000 homes under my personal supervision should, it seems to me, bring out a three per cent. attendance, as these houses are all within a six block radius and only one competing house, which is not doing much better than I am. I sell the advertising space, write most of these ads, collect the bills, write most of the paper and read proof on a bunch of foreign printers besides attending to janitor work and being in the house during all sessions—some little job.

Here is a man who is typical of hundreds of other exhibitors. He finds business slipping and does not know what the matter is. Three letters within a week have all been along the same lines. With the same advertising, the same programs and general management the business is not holding up.

The chief trouble is that the general public is tiring of seeing the same stuff over and over again. In spite of large talk, the stories, and therefore the pictures, are not so good today as they were two years ago, largely because they are the same stories and generally two and three reel stories of a couple of years ago built up into fives with padding. The stories made a hit then. The director thinks he will repeat his success and he is too damnably stupid to improve the story, so he flosses it up with a lot of trick stuff, irising and the like and his employer does not know better than to say it has been improved. Until we get better stories and more intelligent business methods, the patronage will slowly slip from the houses. People are tired of the same old thing.

That is the chief cause of failing business, and the oncoming of summer makes more pronounced a condition that has long been apparent to keen observers. Until a lot of directors, including some of those with the greatest reputations, are thrown out of the business, the exhibition end will continue to retrograde. Very few manufacturers see their own pictures—all of the output, and fewer still see the pictures of other firms. They do not realize how rotten production is getting. This is in reply to the dozen or so letters that have been received and the hundreds that presently will be.

Taking up the more purely personal side, this Exhibitor seems to have erred in taking sides on a popular question. The surest way to put the saloon out of business is to attract the patrons to the picture theaters. Most men hang around saloons because they have no other place to go. To take sides on what is practically a question of personal liberty is dangerous. It is a good plan to fight with the better element for reforms that will benefit the community, as a whole, but prohibition is too closely akin to censorship to make it good medicine for a theater management to take up actively. We think that in a way this is reacting against the house.

But a more potent indicator is a paragraph in one of the papers sent in. This exhibitor gave out free tickets, few of which were used. These were for children and required the presence of an adult at a five cent admission. When the price was raised to ten cents for adults business was better. Some people would not go to see The Birth of a Nation in a five cent house merely because it was a five cent house. They want a ten cent theater and would stand a quarter admission for the right sort of features. Evidently the house holds itself too cheaply. Only the best features and singles should be booked. The present program does not represent the best to be had, by any means, and we believe that if the exhibitor has carried out his threat to resort to sensationalism he will find an immediate gain in business that will be followed by a still more disastrous slump.

For another thing, the house organ does not pull because it is not in the proper style. Like the show it is a five cent paper catering to the ten cent crowd. The exhibitor takes up matters that do not interest those to whom the paper comes. One issue gives a column and a half of his life history with the promise of more. No one will be interested in the writer to that extent. If they read at all it is because they are interested in film, so talk film and locality and leave out the rest. Make it bright and snappy. Hire someone to do the janitor work and farm out the advertising to some pushing young man who will get the advertisements and collect for them on a commission basis. Then the exhibitor will have more time in which to perform the rest of his duties properly. Instead of personal reminiscences use gossip of the neighborhood. Write of the films brightly and interestingly. Take up the reforms that interest all and not merely a portion of a community, and make it a ten cent paper trying to draw ten cent people to a ten cent house with a ten cent program.

Too Full.

Edmund Reid, of the Palace, Barnesville, Ga., sends in a four page program that is almost too full of type. He runs two weeks to an issue and gets a full weekly program into a space 2½ by 6 inches. As a result the lines of type are so crowded that you must be very much interested if you read it through. This is largely the printer's fault. He uses the largest possible type for that space and apparently does not know that a smaller face with some white space would have worked much better. We show one page of it, a little more than half size. To begin with, the date should be eight or even six point instead of twelve. Then the various "presenters" should get eight point, descriptive lines should get six point lines and stars ten and titles twelve point. This will get all of the type in and still make it look like a lot less. It is a grave error to use the largest possible type. It is good workmanship to get the best possible display through contrast, and if the printer does not know this, he should have it explained to him. We presume that Mr. Reid merely left this to the printer, but a printing office is a hell of betrayed confidences and the printer should be watched even more closely than the cashier, for he can do you greater financial damage on a two dollar job than the box office person can do by decamping with a week's receipts.

This matter of display by relative size is one that the exhibitor should hammer into his printer's head if he has to open up the ivory dome with the offender's own job press. It is not size, but the relative value of sizes (within limits, of course), that gives real display. Take a full page open display newspaper advertisement and look at it through a reducing glass. You get smaller type, but even if you reduce to two inches wide there is the same well balanced proportion. Instead of using a reducing glass, reduce the type sizes proportionately and you'll get the same relative values. There are many times that a ten point line will give you a better display than a twelve or even an eighteen point. Don't say "He is talking to Reid." You may need it much more than Mr. Reid does, for his seems to be a case of confidence misplaced. He personally knows more than his printer seems to, which is why we use him for a text.

All But the Ink.

The Marshall, Manhattan, Kans., sends in a four page program that is spoiled by poor ink and bad press work. They have a drawn design for the front page that is nicely done, but the ink gives some benday effects not intended in the original. The ink seems to get into the type and clog the letters or else the type was cast about the time Ben Franklin bought his outfit. For the program they use a line eight inches wide. As the face is only eight point, the eye gets tired before it traverses a line and loses the place on the return to the next line. It would be better to set in two columns, three days to the column. A better display would be possible by this arrangement. No display is used in the program proper, most of the matter being solid descriptive matter with a ten point all-cap face for titles and names in body type where these are used. With a two column layout all of the titles, where more than one is used for a day, could be given a line each and so brought up. When the change is made, it should be arranged to have the days dated, and at the same time the eighteen point line should be cut to a ten or less. At present the day is used to get some display instead of the title, which is not a good plan. The program appears in its proper place on page three, the second page being given to house talk and the back to three of the features and a vaudeville act. The general effect of the program is one of overcrowding. A little white space on the third and fourth pages would more than pay for itself. The program is on good stock, but the ink spoils its effect.

The house talk is a good argument for the open market, the heading running "Would you buy four applies to obtain one good one?" and following this up with the statement that they take their pick of features instead of contracting for an entire output. Here the use of a larger type makes the lines easier to read.

One!

The New Family theater, Adrian, Mich., is the first to announce that owing to the cost of paper it must discontinue its monthly program on surfaced paper. It also urges its patrons to save old paper stock, particularly rags and rag paper stock. Why not use your own program or screen to further this movement? It is getting more serious all the time. It may hit you soon.

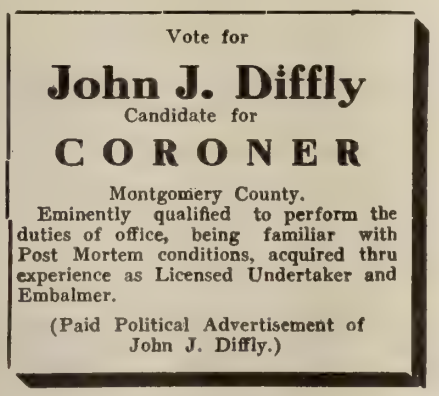
To Production Press Agents.

Read this from the Rowland and Clark Regent program, Pittsburgh, and realize that perhaps a lot of your stuff sounds just as silly to the exhibitors. They are not the collection of low browed asses that some press agents take them for. Do real work.

> Actual excerpt from "press notices" of a film attraction:
> "All this was taken only by great pains and hardships in an isolated mountain place in Georgia which was the only section of the American continent where the exact Scandinavian scenery could be found." In other words—the only Tuesday they found open during the week was a Thursday.

Draw the Line.

We are strong for foreign advertising in programs, but now and then something comes along that we do not much care for, such as this from a southern house organ



Vote for
John J. Diffly
Candidate for CORONER
Montgomery County.
Eminently qualified to perform the duties of office, being familiar with Post Mortem conditions, acquired thru experience as Licensed Undertaker and Embalmer.
(Paid Political Advertisement of John J. Diffly.)

As a matter of fact the house is only indirectly responsible. The big boss hedged on the cost of the house organ and farmed it out to an advertising man with the result that John and his ripe undertaking experience is thrust at the amusement seeker.

There should be a certain supervision of foreign advertising and contracts that are farmed should carry a clause that advertising should be of a suitable character, medical and certain other styles of advertising being barred.

Pastes the Pages.

> This is
> From the Moving Picture World under date of April 22nd. Do you ever read it? Get a copy and convince yourself that the feature pictures shown at Poli's Elm Street theater are the biggest and best and the most costly in the world today and > Remember this
> You see a better projected picture here than you do anywhere else in Worcester.

The house runs vaudeville with a one reel to open and a feature to close with. It is to be regretted that we cannot reproduce the advertisement which is about 9 by 26 inches, for much can be done by an exhibitor who can letter signs. This holds particularly true of the insert pages in colors. Do not wait for paper to be sent you from the exchange. Supplement this with neatly lettered signs. They can be made to tell precisely what you wish to say and you can make it just right.

For a Change.

The Calhoun, Minneapolis, Minn., always gets out a pretty house organ but that for the second week in May is unusual. It is printed in a red-brown on grey-brown paper, twelve pages, with a daily program running through the pages and a full program on the inside pages. The days are not dated, but the Calhoun always has been careless about dates. The editor recklessly offers to print verse in which rhymes are found for the house title. No prize is offered. It is sufficient for the average poet that he gets into print. The scheme is a good one where the house title does not appear in the rhyming dictionary. It would not work with the Gem or the Star. Experiments with colored stock are to be conducted carefully, but now and then a change is pleasing and this program is one of the best of recent issues.

The Back Kick.

Writing from Owensboro, Ky., Roger Thompson, a state rights exhibitor, who at present is handling the Castles', The Whirl of Life in several states, writes of the clipping from a Cincinnati paper exploiting Forbidden Fruit as "more daring than Damaged Goods," recently reproduced in these columns. He has been following that film which is being sent through that section with the same exploitation and methods, and is better able to note the result. Those who attended expecting to see "The Garden of Eden" as Mr. Thompson puts it, were disappointed and the other and better element became suspicious of all traveling companies. That is the trouble with this form of advertising. It does not react against the offender, but against the business as a whole. He cites one manager who lost money on the following attraction because of the offense given by the lurid stuff in the papers. Neither of the films mentioned lives up to the reputation given them and it is unfortunate that they and the pictures as a whole are made to suffer at the hands of the few.

Mr. Thompson has been hobnobbing with George A. Bleich and he says that all we have written and more is true of the man from Owensboro. He finds that a layover with Mr. Bleich takes the bad taste of the other rencontre out of his mouth.

With Scenic Effects.

J. W. Ballenger, of the Dean, York, Neb., tells how he handled "The Battle Cry of Peace." To some big town managers it may seem a small thing to frame up the setting shown in the cut, but Mr. Ballenger has no staff of artists to fix things up and he knows the advantage of giving an extra display for a special feature. For that matter it would work in the cities, and lots of theaters that could get something special have simply run the film on the screen without any special demonstration. Mr. Ballenger belongs to the class of managers who know the value of making a fuss over things and he knows that merely running pictures on a screen is not the beginning and the end of the exhibition business. He writes:

> We are moved to write you a few lines occasionally to let you know that we are still moving the movies.
> The enclosed photograph is just a stage set used on the "Battle Cry of Peace." It was the Opening Number, and called AMERICA.
> The writer made a short address regarding the nature of the play, the house lights then dimmed down and the front curtain rose to the tune of AMERICA played by our special eight-piece orchestra. As the curtain rose red lights flooded the stage, and a red spot illuminated the BIRD of FREEDOM. It looked RICH, and the music and enthusiasm of the audience put the pep in the picture to hold them through to the very end.
> As you will note, the set is mounted on rollers, so that, as the orchestra closed AMERICA the eagle moved slowly to one side and the picture started without a minute's drag. In fact it was on before the eagle had entirely disappeared, and kept the audience interested.
> We turned loose 25 little rubber balloons from the top of a Bank Building, each with a complimentary ticket attached, good for any seat in the house, any performance. You ought to have seen the scramble. KIDS PILED UP 10 DEEP. There was a bunch of kids almost large enough to have gray hair in the mix up. Everyone wanted one free. Also there was a big audience of onlookers, and the investment in balloons was sure repaid many times by the advertising the stunt got.
>
> Our newspaper campaign opened with a full pager, and ended with a 2 col. 6 reader introduced in every issue. We papered the country with posters for a 30 mile radius, and got out a special printed 4 sheet date, which carried the title, BATTLE CRY OF PEACE, so that it was an advertisement in itself.
> Business is fairly good in spite of the exodus of 1,000 students, but it keeps the gray matter working to pull the business in the dull season. Thanks to the department of which you are the editor, we get a new bunch of ideas weekly. Some we change to suit, and others we grab as they are, and we wish to extend to yourself, your department, and the boys who contribute to it from the four points of the globe, our most sincere thanks, and expressions of good will.

You do not have to own a big stage and a staff of scene painters in order to be able to do things, but any clever man whose heart is in his business can start off the audience in the right frame of mind instead of throwing the title before a cold and unresponsive mob and, as Mr. Ballenger phrases, he can put pep in the picture. They think it is in the picture, but really it is more owing to the receptive frame of mind.

Writes Letters.

William Fait, Jr., of the Avon, Utica, N. Y., puts his trust in letters; possibly carrying out the idea advanced in Picture Theater Advertising that the man who can write a good letter can write interesting press stuff. The first page of the Avon Theatre News is always a letter to his clientele, well written, brightly phrased and dealing with his own doings and the shows to come. When he took in the expositions in New York he wrote of the people he met and remarked that the theater equipment did not interest him, as he already had all of the up-to-date things in his own house. That drives home the point better than a formal declaration would. The back page he gives to talk of plays and players and the inside pages to the program and house announcement, the latter coming last, the three divisions of the bill taking the second page and top of the third. If he does not use all of a half page for his program he adds a couple of lines as space permits, calling attention to the possibilites of the house as a first aid to hostesses, building up the mailing list or whatever suggests itself. These are all set in the type used for the descriptive matter and appear to be a part of the pogram and not an interpolation. This is better than using an irregular measurement for the programs and taking the space gained for announcement, since it preserves the balance of the layout. Try the scheme yourself some time. It should work for you, too, if you divide your program into panels.

Well, Why Not?

L. J. Burkitt, of the Lyric, Morrison, Ill., errs when he says that he is going to "bother" us considerable from now on. He cannot bother us by writing letters, and he is welcome to go as far as he likes. His main point is that the local paper charges inch rates for any write up material it runs. He thinks he'll start his own program and let the paper slide. If he has to pay inch rates for comment and will run the right sort of sheet, we think it will pay better than buying space in the regular paper. It is a mighty short sighted editor these days who does not run a photoplay department. Editors the country over are not giving from half a page to four or five pages a week to photoplay just because the man who runs the local theater is a good fellow. They give the space because they find that it pays them in the approval of their patrons. Even in Philadelphia where it once was the rule that each theater got as many lines of reading notice as they ran lines of advertising now boasts some capital photoplay departments and it is the same the country over. It is only the fossil sheet that now holds off. But we note one line in Mr. Burkitt's letter. He says:

> When I bump him for a little article once in a while he politely informs me that "I never see you bringing any comps down here for my office force," so every inch I get I pay for by the inch.

Passes are as the breath of life to the country editor. Why not send him some and see what he does after that? If we ran a house and wanted space we would make the editor a photoplay fan if we not only had to give him free tickets, but throw in a drink each time he visited the house.

Mr. Burkitt also asks for an opinion on some job work, a herald and a Cahill-Igoe postcard, done by the local man. It is good work for a small shop, but the heading is badly done. The house mark seems to be this:

LYRIC THEATRE

Built up to a STANDARD—Not Down to Price

This is done with type and it will be seen that the condensed letter used is too thin to stretch across the space taken by the word "theater." Either a smaller type should be used for theater and an extended letter for Lyric or, better still, a drawing should be made in which the spacing is properly and neatly done and this should be used as an original from which cuts of one and two column widths may be made, and these in turn should be electrotyped. It will cost three or four dollars, but this investment will be more than returned in added effect. As it stands no two forms are the same. Three samples are sent and each is different. The slight variation from uniformity spoils the effect. Five dollars is not much to spend on a house trade mark. It will bring back more than that.

In the newspaper advertisement sent a double rule cuts one part of the advertisement from the other. Even the office boy should know better than that, let alone a compositor. He should be chided. It is not done in the best circles. The rest of the advertisement is not badly set, but this is inexcusable in a printer.

A Few More Dates.

The Dreamland, Augusta, Ga., sends in a four page program with a new idea. The cover is in two colors, black and pink, the tint being rather too light to pay for the second run. It is used to give color to a tropical scene with a most voluptuous lady swinging in a hammock over a pink lake. It would be better to run the design as a single black form and not only save money but gain effect, for the tint is too weak to help the effect, but, to the contrary, pulls it down. Inside the program for the week is run on the second page without comment, this comment being run on the third and fourth pages, the two chief attractions sharing the back page and other leading titles getting the third. The idea is good, but all days should be dated.

What's in a Name?

The Censor is the name of a theater in Albion, Mich. Now let us search for the Maude Murray in Cleveland and the Breitinger in Philadelphia. It is not a fortunate choice for a house name, in spite of its oddity. The house gets out a ten page folder, pages 2½ by 4, nicely printed and on good stock, but it must add somewhat to the expense to get the accordion fold that they use. A better fold can be devised and the placing of folding marks will also help. Seven pages are used for the daily attractions, with two underlines and a front. The various subjects are told about, but the story is not given. This is the better plan when the publisher can do his own writing. It preserves the surprise and still gains interest for the release, greater interest than would rise from the bare sketch of the story.

Hard on Owen.

Owen Moore generally gets his press notices on his work, but the Orpheum, Gardner, Mass., advertises him differently, and this is how he looks:

You can see Owen Moore, he is the lucky man that married Mary Pickford—

JORDAN IS A HARD ROAD

A Triangle Masterpiece Featuring

DOROTHY GISH

(The Beauty in the Birth of a Nation)

AND

Mary Pickford's Husband

(OWEN MOORE)

It's the Best "Western"—We Ever Saw

It would have been better to have given Mr. Moore the large type and his alliance the underline. The announcement appears in a neat six page folder that shows that the house is still on the map.

Moving.

H. A. Chenoweth, of the Opera House, Milford, Mass., is changing over to the Opera House, Westfield, Mass. Before he left Milford he was given a benefit with a double Sunday program, the evening bill being entirely different from the matinee attractions. He sends in his most recent form of advertisement which is a strip of card just wide enough to take in the column cuts supplied by Triangle for its films. On paper these clips would be too small, but on card they can be doubled to fit the vest pocket and distribute nicely. The cuts show up well on cheap stock and give a far better display than would local composition. If you take any service that uses a rather deep single column cut in its mat service, it will pay to try this scheme out. Room is taken at the top for a few additional lines, the entire card being 2 5/8 by 7½.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticised, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

What Is It?

W. GRAHAM JONES says that Charles L. Gaskill puts into a nutshell the fault of the picture when he says that the photoplay is but another form of the novel. He says that it is, but that it should not be. And the same day Wyndham Gittens pronounces the chief drag of the pictures the fact that it is a story produced as a play instead of a story. Mr. Jones is an actor and wants to see the play form. Mr. Gittens is an old magazine man and wants to see the story told instead of acted. They are both right and both wrong. A photoplay is a story told in action, just as we said in the very first edition of Technique. A story told in action is a story form but acted out. It is NOT a play form, but it is acted like a play. If the directors, a majority of which are old stage directors, could only realize that the photoplay must have the story form and not the play form, we should have better and more competent direction, but so long as efforts are made to tell the story as a play because a director does not know any better, just so long will we suffer the sight of a hybrid. Photoplay is a new art form that combines the play and the story, but takes most of its qualities from the story. It is a narrative, not a drama, and should be treated as such, but most directors will continue to give heed to the visual situation rather than to the mental punch because they lack the intelligence to adapt themselves to the story form. We are inclined to side with Mr. Gittens and Bannister Merwin in their belief that the best director is first of all a story teller and then—and not until then—a man who can put the story into action instead of words.

The Only Way.

Unless you can get genuinely interested in a story yourself, how can you hope to interest others in it? But do not get interested to the point where faith warps judgment.

Synopses Only.

Don't he afraid to take words for a synopsis only. The old limit of 250 words for the reel is all right where you have the continuity to back up your sketch of the plot, but when your synopsis is all you send, do not send a sketch but a scenario in its proper sense; a complete resume of the story. If you wish, you can condense to a paragraph of a hundred words or so for an introduction, but follow this with the full and complete story, whether it is one thousand words or five. There are few editors who can see a full five reel story in a thousand words. Make it plain to them. Hold to the short synopsis for the full script, but take the space you need for the story when you try to tell it as a story.

Newness.

A thing is new when it has not been done before. It does not matter that you never heard of it before. It may be new to you, and yet be an old story to others. A new author is quite peeved because we told him that his plot was old. He lives among books six days a week, but he thought out a big idea all by himself and is surprised to be told that the idea is so old that now his story is merely the point from which practical authors now start their stuff. It is the old story of the half brother and sister who nearly marry, and we have personally seen hundreds in film and script, but it has been some time since merely this story has been done into film. Let it be your rule to take it for granted that most simple themes, no matter how great their strength, have been done before whether you have seen them or not, and then use these elemental themes as starts for even bigger and better stories. But at best incest is not a pretty theme, so take something less unpleasant. Only the other day a man complained that most strong stories were sex stuff and the very next story he wrote was one of his best and absolutely clean.

Hopeful.

When you read that some company has increased its capital, rejoice and be glad. Probably the time is coming when you can take some of that money away from it. The money that is coming into the business now is mostly business money. It is money that must earn something and if it doesn't the man who finds it loafing is going to know why and presently he will discover that the director who writes his own stuff or works with a studio writer is the basic cause of the lacking interest. Then that type of director will be led into the yard and executed and in his place will come a man whose story for this week will be unlike his story for last week and last month and last year. There will be variety and the free lances will be looked to for the variety.

Some Reasons.

When we printed a letter from W. Graham Jones lately, we wondered how many other writers would get indignant at the statements made. There seems to be just one, Franklin Hall, who writes:

> In your May 6 number of The Moving Picture World Mr. W. Graham Jones makes some statements which call for criticism. He states:
> "That $10 a reel for a five reel story is not too small." That "Similar successions of scenes in prose are turned out by magazine writers by the mile at five cents a word."
>
> That, "Two hundred words will easily cover any of the average current releases. Any competent director can spread them over five thousand feet of otherwise valuable film."
>
> The absurdity of these statements seems apparent for the following reasons:
> 1. Prose without a story containing vital incidents and action have no place in the photoplay, and a large amount of magazine stories turned out by writers by the mile at five cents a word would hardly produce a dozen scenes of interest because of the absence of that quality of incidents and action. Words don't make a play.
> 2. A two hundred word synopsis will not cover the average current releases of five reel films. A simple story for a single reel in some cases is possible in so few words. But think of asking even our most competent directors to make a feature multiple real picture from one so short and give the author of the idea credit for the work or pay him for what the director does!
> Therefore: Why should not the author work out the acting plot himself? Mr. Sargent has well said—"There are others (beside editors and directors) who have ideas."
>
> And further, why should an author who has a big idea sell it for a song when, if he is capable, he can give an original touch to the many scenes and turn out something different from the trite methods of the hack which we see so much and which the people are becoming heartily tired of.
> The acting plot is the real thing. But it requires weeks of labor and believe me sometimes, more often, months of deep concentrated thought. He must visualize each scene and exercise care that he does not destroy continuity of thought. He must create incidents that are interesting, gripping and thoroughly in harmony with his plot or complications will arise and without great care that he does not destroy continuity of thought. Ht must work will be a hodge-podge of incongruities. Hence, fifty or a hundred words as a description of the main or vital theme of your play, together with the action, the cast and scene plot should be all that is necessary and for which one should be paid upon its merit.

We are with Mr. Hall "all fours" in his propositions. If a story is worth making from the author's synopsis, that idea is worth money, whether it is told in twenty words or two thousand. It is the idea and not the physical labor of typewriting for which the author should collect. Even the bare suggestion from which a two reel story should be made should be worth not less than $50, for without that idea the work of the reconstruction man would be valueless. He has everything but the idea. Without the idea his work is worth nothing. If a script is worth a theoretical price of one hundred dollars a reel surely the idea should be worth not less than half of that sum, yet even some of the best companies pay ten and even five per cent. for the idea. If you are a day laborer, charge for your time by the hour. If you are thinker, charge by the idea.

Different.

The early bird may catch the worm, but the early script catches no checks.

Selling Wisdom.

If you have written a good story, do not lose faith in it if it does not sell—but first be positive that it really is a good story.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost) will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 142.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Theatre managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

Which is the more efficient, a carbon or metallic filament lamp? What is the relative light-giving power per watt?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 135.

The Roll of Honor on Question 135 consists of Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas; W. C. Crawford, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Wilson Hays, Barton, Md.; W. B. Allen, Edmonton, Canada; C. E. Linstruth, Carthage, N. Y.; L. Pagenhardt, Westernport, Md.; R. S. Fanning, Chattanooga, Tenn.; George F. Cushing, Elizabeth, N. J.; F. F. Bell, Palestine, Texas, and Walter Collins, Tiffin, Ohio

The Roll of Honor replies to question 135 were all very good, but no single reply gave all the points for and against the use of glass in the ports, therefore I have myself, assisted by the Roll of Honor replies tabulated these various things and presented them in the form of a reply to question 135.

Reply to Question No. 135.

By F. H. Richardson, New York, N. Y.

The Question:

What arguments are there for and against glass in the lens and observation ports? What kind of glass would you suggest for lens ports? What is a "shadow box," how would you apply one to the observation port, and what purpose would it serve?

The Answer:

The various arguments in favor of glass in the lens and observation ports are: (a) Prevents draughts, which are always objectionable, may be quite injurious to the operator's eyes, are often unhealthy, and may be, under some conditions, highly dangerous. These air currents carry with them dust, which is bad for the lenses and the mechanism of the projector. (b) Prevents noise in operating room from disturbing the audience. Noise may be caused by worn projectors, motor generator sets, alternating current arcs, talk, or rewinding. (c) Compels installation of vent pipes so that operator will get fresh air, instead of the second hand article which enters via the ports, which is particularly unhealthy if the operating room is located up near the ceiling, as it usually is. With the lens ports stopped up it would be absolutely necessary to ventilate the operating room, since, unless this were done the room would be unbearably hot, especially in summer.

The points against glass in the ports are: (a) Glass in lens ports will cause some loss of light by absorption and reflection, though if proper glass is used the loss will be but slight. (b) There is likely to be some reflection from the surface of the observation port glass, which will, to some extent, interfere with the operator's view of the picture. This may, however, be entirely eliminated by setting the glass at an angle, instead of straight up and down. (c) The glasses must be kept perfectly clean and free from dust, which involves considerable additional labor.

Kind of Glass: A photographic plate from which the emulsion has been removed by soaking in a solution made by dissolving, a large handful of ordinary washing soda in about two quarts of warm water, is best for both the lens and observation ports. Such plates, already used, may be obtained from any photographer. Never use any other glass in a lens port, but if you cannot obtain a photographic plate large enough for the observation port, then you may use a very carefully selected pane of thin window glass. Be certain, however, to select one in which there is no visible flaw.

A shadow box is an open frame surrounding an object, the same being painted dull black on the inside. As applied to the operating room observation port, the shadow box should be just an inch or two larger than the observation port, and should be ten or twelve inches deep. It is designed to prevent the operator's view of the picture being obstructed by light reflected by glass in the port, or by light in the operating room.

Dual Brooklyn Union.

The editor is in receipt of an invitation to visit an organization known as the Motion Picture Workers' Union of Brooklyn, an organization recently formed, which designs to take into membership operators, musicians, ushers, reel boys, lecturers, exchange help, porters, etc., in fact, all men or women identified with the motion picture theatrical business. The writer of the invitation, Alfred De Gregory, secretary of the Union, says:

> The Motion Picture Workers' Union will not only cover Brooklyn, but the whole United States after we get Brooklyn and Greater New York organized.

Your plan of organization is the I. W. W. plan, pure and simple, and whereas I tell you frankly that from many points of view it is a very excellent plan of organization, still in my opinion and judgment it would be extremely unwise for New York City operators, or any other operators for that matter, to affiliate themselves with that kind of organization, since to do so would be to immediately enter into a fight not only with the stage employes and the electricians, but with practically the whole labor movement, which is, rightly or wrongly, organized under the American Federation of Labor plan of organization.

I am perfectly willing to admit, and, in fact, have upon several occasions pointed out to local 306 the fact that Brooklyn has been to some extent neglected. This was, however, taking all conditions into consideration, unavoidable. I do not believe, though, that the Brooklyn operator is going to benefit himself by taking an action which means, in effect, jumping out of the frying pan into the fire, and while I shall no doubt reap your enmity, I am compelled to most emphatically advise Brooklyn operators to not affiliate with your organization.

I have not a doubt but the manager will welcome your union with open arms, and make some concessions to it, because he very well knows that, regardless of the possible relative merits of the plan of organization, the entrance of a dual organization into the field is going to act just as it always acts, and that is to keep the operator back, and prevent him from securing any material advantage through organization. It is no use to tell me that it won't work that way, my brother, because I have been in the organized labor movement for more than thirty years, and I have seen literally dozens of instances of this kind. They always end the same; a fight between the two organizations and nothing permanent gained by either. Moreover, let me tell you that your organization is foredoomed to lose, because it will have to fight the entire labor movement of New York City, and you can't do that successfully. I freely grant that you are probably entirely sincere, but, my friend, when you start out to form a dual union of operators you are making a tremendous mistake, and one which will react on the men themselves by keeping them back, possibly for years. My advice to the Brooklyn men is, if you have any complaint regarding the methods practiced by 306 get into that body, attend its meetings, and proceed to literally and vigorously "raise the devil" until the things you complain of are remedied.

Off Center.

Hidelgo theater, El Paso, Texas, asks:

> What will be the effect in the projection if the operating room is 8 feet out of center, the building being 41 feet wide, and the throw 100 feet.

If the operating room contains two machines and it is 8 feet off center, then one machine will be $8 + 1\frac{1}{2} = 9\frac{1}{2}$ feet off center with the screen, whereas the other will be $8 - 1\frac{1}{2} = 6\frac{1}{2}$ feet off center with the screen. The result would be a side keystone effect, which could be remedied by filling in the aperture at the top and bottom and filing it out. See Page 156, third edition of the Handbook. There would be some distortion. That is to say, the light ray would have to travel farther to reach one side of the screen than the other, therefore, since the rays spread as they travel, objects in one side of the picture would be magnified more than in the other, but if the picture be not more than 16 feet wide and the throw be 100 feet, this would probably not be very noticeable.

The worst trouble would be out-of-focus-effect, which could only be remedied by stopping down the lens, or raising one side of the aperture plate, and raising one side of the aperture plate is hardly a practical thing to do with any machine, and is impossible with some of them. You can secure depth of focus which will overcome the out of focus effect by reducing the diameter of the objective, but this, of course, means light loss. You had better get that operating room in the center if you can possibly do so. Of course you can get a fairly good picture under the conditions named, but you ought to want the very best picture possible, and the best possible picture cannot be obtained under those conditions.

Educational Committee.

R. J. Young, Boston, Mass., says:

> Note that Utica, N. Y., Local 337 has started an Educational Division. This is, I believe, an excellent action for the local to take. Boston Local 182 has had an Educational, or Progressive Projection Committee for some time.

Glad to hear it, Brother Young, but the amount of good accomplished by committees of this kind will depend directly upon the activity displayed by the committee and the interest shown by the individual members of the organization. Personally, I believe that one of the very best, most effective actions an organization can take to arouse its members to the necessity for maintaining excellence in results on their screen is the checking up of the work of the individual members without the aforesaid individual members knowing that it is being done. In other words, the executive officer of the union should be given power to at any time appoint any member, or members of the union as a committee with instructions to visit different theatres, and, unknown to the operator, check up the projection, citing in their report the name of the reel, the exact time, and a description of any fault that may occur. In considering this suggestion (this is by no means the first time I have made it) remember that any fault in projection must of necessity reflect upon the operator, even though he be not to blame, and therefore, if he be a union man, upon the organization itself. If this fault is found to be due to faulty equipment or other thing beyond the control of the operator, then such action as seems advisable may be taken.

You Can Search Me.

L. P. Gregory, New York City, says:

> I have a copy of the opening night program of the new Rialto theatre, 42nd Street and Seventh Avenue, New York City. I notice therein pictures of the musical director, the concert manager; also of the personal assistant to Mr. Rothapfel, of the manager, of the treasurer, of the director of publicity, and a picture of S. L. Rothapfel. I don't, however, find any picture of the chief operator. Why is this? In a list together with the head usher, master of properties, chief electrician, first assistant electrician, and second assistant electrician, I do find the name of the chief operator, though not that of the assistant. What is the idea? It seems to me the public would at least be as much interested in the personal appearance of the man who puts on the picture as that of the treasurer and the director of publicity. What do you think about it, Brother Richardson?

I don't think about it at all. The operator is merely the boob who puts on the show; he is the man who does more than any other individual to send the audience away pleased or otherwise; outside of that he does not amount to much. Seriously, however, this whole thing probably, away down at its roots, hinges on the fact that the operator is not spectacular. He don't wear a plug hat, nor does he appear before the assembled multitude in a claw-hammer, or even in uniform, and I believe that is the reason he gets little or no recognition in matters of this kind. It really is, however, just a little bit surprising that the projecting end receives even less consideration than the first and second assistant electricians.

From Cleveland.

L. J. Shafranek, Cleveland, Ohio, writes:

> Well, you are back at your desk again. No doubt your trip proved profitable, and I hope that operators and the business in general will benefit therefrom. I myself find that in our trip out to the National carbon factory I learned a whole lot more about carbons in their making than I thought I had. I wish also to thank you for your comments or our operating room. Possibly you did not know I also work for McGowan at the Cameraphone theater, but I felt a little bit peeved to see only one of the operators, Brother Noonan, get all the credit. Besides had I not received your photo from the World when I purchased the second edition of the Handbook you would not have found it on the wall. Your remarks, however, with regard to Brother Noonan are not in the least exaggerated. He's a good man, is Noonan, and deserving of all you said. It was myself who sent you that cushion top with the I. A emblem a few years ago.
> Attached hereto find drawing of the belt tightener you saw on my machine. If it meets your approval you can possibly benefit some operator who cares to make one for himself by publishing it.

The belt tightener is O. K. Yes, I think we all learned considerable about carbon manufacture that day. The trip through the plant was both of interest and profit. My visit to your theater was a short one and, of course, I did not get all the details, which accounts for my apparent neglect to mention the "other operator," who it now appears was yourself. Apologies.

Can't Do Without Them.

William F Reed, treasurer of the Harrodsburg Amusement Co., Harrodsburg, Ky., says:

> Enclosed find check for $4.00 for which kindly mail me the new Handbook. I am glad it is out, for I have been waiting patiently for it. The Moving Picture World and the Handbook are two things the exhibitor absolutely cannot do without and stay in sight of the procession. I am operator for this concern, as well as its treasurer, and while we are, to quote Luke McLuke, "small town hicks," still anybody who can beat our picture for clearness and steadiness will have to leave their couch very early in the morning; at least that is what travelling men and strangers say; also in my trips to Cincinnati and Louisville I have not seen any better picture, though to be sure there are nicer houses. If you are ever down this way on your go-devil just switch around into the oldest town west of the Allegheny Mountains and we will not run you away from the box office, but will take genuine pleasure in filling every one of your hollow teeth with spring chicken and old country ham, not to mention the trimmings. In closing I wish you every success in the world in your fight for the operator and the moving picture industry.

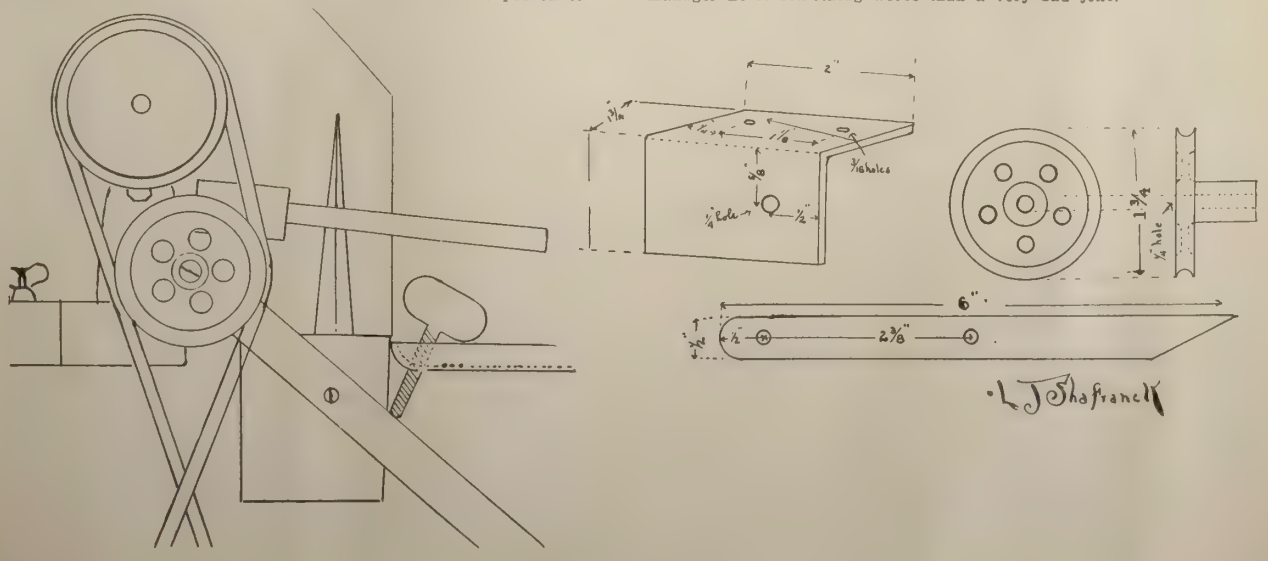
Man, man! if you knew how good that old country ham sounds to Yours Truly, you would not have taken the risk of offering it as a bait. I am particularly partial to that sort of fodder. Don't know when I will be able to come to Harrodsburg, but there's no telling what may happen in the future.

Some Job.

From Tennessee comes the following. The name of the town and theater is suppressed, because I could not publish such an article and give the names without knowing the facts to be absolutely correct, and I cannot go to Tennessee to investigate. Tennessee writes:

> If a certain theater in this town should happen to advertise for an operator, here is what any brother who applies will be up against. First you must work with a negro. He threads and starts the machine and you do the rest. They want you to come down in the morning and pass around hand-bills, and paint signs on the sidewalk. If the colored man does anything wrong you are the goat. They won't allow you to associate with their competitor or his operator. If you are not kept busy at the theater proprietor owns a garage—get me?

The foregoing is given as illustrating the very vague and decidedly hazy ideas some small town managers and owners have of the responsibility of the position of operator. It would be, I think, a waste of good ink to comment on such an utterly foolish proposition as this. The "manager" in question would do exceedingly well to stick to his garage. He may be a garage man par excellence, but as a theater manager he is something worse than a very bad joke.



Spherical Aberration.

The following article contributed by Ralph W. Martin, Los Angeles, Cal., is presented for the consideration of our readers. It will be observed that Brother Martin's drawing sustains the conclusion we have long since arrived at, namely: that the practical effect of spherical aberration is unevenness of illumination at the spot and screen.

In Fig. 1, a pin-point crater is shown focussed at the aperture, and the effect of spherical aberration in the condensers is shown, somewhat exaggerated in order to make the meaning more clear. It is also necessary to use a pin-point crater to prevent a confusion of lines which would make the drawing unintelligible.

Now it is well known that a properly corrected objective lens will focus every separate point on the film to a corresponding position on the screen. This idea has been faithfully carried out in Fig. 1, in the construction of the secondary beam, or the throw, although the screen is so far distant that it cannot be shown in the drawing.

It is noticed that the conditions produced by spherical abberration in the condenser system, or the primary beam, are carried forward and again reproduced in the secondary beam. Section A A reproduced at A^1 A^1, and B B at B^1 B^1.

In most cases when using a short focus objective, the shutter cannot be placed back much farther than B^1 B^1, where the beam has already begun to diverge. Also, with long focus objectives, position A^1 A^1 is really the narrowest section of the total beam; but the concentrated portion at the center continues to narrow down toward B^1 B^1, but the shutter cannot most effectively be placed there on account of the spread of the rays at the outer edges of the beam.

If the reader will examine those diagrams of the beam which show no spherical aberration in the condensers, there will be found a shutter position similar to A^1 A^1 which is ideal from every point of view.

In this position the beam has a minimum thickness and in passing through it the shutter blade simultaneously cuts off the light from every point on the film and the shadow of the edge of the blade does not show on the screen. The cut-off and cut-on of the shutter is thus made a true dissolving or fading action which is much sought after by machine manufacturers as a means for reducing flicker. Hence another boost for corrected condensers.

From San Diego.

K. G. Bush, secretary Broadway Amusement Company, San Diego, Cal., writes as follows:

The writer has recently received a copy of the new Handbook. It surely should prove of great benefit to any one connected with motion pictures. We are having some difficulty in getting sufficient light on the screen at our Broadway theater. We use Ernemann projectors, and have found them to be very satisfactory indeed. The two machines now in use have run steadily for a year and three-quarters, with absolutely no trouble, and seem to be still in first class condition. We use ¼ inch National top and ⅝ inch American Bio lower carbons. Our success with this combination is very good. We ordinarily draw 60 amperes D. C., but can go as high as 72. Condenser sizes are 6½ and 7½ Kleine French condensers; E. F. of objective 100 feet. We take current directly from the mains, using no economizer or transverter. The screen is plaster and is treated with a preparation put out by Win Browning of Los Angeles, which seems to give very good results, as the picture shows but little eye strain from the front seats, with a marked reduction of distortion from the side seats. The house seats 950, and is 60 feet wide; front row of seats is about 20 feet from the screen. Until recently we used Paramount service, but now are in the open market, using the best from the World, Metro and Bluebird. The main trouble, as stated above, is that the picture is rather dark, particularly when running the heavily tinted films, such as Lasky frequently puts out. If you can offer any suggestions that would tend to improve this condition we would be glad indeed to hear from you and pay your fee for same. The objective lens diameter is 1 9/16 inches; distance from its rear surface to the film when picture is in focus on the screen is 3 11/16 inches, and the extreme distance possible to get the film from the apex of the front condenser is 14½ inches. Apex of condenser is now about 11½ inches from the film.

It requires but a glance at Table No. 1, page 141 of the Handbook to show that this condition is very, very bad indeed. In the first place you should pull your lamphouse back just as far as you can get it. In the second place, in order to avoid light loss with your present objective lens it would be necessary to get the lamphouse back so that the apex of the front condensing lens would be about 25 inches from the film. That, however, would be a very extreme condition. You need objective lenses of larger diameter. Looking at Table 1, page 141 of the Handbook, you will see that with 14 inches between the apex of the front condenser and the film, and a 3 11/16 inch back focus you would have to have a lens 2⅛ inches in diameter in order to accommodate the light ray. Very likely the only way you could get that would be to purchase what is known as the Gundlach No. 2 lens, or a Crown or Bausch and Lomb lens of equal diameter, and then stop it down to the requirement of the table, namely: 2⅛ inches. This, of course, would mean considerable expense. But it also means considerable expense to continue wasting a large percentage of your light, and that is exactly what will happen just as long as you keep the lens you have working under the conditions the deficiences of your projection machine make necessary. Possibly you may be able to so change the machine table that you can get the lamphouse back where it belongs. I do not remember just how the Ernemann table is built, therefore cannot say whether that would be practicable or not.

As to the carbons I would call your attention to the new National metal cored negative carbons.

You say you are drawing "60 amperes D. C." without any economizer or transverter. Well if it is D. C. you could not use an economizer or transverter, so I assume that is a typographical error, and that you are pulling 60 amperes A. C. If that is the case and you can go as high as 72 amperes A. C. why the screen effect of 72 amperes A. C. would be practically the same as 35 to 40 amperes D. C., except in the quality of the light. Use of alternating current is, for projection, altogether out of date, and you should have a current rectifying device of some kind, which I note in an unpublished paragraph of your letter you are going to install.

Lens System.

W. Becker, Schenectady, N. Y., says:

Please advise me as to my lens system, basing the advice upon the following data. Objective lens 5½ E. F.; diameter opening of objective lens 1 7/16 inches; back focus 3¼ inches; width of picture 14 feet 4½ inches; distance lens to screen 87½ feet; drawing 50 amperes A. C. through an economizer using a Gold Fibre Screen. Please don't ask me to get a lens of larger diameter as I just simply know the firm won't do it, therefore I am trying to make the best of what I have.

Brother Becker if you have a Handbook, as you ought to have, you could settle all this for yourself. Please understand that is not a slam at you, but merely calling your attention to the fact that you ought to have one of the books, and be prepared to deal with problems of this kind yourself. You have given me all the necessary information except the distance from the apex of the front condenser to the film when the lamphouse is pulled back as far as you can get it. If you have a Handbook, turning to table No. 1, page 141, look down the left hand column until you come to 1 7/16, in the ninth horizontal division, then follow across that division to the right and you will find 2.88 to be the longest back focus that diameter objection will accommodate without light loss, provided you can get 22 inches between the aperture and the apex of the front condenser. Assuming you can get that distance, you would have to have a lens 1⅝ inches in diameter in order to avoid light loss. As the matter now lies the only thing you can do is pull your lamphouse back as far as you can get it, and if that distance exceeds 20 inches use two 7½ inch condensers; if it exceeds 16 inches, and is less than 20 inches use a 6½ and a 7½ inch condenser; if it is less than 17 inches use two 6½ inch condensers, placing the condensing lenses so that they almost, but not quite touch each other. You say your firm won't get another lens. Well, perhaps not, but they will pay for one anyhow, because the lens you have will give constant light loss, and they will have to pay for that loss in the form of electric bills, so that, in course of time, they will have paid the price of a new lens without getting anything at all in return, therefore the sensible thing to do is get a lens of larger diameter. If you will tell me the distance between the apex of the front condenser and the film when the lamphouse is back as far as it will go, I will tell you what diameter lens you must have to avoid light loss, or if you have a Handbook you can get that information yourself from Table 1, page 141.

It Would Work.

E. Paterson, Tama, Iowa, answers question 132, and says:

Although this is my first letter to the department I have been a reader of its columns for some time, and find therein some very great helps to the operator. I procured the new Handbook and it sure contains some great dope, particularly in the optical and electrical end of things. Is there any possible way by means of which two arcs can be lit off one Fort Wayne compensarc? The idea is, when nearing the end of the reel on one machine, to strike the other arc, and thereby obtain a perfect change. The way we have it now is: the two arcs are connected in series, with a single pole, double throw switch arranged to short circuit either lamp. I could find nothing with regard to this in the new Handbook. With our present arrangement, when near the end of one reel I freeze the carbons on arc No. 2 and open the short circuit switch, as per diagram. Then when we change over the switch is thrown to short circuit the other lamp.

Your arrangement, Brother Paterson, is perhaps as good as any I have seen. The only way you can burn two arcs off one compensarc is to place them in series. The only trouble with this is that the added resistance of the second arc decreases the amperage considerably, which of course shows on the screen. The way Brother Paterson has the thing rigged up is: he connects one leg of the compensarc secondary to the lower carbon of arc No. 1, and the other secondary leg with the lower carbon of arc No. 2. He then connects the upper carbons of both lamp one and two with the center binding post of a double-throw, single pole switch. From one end of this switch he connects directly to any point on the wire running to the lower carbon arm of lamp No. 1, while the other end of the switch is connected to the other wire leading to the lower carbon arm of lamp No. 2. Sketch this out and you will see how it works. It is a very good arrangement.

Official Errors.

The powers that be in Sioux City, Iowa, have, evidently without consulting any competent authority, evolved a new building code which, insofar, as it applies to moving picture theater operating rooms, has only one thing to recommend it, viz: it might be worse. Here are some of the most glaring errors.

> "The 'booth' shall be completely enclosed with fireproof construction, or shall have a substantial braced frame of structural steel with riveted or bolted connections. The door must be of corresponding construction, and must be substantially hung with hinges in an iron angle frame and must be self-closing."

For the benefit of those who evolved this particular clause let me say that a gravity closing, sliding door, is, where conditions permit of its installation, much to be preferred as against the hinged door.

> "There shall not be more than two openings in the 'booth" for each moving picture machine, one for the operator and one for the machine. The opening for the operator's view (they mean observation port, but don't seem to know its proper designation, Ed) shall not exceed 48 square inches, and the opening for the machine shall not exceed 64 square inches."

This is indeed beautiful. The opening for the observation lens need not, in most instances, exceed 9 square inches, with an opening of no greater size for the stereopticon, if one there be, yet they allow 64 square inches, although they limit the area of the observation port to 48 square inches, which operates to seriously and needlessly hamper the work of the operator. I have not time to go into this matter and explain to the Sioux City authorities all the reasons why the limiting of the observation port to 48 square inches is not only utterly needless, totally foolish, and entirely bad. It probably wouldn't do any good anyhow. They evidently simply copied this particular thing from some one of the other multitude of ordinances containing an idiotic clause of similar import instead of consulting those who are presumed to know something about subjects of this kind, as, for instance, the Sioux City Operators' Union, or the projection department of the Moving Picture World.

> "Shutters shall be held open by a small combustible cord in series with a fusible link at each opening, and one on the main cord so arranged that the link is suspended directly over the film when in the slide of the apparatus. The cord shall be so placed that the shutters may be easily released by hand."

This section is very loosely drawn, and it would take considerable guessing to determine what is meant by "in the slide of the apparatus." There is one item in this particular section which is distinctly good, viz: where it says that the master cord (they don't call it master-cord because they probably do not know the proper name for it) be so arranged that the link is suspended directly over the film when in the slide of the apparatus, meaning, presumably, over the aperture of the machine.

> "There shall not be more than two shelves, 12 inches wide and 4 feet long. * * * All shelves must be of slate, steel, or other fireproof construction, or if constructed of wood shall be at least ⅞ inch thick, and entirely covered with tin, with lock joints, and shall be supported by iron brackets."

Piffle! Piffle! And then some more piffle. The operating room is presumed to be thoroughly fireproof. Will the owl-eyed wiseacres who promulgated this particular piece of wisdom inform me what earthly difference a couple of hard wood shelves, or even pine shelves, for that matter, would make in the case of film fire, even though they be not "covered with tin with lock joints?"- Even supposing these two chunks of wood did catch fire. The little additional heat and smoke they would make would not amount to two whoops in the new Jerusalem one way or the other. That "cover it with tin with lock joints" is too ridiculous to receive serious consideration.

> "Every permanent moving picture 'booth' must be provided with an air inlet in two opposite sides of the 'booth' for supplying fresh air to the operator. Each inlet must be 12 inches long by 3 inches high, the bottom located 3 inches above the floor of the 'booth.' All inlets must be covered with wire netting of not greater than ¼ inch mesh, and must be securely fastened to the covering of the 'booth' by means of metal strips and bolts or screws."

Nothing said, you will observe, about connecting these outlets by duct with the outer air. Assuming the operating room (not "booth") to be where it usually is misplaced, viz: at the top of the highest gallery in the house, the operator would be regaled, NOT with fresh air, but with second hand atmosphere which had already been used by the audience and for which they had no further use, the same being quite possibly beautifully flavored with garlic, onions and other more or less delightful odors. The "wire over the opens" is probably copied from the Massachusetts law. I have never been able to understand just why this wire is required. Possibly, however, it is to prevent the operator from trickling out of the opening during the hot summer months, which he might possibly do when you consider the following clause in the Omaha law:

> "Near the center of the top of the booth shall be a circular opening of at least 8 inches in diameter provided with a sheet iron flange securely fastened to the roof covering and made perfectly tight to prevent smoke getting out. Securely fastened to this flange shall be a vent pipe of sheet metal not less than 8 inches in diameter which shall lead to the outside of the building or into a fireproof flue. Such metal pipe shall be protected or spaced where it passes near any woodwork according to the provisions of this code governing stove pipes.
> "Inlets and outlets as above described may be omitted if booth has window through outside wall, supplying equivalent natural ventilation."

Why is it imperatively necessary that the opening shall be circular? The air would go out a square hole just as well, wouldn't it? But the absurd part is the "8 inches in diameter." For the information of the Sioux City law makers let me say that the absolute minimum diameter should be exactly twice that, and unless a fan is required in the flue then the diameter should be not less than 18 or 20 inches. Leaving ventilation out of the question, what earthly chance would there be of the smoke and gases from a film fire passing out through an 8 inch pipe? With that 8 inch pipe stunt, instead of the gases and smoke passing away in case of fire it would generate so rapidly that it would very quickly be forced out around the sides of the shutters covering every opening in the room and when that happens you just watch the audience pile up in a heap. You will also observe there is no provision made for a damper weighted so as to be normally held open, the same only to be allowed to be held shut by attaching to the master-cord. You will also observe that even this little, piffling vent pipe may be omitted if there is a window through the outside wall. These law makers do not know that in order to get good projection the operating room must be dark, and therefore the window in the outside wall must be closed and made light tight or else effectually darkened by means of a properly constructed shutter, the installation of which the law does not require. Therefore if an operator knew his business and had this window closed, in case of fire the condition would be very much worse than bad.

> "Every rheostat used in any moving picture 'booth' must be mounted on a slate insulator properly supported on steel supports properly fastened to the floor."

The law makers do not know that a rheostat should, if placed in the operating room at all, be put as high as you can get it so that the heat will pass directly out of the vent flue without first parboiling the operator. But I forgot that the Sioux City operating rooms won't have a vent flue, merely a sort of glorified metal wheat straw, so it won't make much difference where the rheostat is placed.

> "All the machines must be securely fastened to the floor to prevent accidental overturning or moving of same."

Ah Hah! At last we have before us an example of almost more than human wisdom. Spike your machines down, gentlemen! The railroad company will doubtless loan you a few spikes. Imagine accidentally overturning a Baird projection machine! Seriously, there is nothing wrong with this particular provision except its absurdity. It certainly would be an example of a solid ivory top theatre manager or operator who would not fasten his projection machine down, or at least so anchor it that it would not be accidentally moved by some one falling against it.

This whole proposition is but a repetition of the utterly foolish acts of other law making bodies, who, when a thing of this kind if up for action, instead of consulting some authority in matters of this kind, or the local organization of operators, proceed to copy the blunders already committed by others, and solemnly enact them into law. The only thing that can be said for the Sioux City law is that I have seen worse ones—considerably worse. The two distinctly bad features of it is the vent flue, and the needless limiting of the size of the observation port to an opening which makes for inefficient work on the screen.

Wagner Converter.

John Kortiff, New York City, orders a Handbook, and says:

> Regarding operating room dimensions I would like to suggest 9 x 9 feet x 8 feet high for two machines. The present law, which compels a seven foot height, is not sufficient, particularly for a tall operator and big machines in the summer time. My room is 9 x 9 with a 7 foot ceiling, and I find the 9 x 9 part very comfortable, since I can walk around both machines easily; but the ceiling is too low.
>
> Am using Speer carbons since 1916, ¾ cored above and ⅝ cored for the bottom. I do not like the cored lower so well as the ⅝ solid Bio, but it is difficult to get solid carbons. The ¾ upper I find to be excellent. There is no fault in them.
>
> screen. The picture is as bright as can be.
> Am pulling 50 amperes through a Wagner converter, which in two years has not given me even a little bit of trouble. Have an 80 foot throw with an 11 foot picture on an Atmospheric

Yes, I agree with you that a 7 foot ceiling is too low; 8 feet ought to, where it is possible to get it, be the minimum. I also agree with your 9 x 9 dimensions. More than that I won't say until others have been heard from.

As to the "Atmospheric Screen," until the manufacturers show and demonstrate to this department that they have an article of merit I cannot comment intelligently. If their screen is a really good one it is to be presumed they would make that fact known.

You had better be careful or the Wagner people will get angry and bite you for talking about their outfit in that way

Camp Fire Pictures.

C. A. H., Zanesville, Ohio, writes:

I have been a consistent reader of your department since its inception and can truthfully say that I have derived from it more benefit and secured more knowledge on the subject of cinematography than from any other source I have been able to find. I have read several books on the subject which I secured from the local libraries here, but none of them have the real "dope" as have your articles in the World.

Have been an amateur photographer for several years and about a year ago became interested in motion pictures." I bought a camera and have made some pretty fair stuff, mostly local pictures for exhibitors and occasionally sending some stuff to the weeklies. Now I want a little information direct. On Decoration Day I am going to make some pictures at the Soldiers' Home in the northern part of the state, parade and the unveiling of a monument, etc. There are to be some exercises in the evening which I want to get. The idea is, I believe, that the old soldiers are to have a campfire and swap yarns as they did in '61. This is part of the program and I think by the use of magnesium flares I can get it. I have never done this before and am writing you for the best method of procedure. What lens aperture shall I use? I have a Bosch and Lomb Zeiss F. 3.5. From whom can I get these flares?

It is certainly most gratifying to me to know my efforts are appreciated and I wish to thank you for your kind words. My stock of knowledge is absolutely free to anyone who is interested in the making of motion pictures. All you have to do is to drop me a line and I will answer your questions to the best of my ability.

Motion pictures made at night are no more difficult than those made in the day time, providing, of course, you know how to proceed. Your idea of the campfire is a good one and should make a very pleasant picture. Magnesium flares are made in four different sizes and are about the shape of a Roman candle, but a little larger in diameter. They are made to burn one-half, one, one and a half and two minutes respectively, the largest size being about twenty inches in length. For a campfire effect it would be necessary to dig a hole deep enough to allow the flare to stick out of the ground about ten inches. Then pile the wood over it in such a manner that the flame would strike a part of it and spread. Be sure and set your camera on the lee side, for if you are on the windward side and there is a breeze blowing the smoke is liable to get into the lens and spoil the picture. A tree or two near at hand would also add to the artistic effect, as would the tinting of the positive a light copper color. Use your widest lens aperture. These magnesium flares can be obtained from I. C. Newman & Company, 320 Broadway, New York City, dealers in motion picture fireworks.

No Static.

J. F. D., Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

I see by your article in the Moving Picture World that static trouble seems to be the bugbear of the majority of camera men. Would you believe if I told you I have never had a foot of static since operating a motion picture camera. Well, it's the truth. I have exposed many thousand feet of film in my camera and have never had any trouble from that source. This camera I have been using almost daily for fourteen months and I think my good luck is due to the fact that it is of nearly all metal construction. The only part that is not metal is the top and bottom and part of the side, which is of wood, and the velvet clips in the magazines. But I have my troubles, nevertheless, particularly in the finishing of my work. Most of it I send to Chicago, but am not at all satisfied with the character of the work. Could you recommend a firm there in New York who do first grade work and what are the prices? Do you think there is any possibility of the price of raw stock advancing? Cameras, chemicals, lenses, etc., have gone up, and it seems only natural that film should.

Anyone who is not troubled with static can certainly consider himself very fortunate. But when you make that statement you had better knock on wood. Fully seventy-five per cent. of retakes in the studios are necessary because of this very aggravating occurrence. There is absolutely no sure fire preventive for static, but there are many things one can do to reduce it to a minimum.

Yes, I think your luck is due to the metal construction of your camera.

I cannot recommend any particular firm here who do developing and printing. Those whose advertisements appear in this paper can be depended upon for satisfactory work.

The most of them charge five cents a foot for developing your negative and printing on positive stock.

No, I do not think there is any immediate danger of film going up in price. Only those commodities that are imported have advanced.

Mysteries of Picture Making.

The Illustrated World Magazine for May carries a number of interesting photographs taken in the finishing department of the motion picture studio.

The explanations which accompany the pictures are quite amusing to one initiated in the "mysteries of movie making" on account of the evidence ignorance of the author in the practical work of the studio.

Compensation.

This word compensation is the only one I could think of to head a few lines to thank the many correspondents whom I have never met except through these columns.

This department has been a labor of love with me—it has been hammered out in the spare moments that I could grab from a busy life of bread and butter grubbing, and had it not been for the encouragement of the letters you have written me I would not have been able to keep it up.

It was with many misgivings that I wrote an article (Bigger Salaries for Cameramen, March 25, 1916) and took a whack at some of the failings that beset our profession. I feel mighty proud and yet mighty humble, too, at the many letters of appreciation which were sent me and more than all else do I appreciate the Honorable Life Membership presented me by the Static Club of Los Angeles and the letter which they sent regarding the article.

That's what I mean by compensation, the feeling that my efforts have helped my fellow craftsmen and that they have sanctified my labor with their approbation.

Almost in the same mail with the letter from the Static Club came one from John MacIntosh, Secretary of the Royal Photographic Society of Great Britain, informing me that at the last meeting of the executive council I had been elected to the coveted honor of a Fellow in that society, the highest of its kind in the world, but I assure you that I have not half the pleasure and pride in the decision of that august body that I have in the approval of my fellow workers in the great field of cinematography.

It is my fondest hope that I shall continue to merit the kind expressions you have accorded me and that with riper experience I shall ever grow stronger in your hearts and in your work.

It is only with your good will and your co-operation that I can do this. May it ever increase. Selah!

Another Amateur Camera Builder.

Since publishing the notice in regard to the camera made by Mr. Conrad Thiele, Mr. Fred Keys of Sapulpa, Oklahoma, has sent photographs and a short description of a camera which he constructed from the mechanism of a Kinograph camera and a Williamson claw movement.

The original camera which he used for this construction was a small one of one hundred feet capacity, in which the movement was largely constructed from die castings and which would, consequently, not stand a great amount of wear. For this reason he substituted the Williamson claw movement, which he purchased separately.

It is perhaps pertinent to say that the Williamson claw movement to be used in the construction of either cameras or printers may be purchased from G. Gennert, 13th street, New York City.

He enlarged the capacity of the camera from one hundred to two hundred feet by constructing a new and heavier case of mahogany and other hard woods.

He says: "I have made several films, one 2,800 feet long and have had very good luck, doing the developing and printing myself, printing with a home-made printer that I constructed from a No. 5 Power's head run by an electric motor."

It will be remembered that this is the same type of head which Mr. Thiele used in the construction of his camera.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by Clarence E. Sinn and S. M. Berg

Musical Setting for "Reggie Mixes In."

Released June 11th by the Triangle Film Corporation.

Suggestions prepared by S. M. Berg (by special arrangement with G. Schirmer, Inc., Music Publishers, New York).

THIS "Musical Suggestion Cue Sheet" is not designed to solve every possible musical requirement of the film, but is intended as a partial solution of the problem—what to play for the picture. It has proven to be of great assistance to the leader, not only by relieving to a degree the tedium of rehearsals, but by assisting materially in overcoming those conditions encountered when the film is not available until the hour of performance.

Musical Suggestion Cue Sheets can be obtained (free of charge) by managers from their local exchanges in advance of the date of release. This will afford to the progressive leader an opportunity to acquaint himself with the general character of the film drama he is to portray with his orchestra.

Together with the suggested music at the title or descriptive cues where it is to be played the tempo or characteristic is given so that the leader can select or substitute any or all of the numbers from his own library, thereby avoiding any financial outlay though still carrying out the interpretation.

The timing of the picture is based on a speed of 15 minutes to a thousand feet. The time indications will help the leader to anticipate the various cues, which may consist of the printed sub-title (marked T) or a described action (marked D). For instance: 10½ T "A new sort of girl" is a sub-title and is printed reading matter on the screen. But 59 D "Fight continues" is a description of action.

Reggie, a wealthy young man, proposes to Dorothy Fleming of the fast set in the faint hope she will refuse him; but she accepts. Aware that she is shallow and flirts with another he does not consider himself bound. While riding in his automobile he meets a new sort of girl, a dancer at Gallagher's saloon. Disguised as a tough he becomes the "bouncer" at the saloon. In a series of exciting adventures he proves the worth of the girl and the story closes with their hope of future happiness.

This picture is a comedy drama with many scenes in Gallagher's saloon showing girls singing at the tables. The whole character of the story is allegro in action.

Note particularly: 1¼ cuckoo clock, 7½ automobile effects. At 23, 26¼, 43, 56 to 61¾ are scenes of fighting, struggles, smashing of windows, furniture and shooting.

The THEME selected is "Love is like a firefly"—Friml.

Time schedule: 69¼ minutes (five reels—about 4,650 feet.)

To the Lone Pianist.

By S. M. Berg.

The writer is pleased to note that readers have found the articles under this heading of assistance to them. Among some correspondence received the following letter appears to be so earnest that I feel it deserves special attention:

Dear Sir: I have been reading your articles in the "Moving Picture World" and also your Music Cues for current releases. I would like to say a few words in appreciation.

I am employed in a theater seating about one thousand, using a program of Paramount, Metro, Triangle and World pictures, with a change of program daily. I have neither orchestra or organ, but am using straight piano. So you see your articles are of particular interest to me.

I have great difficulty in securing music that sounds well for piano alone and at the same time is appropriate for pictures. I would appreciate it very much if you would send me a list of music I can use.

Another thing I am unable to do is to use a theme for a picture. It seems to me when I play the same thing thing two or three times in the same picture people will think I am repeating too much. I suppose if I played an organ and used the different stops, such as violin, cello, flute, etc., it would seem different. I would surely be pleased to hear any suggestions you would be able to make.

Thanking you in advance for your valuable assistance and trusting your very interesting articles may continue to appear in "The World," I am,

Very truly yours,
RETTA HELLMAN.

The Lyric Theater, Covington, Ky.

This valued reader has asked for help and information on a subject that is probably confronting others who have only a piano to interpret the pictures.

The following suggestions, it is hoped, will be of assistance to others who have similar difficulty as outlined in the above letter.

There should be no trouble in acquiring enough suitable music for the piano, for a perusal of the catalogues of the various music publishers will convince the ambitious player that there is no dearth of piano music.

It is simply a question of becoming acquainted with the works of the different composers, but before acquiring the music of the great masters one must realize that theoretical training and practice are necessary before satisfactory results can be obtained from the best music.

Czerny, Cramer, Clementi and Bach are composers whose works are absolutely essential for the pianist who hopes to attain success playing for pictures. An hour a day spent on technical studies will do wonders for the serious student. Five-finger exercises, arpeggios, scales, chromatic scales, and octave scales, practiced slowly and carefully, will do much towards improving one's technic so that an appreciation of the best music will be made easy for the painstaking and conscientious student.

If the reader who wishes to acquire a list of the practical theoretical studies and exercises that will benefit him will send an outline of just what he has accomplished in music the writer will be glad to furnish him with a list of studies that will prove helpful.

Few pianists playing for pictures realize the pleasure derived from playing the best music. Your work, which at present may seem irksome, can be made highly enjoyable and interesting if a program of meritorious music is selected and arranged.

There is a veritable mine of piano music and there is no reason why every scene and every phase of action cannot be fitted by the alert and intelligent pianist whose aim is to play the pictures well.

For example, what could be finer for a plaintive scene than the second movement from Haydn's 13 symphony; or the Andante from Brahm's 3 symphony?

For an outdoor scene, wooded dells and water falls, what could be more appropriate than Chopin's Etude, Op. 10, No. 5?

Several of Chopin's waltzes fit the pictures well, especially the slow movements, which are exceptionally melodious and pleasing to the ear.

Chopin's nocturnes should not be overlooked when selecting music for pictures, nor his mazurkas, some which fit certain scenes.

Grieg's music is suitable for pictures, especially the Peer Gynt suite, the "Dwarf Dance," the "Butterfly," several of his nocturnes, and that beautiful masterpiece of tone coloring—"To Spring."

The average pianist must be patient and willing to practice. Then he will be able to master the difficulties in many of these pieces. When this point is reached the pianist's work becomes a pleasure instead of a hard and unceasing grind, as many find it.

He who spends time acquiring a technic that will help understand the best music will be amply repaid for all time and labor spent, especially when he begins to appreciate the works of the great masters.

It is well to vary your program with works of the modern composers. Rudolf Friml and Homer Bartlett have written some exceptionally fine numbers that are suitable for pictures.

Some of Friml's pieces suited for picture work are: Egyptian Dance Op. 41, Russian Romance Op. 30, Minuetto Op. 28 and Mignonette, a delightful little number in E major.

He who wishes the best in waltzes can find none better than those by Strauss and Waldteufel. Paul Lincke has written several waltzes that are suitable for pictures.

The works of Beethoven, Brahms, Rubinstein, Mozart, Haydn, and other great masters can be purchased in volumes. Tschaikowsky's music is well suited for picture work, many of his pieces being in a minor strain.

Parts of Beethoven's sonatas fit pictures exceedingly well. Mendelssohn's Songs Without Words are also appropriate.

Two valuable volumes for the pianist who wishes to play the best music are:

1. Anthology of Piano Classics—A collection of 28 selected compositions by Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Field, Handel, Haydn, Mandelssohn, Mozart, Schubert, Schumann and Weber.

2. Anthology of Modern Classics for the Piano—32 compositions by Brahms, Dvorak, Grieg, Henselt, Jensen, Liszt, Moskowski, Paderewski, Raff, Rubinstein, Saint-Saens, Schutt, Schytte, Sgambati, Sinding and Tschaikowsky.

Carefully fingered and revised, these two volumes are an indispensable and important acquisition to any pianist's library.

THEME.

This phase of musical interpretation has been dealt with in the issues of the Moving Picture World, January 15, 22, and February 12, 1916, when a series of articles, "How to Play the Theme" and "Themes," and their appropriate usage were discussed in detail.

To the lone pianist taking up this new problem—it possibly may seem that they are repeating themselves unnecessarily, but it should be realized that you are not a soloist, and to get the best results from your theme—it is advisable to vary the tempo occasionally or play slower or faster according to the action on the screen.

One of the successful musical plays of the season owes much of its success and popularity to the fact that the theme (love motif) is repeated over and over.

The theme selected should be of a melodious character—and always played with thought and expression.

In one of the articles I dissected a score which has been prepared for a Triangle production. This demonstrated very clearly how much repetition is made by those playing the film.

Many readers may recall the theme in "The Birth of a Nation" and how frequently it was played.

We have just had presented to us Thomas H. Ince's wonderful picture 'Civilization" and "The Fall of a Nation." A special music score has been written for the latter by Victor Herbert. It will be of great interest to follow the musical interpretations of these features.

It is mentioned in the above letter that if the pianist used an organ with its many varieties of colorings and shadings—that the repetition of the theme would not become monotonous. There are various ways of playing the theme—and an intelligent understanding of its importance can be realized in the fact that every cue-sheet prepared for the big features is never without its theme.

The theme is usually an andante movement of moderate tempo and should be played smoothly and legato. Develop a singing style to your playing and handle the theme in a clean and tuneful manner. Then it will not become monotonous, especially if it is a piece of recognized merit.

CHARLES HILL MAILES WITH UNIVERSAL.

Following his performance in Otis Turner's production of "The Seekers," starring Flora Parker DeHaven, Charles Hill Mailes was engaged as a member of the Universal City stock company to play leading character holes.

Mr. Mailes is one of the cleverest men at make-up in motion pictures, besides being one of the best actors. He was for six years with the Biograph before joining the Universal and his work has made a decidedly favorable impression.

Ivy Close Company is Complete

Robert Ellis to Direct Famous Beauty—Henry Murdock and William McKey in Strong Company.

THE first definite announcement concerning the organization that will produce Ivy Close comedies came from the Kalem Company this week with the news that Robert Ellis had been chosen to direct the new subjects. The famous English star has already begun work before the camera at the Jacksonville studio, and Kalem officials are enthusiastic concerning the outlook for the coming comedies.

That the company to support Miss Close will be of all-star proportions is indicated by the drafting of Henry Murdock, the acrobatic comedian who became a screen star over night in Sis Hopkins comedies, for the new subjects. On Murdock's shoulders will rest the principal farce by-play in support of Miss Close.

William McKey, who for three seasons played the title role in "David Harum" throughout the country, is another comedian of prominence to be secured for the Ivy Close productions. Mr. McKey has been prominent on the screen during the past winter in feature productions and will also be remembered as a Kalem favorite a few years ago. In addition to his three seasons with "David Harum," McKey gained notice on the stage in the title role of "Eben Holden," in the Charles Frohman production of which he appeared for a season. McKey gained fame throughout the country as the Sheriff in "Pudd'nhead Wilson," a role he played for five seasons.

Robert Ellis, who will stage the new comedies, is reckoned among the most valued members of Kalem's producing staff. Before taking the directorial reins for the first time, two years ago, Ellis was for years one of the most popular of screen players. His screen productions for Kalem have included many of that organization's most successful multiple-reel productions, many of the Broadway Favorites productions presenting prominent stage players being found in the list. The Sis Hopkins comedies staged under his direction have brought him into notice as a comedy producer.

NOVEL ADVERTISING FOR PARAMOUNT EXHIBITORS.

Scraps of wall paper were effectively utilized by the Regent theater, Alameda, Cal., for a novelty in advertisements during the recent engagement of Marguerite Clark in "The Prince and the Pauper," a Famous Players production for Paramount pictures. The announcement which the scraps of paper carried is reprinted in the "Talking It Over" column edited by William Walker Hines for Paramount exhibitors in Paramount Progress. It reads:

"We are tearing paper off the walls of the Regent theater to make room for the crowds who will want to see little Marguerite Clark in 'The Prince and the Pauper.'"

A small cut of Marguerite Clark was used and the printing was attractively done. Any exhibitor can obtain bits of wall paper from a paper hanger at a nominal cost and this kind of advertisement, because it is unique, may be used upon occasion very effectively as Paramount Progress points out. Big type and few words should be the rule, however, as the paper is not particularly good for printing and small type cannot be read.

FILMING AN EXPRESS COMPANY.

The American Express Company, having reached years of youthful discretion, has had itself photographed—collectively speaking, of course. Imbued with a desire to see itself as others see it, the company engaged a motion picture camera, cast its officials for "leads" and subordinates for lesser parts, set the scenes, cried "camera" in the most approved film voice, and the machine began to grind out some 6,000 feet of film. The picture is decidedly interesting as showing the many commercial uses to which motion pictures can be put. The American Express Company intends to use this film for "interior publicity" purposes; that is, to interest its thousands of employees in all parts of the country. Eventually, it may show the film to the public.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY EMPLOYE KILLED.

Miss Nellie Phillips, a bookkeeper employed in the General Film Company branch office at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., was killed Saturday, June 3, when a street car in which she was riding was struck by a train.

Miss Phillips had been employed in the Wilkes-Barre office for over two years and her efficiency and fidelity were highly appreciated by the General Film Company.

Motion Picture Educator

Conducted by REV. W. H. JACKSON and PROF. HARDIN LUCAS.

A MINISTER'S ADVICE TO MINISTERS.

UNDER the title of "The Moving Pictures—Their Relation to Religion and Morals" a clergyman has recently addressed his co-workers as to the value of the moving pictures. After referring to the fact that the picture industry has become the fifth in the United States and that the financial results—"a veritable gold mine"—have enriched many worthy and some unworthy people; also pointing out effects for good and for evil of some of the "out of proportion" salaries paid to many of the "stars," the clergyman calls attention to the two sides of the uses of the pictures. The evils of the pictures are attributed first to the "commercialism" aspect as found in the desire of those whose chief object is only and alone "that which pays best" and has no regard to either quality or the effect upon the human mind or upon society. Already the pictures are of necessity classified as the "High and the Low," the latter appealing to the lower classes, somewhat segregated and fed upon the most sensational and least beneficial of subjects. The results of this class of subjects will be vicious in the extreme unless that demand which is calling for more and better stories is met.

Turning from the magnitude of the business, it is next proper to consider the influence of the moving pictures upon the people generally. First, with regard to education it promises to become the most potent of teachers. It is dwarfing the work of colleges and is demanding admission into our public schools, where it is covering the entire school curriculum. Added to these must be named all the sciences, arts, industries, sanitation, better homes, social reforms, and civic betterment, besides giving us in pictorial form the world's news, and travelogues whereby we are carried to the ends of the earth. Surely here is the teacher's best friend; and who has more far-reaching teaching possibilities than the minister? The wise teacher-minister is without doubt the one who is wide awake to the possibilities of the moving picture.

What is the relation of the motion picture to religion and morals? First, we find that the pictures have given a severe blow to the saloon and the pool parlors; they have united families in an unprecedented manner without thanks to either social or religious pretensions; this alone should win the support of the Church and auxiliary organizations. Again, they have brought a cheap, satisfying pleasure to all classes, especially those to whom a moderate price is the first consideration. Here they have put into the minds of the ministers a suggestion at least as to what course to pursue if they would capture and entertain the people.

What then is the right attitude of the Church towards this young giant? Let us be warned by past experiences. In former days in dealing with the peoples' amusements the Church has made many and fatal blunders. By standing aloof and condemning those pastimes it should have sought to direct and improve in tone; it alienated large numbers, and became greatly misunderstood. In their contentions, the ministers were never successful; they prevented nothing the people were determined to have, but, on the contrary, by branding them as scandalous and immoral they only helped to debase them. The result has been that church members pursued those things in spite of the Church's prohibition, and society was worse for the conditions thus brought about.

The churches claim to have 35,000,000 members nominally; these members represent most of the wealth and influence of the country; they can, if they choose, direct the course of the moving pictures by wise patronage of that which is best and by a friendly criticism of that which is worst. Managers are watching the crowds; let the better element demand and encourage that which is good and refuse the bad, and within one year the whole business will be revolutionized.

The pictures need the churches and moral forces—not as police, but as patrons, or even possessors—not as antagonists and arbitrary censors, but as friends and councillors. Let us seek the best good of this mighty power and help to make it the best teacher and preacher the world has ever seen or heard.

MACBETH.

This great subject in moving pictures has enriched the library of those films calculated to bring honor to the screen in general, and to the series of pictures dedicated to educational purposes in particular. Shown for the first time in the Rialto theater, New York, this week, an appreciative public, by their large numbers and intense interest, testified to their great satisfaction and pleasure that the moving picture had, if possible, immortalized one of Shakespeare's greatest productions. As a scenario writer Shakespeare is certainly in a class by himself, and with such an exponent of his art as Sir Herbert Tree everybody expected great things; and it is safe to say that the greatest expectations were more than realized. It is of especial interest to record here that in such a play as Macbeth, with "its accompaniment of fearsome killings," so great has been progress of the proper adaptation of the moving picture to most gruesome events that all the old-time crudities and horrors which shocked the average beholder and aroused the self-constituted censors have been entirely eliminated, making this film a model for all in its most admirable handling of tragic events.

There is a sense in which the film picture is superior to the spoken play, as evidenced by the mental pictures which distress Macbeth; as also by the use of similar pictures which show the growth of Macduff's suspicions. The sub-titles, or captions, are kept well in character by the use of exact quotations of Shakespeare's lines in timely and exact methods. We cannot see pictures of this description without feeling regret that we did not have the benefit of the moving pictures in our own school days. What wonderful helps in study the children of today enjoy! In Macbeth, Shakespeare as a writer becomes familiar and helpful to the scholar. Sir Herbert Tree as an exponent of histrionic art becomes a teacher, and the scenic productions revive the times portrayed, while the pictures become masterpieces for the enrichment of the youth of today.

At the close of the first presentation of Macbeth with himself in the title role Sir Herbert, in thanking his admirers for their reception of his efforts, spoke of "the educational value behind the attempt of the producers to depict the classics through the instrumentality of the motion picture." He added, "It has been said, 'Money is not the only power'; and I hope we have carried that idea into the presentation of these wonderful works of Shakespeare, not only upon the spoken stage, but also through the medium of the pictures.

"Much has been said in a slighting way of Shakespeare on the screen; but did not Charles Lamb write his 'Tales of Shakespeare'?—and I may add not without purpose. If we, too, though through the medium of the moving picture, contribute our small mite to the great cause of education, we shall not have labored without purpose. In viewing a picture such as this, the children, and perhaps others, get an underlying idea of the great work, and go to the study of it with greater understanding and a greater incentive to acquire its intellectual riches.

"This is primarily an undertaking of education, and I regard it as wonderful that we have at our command a medium through which we may teach by pleasure instead of through distasteful cramming. I deem it a wonderful privilege to be able to contribute, even in a limited way, to this modern marvel of teaching through pleasure."

There is no doubt that educational kinematography has received a great help, not only by the production by so great an actor as Sir Herbert Tree of one of the classics, but more especially by what he has said as to the educational object and purpose of such productions.

SUPERIOR FILM IN LARGER QUARTERS.

The Superior Film Manufacturing Company, of Des Moines, Ia., has taken a long-time lease on the building at 577 Seventh street. The company was organized in June, 1913. The past three years have been productive of most gratifying results.

The new home affords greatly increased facilities. Each department is under the supervision of competent men.

The New Piedmont Theater

Hugh Richardson Builds House in Atlanta at a Cost of $100,000.

THE new Piedmont theater in Atlanta, Ga., is one of the most modern moving picture theaters in the South. It is located in the center of the city, just on the adjoining corner from the Keith theater, and a few doors from the Ansley Hotel, the home of the Atlanta elite, and across the street from the Piedmont Hotel, one of the leading business hostelries of the South.

The Piedmont was erected by Hugh Richardson, an Atlanta capitalist, at a cost of more than $100,000, on a site that sold a few years ago for about $400,000. The house was erected from the plans drawn up by Architect A. Ten Eche Brown, who visited some of the larger cities to secure the most modern ideas before definitely laying out his plans.

The Piedmont was leased to Charles and Peter Mion, tile and marble contractors, for a period of fifteen years, at a rental that is said to be the highest ever recorded in that section of the country. The theater is under the management of Ralph De Bruller, a wideawake and enterprising showman, and it enjoys the patronage of the very best people in Atlanta.

The theater has the exclusive first-run service of Paramount features and has also the exclusive first-run of the George Kleine Billie Burke serial that has just been released. A feature of the daily program is the J. P. Seeburg Motion Picture Player, style V, which was purchased from the Automatic Player Piano Co., the Seeburg southern representative. The big instrument is operated by a relay of three experts, who were brought to Atlanta for the purpose, and during morning and early afternoon exhibitions the instrument works automatically to the entire satisfaction of the management and patrons.

The accompanying cut shows at the entrance of the theater Mr. Seeburg, president of the Seeburg Piano Co.; Messrs. Charles and Peter Mion, the owners; Eugene Wilder, of the Automatic Player Piano Co., and Mr. De Bruller, manager of the house. The engraving fails to convey anything like a correct impression of the beautiful interior of the Piedmont, but the photograph from which it was made was the best on hand at the time of writing.

NEW PLAYERS FOR INTERNATIONAL.

Under the leadership of Director-General Paul Dickey, the human dynamo, things have begun to hum at the International Studios. Harry Fox has been engaged to play comedies, and says that he loves screen work. Betty Howe, fresh from her comedy successes with Vitagraph, has joined the International. This vivacious young woman has a charming screen personality and is particularly attractive in comedy roles.

Irene Castle is ready to act for International. Nigel Barrie, of "You're Here and I'm Here" fame, has been engaged to play leads. Mr. Barrie is a typical outdoor man. Olive Thomas will lend her charm to the lens for the new Hearst organization.

Miss Turner Heads Mutual for June 19

"Far From the Madding Crowd" Is the First of Six Subjects Featuring Popular Player.

THE chief feature offering of the Mutual Film Corporation for the week of June 19 is "Far from the Madding Crowd," a picturization of Thomas Hardy's popular story of the same name, first of a series of six five-act Mutual star productions featuring Miss Florence Turner, popular star of the screen and stage.

Filmed under the personal direction of Larry Trimble, conceded one of the most able producers in the film industry, and with the star surrounded by an exceptional cast of players, this Mutual star production is certain to take its place with the first rank of recent feature releases. Henry Edwards, Campbell Gullan and Malcolm Cherry, all members of the Royal theater of London, are the principal players appearing in Miss Turner's support. The picture will be released June 19. "The Welsh Singer," "The First Settler's Story," "Doorsteps," "Shop Girls" and "Redeemed" are the additional feature productions starring Miss Turner which will be released in forthcoming months by the Mutual.

Miss Turner has long been recognized by motion picture critics as one of the foremost portrayers of stirring emotional parts and announcement that she is shortly to appear as a Mutual star is certain to be received with just enthusiasm by Mutual followers and the industry at large.

"The Wasted Years" is the second of the feature releases issued on June 22. This is a Mutual Masterpiece, De Luxe Edition in five acts, featuring Crane Wilbur. "The Wasted Years" was written by Wilbur and screened under the direction of Edward Broadwell.

Mutual's three-part feature is Gaumont's "The Criminal's Thumb," with Iva Shepard, "vampire" of Gaumont-Mutual releases, and Alexander Gaden appearing in the chief roles.

The two-part feature releases are led by "A Gentle Conspiracy," an American production. In this picture, released June 19, Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh have the chief roles.

"A Modern Knight," featuring Art Acord and Nita Davis, Mustang, will be released June 23. This is a stirring and unusually interesting story of the West.

The Centaur release of the week, starring Margaret Gibson and William Clifford, and bringing into play a number of the celebrated Bostock animals, will be released June 24, under the title of "The Siren of the Jungle."

Comedy releases for the week are comprised of "Ruffhouse," with Rube Miller, and "The Iron Mitt," starring Ben Turpin from the Vogue studios, for release June 20 and 25 respectively; "The House on the Hokum Hill," with Carol Halloway and John Sheehan, June 21, and "The Day's Work," starring Oral Humphrey, Beauty, June 25. "Jerry's Elopement," with George Ovey in the chief role, will be released June 23.

Mutual Weekly No. 77 and "See America First," will be released June 21, while Reel Life, the Mutual Film Magazine, will go to the public on June 25.

Miss Young Goes on Vacation

On July 16 She Will Begin Work for Her Own Company—Director Capellani Preparing Studio.

Clara Kimball Young, star and vice president of the film corporation organized in her name, has finished her last picture for her old company, World Film, and after a brief vacation will begin work on her first production, "The Common Law," an adaptation of the noted American novel by Robert W. Chambers. Before leaving for Poland Springs Miss Young will decide upon the three pictures to follow "The Common Law." While at the springs Miss Young will make a thorough study of the character of Valerie, the heroine of Chambers' novel, and on her return will be prepared to step right into the role before the camera.

In the meanwhile Albert Capellani, chief producer, will complete his adaptation of the novel and begin the construction of interiors at the studio so that there will be no delay in beginning the production on the date set, July 16. The Director General has practically decided upon the two directors who are to work under his supervision in the preparation of two pictures simultaneously. The title of the second picture will be announced within a week or two.

GEORGE R. MANN IN NEW YORK.

George R. Mann, general manager of Paramount's Washington Exchange, has returned home after a visit to the Paramount Pictures Corporation's offices, New York City.

Varied Program for General Film

New Stories and Famous Old Ones Will Be Released in Week of June 19 to 24.

IT IS not uncommon these days to find in one, two and three-reel pictures released the same day on the General Film Service program at least a dozen notable stars. You are likely to find in these reissues of famous short pictures the names of Lionel Barrymore, Mary Pickford, Dorothy or Lillian Gish, Robert Harron, Jackie Saunders, Frank Mayo, Charlie Chaplin, Helen Gibson, Henry Walthall, Bryant Washburn, Marguerite Clayton, Mabel Trunnelle, Milicent Evans, Otis Harlan, Bigelow Cooper, Lillian Walker, Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne. This roster certainly embraces ability and variety, and it is not surprising that exhibitors are showing their appreciation of it.

The program for the week June 19-24 inclusive is exceptionally strong in names of performers who have attained fame in moving pictures. "The Reprisal," in three parts, by Selig, featuring Fritzi Brunette and Jack Pickford, will be first on the program Monday. This is a story of the southland in which romance plays a prominent part. "Stung" and "The Elephant's Dinner," Vitagraph short subjects, will provide the first comedies of the week, while Selig-Tribune News will tell the story of important happenings. "The Misunderstood Boy," a one-part Biograph reissue in which Robert Harron and Lillian Gish share honors, will be shown next. "Otto's Legacy,' a Lubin one-part comedy, will be last to fade away on the screen that day.

Essanay's comedy-drama in two parts, "The Girl at the Curtain," a reissue featuring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, will be the first picture shown Tuesday. This will be followed by a Kalem comedy, "The Beggar and His Child," after which a Biograph reissue in two parts, "The Reformers," presenting Mae Marsh and Robert Harron, will be screened. Then will follow "Out of the Ruins," an Edison three-part reissue featuring Pat O'Malley and Gladys Hulette. This picture achieved great success when originally released.

The program for Wednesday will start when "That Lovely Widow," by Kalem, is shown. Then will follow Essanay's "The Fable of the Undecided Brunette," one of George Ade's best stories. Edison offers "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," a drama reissue in one part, in which Herbert Prior is starred and which will be the closing number for that day.

Lubin's three-part drama, "Love's Law," in which Adda Gleason and C. E. Van Auker are featured, will be the first presented on Thursday's program. Then will follow the Selig-Tribune, bringing the bigs news of the day right down to the very minute, after which a Vim comedy, "Never Again," featuring Plump and Runt, will be offered.

Virginia Norden will be starred in the first picture shown Friday, a Knickerbocker Star feature three-part drama, "The Ancient Blood." A Kalem comedy, one of the Sis Hopkins series, "Her Great Invention," will follow, and Vitagraph offers "The Curfew at Simpton Center," and "For Better or Worse," a Vim comedy featuring Pokes and Jabbs, each a single reel comedy. will close the day's program,

"A Traitor to Art," an Essanay production in three parts in which Ann Kirk and Edward Arnold have the leading roles, will be screened as the opening pictures Saturday. "Persistency," a Lubin one-part comedy, precedes "Would You Forgive Her?" a Vitagraph drama in which Leah Baird and Arthur Cozine have the leading roles. Then will come "The Mysterious Cipher," an episode in Kalem's "Hazards of Helen." The program for the week will be brought to an end by "Taking a Chance," Selig's one-part drama featuring Tom Mix, whom Selig claims is the only original Simon Pure cowboy in moving pictures.

General Film Advances Employes

Change Announced in the Heads of Exchanges at Des Moines, Oklahoma City, Philadelphia and Atlanta.

EFFICIENCY is meeting with its reward these days among the General Film Company's employes and substantial recognition in the way of promotion is order of the day. This is in line with the policy announced by President George Kleine when he took over the reins of the General Film Company six months ago, and he is seizing every opportunity to demonstrate that he meant every word he said when he announced that "good things were in store for efficient employes."

The latest beneficiary of Mr. Kleine's policy is Charles Stombaugh, who has just been named branch manager of the office at Des Moines, succeeding C. W. Jeffries. Mr. Stombaugh has been in the employ of the General for some time, his last position being in charge of the booking department at the Minneapolis office, from where he was transferred to his present responsible post.

J. W. Hicks, until recently assistant branch manager at the Kansas City office, has been transferred and promoted to branch manager of the Oklahoma City office, succeeding A. L. Teagarden. Both these promotions are considered rewards of efficiency.

George T. Aimes, widely known in the industry, has been placed in charge of the Philadelphia office, succeeding H. H. Buxbaum, who was recently transferred to New York to occupy a similar position there.

Another change announced is the designation of C. C. Ezell as branch manager at Atlanta, Ga., succeeding Joseph L. Marentette. Mr. Ezell's experience in the film business goes back to the early days of the industry, and he has never failed to win his spurs in any of the responsible positions he has held.

Coming Bluebirds

Outline of Feature Productions Designed to Combat the Call of Out of Doors.

ANNOUNCEMENTS of forthcoming Bluebirds indicate a diversity of subjects, and there is promise that during July and August exhibitors will have at their disposal some of the best subjects that have ever been shown under the Bluebird trade mark. The cencentration of exceptionally good features has been planned for the purpose of giving showmen material with which to combat the call of out-of-door amusements—an opposition generally considered to be more potent than anything the regular season presents.

"The Silent Battle" will recall J. Warren Kerrigan and his leading lady, Lois Wilson, to the Bluebird program late in July. F. McGrew Willis created the scenario from the novel of the same title written by George Gibbs. The director was Jack Conway and the photoplay has just been finished. Maud George, Harry Carter, Ray Hanford and J. F. Connolly will be among the principals.

"The Deacon's Demise" may be changed as the title of a novel production, written and produced by Lynn Reynolds, to be released in early August. The leading players will be Val Paul and Myrtle Gonzalez, others in the company being George Hernandez, Fred Church, Frank McQuarrie, Nannie Wright, Jack Curtis and Lule Warrenton.

Another release of high class will be "L'Abbe Constantin," adapted from the Ludovic Halevy story of the same title by E. J. Clawson, and directed by Rupert Julian. Mr. Julian will also be one of the players in a company that will include Francelia Billington, Louise Lovely, Zoe Bech, Elsie Wilson, Henry Girard and George Berrill.

The more immediate releases, for late June and July, embrace the gripping problem play, "Shoes," with Mary MacLaren playing in a Lois Weber production of surpassing interest and importance to the Bluebird program; "Broken Fetters," presenting Violet Mersereau, William Garwood and an excellent company of players; "The Love Girl," which presents Ella Hall and Harry Depp in a Robert Z. Leonard presentation, and "The Grasp of Greed," based on one of H. Rider Haggard's stories, which will be played by Louise Lovely, Lon Chaney and Jay Belasco and others.

WORLD FILM TO GROUP STARS.

Within the next three months William A. Brady will offer on the new World Film program a series of all-star cast pictures in which the cream of the array of players under control of the World Film Corporation will be seen together.

The first production is that of last season's Broadway success, "Husband and Wife," which under the direction of Barry O'Neill, was completed in two weeks of actual work. The cast includes Ethel Clayton, Holbrook Blinn, Emmett Corrigan, Gerda Holmes, Montagu Love and Dion Titheridge.

Mr. Brady is going to produce a number of similarly casted plays.

BEN GRIMM ENGAGED BY METRO-YORKE.

Ben H. Grimm, of the reportorial staff of the New York Evening Journal, has acepted a position as special press representative of the Yorke Film Corporation, the new producing company headed by Harold Lockwood and May Allison, releasing regularly on the Metro program. Mr. Grimm is now with the company at the Thousand Islands, where the Lockwood-Allison company is engaged in photographing the exterior scenes for "A One-Cylinder Courtship."

Consolidated Making Big Serial

New Company Will Release "The Crimson Stain Mystery" Through Metro—Costello and Grandin Co-Stars.

AFTER several months of painstaking efforts in perfecting details of its organization, the Consolidated Film Corporation announces its plan to release "The Crimson Stain Mystery," a serial screen story in sixteen episodes, the first to be offered on August 21.

The Consolidated has been organized for the purpose of doing big things in the industry. The connections which have been made in the way of well-known screen performers, directors and financial sponsors indicate that theirs is to be an activity in the field which will attract attention beyond the ordinary. Their financial strength and the confidence which has already been established in their prospects is indicative that the serial which it now has in the making is to take a prominent place on the program of regular releases of Metro Pictures Corporation, which strangely enough, has up to the present time been without a serial picture among its offerings.

Maurice Costello.

The new company is making its pictures in one of the most modernly equipped studios in the East and is this week establishing itself in comfortable business offices in the Longacre Building. O. E. Goebel, a general amusement purveyor, who has been active in the motion picture field for the past few years and is widely known throughout the United States, is president of the company.

Ethel Grandin.

Of importance almost equal to the announcement of the organization of the company is the announcement that Maurice Costello, for many years a bright star in the firmament of the Vitagraph Company, has been secured to play the lead in the new serial which will be the company's initial offering. Mr. Costello has been enjoying a vacation for the past few months, but will return to his work before the camera well qualified to add to the laurels which he has already won.

Ethel Grandin, also a screen star, by right of many past successes, has been secured to interpret the leading feminine role in "The Crimson Stain Mystery." T. Hayes Hunter will generally supervise the direction.

The scenario for the new serial is the product of Albert Payson Terhune, whose work for the screen within the past few months has attracted almost as much attention as have his hundreds of short stories and books contributed to modern American literature.

NATIONAL TO ISSUE WORLD'S FAIR SERIAL.

The National Cinema Syndicate, Inc., has just purchased the World's rights to the official Panama-Pacific International Exposition negatives from E. M. Asher, who recently acquired these rights from the Exposition Players' Corporation. E. H. Kaufmann and S. M. Krellberg, executives of the National Cinema Syndicate, Inc., announce that they will market the pictures throughout the world in serial form, this being the first atempt to market scenic and educational pictures in this manner.

Bluebird Will Plunge on "The Play"

Announces That in Future It Will Exploit the Brand and Not the Players.

THROUGH M. H. Hoffman, general manager of Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., announcement is made that in future exploitation of its product the customary heralding and promotion of individual stars will be abandoned. Instead of directing efforts to create new stars or to further magnify the transient notoriety of players Bluebird will center on advertising its trade mark and establishing the Bluebird name as an insignia of merit in photoplay production.

"We shall immediately undertake a national advertising campaign," says Mr. Hoffman, "to bring to the attention of theatergoers the merits of our productions. We shall point out the many good qualities they possess, and will demonstrate to devotees of motion pictures just why Bluebirds are worthy of public patronage.

"This advertising campaign will forward the interest of Bluebird exhibitors in every community throughout the country. We shall not localize, but will use papers of national circulation and will back the national campaign with billposting in localities we shall select as necessary to our purpose. The play, the author, the entire acting company, the director and the merits of the production as a whole will be expatiated upon in our publicity.

"We expect that there will be objections and kicks from many and various sources; we anticipate that some exhibitors will say that they cannot survive unless the passing notoriety of individual players is emphasized. But there was never an innovation but what there were those ready to decry its feasibility, and we are fortified by the merits of our own conviction, and shall proceed unwaveringly with our purpose.

"We have thought it all out. We know the nature and quality of the releases we have prepared, and we know that there is not one of our plays that require a 'name' to make it better. We know that our plays are better than any star we might employ. And we also know that any number of players, male or female, could be billed and boosted from obscurity into prominence through the medium of these plays.

"We shall be one organization to insist that Shakespeare was right. And in advertising our trade mark and exploiting our products we shall advance arguments that will influence the public and bring home the fact that the play is, indeed, 'the thing.' And while we are explaining to the theatergoing public wherein Bluebirds are superior because of the quality and because of the superior methods employed in producing and photographing our plays the exhibitor is going to have a greater support than we could give him by placing our publicity dependence upon the mere name and notoriety of any particular individual."

Let Public Choose, Says Goff

V-L-S-E Assistant General Manager Makes Suggestions to Exhibitors.

THE assistant general manager of the V-L-S-E, A. W. Goff, is back in New York, following a tour of four middle western cities in which the Big Four has branch offices. These included Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati and St. Louis. As was the case last summer with the V-L-S-E, Mr. Goff found the lie given all along the line to the stereotyped assertion that warm weather reduces the volume of film business. Increased business, and lots of it, was the report in each of the branches visited.

"Let the public dictate the sort of photoplays the producing companies present," says Mr. Goff. "That is the aim of the Big Four, through its open booking policy. Our idea is that each day an exhibitor should flash on his screen the titles and plot outlines of releases that will be available for him the following week. The slide requests his patrons to indicate their choice by applause or in some other manner.

"Another plan that strikes me as being practicable is for the exhibitor to distribute among his patrons slips of paper outlining available releases, giving names of stars and such information as the patron should have, and upon which they may indicate their choice. The blanks could be deposited in a vote box at the exit, and by the verdict of his patrons the exhibitor could be guided."

John W. Grey, International publicist, is going to the Motion Picture Exhibition at Chicago. John says he is going to have the most startling exhibit on the lot. He is just likely to do that little thing.

Vitagraph's, Week of June 19

Two Comedies and a Drama Go Out Through the General and a Blue Ribbon and Daniel Comedy Through V-L-S-E.

Released Through General Film.

TWO comedies and a drama are scheduled by Vitagraph for release through the General Film for the week of June 19. "Would You Forgive Her?" is the three-part Broadway Star Feature drama. "Stung" and "Curfew at Simpton Center" are each thousand foot comedies. Leah Baird, who is featured in "Would You Forgive Her?" is seen as Eleanor Baine, a shopgirl who possesses more than average feminine charm. Van Dyke Brooke, Arthur Cozine and Jack Ellis are also seen in this picture. Van Dyke Brooke directed the picture from the scenario by Dodd Crane.

"Stung" is from the pen of Stanley Dark, who also plays the leading role. Wally Van directed the production with Lillian Burns and Templer Saxe as the remainder of the cast.

In "The Curfew at Simpton Center" six wives find themselves in a strange predicament. Otto Lederer, George Kunkel, Webster Campbell, Jack Mower and Florence Vidor are seen in this comedy which was produced by William Wolbert and written by Edwin Ray Coffin.

Released by V-L-S-E.

"The Man Behind the Curtain," a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature in five parts, featuring Lillian Walker with Evart Overton and William Dunn, is listed for June 19. Minnie Krakaner wrote the story. Templar Saxe and John Costello are also seen in this production.

Frank Daniels is seen in the title role of "Kernel Nutt Flirts with Wifie," the latest of the "Kernel Nutt" series. Beryl Caton is the author of the story and its action was directed by C. Jay Williams. Alice Washburn is active in the "double crossing."

NAT GOODWIN SUES MIRROR.

Nat C. Goodwin claims $13,750 salary and expenses for eleven weeks' unfulfilled contract with the Mirror Film Company, and on June 8 his attorneys filed with the Sheriff of Queens an attachment against the film company's property in Glendale, where it owns fourteen acres and a series of studios. Justice Thomas F. Donnelly of Manhattan issued the attachment.

Goodwin alleges he was engaged under a six months' contract by the film company on Jan. 17. He was to receive $1,250 each week for taking a leading part in the productions of the company.

ROSE—DE MONTFORD.

The wedding of Norman S. Rose, one of the heads of the publicity department of the Triangle Film Corporation, and Miss Eloise de Montford, stepdaughter of Maurice V. Samuels, a New York playwright, who is widely known in theatrical circles as secretary of the Society of American Dramatists and Composers, was solemnized June 10.

Miss de Montford is a native of Chattanooga, Tenn. Mr. Rose is a former Cleveland newspaper man, but has been in New York for several years.

New Studio Facilitates Production

Essanay Company Paying Particular Attention to Shorter Subjects, Including Use in Them of Leading Players.

ESSANAY'S new studio, which now has been in full operation for several weeks, has proved a boon to the company in facilitating the quick production of photoplays. With the large number of feature productions as well as shorter films, Essanay was greatly handicapped for a time in producing with sufficient speed. All obstacles were overcome with the opening of the new studio. With the extra floor space and with the summer camps established, all of Essanay's score of directors can work at once if necessary.

The result of this speeding up of productions through additional floor space has resulted in the company having completed plays for many weeks ahead. Practically all photoplays for the month of August now have been finished with work going on for still further advance dates. This additional room also gives more opportunity for careful detail work on the shorter subjects. George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, is a firm believer in the one, two and three reel comedies and dramas, and believes in giving them as much attention to detail, as the longer features.

"While there is room for first-class features the shorter subjects will always be in demand," said Mr. Spoor. "I believe in putting just as good material into the shorter subjects as in features and in playing up the leading actors. The popularity of the short photoplay will never wane. In fact it is on the ascendancy without interfering in any way with the hold features have on picture patrons. A two or three-reel drama well played, to my mind, is one of the real attractions of the motion picture theater."

The three-act Essanay releases for July are ample proof that President Spoor practices the theory in which he so thoroughly believes. In all of them actors of established reputations appear. "The Regeneration of Margaret" is a strong story on the topic of defective babies which carries a love interest also. Warda Howard, Ernest Maupain and John Junior take the leading roles. "Power," is a powerful story of politics and love. Sydney Ainsworth and Nell Craig, with excellent support, appear as the leads. "The Secret of the Night," a detective story with the hero's part one of deciding interest, is played by Lillian Drew, Sydney Ainsworth and John Lorenz.

"The Grouch" is a comedy drama with Harry Beaumont and Harry Dunkinson. John Lorenz and Ann Leigh are featured in "Repentance," a story of how a girl drives away her fiance by her sneers at religion, only to see her error and win back her faith and the man.

CHICAGO TO SEE "CIVILIZATION."

Thomas H. Ince, producer of the photo-dramatic spectacle "Civilization," which has proved a sensation at the Criterion theater, New York City, left for Chicago this week to arrange for the production of his spectacle in that city.

Mr. Ince is accompanied by his executive staff, including J. Parker Reade, Jr., general representative, and J. L. Bernard, director of publicity and advertising. The Chicago opening will be at the Chicago Grand Opera House between June 24 and 30.

It is understood upon good authority no confirmative statement has yet been issued in regard to the purchasing or marketing of the states rights on "Civilization." There have been many rumors but none are confirmed. Victor Shertzinger, who wrote the score of "Civilization," accompanies Mr. Ince to Chicago with the party.

RUTH ROLAND IN KNICKERBOCKER SUBJECT.

Ruth Roland is the latest acquisition to the group of popular stars appearing in Knickerbocker Star Features. Pursuing its policy of obtaining the best-known and most highly gifted players, the Melies Manufacturing Company has arranged with H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer for the production of a number of three and five-reel dramas featuring Miss Roland, and the famous star of "Who Pays?" and other popular serials is now working in her first picture for release on the Knickerbocker program in the General Film service.

SOUVENIRS FOR PARAMOUNT PATRONS.

Several thousand artistic Paramount buttons are being supplied by the Paramount Pictures Corporation for sale through its exchanges. They carry the Paramount trademark on a yellow background and make attractive souvenirs for distribution among audiences seeing Paramount pictures.

Activities of Unity

General Manager Cobe Takes on "Tweedledum" Comedies—Departments Enlarged.

ANDREW J. COBE, general manager of the Unity Sales Corporation, announces he has signed up for the comedy releases of the Eagle Film Company of Jacksonville, Fla., following negotiations with William J. Dunn of that concern.

Mr. Cobe declares that in the person of Fernandez Perez, the Spanish comedian who portrays the principal comedy character of the "laugh pictures," he has discovered the Charlie Chaplin of the future. The films will be known as the "Tweedledum and Tweedledee" series, each being complete in itself but connected by an underlying plot.

The activities of the Unity Sales Corporation in the past few weeks have covered a wide field considering the youth of the corporation. Besides planning extensive advertising campaigns in connection with "The Yellow Menace," the sixteen episode serial in which Edwin Stevens is starred, Mr. Cobe has developed plans by which the story of "The Yellow Menace" will be presented in serial form in 1,100 newspapers in the large cities of the country.

The business of the Unity has developed so rapidly that during the past week new quarters were engaged for the press and advertising department and the auditing department was enlarged. Mr. Cobe reports unusually heavy business with "My Country First," and "The Pursuing Vengeance."

A forthcoming release by the Unity is "The Bishop's Secret," which employs many well-known players and has many thrilling scenes.

"We have only just started to develop our plans," said Mr. Cobe, "and in the near future I will have an announcement to make which will be of interest to everyone in the trade. I can only say at the present time that it involves a new plan of distribution elaborated from my present ideas."

Universal Eastern Forces Thinning

Big Fort Lee Studio Will Be Emptied by June 15—Julius Stern to Produce on His Own Account.

BY THE MIDDLE of June the half-million-dollar studio which the Universal completed at Fort Lee only three months ago will be practically deserted, and the eastern Victor and Imp companies will be on their way to Universal City, where the Universal forces will be centralized in the future. Julius Stern, who has been the manager of the eastern studios for a number of years, will leave for the Coast within a fortnight. He is taking with him the best wishes and good will of the many actors and actresses who have been employed by him during his sojourn here. At present he is very busy getting affairs straightened out preparatory to his leaving for the Coast, where he is to embark in the field of film manufacturing.

"It is my intention of starting a producing company on the Coast, where I will make my own pictures," said Mr. Stern, "which may be released on the Universal program. We have engaged Francis Ford and Grace Cunard, who will probably make a serial for us after they have finished 'Peg o' the Ring' for the Universal. And we are now negotiating with other well-known players.

"At present I am getting everything in shape preparatory to my leaving. All the companies are making strenuous efforts to have their pictures finished by the latter part of next week so that they will be able to leave for Universal City. William Garwood leaves the company and goes with Metro. There is a bare possibility that Mary Fuller and Violet Mersereau will remain here in the East. However, that hasn't been settled as yet."

CAMPBELL "TAKES" FORTS FOR "THE CRISIS."

Director Colin Campbell of the Selig Polyscope Company escorted special players and a staff of cameramen to Charleston, S. C., on Thursday, June 8. At Charleston, old Forts Sumpter and Moultrie were filmed for the forthcoming Selig production of "The Crisis." After visiting Charleston, Director Campbell will go to New York on business connected with the production and then will return to Chicago.

SCENARIOIST ALEXANDER GOES TO U-CITY.

J. Grubb Alexander, scenario writer at Universal Heights, N. J., is one of the staff of that studio who left for Universal City in advance of the "main guard." This occurred because Mr. Alexander, who had long been pining to write in the Western atmosphere, had his application for a transfer "in" before the general transfer of Eastern Universalites was decided upon.

International Launches News Reel

Hearst International News Pictorial Will Make Its Bow to Exhibitors on June 12.

THERE is a brand new current event release in filmdom. This news reel is booked for two releases a week by the International Film Service, Inc., and is known as the Hearst International News Pictorial.

The International has cameramen in all parts of the world to contribute to this news reel. With the Allies at Salonica and representing International is Aerial Varges, a cameraman who has more adventures every week than the average person has in a lifetime. Mr. Varges will record the more interesting events on the battle front for the new Hearst Pictorial.

J. K. Burger.

Nelson G. Edwards is another film faithful who will take a chance on getting shot a few times a day for the benefit of the camera. He is now at Constantinople with the Turks and Germans. Tracy Mathewson is with the United States punitive forces in Mexico.

E. B. Hatrick, who has personal charge of the Hearst International News Pictorial and who is an authority on news subjects, has arranged for the quick shipment of the film from all parts of the world. Mr. Hatrick has the new system so clearly defined the releases will go out on time without a hitch.

No small measure of credit for the success of the new reel is due J. K. Burger, manager of branch exchanges for the International. By means of the telegraph, which is used extensively by the I. F. S., on account of affiliations and wire service with the various Hearst publications, Mr. Burger arranged for the distribution of the news reel to the many exchanges.

General Manager E. A. MacManus states Mr. Hearst will infuse some radical and revolutionary ideas into the new pictorial. Hence it is confidently expected a news reel of a brand new and different type will be developed in the Hearst International News Pictorial. The first release date is June 12.

ESTABROOK POPULAR WITH COLLEGE BOYS.

Knowing that Howard Estabrook is being starred in that remarkable scientific serial of spirits and astral bodies, "The Mysteries of Myra," one might think this was a snap of one of the scenes in this most unusual film. It is not. The Myra mystery does not follow the hackneyed melodramatic lines of the early serials. It has a wonderful new theme that compels attention because of the puzzling thoughts regarding mental telepathy and spirits presented in a manner which follows authenticated scientific discoveries.

Mr. Estabrook is working at Ithaca, N. Y. That's where Wharton, Inc., the producers of the big International Film serial, has its big plant. At Ithaca is also the big university, Cornell. The college boys often work with Wharton, Inc., which has exceptional exclusive privileges about the campus and buildings, and Mr. Estabrook, being a regular fellow, was soon a real hero with the college men. He helped them with a big benefit entertainment for the athletic fund and then had a big prize contest for an amateur one-act play, in which he afterward appeared personally at a benefit which he gave, with the help of the Cornell boys, for the Actors' Fund. This was a tremendous success, breaking all attendance records in Ithaca.

Mr. Estabrook's work with the college men has made him a real enthusiast about the Cornell varsity eight. He picked them to win the spring regatta and perched himself on the pilot of the observation train from which vantage point he saw his prediction fulfilled. The star of "The Mysteries of Myra" also thinks Cornell will win the big regatta at Poughkeepsie on June 17. He says he has become quite a forecaster since doing so much mental telepathy and scientific work in "Myra."

Paramount Program for June 26

Pauline Frederick and Myrtle Stedman Will Be the Headliners—Cartoons, Travelogue and Pictographs Complete List.

PARAMOUNT pictures released for the week of June 26 will be "The World's Great Snare," in which the Famous Players will feature Pauline Frederick, and "The American Beauty," a Pallas production starring Myrtle Stedman. "The World's Great Snare" will be released on June 26 and the Pallas picture on June 29. Short subjects also announced for release this week by Paramount include "Bobby Bumps' Fly Swatter," Earl Hurd's drawing in the Scene from "Bobby Bumps' Fly Swatter" (Paramout Bray).

Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoons; the "Spreewald Near Berlin," in the Paramount-Burton Holmes travel pictures showing Europe before the war, and the twenty-first release of the Pictographs.

In the opening scene of this release of the Animated Cartoons Bobby Bumps, the adventurous youngster originated by Earl Hurd, discovers that a perfect skating rink is supplied by Dad's unadorned head. Dad is shown on the screen attempting to take a nap and keep off the flies at the same time. A close-up of the rink reveals the flies performing stunts on roller skates. Bobby pauses in his industrious knocking out of the flies for the pup to brush a few off of Dad's head, but the sport proves too tame, so he shifts the responsibility to the pup. The fly brush attached to the pup's tail works nicely and entirely to Dad's satisfaction until a bee enters the scene, causing general excitement, a chase, and an aeroplane flight.

Pictographs in this edition will show the "Training of a Lion"; "Which Do You Remember," in Hugo Munsterberg's "Testing the Mind" series; a screen jaunt to Coney Island, and the picturizing of Montessori methods in the "Better Babies" release, "Seeing with the Fingers."

"BEAUTY EMPORIUM" FOR VITAGRAPHERS.

A "Beauty Emporium" for the convenience of actors and actresses will soon be opened at the Flatbush studios of the Vitagraph Company. It is the result of a suggestion made by Evart Overton to Studio Manager A. Victor Smith, and will be the only one of its kind connected with any motion picture plant.

A building located within the inclosure, directly opposite the big studio, is being converted into this new department and when completed will contain a woman's hair-dressing and manicure parlor, barber shop, bootblacking stand, tailoring establishment and first aid department, for the exclusive use of members of the Vitagraph Company.

SHEER ANNOUNCES NEW ENGAGEMENTS.

Among the engagements announced by William A. Sheer are Carlyle Blackwell, to star with the Solax Company; Alma Hanlon, to star with the Ivan company; Jack Meredith, to play the lead in a Premo picture; J. Herbert Frank and Helen Weer, with Triangle; Arthur Donaldson and Robert Vivian, with Ivan and William Hinckley, as the lead with Olga Petrova in the next Popular Plays and Players production.

NOT ASSOCIATED WITH WEIR.

Editor of The Motion Picture World:

Sir.—A recent issue of The American Magazine contains a sketch of a Mr. Hugh C. Weir, in which is included the statement that I am collaborating with him in the writing of motion picture plays. This is a mistake. I have no connection with Mr. Weir—business, literary or social—whatever.

REGINALD WRIGHT KAUFFMAN.

Stars Shine in Universals for June 19.

King Baggot Heads a Good List With "The Man from Nowhere," a Red Feather Drama.

KING BAGGOT, Mary Fuller, Herbert Rawlinson, Ben Wilson, Violet Mersereau, William Garwood, Thomas Jefferson, Paul Panzer, Edith Roberts, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Billie Rhodes, Edna Hunter, Gale Henry, William Franey, Hobart Henley, Francis Ford and Grace Cunard, stars of "The Adventures of Peg o' the Ring," all appear on the Universal program for the week of June 19, supported by dozens of other seasoned players who work under the Big U banner.

King Baggot has the position of honor on the program for the week of June 19, appearing in the five-reel Red Feather drama, "The Man from Nowhere," in which he is supported by Helen Martin. On the same day Neal Burns, Betty Compson and Ethel Lynn disport in the Nestor comedy, "Wanted, A Husband."

On Tuesday, June 20, Herbert Rawlinson and Agnes Vernon share honors in "The False Part," a two-reel Gold Seal light drama, which is followed on the same day by the Imp comedy, "His Picture," in which William Garwood and Violet Mersereau play the principal roles. Thomas Jefferson and Zoe Bech, his little co-star, share the screen in the Big U drama, "The Grip of Crime," on the same day.

Mary Fuller in the two-reel Victor detective drama, "The Scarlet Mark," is the feature of the program for June 21. Miss Fuller is ably supported by Joseph Girard. On the same day Animated Weekly, No. 25, and the L-Ko howler, "The Jailbirds' Last Flight," with Bill Armstrong, Carmen Meyers and Gene Rogers will be released.

"Behind the Secret Panel," a three-reel Imp drama, in which Paul Panzer, William Welsh and Sonia Marsel take the principal roles, will be released on June 22 as the feature of the day. It will be followed by the Powers comedy, "The Young Sleuths."

Harry Benham and little Edith Roberts make a delightful pair of sweethearts in the Imp comedy drama, "The Heart Wrecker," which will be released on June 23. On the same day Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley reissue "The Rosary," which, although four years old, is considered to be one of their masterpieces. Just so the day won't be too serious, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Billie Rhodes cavort about in the Nestor two-reel comedy, "What Could the Poor Girl Do?"

The supernatural and life after death enter in a large measure into the Bison two-reel animal drama, "The Ghost of the Jungle," which is said to be one of the earliest productions in which Rex de Rosselli and Yona Landowsky have appeared for the Universal. On the same day William Franey and Gale Henry cut up some didoes in the Joker comedy, "The Fall of Deacon Stillwaters."

On June 25 Ben Wilson appears in the two-reel Rex domestic drama, "The Fool," in which he is supported by Edna Hunter. On the same day Hobart Henley shares honors with Sydell Dowling in the Laemmle drama, "The Rogue With a Heart." On the same day Gertrude Selby and Reggie Morris do their worst in the L-Ko comedy, "Dirty Work in a Beanery."

During the week of June 19 the eighth two-reel episode of "The Adventures of Peg o' the Ring" will be released, with Francis Ford and Grace Cunard furnishing the thrills. "Peg" is putting all the other Universal serials in the shade as far as popularity is concerned.

VIM COMPANIES REMAIN IN SOUTH.

Contrary to expectation, the three Vim comedy companies will not come to New York for the summer months, but will remain in Jacksonville, Fla. Managing Director Louis Burnstein, after consultation with Mark Dintenfass, determined to take advantage of the extraordinary season which Florida is experiencing, and dispense with the difficulties attending removal from the spacious and up-to-date studios on the St. James River. This decision affects the companies headed by Harry C. Myers and Rosemary Theby, Bob Burns and Walter H. Stull, and "Babe" Hardy and Billy Ruge. The news was received with satisfaction from all the players, who have formed ties that bind them to the Southern city.

J. K. BURGER GOES SOUTH.

J. K. (Simon Legree) Burger, manager of branch exchanges, International Film Service, Inc., left on Thursday June 8, for Philadelphia, Washington and Atlanta. Mr. Burger has just recently returned from an extended business trip west and reports that "The Mysteries of Myra" are showing to unprecedented business.

Alec Francis with World Film

TWO popular film players, Alec B. Francis and Johnny Hines, well known from their work in past productions, are now permanently with the World Film Corporation. Mr. Francis, formerly in such Broadway successes as "The Solicitor," "The Girl from Kays," "The Barrister," and "Our Flat," and long time photoplayer, made his World Film debut in "The Wishing Ring," in which Vivian Martin appeared. Since then he has portrayed many roles and in such successful film productions as "Vanity Fair," "After Dark," "The Imposter," "Alias Jimmy Valentine," "Man of the Hour," "The Ballet Girl," and "Human Driftwood," and is now at work in support of Miss Young in "The Story of Susan." He has just completed his appearance in a highly important role in "The Perils of Divorce," in which Edna Wallace Hopper and Frank Sheridan appear.

Alec Francis.

Mr. Francis' mentor was Uppingham College and Mount Memory College, Ireland, and for years he sought the education that comes from experience by roaming the British Empire from Lands End to Simpra.

Johnny Hines, one of the leaders of the young school of eccentric light comedians, also has become a permanent World player. He is now at work in support of Alice Brady in her forthcoming production, "Miss Petticoats." During his several years as a screen player, Hines has appeared in fifteen features.

Johnny Hines graduated from the stage, where he has appeared with William Gillette, George M. Cohan, under the management of William A. Brady, and with Oscar Hammerstein.

In addition to Francis and Hines, Frank Beamish and J. Clarence Harvey are allied now under the Brady-Made banner.

PHOTODRAMATISTS TO HOLD OUTING.

The Photodramatists, formerly the Ed-Au Club, numbering among its members the most prominent writers for the screen, have reached the age-old conclusion that "all work and no play" may affect them as it did the immortal Jack, and at a meeting held June 8 decided to enjoy an outing and general reunion. At the invitation of Edward J. Montague, of the Vitagraph's Bayshore studios, that particular beauty spot of Long Island was chosen as a Mecca, a shore dinner to follow after the pilgrims have paid their devotions at the shrine of Director Ralph Ince.

June 24 was set for the pilgrimage. Recreant members of the Photodramatists take notice, and send in reservations if intending to join the caravan. Address the secretary, Mrs. Mary Louise Farley, 607 West 136th street.

After an address by L. Case Russell, the club members were treated to a showing of the latest Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, "The Destroyers." Planning big things for the coming year, an entertainment committee composed of Mrs. L. Case Russell, chairman; C. Doty Hobart, of the Famous Players, and Edward J. Montague, of Vitagraph, was appointed.

The club, which already numbers among its members the best-known writers and directors for the screen, plans to open its doors to the established writers of fiction and drama who are entering the photoplay field.

Director Rupert Julian is filming "L'Abbe Constantin" as a five-reel feature, the scenario having been prepared by E. J. Clauson of the Universal City staff. Julian will play the lead, supported by an all-star cast, including Francelia Billington, Louise Lovely, Elsie Jane Wilson, Zoe DeRae, Douglas Gerrard and George Berrill, who plays the Abbe. A great deal of expense has been gone into in providing sets for this screen production of the famous book by Ludovic Halevy.

Kemble Secures Zeppelin Raid Films

Pictures Which Showed at Park Theater Under New York Globe Auspices to Be State-Righted.

THE part Zeppelins are playing in the World War is portrayed in moving pictures in "The Zeppelin Raids on London, and the Seige of Verdun," which played to capacity audiences in the Park theater under the auspices of the New York Globe. Pronounced at the time of their first showing as "the most spectacular war pictures ever seen," they show the giant Zeppelins flying over London, the bombardment of the city, the attack on the huge dirigibles by anti-aircraft guns, and the devastation the "Zeps" leave in their wake.

"Deadman's Hill," Le Mort Homme as it is known all over France, is shown in all its thrilling realism. The blowing up of the Malancourt Bridge at Verdun shows how a magnificent structure of steel and brick is shelled into a heap of ruins.

The Kemble Film Corporation of Brooklyn has secured the American rights for these films, and they will be statesrighted by them.

Alice Hollister, First Vampire

WHEN the writer of screen history comes to a chapter dealing with the vampire craze, he will have to give special mention to Alice Hollister as "the original vampire of the photoplay." The Kalem star, featured in "The Lotus Woman," will be remembered by old-timers as being for years "the" vampire of the photoplay before that type of character became so common a source of inspiration to writers and producers for the screen.

It was in Kalem's famous Biblical spectacle, "From the Manger to the Cross," that Miss Hollister began her playing of roles bordering on that type when she appeared as Mary Magdalene. "The Vampire," a well remembered Kalem two-reeler, was another production of the early days in which Miss Hollister essayed an interpretation of the lurid colored woman. More recently Kalem's feature, "The Destroyer," will be remembered.

Alice Hollister.

Of French descent, Miss Hollister is ideally fitted to parts making the emotional demands of the vampire roles. She was born in Worcester, Mass., and educated at the Convent Villa Maria, Montreal. In "The Lotus Woman," which is released June 28 on the General Film program, Miss Hollister presents some of the best work of her career as the woman of fate whose hidden hand rules the destinies of a Latin-American republic. Her vain efforts to win the love of Jerry Mandeville, an American soldier of fortune, bring on the train of circumstances of which the story is made.

"The Lotus Woman," which is in five parts, was staged under the direction of Harry Millarde in locations found at such distant points as St. Augustine, Jacksonville and New York. Millarde is also seen to advantage as Jerry Mandeville.

EARLE WILLIAMS IN VITAGRAPH SERIAL.

Earle Williams, the Vitagraph star, who won favor in such popular feature productions as "My Lady's Slipper," "The Juggernaut," "The Sins of the Mothers," "The Goddess," etc., has been working in a serial by C. N. and A. M. Williamson for the past six months, and which was originally intended for release during the latter part of last May. But weather conditions during the winter months held up the work, extending the time of production, which will entail work on his part well into the summer. The serial is now scheduled for release in September, when Mr. Williams will again be seen on the screen in one of the most pretentious serial productions ever released by the Vitagraph Company, and one suited to his personality and dramatic ability.

Censorship in Australia

Deputation of Clerics and Reformers of New South Wales Broach Matter to Chief Secretary.

Sydney, N. S. W., Australia, May 5, 1916.

A DEPUTATION representing the Catholic Federation and the Council for Civic and Moral Advancement waited on the Chief Secretary of N. S. W., Mr. Black, to ask for a censorship on picture films. Mr. Earp, M.L.C., who introduced the deputation, said that although many of those who purveyed amusement for people were worthy men, there were others—now that picture shows have spread far and wide—who placed pictures on the screens which were only moral poison. They debauched the mind, and the debauching of the body followed. These pictures were shown largely to children.

Sir Thomas Anderson Stuart said that the censoring of films was essential, especially in country centers, where managers put on films which they would not dare to screen in the city. The attraction of children to the picture shows was bad—morally and physically. The picture shows had grown to such a magnitude that it was necessary that the government should take some control in order that healthy and wholesome pictures should be put on the screens.

Archbishop Wright (Church of England) said he believed that it was the duty of the state to control the picture films. There was exceeding danger of the morals of young people who were taken to see the pictures being misdirected. The fact that there was no censorship enabled people to spread poison through the country by means of the pictures. He believed that the spread of venereal diseases was due to a certain extent to pictures which had a bad effect upon the morals of those who saw them.

Mr. Cleary, president of the Catholic Federation, said he had the approval of Archbishop Kelly to speak in behalf of the Catholic community. A great commotion was being raised in other countries over these doubtful pictures. Many of them were immoral; others were grewsome. The books of Victoria Cross were tabooed by the Customs, and yet pictures of them had been permitted to be shown in various photoplay houses in the state. There were other films, which were not immoral or grewsome, but were anti-religious, and this being a Christian community some decency should be shown towards the religion of the people. The leading managers of the theaters were agreeable to a censorship being established (?). (I doubt the correctness of the last sentence.)

Rev. Father Sydes gave instances of films which he thought not only vulgar, but highly immoral.

Rabbi Cohen said there were immense possibilities for good in picture shows if the censor got to work and suppressed the coarser and degrading tendencies.

Professor McIntyre (Presbyterian) thought there could be no doubt that the picture theaters were being used for a purpose which was not in accord with the good growth of morality in the community.

Sir Philip Sydney Jones and Rev. C. Prescott (of the Methodist Church) also addressed the Minister.

Mr. Black, in reply, said that films which were shown here had passed certain censorships. It was a mistake to say that films were shown which had been rejected elsewhere. It was, he thought, also wrong to say that pictures were being shown in country districts which could not be screened in the city. He would have a report prepared, and if it could be proved that pictures of the kind had been shown in the country, the people who screened them would have their licenses cancelled. He did not think that any one censor or any group of censors could agree on the question of the moral or immoral character of any picture. He agreed that scenes of murder were injurious to the young mind to the very greatest extent. The state had recently gone so far as to compel the excision of parts of films which showed murder scenes. It might be better if pictures—no matter how accredited—were submitted to a committee privately for censorship. That point would be submitted to the Cabinet. There were many pictures of educational value which gave great pleasure. Pictures showing scenes of murder, scenes of horror, and salacious scenes should not be shown. Neither should irreligious pictures or those which made a display of disloyalty. Children were the chief visitors to picture houses, and he thought it would be necessary to limit the hours at which children should be allowed to attend. He would endeavor to secure the sanction of the Cabinet to the creation of a board to censor all films shown here, and also to allot the hours at which children could attend—on Saturdays and holidays in particular, when films of an educational value might be shown.

It is just the same thing as has happened in America. These reverend gentlemen no doubt mean good, but it is questionable if they are ever within the walls of a photoplay theater once a year. They have got it into their heads that pictures are bad for the community, and no doubt wish to be made members of the board of censors they are so keen about.

It must be admitted that there are a few exhibitors in Sydney who, like many others in other countries, draw big crowds by suggestive advertising. For instance, "Five Nights," Victoria Cross's novel, as a picture was a most harmless production. But the management advertised it widely as being a filmatization of the banned novel. The same took place with the picture "Three Weeks," which was no worse than the usual sex picture or play. Perhaps these gentlemen go by the outside appearances; but, if so, it does not say much for their methods.

The various exchanges in Sydney are, as a whole, strongly against censorship. Australasian Films and Clement Mason, Ltd., are strongly against the movement; the Co-operative Film Exchange does not agree with censorship, but favors a mild form of regulation. The Fraser Film Exchange has never given its views on the subject.

Australian Feature Films, Ltd. (agents for Paramount) are the only exchange that has announced that it favors censorship. This announcement was made about two months ago in a weekly newspaper. A week later the exchange released the Lasky feature, "The Secret Orchard," and widely advertised the fact that the Paramount Corporation had defeated the Pennsylvania censors in court over the picture. And yet they say that they favor censorship!

There is no doubt that the movement will meet with strong resistance from exchanges and showmen.

"A Real Pal"

So Tom North Describes Exhibitor I. L. Williams of Snohomish—A Simple Story That Reaches the Heart.

EVERY night at a certain time down the street comes a man, gently pushing in front of him a wheel chair in which reclines his crippled mate. Unable to walk and dependent upon her husband for every move she makes, she is nevertheless made happy, for not alone her husband but everyone who knows her are always finding ways to help her.

They live in Snohomish, Wash., where Pal I. L. Williams runs the Orpheum theater, and are very fond of moving pictures. The wheel chair they thought would hinder them from attending, so the husband one night decided to wheel his wife down to the Orpheum and carry her into the theater. Pal Williams was there and saw how anxious the husband was that his wife should see the show. He carried her in, and with the help of Pal Williams gently placed her in a seat. With her husband sitting beside her she talked and laughed at the picture and showed more genuine enjoyment than anybody there.

The next night Pal Williams missed the couple, but the next they were there again. "My wife cannot stand being lifted about every night, so we were unable to come last night," he said. Pal Williams and the husband again carried the wife into the theater and placed her in the same seat she had before. She had said she liked the seat.

After the show that night Pal Williams, armed with a hammer and screw-driver, went to the back of the house and tore out the seat that the crippled wife had occupied, drew the nails from the floor and made everything ready. On the following night when the couple arrived he told them to go right in, wheel chair and all. They found the space where the seat had been, made ready for the chair. Delighted beyond words, the husband placed the chair in the vacant space and sat down next to his wife.

The seat next to the space is always vacant, no matter how crowded the house is, for everybody in town knows of Pal Williams' act of kindness. The couple come to the theater every night now, and the days are less long for the wife, she tells Pal Williams.

How great appear some of the little thoughts we have when they take form in action. How easy it is to do these little kindneses and how happy we feel for doing them. This thoughtful idea of Pal Williams' is typical of him. These are the things that make him the leading exhibitor of his town, and respected by all his associates. A REAL PAL.

Clifford Elfelt has completed the production of "The Fourth Tree," written by Olga Printzlau and prepared for the screen by Fred Myton of Universal City. The featured lead was played by Vola Smith, supported by Mina Cunard, Hayward Mack, Nobert Myles and Edwin Brown. Elfelt is expecting to produce three or four mountain pictures, featuring Miss Smith, most of the scenes of which will be made on Mount Baldy, near Los Angeles.

Spokes from the Hub

By Marion Howard.

THIS belated letter will start in by telling readers of the great satisfaction expressed by all lovers of the photoplay over the almost unanimous feeling against censorship displayed by that great biennial of women's clubs in New York City. At the various sessions where the subject was discussed I was privileged to hear men and women of brains and standing talk sanely and sensibly before delegates from forty-eight states in the Union, and they were mighty good listeners. Every phase fore and aft was presented and opportunity given "the floor" to fire questions or air pet views. I watched the situation keenly and silently, though prepared to speak in behalf of a free screen and against censorship so undemocratic, unethical—if not unconstitutional. We, the people, are the best censors. Altogether it was a triumph for our cause and those dear women take back home some mighty good ideas with which to combat narrowness and worse.

Returning from Broadway, where I saw some pretentious reels like "Civilization," a masterpiece by Thomas Ince; "The Fall of a Nation," with its preparedness keynote, and other good pictures, I find "Ramona" running to good houses, but now in its last week, and all the theaters doing well.

While in New York S. L. Rothapfel entertained members of the Hub Film Club at his theater, rightly called "Temple of Motion Pictures." We were personally conducted about the house by his attractive young secretary, Belle Louise Siegel, and shown every courtesy. We saw "Reggie Mixes In," and for the first time his opposite, Bessie Love, who at times very closely resembles Mary Pickford in feature when her face is in profile and lowered a bit. Watch her for yourself. How Reggie got away with that name in the slums is a wonder, and how he escaped alive after all those fights is another thing to ponder on, for there was no sham about any of it. He is some sight on emerging from the fightfest, yet we find him in a close-up with a smile. Later it was refreshing to see him in immaculate evening dress with his pretty girl found in the slums.

Perhaps the best outing given us delegates was that offered by the Vitagraph Company at its studios, where we spent an entire afternoon and learned much from inside the lines. Among the first to greet the Film Club members were Mary Maurice, Edith Storey and also Earle Williams, who was rehearsing a scene for an Italian subject. We were conducted under the river, then over the elevated to the studios by Ethel Cunningham, who is to be in one of the Frank Daniels' sketches and who presented many players and directors to our little coterie of fans. Our party was shown the modus operandi in picture-making in and out of doors. Commodore J. Stuart Blackton made a neat little speech of welcome, and we were all "snapped." It was a red letter day for the week. I looked in at the Strand and saw "Sweet Kitty Belairs," a charming play with Mae Murray given a greater opportunity than in "To Have and to Hold." This costume play is bound to be a success, so picturesque is it and so well done.

Hats off to Director Frank Lloyd and Pallas for giving us "David Garrick," which has struck the Hub with force. Mrs. Ayer put it on at the Exeter theater for three days, but I predict there will be a demand for a return engagement when the merits of the offering go broadcast. The play itself was ever a favorite with theatergoers, and we would like to hear the lines spoken by Dustin Farnum, who makes an ideal David in the film version. Another one to score is Winifred Kingston—for whom I have never cared much in the Western plays—with the robust Dustin—but here she is a picture of daintiness and shows more power than heretofore. I should line up this play with "Vanity Fair," "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," "My Lady's Slipper" and "She Stoops to Conquer" for correct costuming, and no modern stuff injected. What a delicious comedienne Lydia Yeamans Titus is! The scene when David spills the cup of tea on her gown was one to remember. A feature during the presentation was the playing by Jarvis Jocelyn of old English songs, notably "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," whenever David was thinking of Ada. An unusual amount of applause followed the play, which should be shown everywhere, as it is a classic.

"The Mark of a Gentleman" seems an excellent picture for mixed audiences, young and old, as it carries a good story in manliness and is clean all through, to say nothing of the romance interwoven. It is a Universal offering worth while and so well done by Herbert Rawlinson, Helen Wright and an altogether capable company. Athletic prowess plays a vigorous part and there are really funny scenes over the efforts of fat men to reduce their avoirdupois. Another short picture by the same producers was "The Wooing of Aunt Jemima," a good comedy, released here for Sunday programs.

Watch your titles! In a Metro picture with the Drews in "Sweet Charity." I noted the word "allright." What's your authority? The error is not quite so bad as the too frequent "alright," which has no place in the dictionary, but why not make it two words and thus be all right?

* * *

Anything Zangwill writes is sure to compel attention, but when pictured the story stirs every emotion. The Hub literary set turned out to see our own Pauline Frederick in "The Moment Before," a somewhat novel idea in the working out of the story into a sort of "looking backward" manner. We enjoyed it immensely, also the fine support given the star by Thomas Holding, Frank Losee and others. Particularly beautiful were some of the outdoor scenes like the pair on horseback riding along in the moonlight in front of the shimmering sea. It is a splendid Paramount offering.

William Krauth with his Park theater orchestra is doing excellent work in accompanying the pictured scenes, and he gives orchestral selections and also request numbers. Recently he introduced a distinctly patriotic feature in a march dedicated to preparedness, during which red, white and blue incandescents lighted the foliage framing the stage. Pictures of Washington, President Wilson and "Old Glory" were thrown upon the screen while the orchestra and entire house rose during the playing of our national air. There was prolonged and spontaneous applause rightly bestowed.

"The Feud Girl" has been seen here at several theaters and went well, for it shows clearly the life of the feudists who no doubt still exist to some extent in the mountainous regions of the South. The feud in this play is settled in a way that appeals to everyone who understands and appreciates the meaning of the scriptural phrase, "A little child shall lead them," in this case it was the unborn one. Rather a daring idea, but it brought a lump to one's throat. One kiddie wanted to know what they were whispering about and his mother told him to "shut up." Nice mother that! Hazel Dawn had strong support. There was a good story all through and the men in front enjoyed the fist fights though some of the feminine fans said they could not see any fun in such pummeling. The closing reel showed the wonderful results of the get-together spirit and the evolution of the mountaineers aided by capital and young blood.

Lubin certainly has a winner in "Dollars and the Woman" with Ethel Clayton, whose work we so enjoyed in "The Great Divide" with House Peters. In this newer play she runs the gamut of emotions and the story is excellent. I cannot for the life of me see why the Pennsylvania Board of Censors disapproved of it. Here we have an incident with a bit of sex stuff, but what happens? The man instantly sees his error, swallows his medicine, and sets about making amends to the little woman who sought his financial aid for the husband she adored. It was a splendid bit of work.

* * *

The Hub has not seen the Gish sisters or Mae Marsh for some time, so we are anticipating the coming releases by the Triangle Company which will soon give us "An Innocent Magdalene," and a play for little Mae in which animals figure. In New York I ran into Young Thomas Soriero, manager of the Park theater of the Hub, who was over to get some new ideas, though he has plenty on tap. Farther up Broadway I happened to find Manager Walter Irwin of the V-L-S-E at his desk with a hearty welcome. There was the same cordiality at the International Film office in Columbus Circle, and as usual at the Metro studio. It is worth while to get to New York and feel the pulse of things in film land and gather inspiration.

We have a treat in store when "Bob" Warwick is released in "Friday the Thirteenth." Another World Film release will give pleasure, "The Velvet Paw," with Gail Kane and House Peters. We expect Kitty Gordon to come back with her back display ere long in "The Crucial Test" now in rehearsal.

"The Dumb Girl of Portici" is being shown at the Copley theater after practically all Boston fans had seen it at the big Boston theater. Many are taking it in again at this cosy playhouse.

What Is a Photoplay

By Epes Winthrop Sargent.

JUST what is a photoplay? It seems remarkable that in a business largely, almost wholly, founded upon their production there should be such indifference as to what a photoplay really is. It is even more surprising that so few should really know the answer. The man who makes automobiles knows all about the manufacture of automobiles. He studies every angle of production. He knows something of metallurgy, something of mechanics, knows fabrics and material in general, shop costs and systems and he gathers men about him whose expert knowledge of these matters supplement his more general information. In motion pictures it is all different.

There are not three manufacturers of films in the entire business who really and truly know a photoplay when they see one. They do not even know that the very term is a misnomer. They have been running plants and have been making money. They were content. Now that most of them are no longer making money, they are turning to costly stage stars, to camera tricks, to new advertising forms and some are even spending money for manuscripts, but there are few manufacturers who know what a photoplay is or how it should be made.

In the first place, a photoplay is not a play. It is here that most of the misconception has arisen, fostered largely by the directors, most of whom have been drafted from the stage or who have risen from the ranks of photoplayers trained by stage directors. Wyndham Gittens, of the Melies company and formerly one of the editors for Frank A. Munsey's string of periodicals, puts most compactly the thoughts of others when he says that a motion picture is a story and not a play and is to be told as a story and not as a play.

This is not exactly correct, for the motion picture is neither a story nor a play. It is a form peculiar to itself, but it is best described in a definition this writer originated for a Lubin form sheet some seven years ago and which was later incorporated into Technique of the Photoplay.

A photoplay is a story told in action instead of words.

It is not a play told in action instead of words. That would be a pantomime and photoplay is not pantomime. It is a story told in action and it should be told as a story and not as a play. That is where the trouble has laid right along. From the very beginning there has been something radically wrong with photoplay production, but the novelty of the idea, the cheapnes of this form of entertainment and the favor in which the leading players have been held has permitted the imperfect productions to find acceptance just as in 1896 people crowded into the vaudeville houses and store shows to see fifty feet of film showing perhaps a scene just outside the theater.

For twenty years the success of the business has been based upon varying forms of novelty and not upon the intrinsic value of the work presented. The old scenics tired. They were replaced by short farces. These in turn palled and were amplified into the full reel length. In time they grew to two, to three, to five-reel lengths, and with "Cabiria" and "Quo Vadis" length alone was supplemented by a splendor of production hitherto undreamed of. This was followed by the presence of stars of the dramatic stage and for a time this served just as the exhibition of the dramatic has-beens in the vaudeville theaters served their turn to bring to these houses a clientele hitherto strange and, in passing, a clientele now largely lost again.

In vaudeville when the novelty of the dramatic art waned the problem became one of presenting real plays instead of old stars in any vehicle that would serve to take them on and bring them off. It is the same way with the pictures. We have played the last of the trump cards, apparently, and at last, after twenty years, are suddenly required to make good with motion pictures and not with novelty alone, and there are not a dozen directors in this country who can bat an average of .300 successes, because there are not a dozen directors who have even a rudimentary knowledge of the true principles of photoplay. They are making plays; not stories, and they are successful only to the degree in which they unconsciously place narrative before the artifice of the stage. It is almost wholly accident that brings about the hits.

Take from your own experience the photoplays that have made the strongest and most lasting impression. How many of these are plays and how many are stories? If you can differentiate, you'll find that most, if not all, were narratives in action rather than plays in action alone.

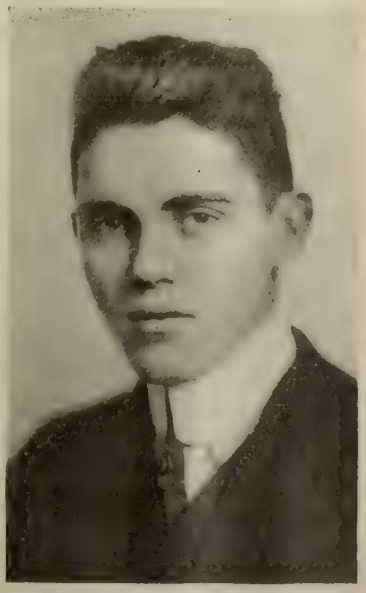
This is because the men who make them are trained to the stage. They view all stories from the angle of the stage. They produce them with the technique of the stage, modified but slightly to conform to the new conditions. They are not story tellers. They cannot appreciate story telling. They demand plays and accept only those stories in which the theatrical predominates over the truly dramatic, which is something very different from the theatric. If the play is not striking from the producer's point of view, he proceeds to fix it up to his liking, cramming it with old and threadbare tricks that he has used in all his other productions and reducing it to the same level of mediocrity. He cannot realize a real photoplay because—no matter what his reputation—he knows little or nothing about photoplay production. He is a stage director working as a stage director would work because he has no knowledge of story telling and would not use it if he had.

When the business outgrew the old-time picture people; when a higher standard seemed to have become necessary, manufacturers turned to the stage for men competent to direct the players. In all these years these directors have ruled production with iron will, doggedly and determinedly adhering to old standards and methods. They are the products of a time when the men who were there when the business started were no longer competent to conduct affairs. They were an improvement and their work a novelty. So long as novelty lasted there was no complaint, but now the order changeth. If there is to be a photoplay business there must be photoplays, and a photoplay is not a play at all but a story told in action instead of words and told as a story and not as a play. The action must be vivid, interesting, gripping, but it must be narrative action and not play action. Not until this is understood will the condition of affairs improve and those who have drifted from the theaters be brought back to the enjoyment of real productions.

As a play "The Clansman" was but an indifferent success. As a photoplay it finds a better exposition because Mr. Griffith has told a story and not a play, something he does not always do.

Frank Shaw

A LITTLE over four years ago, a clean-cut young chap walked into the Vitagraph yard at Flatbush and asked to see Sam Spedon, head of the publicity department. At that time the Vitagraph Company operated a stock room, where were kept photos and cuts of players, banners, postal cards, etc., that found ready sale among theater proprietors and picture fans. This branch was growing so fast it became necessary to enlarge the force in order to have one person devote his entire time to looking after it. The sixteen-year-old boy got the job.



Frank Shaw

Young Frank immediately began making friends with the Vitagraph players and other employes, and it was but a short time before he was in the good graces of every one connected with the company. He was also making his personality felt outside the plant by his willingness to oblige and promptness in looking after mail orders and telephone requests of nearby theater managers.

From the position of office boy in 1912, through the intermediate grades, to the head of the news service department of a big motion picture concern in 1916, where he not only has innumerable duties to contend with, but directs and oversees the work of a force of twelve, is the enviable record of Frank Shaw, head of the news service department of the Vitagraph Company, who has yet to reach his twenty-first birthday.

The Country Theater

Frank G. Andrews Writes of the Importance of the House in the Small Town—One of the Ribs of the Industry.

THE country theater may not be the backbone of the moving picture industry, but it is at least one of the ribs—and it's no fifth rib, either. By country theater I mean picture houses in towns of less than 5,000 population.

The condition which the country exhibitor has to face is somewhat different from that of his city brother, and it is one which manufacturers, and exchange men as well, should carefully study. I am not posing as a know-all in the moving picture game, but I have been peculiarly favored for several years to watch and study this particular end of the business. I think I know the country side of the picture show business as well as the next man, this because most of the highbrows of the industry have given the better part of their attention to the problems of the city exhibitor.

You eliminate the country theater—the house where they give just one show a day, and that in the evening beginning at 7:30—and you have done something that will make sellers of film wince when once they come to realize its full effect. Therefore I think it of extreme importance that manufacturers who prepare films and exchanges who commercialize on them should give this end of the business more than passing thought.

It is probably true that the picture business is just now facing a crucial test. Thousands of theaters are closing, and the boards are not being nailed up alone against those located in the cities. Closed theaters are numerous in the country, too. The reason is that there are and have been for some time too many theaters for the number of people available. It has reached a point now where the old question of the survival of the fittest makes its inevitable intrusion.

It used to be that some fellow with a hundred and fifty dollars fixed up a storeroom and packed 'em in. Somebody else saw him carrying his money to the bank and rented a storeroom across the street. Both did so well that a third man started. They were all doing well until some experienced fellow from a larger city down the road heard of it. He came up, built a modern place, introduced modern methods, and "hogged" the business. The three little fellows cussed the big fellow to his face, but the other man had the place, showed the goods and got all the business. His one blade of grass is now growing where three grew before, and the public wouldn't go back to the old way for anything. That is why so many small places are closing. It doesn't necessarily mean that fewer people are attending picture shows or that they are growing tired of pictures—although I'll admit that the long features of mediocre quality, of which there are many, do try their patience and faith in pictures at times.

Here is the strong point about the picture business in the small town: The exhibitor must depend upon the same patrons night after night. The every-nighters are the backbone of his business. When he loses one he has just cause to weep. And he can't hold any one customer unless he continues to please that customer. He may advertise the top of his head off and tell 'em in the papers that he is showing the best pictures on earth, but it won't draw the country patron, only just about so long. You may entice them into a city theater by various dodges, but it's what you show in the country that counts, because there are no transients.

Here is where the small theater faces its greatest problem. The exhibitor knows what his customers want and goes to bed sick when he is stung on some feature. He knows that the showing of the unsatisfactory picture is going to react and hurt his attendance for several nights to come. He knows that the showing of one unsatisfactory picture will do more to tear down his business than the showing of three good pictures can counteract. Patrons are too prone to call a picture "rotten" and as slow as cold molasses to praise a good one. People characteristically will knock twice where they will boost once.

Now the small exhibitor would very much like to satisfy his patrons and thereby swell his receipts; but how is he going to do it? His heart is right and he means well. He wants only good pictures and is willing to pay for them. But how is he going to get pictures that are uniformly good? There ain't no such animal. Take the best feature service in the world today. You may get features that the company will guarantee to be all masterpieces, but you will find some among them that your patrons will classify as very ordinary, and in some cases will call absolutely rotten—an unpleasant but fairly descriptive word of quite modern origin.

If an exhibitor takes a service, he has got to take it. He must take it as it runs—good, bad and indifferent—which is, to be candid, about the way they run. He can't pick out the good ones and sidestep the poor ones. He can't have all Mary Pickfords, Pearl Whites, Francis Bushmans and Clara Kimball Youngs. He must take the culls along with the primes.

Country people generally prefer the features to the smaller subjects, but there are times when they are dubious. To watch through five or six reels of a widely-advertised feature, waiting for the punch that never comes, is a trying test on the nerves. To watch the antics instead of the acting of a company of misfit actors and actresses, who apparently are trying so hard to earn the money that they overdo their parts, is not entertaining; it is pitiful. Don't get the idea that patrons of the city theaters are the only ones wise enough and intelligent enough to perceive these things. Country people are picture-wise quite on a par with patrons in the centers of civilization. They see pictures, dream pictures and serve them at the table, and some picture fans and fannesses living in towns of two thousand can tell you more about certain actors and actresses in a play than the men who made the picture know about it themselves. Some of our people are travelling encyclopedias of information on pictures. Really, in a country town, what else is there to do?

Much can be written about the moving picture situation in the country towns, and perhaps I shall contribute more at some future time. The point of what I have said is that people who manufacture and sell pictures should give especial attention to the peculiar needs of the country exhibitor because even the fellow with no opposition is having just as hard a row to hoe as some of his desperate city brethren. In other words, whether you've got opposition or not, you can't get people into your theater unless you please them. You may drive a horse to water but you can't make him drink.

Will Pay $1,000 For Scenarios

Herbert Blache Says He Will Give That Sum for First Choice of Writer's Output.

HERBERT BLACHE, president of the United States Amusement Corporation, announces he is willing to pay $1,000 apiece for good dramatic scenarios. "In fact," states Mr. Blache, "I would rather pay $1,000 to good feature writers who will give me first choice of their work than a lesser sum. But I must have first choice and the work must be the writer's best. I have no objection to writers who sell $1,000 stories to me writing for as many other producers as they please, but they must first present all their dramatic themes to me if they want $1,000 right along for their plays. With that simple understanding, I am willing to give $1,000 for every dramatic theme I can use, and I accordingly hope to surround myself with the best staff of scenario contributors in the country."

Madame and Herbert Blache will shortly open their Greater Blache Studios adjoining the present Blache-Solax studio on Lemoine Avenue, Fort Lee, N. J. The Greater Blache Studios will produce dramatic features for World and Pathe, in addition to the programs with whom they have present arrangements. It is due to this additional production work—which starts the moment the Greater Blache Studios are opened—that Mr. Blache needs scenarios of the strictly feature order. A spirited effort is being made to interest all the bigger writers of moving picture scenarios, but the figure will be as cheerfully paid to an unknown if he can write "big" stuff.

NEW YORKERS FORM PHOTOPLAY LEAGUE.

ONE of the outgrowths of the recent meeting of the delegates of the Federated Women's Clubs which was held in New York City was the formation of the Photoplay League and the appointing on the advisory committee of such prominent New Yorkers as Cornelius Vanderbilt, Adolph Lewisohn, Isaac N. Seligman, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mrs. James Speyer and many others prominent in the social life of the metropolis.

At their first official meeting held at the Seventh Regiment Armory recently, after the organization was instituted, the forthcoming Pallas release "Davy Crockett" was shown as an example of the modern high grade picture.

Mr. Lascelles, one of the speakers, closed his remarks with an appeal to the Womens Clubs of the country to form committees to review all motion pictures in their respective localities and memorialize the manufacturers of any plays which seemed to them as improper to be shown.

Horsley Pictures for July

Has An Interesting Program for the First Week—Good Cub Comedy.

A UNIQUE romantic comedy drama, in which a motion picture star portrays the part of a motion picture star, is among the Horsley-Mutual offerings for the week of July 1, the novel characterization falling to Crane Wilbur in the two reel Centaur feature, "The King O'Make Believe."

The play was written by Mr. Wilbur and the author-star has provided a very strong up-to-the-minute vehicle, highly dramatic in many respects with an excellent comedy relief. Mae Gaston shoulders the leading feminine role, which is a sympathetic part, allowing this talented young actress plenty of opportunity for splendid acting. John Oaker, the popular young juvenile actor, is also well cast and he handles a difficult part in good fashion. Others supporting Mr. Wilbur are Joseph Hazelton, Pearl Elmore and O. Biglow.

As Neil Stuart, "The King O'Make Believe," Crane Wilbur accidentally comes in contact with Hope Hathaway, Miss Gaston, who has been crippled since childhood and wealthy by inheritance is the victim of a scheming guardian who insists upon a marriage between the girl and his lazy and uneducated son.

"The King" comes into the girl's life and he, hearing of the abuse she is forced to endure, offers help. The guardian plans a hasty marriage and the faithful colored nurse summons the actor to prevent the wedding. The guardian is successful, however, but while the youth is fleeing with his bride, the horses attached to his buggy become unmanageable. To save his own life the youth leaps to the road, but his act is fatal to him. "The King" overtakes the runaway team, saves the girl and takes her to his mother's home. Science and love work wonders for a happy and pretty end. The play was staged under the supervision of Director Robert S. Broadwell.

A screaming one reel Cub Comedy, featuring the little star George Ovey in his famous Jerry character, is another of the Horsley output for this week. "Jerry's Big Haul" is the name of the comedy and Mr. Ovey introduces some new and very laughable antics before he finally makes his haul, which is his engagement to Josie, a pretty little dark-haired heiress, ably played by Claire Alexander, the dainty Cub ingenue.

At the start Jerry gets in trouble with the landlady and then the police. To escape he runs away and is confronted by Josie. It is love at first sight. The father of the girl does not approve of Jerry until the funny little fellow saves the father's treasure box, after several would-be safe blowers have done a lot of damage. Director Milton H. Fahrney has produced a very realistic explosion scene, rarely seen in comedy.

Others in the cast are George George, Jefferson Osborne, Janet Sully, Louis FitzRoy, Robert Kenyon, Gordon MacGregor, Harry Jackson, Arthur Mund and Ray Lincoln.

Favor Extended Bookings

Exhibitors in Kansas City Territory Finding Many Advantages in Longer Runs.

A FACTOR of more than passing interest among local exchanges in Kansas City, Mo., is that of extended bookings. Although most managers are influenced by their particular needs, the general consensus of opinion is that extended bookings are extremely desirable. The fact remains that nearly each week sees a new house in the Kansas City territory adopting the extended booking policy. The exchange men in favor of this have many arguments to present to the exhibitor: saving in express rates, cutting in advertising bills, lower film rates, and better music. All these, and many others, the exchanges contend are factors in developing this phase of the question. Better pictures for less money when taken on extended bookings is one of the most important items favoring this scheme.

When Frank Newman, proprietor of the Royal theater, opened that house and announced that he would change the program but twice a week, he was scoffed at by pioneers of the game. This, however, did not deter Mr. Newman from going ahead. Now he has the most successful moving picture theater in Kansas City, and his place is taken as a model of successful show-houses in the entire Southwest. A short while after Mr. Newman started twice-weekly changes, the Willis Wood opened up with shows lasting not less than one week, and many times much longer. Gradually other houses adopted the plan, until now many little suburban theaters play pictures successive days. One noticeable exception to this is the Apollo, which in the past several years has shown but one picture two straight days; that was "Chaplin's Burlesque on Carmen," and a new attendance record was established on the second night.

Prominent theaters which have adopted the extended booking are as follows: Regent, Royal, Winnwood, Warwick, Lencord, Sapphire, Wonderland, Empress, Gilham, Benton. A few of the out-of-town theaters are Watson, Holland, Wichita, Majestic, Wellington, Chelsea, Springfield, and the Orpheum at St. Joe.

NEW PLAYERS FOR HORSLEY.

During the past week four new members have been added to the acting force at the David Horsley studios, and they will be seen in the near future Centaur features of the Horsley-Mutual productions.

Myra Davis Dowling, an experienced actress of the legitimate drama has been engaged as a member of the supporting company of the co-stars Margaret Gibson and William Clifford and her first effort will be in a character part which gives her an opportunity to display her talent in such work. Marguerite Foss, who is familiar to motion picture viewers, has also been added to this company.

Lloyd Holton, who in the past has been seen in a number of big productions for Southern California producers, has been cast with the supporting company of Crane Wilbur and Corine Bradford, known as the "girl on the cover," she having posed for many artists throughout the country, makes her debut as a motion picture actress in a forthcoming Centaur feature, with the Crane Wilbur company.

RAVER MOVES TO ROCKVILLE CENTER.

The Raver Film Corporation moved their executive offices to their studios at Rockville Center, Long Island, last week. The building which will house the offices of the company is finished and ready for occupancy.

So much of Mr. Raver's time was demanded at the studios in the supervising of construction and installation of equipment that the offices which have been maintained in the World Tower building were moved to the studio as soon as the office building was completed.

In their new home the Raver Company will have even better facilities than they enjoyed in their New York offices. Everything was carefully planned by Mr. Raver personally with the result that things have been arranged to secure the greatest amount of efficiency.

The studios are only thirty-five minutes from New York City. Territory buyers seeking state rights on "The Other Girl" the Augustus Thomas play featuring James J. Corbett or "Driftwood" from the play by Owen Davis; "The Fortunate Youth" from Wm. J. Locke's novel or "Life Without Soul" adapted from Mary W. Shelley's book Frankenstein will be met at the depot by the company's automobile and the pictures will be exhibited to them in the studio projection room.

BROOKLYN EXHIBITORS TO HOLD FORUM.

At the regular meeting of the Brooklyn Exhibitors at the Triangle theater, at 11:30 o'clock on the evening of Thursday, June 15, an open forum will be held. The exhibitors will be addressed by General Manager Walter W. Irwin of the V-L-S-E, General Manager M. H. Hoffman of the Bluebird exchanges, Commissioner Hartigan of the Weights and Measures Bureau, General Sales Manager C. R. Seelye of Pathe, Deputy Commissioner Kaufman of the License Bureau, and Borough Inspector John Dillon of the Police Department.

MR. URBAN RETURNS TO ENGLAND.

Charles Urban, who two months ago came to the United States to exploit "How Britain Prepared," the remarkable subject produced under his supervision with the co-operation of the British Government, returned home on Saturday, June 10.

GOLD KING SCREEN FOR NEW JOPLIN, MO., HOUSE

Grubel Brothers, of Kansas City, Kan., who own and control a chain of theaters in Kansas and Missouri, have recently purchased a Gold King Screen for their New Electric theater in Joplin, Mo. President Jones will personally supervise the installation of the screen.

FRIEDMAN INCREASES "SPOILERS" TERRITORY.

Benjamin Friedman, general manager of the Friedman Film Corporation, of Minneapolis, has secured the rights for "The Spoilers" for Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas. This makes eight states in which Mr. Friedman is booking the big Selig film, as he already controlled Minnesota, Montana and North and South Dakota.

"The Redemption of Dave Darcey"

James Morrison Featured in Five-Part Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature of Thrilling Melodramatic Style.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE enjoyment which the spectator feels in viewing this production may be due to the fine impersonation by James Morrison of the character of Dave Darcey, a crook, whose addiction to crime began, when, as a hungry little street urchin, he stole from a fruit stand and was hauled off by a police officer to face the punishment of the hardened criminal. Or it may be due to the magnetism of the story itself, which deals with a sociological problem in which none of us can fail to be interested, although the utopian manner in which certain important events are introduced leads us to regret that the story had not been developed in more professional style. There are also frequent disturbing jumps in the assembling of scenes. At times the picture runs smoothly and we find ourselves absorbed in the remarkable tale of "The Redemption of Dave Darcey" when suddenly a roughly molded connecting link causes our senses to awaken to a point of criticism.

Scene from "The Redemption of Dave Darcey" (Vitagraph).

In the opening of the story we see Dave returning with his booty from a thieving expedition. A few hours later at a dance to which he is treating his friends he is attacked by a rival gangster, resulting in a spectacular scene in which Dave shoots the gangster who feigns death. In his flight Dave enters the home of Grace Harrington, where a dance is also in full swing. Here he is protected from the police, and Philip Benton, Grace's sweetheart and son of a munitions manufacturer, at Dave's request for a chance to make good offers him a position. This he fills satisfactorily until he is discharged for interfering on behalf of Benton's sweetheart, when the young millionaire has become infatuated with a foreign secret agent. An attempt to blow up the munitions works by associates of the adventuress is frustrated by Dave, and results eventually in restoring him to the good graces of Benton.

This production which was released on the program of the V-L-S-E on Monday, June 12, has in the cast Belle Bruce, who plays the feminine lead; Billie Billings, Emanuel A. Turner, Mary Maurice, Robert Gaillord, Gerald Gordon, John Costello, Logan Paul, Dan Hayes and Charles J. Giegerich, Jr.

"Perils of Divorce"

A Peerless World Film Melodrama in Which Edna Wallace Hopper Plays the Part of an Ever Faithful Wife.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

IN the introductory title "Perils of Divorce" is frankly and correctly called a melodramatic story, thus criticism such as might be leveled at a nominally serious study of divorce is disarmed. As a melodrama in which the situations govern the characters and not the characters the situations, this five-part picture, directed by Edwin August, makes very passable entertainment, although it is scarcely the type of photoplay to better the standing of the screen among thoughtful people. The moral tone is not objectionable, in that right and virtue triumph; but the story, in material and treatment, suggests nothing new or elevating.

We gather that divorce is perilous because it may be the outcome of unjust suspicions leading to the separation of a congenially mated couple, the wife in the present instance being played by Edna Wallace Hopper, the husband by Frank Sheridan. They are an entirely devoted pair—despite a disparity in years, and the young wife's fondness for pleasures that are quite beyond her middle-aged husband—until a designing woman enters the household and deliberately plots trouble. Fortune favors her in the presence of Mason Tegars, a debonnair man-about-town, who is in love with Constance, regardless of the barrier of matrimony.

Everything works out according to the plans of the adroit schemer—Graham becomes secretly jealous, then openly jealous and finally, confronted by seemingly undeniable evidence of guilt, he disrupts the happy family, and all the while there was not the slightest cause for a divorce. In the last part of the final reel, the home-wrecker, having appropriated as much of Graham's money as she needs, runs away with another man, leaving a note that clears Constance and makes possible a fond reunion.

For its variety in locations and the richness of its settings the picture is to be recommended, the scenes of an ice-skating carnival at night being especially worthy of note. It is here that Constance falls through a hole in the ice and is rescued by the man with whom her name is unfavorably linked. Scenes in a restaurant where the deposed wife is employed as a dancer, and those in a Chinatown dive also are well presented.

Scene from "Perils of Divorce" (World).

Without being an exceptional screen subject, Mrs. Hopper plays Constance with considerable spirit, whereas, Frank Sheridan, in an effort to portray strong feeling, is in danger of becoming too melodramatic. The remainder of the cast is efficient, particularly Alec Francis as the faithful friend of the wrongly accused woman.

Biographs Worth Reissuing

"Men and Women," a Three-Part Drama—"The Squaw's Love," an Indian Subject, With Many Stirring Scenes.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

AS in most of the Biograph reissues, the cast presenting "Men and Women" includes an exceptional number of screen notables, whose presence is bound to give the picture an interest apart from the story. This three-reel drama, in the matters of plot material, development, and the production supplied by James Kirkwood, fulfills requirements; but had it been acted by a less distinguished company, there would have been slight reason for singling it out from among other photoplays of a similar nature.

In the part of a girl whose faith in her lover remains unshaken, even after he has been found guilty of theft, we find Blanche Sweet looking pleasingly girlish and acting with her accustomed repose. Then there is Marshal Neilan, as the youth who suffers sufficiently for his misdeed; also Lionel Barrymore, as a man who lives down one serious mistake and becomes governor of a state. Gertrude Robinson figures prominently in the story, whereas, several of the subordinate parts are presented by players whose names are now featured whenever they appear on the screen. Were the story less diverting than it is, the cast, no doubt, would assure its success. The plot follows with plenty of detail the trouble resulting from the theft of bonds from a bank, the subsequent run on the institution and the series of circumstances that nearly ensnare an innocent youth. Practically all of the scenes are in appropriately staged interiors.

Scene from "Men and Women" (Biograph).

Mabel Normand, Alfred Paget and Claire McDowell, are the leading players in "The Squaw's Love," a vivid little romance of Indian life that works up to a thoroughly impressive climax. Particularly fine are the river scenes, with the canoes being tossed about in the rapids during a chase that means life or death for an ostracized brave.

"Hypocrisy"

A Melodrama by Fox That "Holds Up the Mirror" in Part—Will Be Considered a Big Picture.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

MOVING PICTURES with vital themes are not too many, and this one, "Hypocrisy," a five reel Fox picture, not only deserves praise, but is sure of popular success. It shows us the bluff and pretence of a certain circle of modern society and of people who live without means in splendor, parasites often of the most shameless kind. The picture makes them out a mean lot, and it is pleasing to see them shown up. It tells the love story of the daughter of one of these shameless social parasites. The girl is played by Virginia Pearson, who makes her very charming indeed. That the story develops with imagination and has several exciting, melodramatic incidents is in its favor; but it doesn't take much imagination to see shortcomings in it. Perhaps the producer of it knew that the spirit shown by his letting what was pretty good remain for good enough was, at bottom, part and parcel with the spirit he holds to our scorn. He is as wise as the king who puts tin in his own silver coin. It is a spirit of bluff and pretence that is often shown by picture makers.

The worst thing in the picture, perhaps, is this: The villain thinks he can fasten a great crime on the hero and make him a "by word," and the crime is the selling of stocks in a railroad that everyone knows is in the hands of a receiver. The buyer is the villain himself, a great figure in finance, who knows all about the road and wants the stock to effect an illegal merger. Would modern society count that a crime or a business virtue? The picture makes the crime so great that the hero's wife does the selling, since her husband would never consent to it, to pay her bridge debts and thereby gets into all kinds of trouble from which she nobly rescues herself.

Again, the picture makes itself trivial by keeping the villain in the limelight in season and out. That he should come with the mother on her first visit to the daughter after her runaway marriage to the poor young man, is almost unthinkable, the more because the mother came for his sake. His being there in spirit makes it disgusting to have him there in person. The mother is trying to get her daughter away from the young husband for the rich man's sake. It would have cost more money and more pains to have made the situation clear by suggestion rather than by having the man himself come to rub in the truth, so to speak, and make the dull spectator understand.

Again, the mother, as played, is but a poor figure without atmosphere or background or understanding of the role, a dead weight all through. She is nothing but the typical stage villainess. Such a villainess thinks that a character to be hateful must smile hatefully and leer with lifted eyebrows. To show affection and at the same time a heart full of selfishness takes more art and is more effective. A mother's caress while she deceived her daughter would have made the audience hate her to a triumph of art. But she seems not to have tried to do it.

The story, even with its drawbacks, holds extremely well. Many of the parts are finely acted. The staging is excellent, many of the sets being perfect in atmosphere and effect.

"The Making of Maddalena"

In Morosco Subject Edna Goodrich Gives Splendid Interpretation of Pathetic Italian Character.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IN "The Making of Maddalena," a five-part subject produced by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, the splendid characterization of Edna Goodrich is the making of a picture that has much to commend it. She is the center of interest throughout. It is a pathetic role, that of Maddalena, an Italian girl, a painter's model, who falls in love with a would-be artist who comes to Rome to "study.." Miss Goodrich's portrayal of Maddalena, the timid, sweet-faced step-daughter of a sot, is marked by unusual charm and sympathy, and also judgment.

Scene from "The Making of Maddalena" (Morosco).

The excellence of her acting tends to submerge that of her supporting cast. One player who stands out, however, is John Burton in the role of Randolph Hale, the father of the artist.

The locale of the picture is New York City in the opening, Rome in the second phase, and back to New York at the denouement. The subject is an adaptation of the play by Samuel and Mary Lewis. There is a typically long stage cast. While in construction, "The Making of Maddalena" is not impressive, nevertheless there are a goodly number of situations that stir, some of them notably. That such is the case is due much to the personality and the work of Miss Goodrich.

Randolph Hale, when informed that his wife is declining in health on account of the casting out of the son, kisses his wife good-bye and announces he is going to Rome to bring back the boy. He leaves the house as if he were catching a street car rather than a steamer making weekly sailings. Again, the unidentified pestilence supposedly sweeping the east side so virulently as to register 900 cases in 24 hours violates the probabilities because it is against the history of the town these modern days.

Director Frank Lloyd has well staged the subject.

"The Avenger"

Two-Reel Lubin Melodrama Founded on a Mysterious Murder—Written by Julian Louis Lamothe.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ALTHOUGH the Stars and Stripes protects all sorts of religious beliefs, it has remained for Julian Louis Lamothe to supply the Hindus of this country with a temple for the worship of Buddha. It is located in the cellar of a tenement in one of the Coast cities and is the scene of the closing episode of "The Avenger," the two-reel photoplay which is the subject of this review.

A mysterious murder is the first incident in the drama. William Worthing, a collector of curios, is the victim. He is found upon the floor of a room, the door and window of which are bolted on the inside. Suspicion points to Manu, a Hindu servant, but until the son of the murdered man is sent for no progress is made in solving the mystery. Young Worthing recalls that, while in India with his father, they visited a temple and learned of a little image of Buddha that contained a bit of sacred parchment. This image he had seen later among his father's curios. Knowing that the sacred relic had been stolen, the younger Worthing concludes that Manu murdered his father in order to get back the image and to square accounts with the despoiler of the temple. His suspicion is correct, and the last reel shows Manu restoring the relic to an altar of his god. The deity proves very ungrateful, however, and allows the American to hoodoo the Hindu into taking his own life by a series of hanky-panky tricks from the "Magician's Own Book."

Ever since Wilkie Collins wrote "The Moonstone" tales of the relentless avengers of the East have held a weird fascination for many simple souls, and also for those of a loftier mental growth. When transferred to the screen stories of this order have the added merit of being able to visualize the "magic and spells" performed for the benefit of the faithful. Fairy tales, detective stories and tales of mystery, a relish for them long outlasts our childish faith in their verity!

Leon D. Kent, who directed the picture, has shown a fair appreciation of its needs. The acting of L. C. Shumway, Sidney Hayes, Robert Gray, George Routh, Velma Whitman and Melvin Mayo is equal to the requirements of the scenario.

New Vim Comedies

Harry C. Myers and Rosemary Theby Appear in Amusing Stories of Domestic Life.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

THE joys and disappointments and the everyday incidents of domestic life are the inspiration for the comedies being made by Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby, late of Universal, and now producing for the Vim brand. The titles of four single-reel pictures shown in advance of release will indicate the nature of the subjects. They are "Spring Cleaning," "The Connecting Bath," "Will a Woman Tell?" and "Their Dream House," probably the most laughable of any, although the others may take equally well with an audience that appreciates refined comedy.

Scene from "Will a Woman Tell?" (Vim).

In their clean tone and the absence of horseplay these new Vim films are pleasantly unlike the customary run of pictures issued under the head of comedy. Moreover, they are acted with fine spirit by the co-stars and the photographic work of Harry Keepers is so uniformly good that it merits particular mention. "Spring Cleaning" presents the troubles of a husband on May 1st because his wife removes the rugs and the hangings and otherwise disturbs his comfort when he had counted on several days of domestic ease after a trip on the road. In "The Connecting Bath" a couple preparing to get a divorce are placed in adjoining rooms in a hotel where there is considerable confusion over the use of the bath. Needless to say a chance meeting brings about a reconciliation.

"Will a Woman Tell?" is founded on the notion that it is impossible for a woman to keep a secret, though a lack of reticence may have serious consequences; whereas in "Their Dream House" we find an amusing exaggeration of the trials of newlyweds, who are fooled by a glib real estate agent into renting a cottage that is very pretty to look at but unsubstantial. Mr. Myers and Miss Theby are to be complimented on the first of their comedy productions for the General Film program.

"On the Italian Battle Front"

Official War Pictures Are Handled in This Country by the Italian Journal.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

EVERY nation in Europe has its official war pictures, just as it has a blue book, or a white book, or a yellow book, and in due time the pictures as well as the books are circulated in this country. England, France and Germany have had opportunities to present their versions of the conflict, and now the military activities of Italy are at hand in six reels of the most varied, interesting and pictorially beautiful film that has come to America from any source. The Italian Journal, under whose direction the picture is being shown, engaged Weber's theater, New York, for an indefinite run beginning June 12. Other prints will be displayed elsewhere.

The great difference between this and the usual picture of armies at the front is due to the wonderful country in which the Italian forces are operating. There are hundreds of feet that might be selected from these six reels for release as a scenic subject, and of course their value is increased immensely by reason of the human interest attaching to the graphic depiction of the offensive and defensive operations of the armies of Italy. Those who visit the various battle fronts generally return convinced that the war is lacking in romantic qualities, a conclusion that in no way applies to the conflict between Italy and Austria.

There is no attempt here to show actual fighting on a large scale; rather a detailed visualization of the problems confronting modern soldiers engaged in mountain warfare. The Alpine troops in action bring a sequence of remarkable scenes in which one is made to feel the perils of mountain climbing supplemented by the perils of war. In the background we see towering, snow-covered peaks, and then follow every step of the military operations necessary for the occupancy of these immense natural fortifications. The hauling of great guns up the mountain sides, the provisioning of the men, the building of redoubts to make more impregnable those provided by nature, are problems being met by military science, but in this particular phase of the great campaign science has not eliminated the need for heroism and initiative on the part of the individual soldier. The Italians occupying the summit of Mount Nero, sentry duty at an altitude of 10,000 feet, the lowering of the wounded from a mountain top after an engagement, destroying wire entanglements placed by the Austrians, are among a quantity of scenes calling for attention. Then, too, in this very ably edited collection of pictures, there are first rate scenes of the Italian fleet in action in the Adriatic. Concise sub-titles are printed in English and Italian.

The first thing Director Edwin Middleton did on arriving at Flushing, N. Y., from the Gaumont winter quarters at Jacksonville, Fla., was to announce the stars who are to appear in Robert Burns' "Gates of Divorce." Alexander Gaden and Miss Gertrude Robinson have been chosen for stellar honors in this three-act Mutual picture.

"The Fall of a Nation"

Thomas Dixon's Spectacular Plea for Preparedness Is Presented at Liberty Theater—Music by Victor Herbert.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

THE author of "The Birth of a Nation" essayed his second big picture without the aid of Griffith, and in "The Fall of a Nation" he produced, with the assistance of Bartley Cushing, a photoplay that need not be compared with earlier works because in several vital respects it is quite different. Where magnitude was desirable in arousing a war spirit in the audience Mr. Dixon prepared battle scenes on a gigantic scale, and the thrill one experiences when watching them is intensified by Victor Herbert's stirring music, probably the most appropriate score ever written for the accompaniment of a motion picture. For nearly half an hour toward the close of the first act the horror, the excitement, the noise and the tragedy of battle are brought within the four walls of a theater, and again at the end of the second act there is a thrilling depiction of an active nation in arms. But for the really distinctive quality of the production one need not wait for spectacular effects, necessary as they are in a cinema entertainment of this type.

Mr. Dixon chose a tremendous national theme and treated it with keen regard for the importance of trivial personal affairs in the lives of those who constitute the nation. In numberless ways and with a cleverness that might be called tricky he aimed to show just how a national calamity means unavoidable personal suffering, the breaking up of families and death —the death of the individual as well as that of the community, the state and the nation. He used many children in his picture, knowing full well that nothing moves an audience more surely than the tears of a child; he introduced fresh, pretty girls and subjected them to the ruthless hands of drunken soldiers; he made much of an ignorant Italian's devotion to his adopted country; he presented dumb animals, appealing in their helplessness; in fact, he overlooked few means of reaching the heart as it responds to patriotism or sentiment.

Scene from "The Fall of a Nation" (Dixon).

Then there is another yet more exceptional quality in "The Fall of a Nation"—the adroit use of humor and satire, the quick contrast by which the author shifts from a scene of tragic moment into one of effective comedy. For of an admittedly serious work the number of laughs in this production is unprecedented, and they are laughs having a legitimate place in the story. Some of them are due to natural, human comedy such as lends spice to everyday life, others to bitter ridicule, perhaps the bitterest ridicule of public men ever placed on the screen. The good taste of showing actors, unmistakably intended to represent William J. Bryan and Henry Ford, carrying flowers to a conquering army where they are given the task of peeling potatoes, would be more questionable if newspapers had not accustomed us to unrestrained satire. At all events a New York audience laughs very heartily, more heartily, no doubt, than will the audiences in Detroit, Mich., and Lincoln, Neb.

The argument of the picture is that of Theodore Roosevelt and the New York Tribune. What we need more than anything else just now is militant Americanism armed to the teeth to defend us from the forces of European powers certain to turn their attentions to this country as soon as their own disputes are settled. In a prologue covering important historical happenings in Europe and the United States between 1620 and 1905 Mr. Dixon shows with some success why the ideals of this country are worth preserving. This is his first reason for preparedness.

But unfortunately the dominant factions in the nation are blind to the impending danger, while right in the heart of New York conspirators employed by a foreign emperor are organizing to aid the invader. Even the heroine of the story, Virginia Holland, a leader of women's clubs, is an ardent pacifist, whereas her most promising admirer, John Vassar, is a stalwart young congressman, who tries without results to put through defense legislation. These are but two of the characters figuring prominently in a quite complex plot that keeps all of the essential figures in the foreground, either as patriots or traitors, during the ensuing action, terminating with the fall of the nation. Following a succession of tremendous battle scenes, clearly photographed and well assembled to work up suspense, unprepared America is annexed by the conqueror. During all this there is little appeal to a mind only open to conviction through a logical presentation of plausible arguments or facts; but most audiences will be carried along on a wave of patriotic emotion.

When it comes to reclaiming the country Mr. Dixon gives his imagination yet freer play by creating a band of loyal women, "Daughters of Jael," who secretly organize and then use their wits and charms to ensnare the officers of the dictator's army, preparatory to a country-wide uprising. The final scenes, with their dash and spirit and the young women riding here, there and everywhere in their pretty white uniforms, recall the Ku Klux clan episodes in "The Birth of a Nation," except that in the present instance it is rather difficult to take the military operations seriously.

Flora MacDonald gives a particularly sympathetic performance as the Italian woman devoted to her Little Tommaso, Loraine Huling is a pleasant girl, but too young in appearance to suggest the leader of a great movement; Arthur Shirley makes a manly young congressman, whereas Percy Standing and Phillip Gastrock, among others in a large cast, deserve mention.

"That Sort"

An Adaptation of Basil McDonald Hastings' Play in Five Acts, by Essanay, with Warda Howard, Duncan McRae and Ernest Maupain in the Reading Roles.

A little dreaming by the way,
A little toiling day by day;
A little pain, a little strife,
A little joy—and that is life.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

AS I viewed the first filmed act of "That Sort" I was impressed that the opening half of it was somewhat tedious; but this was soon forgotten as the story progressed, and interest grew until the final act created in my mind the verdict that the film play, based on the stage play by Basil McDonald Hastings, is a fine picture. But I restrict the application of "fine" to the powerful and convincing story and to the excellent acting of Miss Warda Howard, Duncan McRae and Ernest Maupain, not omitting due praise to John Lorenz and Miss Betty Brown.

Nor must commendation be lacking for the adaptation which was done by Charles J. Brabin, who also directed the production. Director Brabin made some oversights in the settings which will tend to detract from the merits of the production when viewed as a whole. I refer particularly to the theater scene where John Heppell (Duncan McRae) is seated in a box and Diana Laska (Miss Warda Howard) is on the stage dancing. Not another soul can be seen in the picture, which is intended to represent the interior of a theater while a performance is going on. And to make the scene still more incongruous, we see John Heppell, personally, present the actress with the flowers he has brought for the occasion.

The scene should have been omitted altogether rather than to produce it unrealistically. The contrast between this and other fine interior settings of the photoplay makes the blemish all the more conspicuous. In his direction of the cast Mr. Brabin is able and skillful, although prone at times to leave too little to the imagination of the spectator. The attempted suicide of Diana Loska, as I saw it in the pictures, is an instance; though I believe this will be changed before the release of the film.

The construction of the photoplay impressed me as novel. One of the opening scenes in the first act shows Diana Laska lying on the floor of her room in the Hotel Carlton, apparently dead. She is discovered by the help, and a doctor is summoned. Doctor Maxwell (Ernest Maupain) restores her to consciousness, and, struck by her intelligence and refinement, persuades her to tell him the story of her life.

The story of a woman's wrongs is thrillingly told on the screen up to the moment of her attempted suicide, and once, during its recital, the pictures tell us a story within the main story, a striking instance of the flexibility of moving picture art.

It develops that Doctor Maxwell is acquainted with John Scene from "That Sort" (Essanay).

Heppell (Duncan McRae), the woman's husband that was, and with the daughter that she had borne him before his drunkenness and brutality had driven her from her home into a cold and callous world, in which she had fared badly and sadly; and so from this point in the story until the close we watch with ever-increasing interest the contest for Diana Laska's re-instatement in her rights.

The closing scene, in which Diana's mother love forces her to renounce forever the hope of letting her own daughter know that she, and not another, is her real mother, is powerfully emotional, and sways both heart and mind by its fervid spell.

In this scene Miss Warda Howard is seen at her best in the port of Diana. Indeed, Miss Howard may always refer with justifiable pride to this fine characterization.

Duncan McRae's John Heppell is a worthy opposite to Miss Howard's Diana. There is an air of distinction about Mr. McRae's acting that stamps him an artist. He will be remembered by many as the Edison director for some time, and also as a member of several distinguished dramatic companies. He was specially engaged by Essanay to play John Heppell.

That old favorite, Ernest Maupain, adds another to his numerous photodramatic successes in the role of Doctor Maxwell.

In the final fade-out we catch sight of Diana and the Doctor seated in an old boat on the sands, in absorbed conversation. Director Brabin has been very happy in the introduction of this scene, as the thought flashes on the mind of the spectator that, perhaps, after all, there is a haven of rest and true happiness in store for the greatly wronged actress; and so everyone who sees the picture will go home with a relieved and happier feeling in both mind and heart.

The release date was June 12.

"Medicine Bend"

Signal's Five-Part Western Melodrama, Sequel to "Whispering Smith," Well Produced and of Sustained Interest.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

A NOVEL by Frank H. Spearman is the basis for this and a previous five-part production made by the Signal Film Corporation, entitled "Whispering Smith." In these two pictures is employed an extensive cast headed by Helen Holmes. The characterization has been remarkably well carried out and presents a bevy of types well suited to the atmosphere in which they are placed. The story is one of the most thrilling kind of western melodramas and in its continuation into its second and last period opens a struggle of fierce proportions between McCloud, the superintendent of that particular division of the railway, and the wrecking gang which has looted wrecked freight cars of thousands of dollars worth of goods. The struggle closes with the roundup of Sinclair and Du Sang, the evil spirits of the gang, who meet death thereby.

J. P. McGowan, the director of the production, is to be congratulated on the careful and artistic manner in which he has developed the story on the screen. As a melodramatic production it can be considered one of unusual power and magnetism. Whether or not the story is true to the west of to-day seems of little moment from the viewpoint of the spectator. It does not jar his bump of consistency. Its characters are red-blooded and stirring, and easy continuous action marks every inch of the film.

"Medicine Bend" will please children as well as adults. They will be pleased with Helen Holmes as the faithful wife of the bully, Sinclair, and they will be pleased with J. P. McGowan as "Whispering Smith." Leo D. Maloney, as Du Sang, who was "as cruel as a soft bullet," will be a much admired type. Paul C. Hurst carries away laurels as Sinclair. Tony is another type that has been splendidly cast, and Thomas G. Lingham as the sheriff of Medicine Bend is not easily forgotten.

This production will be released on the program of the Mutual Film Corporation July 3.

"Shoes"

Impressive Five-Part Bluebird Production, Directed by Lois Weber, Features Mary MacLaren.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

PICTURING a brief chapter in the life of a girl who worked in a five and ten cent store at five dollars a week, Lois Weber has made a production that is a credit both to herself and to the Bluebird Photoplays, Inc. The picture is founded on a story written by Stella Wynne Herron, the basic idea of which originated in a book by Jane Addams. Eva Meyer, the girl of the story, after months of struggle against poverty, relinquishing her pay envelope with little complaint each Saturday night for the support of the family, which included a lazy father, is "sold out for a pair of shoes."

The production rings true, and at no moment do the players appear to be acting. It reminds one of turning the pages of one of life's unhappiest chapters. No detail of the simple little drama of life as it passed in a poor family, consisting of four children, a hardworking mother and a father whose chief concern lay in having plenty of beer to drink and novels to read, has been forgotten. Perhaps the picture's only fault presents itself in an overanxiety to get the intention of the story "over" as it were. This will be noticed particularly in the repetition of scenes relating to the worn shoes in which Eva nightly places insoles cut from cardboard boxes to keep her tired feet from contact with the pavement. The characterization in the hands of Mary MacLaren, Harry Griffith, Mrs. Witting, Jessie Arnold and William Mong is splendidly taken care of. The cloak of stolidity behind which Eva conceals her misery is appropriate to the character of the girl. Her final desperate plunge when she sells her virtue for a pair of shoes closes as far as we are concerned this chapter of her life without a conjecture as to what the next may bring forth. The suggestions of what she might have developed into under other conditions increase the value of the picture as a sociological study.

"Macbeth"

Sir Herbert Tree and Constance Collier Appear in Finely Artistic Adaptation of Tragedy Produced by Reliance Corporation.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

WITH few exceptions attempts to place Shakespeare's plays on the screen have been disappointing. There has been little Shakespeare and a dull picture. To say that "Macbeth," acted by Sir Herbert Tree and Constance Collier for the Reliance Film Corporation, is among the exceptions is too much like damning with faint praise, whereas the production deserves the heartiest and most emphatic commendation. It will win on its merits as an interesting, artistic photoplay, as a faithful representation of Shakespeare's tragedy and as a masterpiece of expressive acting that truly reflects the genius of Sir Herbert and the marked ability of Constance Collier. There has been much talk about preserving the art of great actors through motion pictures, but slight accomplishment, either because the players were lost in the new medium, or because the subjects were unwisely selected. Here we have a happy combination of actor and play, also a director competent to handle a great tragedy—John Emerson.

Students of Shakespeare who fear a desecration of a masterpiece, or what amounts to much the same thing, a mere skeleton lacking the mind, the soul and the psychology of the original, will be given a new insight into the possibilities of the screen. As Mr. Emerson adapted the play and directed it, his is the credit for the production of a picture that not only visualizes the dramatic incidents completely and convincingly, but makes clear the mental processes of Macbeth and Lady Macbeth. Of course, he could not have done so much without actors of the first caliber, but it is equally true that Sir Herbert and Miss Collier received the most valuable sort of co-operation in making the audience understand. There is not the least excuse for missing the vital points of the drama.

In constructing a photoplay of this type the art of a director is manifested in the scenes he chooses to visualize, scenes that cannot be shown on the stage, but the meaning of which is communicated to the audience through subsequent dialogue. When such additions are made it is not altering the original, rather expressing the same things in the language of the screen, and it is this language that Mr. Emerson utilizes with fine effect to realize the true spirit of "Macbeth." The murder of the king is visualized, as are many other happenings left to the imagination in stage performances, but never once is anything foreign to Shakespeare's tragedy allowed to intrude. When speech is necessary, lines from the play are invariably used, and the arrangement of the scenario necessitates few explanatory leaders. It is a treat, indeed, to read so much of Shakespeare on the screen, even if some familiar quotations are slightly altered.

Sir Herbert is a virile, compelling Macbeth, possessed of the rare art that makes possible the communication of emotional states. Characterization with a psychological background is possible where such an actor is concerned. We see the birth of ambition after the prophesy of the witches and feel the irresistible force of temptation as Lady Macbeth urges courage that his deeds may fulfill his hopes. There is infinite variety and subtle shading in the portrayal, as Macbeth, suffering from the conscience that "makes cowards of us all," shrinks before the phantom dagger or the pursuing ghost of Banquo. Judiciously used close-ups of his wonderfully mobile features enable Sir Herbert to reveal the ever-increasing mental torture that eats into the soul of the usurper.

The Lady Macbeth of Miss Collier is no less impressive, for she, too, possesses a rich personality perfectly suited to Shakespearean tragedy. She uses natural advantages of face and figure with unfailing intelligence to indicate emotional feeling and the hard cruelty of the relentlessly ambitious woman. In the sleep walking scene and the scenes preceding the tragic death of Lady Macbeth, Miss Collier reaches the high moments of a superb performance.

But it must not be gathered that the picture depends entirely upon these two characterizations. Other roles are properly presented and in the concluding reel, bringing the attack on Macbeth's castle, there is a stirring spectacular conflict handled on a large scale. From first to last the production, 7,500 feet in length, is marked by artistic lighting, tinting and appropriate settings.

THIS series which is being made for the program of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., by the Arrow Film Co., can be likened in quality and drawing power to the "Who Pays?" series terminated some time ago. For this reason is the series useful as well as entertaining.

No. 5 of the "Who's Guilty?" series entitled "Sold Out" draws attention to a lack of faith in human efforts. A young wife becomes discontented with the provision made for her by her young husband who is still in the throes of prospecting a mine which has shown no signs of paying. Lured away by a foolish mother the wife pays a visit to her home and meets a former lover whose every effort has met with success. post haste to the city in time to see his wife attacked by the millionaire who has also succeeded in swindling her out of the stock she had in her husband's mine. A fierce struggle takes place between the two men, resulting in the wife being hurled down the stairway to her death.

No. 6 handles another situation in which one of two brothers employed in the same office is unjustly accused of stealing valuable bonds on the day on which he secretly marries his employer's daughter. He then runs away at the proposal of his wife and brother who upon hearing that he has committed suicide marry. The return of the falsely accused upon accidentally learning that the bonds have been discovered where they had fallen behind his desk, results in a fight between the two brothers and the lodging of a bullet in the body of the young wife's father, causing his death.

While this number which is entitled "Sowing the Wind" may lack the consistency of story which marks the preceding number, the interest never flags. The stars, Tom Moore and Anna Nillson, are holding themselves worthy of having been chosen for this series.

"It Happened in Honolulu"

Five-Reel Red Feather Production Tells Light-Running Story of Love and Travel in Many Lands.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

IN this five-reel number Lynn Reynolds has written and produced a pleasing comedy number, not strikingly original in plot or incident, but attractive at all times to the eye and enacted by a good cast.

Myrtle Gonzales and Val Paul play the young couple whose love affair is the leading feature. C. Norman Hammond, Fred Church, Lulu Warrenton, Jack Curtis and George Hernandez play the minor roles. The settings are pleasing and suggest satisfactorily American, Oriental and Hawaiian scenes. The photography is also very good.

The comedy tone is excellently maintained and the main criticism of the plot is that it follows too closely a given trend, lacking the element of surprise which lifts a production into the first class. In other words, it has a rather obvious development for this type of story. Yet it sparkles with life and interest in a scenic way.

Val Paul appears as the son of a wholesale fish dealer, who wins the heart of a girl in spite of the fact that his rival is a titled English lord and that her mother is opposed to him. He leaves to keep his appointment with the girl in Honolulu and is subsequently suspected of stealing a large sum of money from his father. The secretary is the really guilty one. The son is followed by his father's detective, whom he evades frequently. He is thrown into jail in Honolulu, but manages to escape and is afterward cleared.

Bathtub Perils

Two-Reel Keystone Farce of Lively Ingenuity Directed by E. A. Frazee.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

AMAZINGLY contrived on the old Sennet lines, "Bathtub Perils" moves rather slowly during its preparatory scenes, and there is not a great deal of amusing character revelation at any stage of the story, but all is forgotten when the mechanical contrivances begin to work. It makes little difference who the people are when so much that is new and astonishing is going on in such a lively presentation. A remarkable state of activity is set up when the stupdi proprietor of a hotel, impersonated by Fred Mace, goes into the cellar to shut off the water—a flood has been started by the carelessly-aimed bullet of an excited guest—for the proprietor, by means not explained or explainable, sends gas through the water pipes and water through those intended to carry the gas.

A fire is started in the lobby, and the proprietor's wife attempts to use an emergency hose pipe to extinguish the flames, with a result of adding to them. The unexpected happens elsewhere throughout the building, water bursting from pipes in every room until a flood comes pouring down the stairs, out through the entrance, down the street and into the ocean. On this flood, riding on rocking chair and in small tub come the guilty proprietor and a guiltless young wife with whom he has been flirting. They shoot the shoots on the staircase, glide swiftly down the streets and gutters, and, so great is the momentum they acquire, they are last seen racing swiftly out to sea. The farce is quite as startling in its mechanical effects as it is amusing. Once under way it moves with zip, and it will provide a spirited contribution to the variety of any program.

Two Kalem Releases

"In the Service of the State," the Thirteenth Instalment of "The Social Pirates," and "The Stenographer's Strategy," a One-Reel "Sis" Comedy.

"In the Service of the State."

THE thirteenth instalment of the George Bronson Howard serial contains a new line of adventure for the Lady Avengers. A foreign spy steals an important paper from the Government and gets on shipboard with it. The vessel is well out to sea before the loss is discovered. Knowing that Carson, a Secret Service officer, is on the same ship, the U. S. officials communicate with him by wireless and order him to recover the paper. His efforts meet with no success, until Mona and Mary take a hand in the affair. They, also, are passengers on the ship, and woman's wiles once more triumph over susceptible masculinity. The spy has placed the paper in a safe in his stateroom, the combination being known to the purser of the ship. As soon as Mary and Mona learn this, a trap is laid for the purser. Under the influence of the tender passion, he plays into the hands of the two girls and gives Mona a chance to extract the paper from the safe and turn it over to the Secret Service man.

Most of the scenes occur on shipboard, and were photographed on a vessel at sea. As a natural consequence, the locale is the real thing; the director, James W. Horne, has taken every advantage of this fact. The picture is the most novel of the series and is also among the most entertaining. Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby display a new and varied wardrobe for the ocean trip, and manifest all their old relish for the task at hand. E. Forrest Taylor is a good looking and capable Carson. R. L. Dell and Frank Jonasson are cast for the spy and the purser.

"The Stenographer's Strategy."

It was a foregone conclusion that any young woman who was endowed with such natural gifts for spelling, punctuation and grammar as Sis Hopkins displays every week on her slate, would end up by becoming a stenographer. Sis does this very thing in her latest one-reel comedy. While it cannot be denied that her copies of the boss' letters read like a sub-title that has strayed from the path laid down for it by the scenario writer, the gentleman who pays Sis a weekly stipend has cause to bless the day she entered his employ. Being of a loving disposition and an elastic conscience, he is rescued from an embarrassing entanglement and saved from the fury of his muscular wife by the timely intervention of Pa Hopkins' gal.

S. A. Van Petten, the author of the reel, has strung together a number of amusing incidents, and Rose Melville still makes Sis great fun. Henry Murdock and the versatile Frank Minzey are Miss Melville's chief support.

"Silks and Satins"

Marguerite Clark Has Delightful Role in Costume Play by Famous Players.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IT IS a delightful role Marguerite Clark has in the Famous Players five-part "Silks and Satins," released June 12. The picture is of a story within a story, but the one within comes so near being all of the show that what remains, that with the modern touch, may almost be left out of consideration. The Felicite of the day that is past is by her father engaged to wed not the man she loves; before the wedding the death of the father throws the young woman under the guardianship of an uncle and into the same home with a drunken cousin whose suit takes a forceful turn. It is to Jacques Desmond, the cavalier, her thoughts turn; it is to Jacques that Felix, her fiance, also turns to rescue Felicite. Jacques gets Felicite from her uncle's house at the point of his sword—and it is to her bold knight the young woman elects to give her hand.

Scene from "Silks and Satins" (Famous Players).

Miss Clark well fits the role of Felicite—come to think of it, she has a habit of fitting her roles. Vernon Steele has the leading male part, that of Jacques. He possesses the dash and the physique that make it convincing. Clarence Handysides is the drunken Marquis, the uncle who assumes the "guardianship" of Felicite—a good characterization, as is also that of W. A. Williams, who is unrecognizable in the make-up of the equally drunken son. Thomas Holding makes much of the minor role of Felix, the exquisite engaged to Felicite.

There are stirring scenes following the arrival of Felix at the home of the Marquis, where the cavalier swings his sword in approved d'Artagnan manner; and there are, too, scenes that amuses when the tall fellow and his diminutive companion in male attire arrive at the inn, to which the good knot-tying monk is brought.

"Silks and Satins" is an ideal matinee subject—the marked approval of the women in the Strand Monday afternoon attested that fact—and it should be a popular subject with evening houses as well. It is finely staged and costumed. J. Searle Dawley directs.

Latest Fashions in Vitagraph Blue Ribbon.

Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno do credit to the leading roles of "The Shop Girl," a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature in five parts, announced for release June 26. "The Shop Girl" was picturized from the novel of the same name by C. N. and A. M. Williamson and directed by George D. Baker. Miss Storey is first seen as a clothing model on board a steamer returning from Europe. Peter Rolls (Antonio Moreno), son of a rich man of the same name, becomes infatuated with her despite her station, but his sister, Ena, breaks off the affair by telling Winifred that Peter is already engaged and is only trifling with her.

In the city Winifred loses her position with the modiste and finds herself blackballed in the trade. She finally obtains a position as saleswoman in a store owned by Peter's father. Meanwhile Peter searches the city in vain for her. His search leads to his father's store, where he is informed that his sister had obtained Winifred's discharge that morning. Following information given him at the store, Peter is just in time to rescue Winifred from the clutches of Megeison, the store manager, who had inveigled her into his home. Although skeptical of Peter's intentions at first, Winifred's happiness is complete when she sees that he really loves her.

A capable cast of Vitagraphers is seen in this production, among them Lillian Burns, Enward Dunn, Thomas R. Mills, Josephine Earle, Harold Foshay and Templer Saxe.

Mutual Makes Changes in Titles.

The title of the five-act Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition, for release June 12, has been changed from "A Man's Soul" to "The Inner Struggle," and that of the two-reel American-Mutual release for the same day from "Circumstantial Evidence" to "Convicted of Murder."

Putting a Thrill in "Gloria's Romance."

Despite the fact that the manufacturer announced in advance of its release that "Gloria's Romance" was going to be absolutely free from sensationalism and "stunts," Chapter 5 of the new George Kleine motion picture novel, in which Billie Burke is the featured star, contains a real thriller in the way of an automobile accident, one which is going to make theater patrons sit up and gasp.

The "accident" occurs when Gideon Trask, a new character in the story, is pursuing Richard Frenau, the "heavy" of the piece, as the latter speeds away in a high-powered car. Trask rushes down the street after Frenau's car and since his gaze is fixed on the disappearing automobile he fails to see a big car that is turning into the avenue from a side street. The driver catches sight of Trask, makes an effort to avoid hitting him, discovers it is too late to swerve clear out of the way, and a moment later the body of Trask is sent forty feet away by the impact of the big auto. Frank McGlynn, an actor already known to thousands of screen fans for his work with the Edison company, plays the role of Trask, and he literally took his life in his hands when he calmly staggered in front of that big auto and then allowed it to hurl him to one side. There was nothing "staged" or "faked" about the accident. It happened exactly as it appears on the screen, and no dummy was substituted. But McGlynn is mighty glad there was no "retake" on that particular scene, for he was badly bruised and battered when he arose from the pavement and brushed the dust off his clothes at the end of the film making.

Vest Pocket House Organs Successful.

John A. McNear, Jr., manager of the Mystic theater at Petaluma, Cal., advocates the use of vest pocket house organs in a letter to the Progressive Motion Picture Company, which has been contributed to Paramount Progress. Paramount Progress, the exhibitor's organ of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, receives on an average of eighty to a hundred organs each week, and this communication of Mr McNear's is particularly worthy of attention.

"I strongly advocate the use of a program only large enough to be accommodated in every man's and woman's pocket or pocketbook, as so many of the patrons of the motion picture houses are those on the streets or engaged in business that drop in to see a show or arrange their dates so as not to conflict with other business, in order to see a picture that appeals to them. It is a fact that a program such as I suggest and make use of will please them and be appreciated by every one, more so than one that is too large to be conveniently carried in the ordinary pocket," declares Mr. McNear.

"My program is issued weekly and is ready for distribution at Saturday and Sunday shows for the week commencing the following Monday, thus giving the best two days of the week for advance advertising."

Ivan Inaugurates All Star Cast Policy.

Somewhat along the lines of revivals of famous old-time successes in the legitimate, where a cast is composed of all stars, will be the newly adopted policy of the Ivan Film Productions, which will in future limit its productions to casts composed only of performers, each one of whom would ordinarily be starred alone.

The first film to be made along these lines will be 'The Faded Flower," the next release on the Ivan program. Besides employing Miss Marguerite Snow, Rose Coghlan, the famous legitimate star who this year celebrates her golden jubilee as an actress for fifty years, will be in the cast. Alma Hanlon is included.

Arthur Donaldson, the original Prince of Pilsen, a well-known delineator of character roles; Edward Mackay, a name known to theatergoers the country over, and William A. Bechtel, the "Man of a thousand faces," are also included in the next Ivan.

"The Faded Flower" should be ready for release about July 1, through the Ivan Exchanges.

The Princess Royal, Princess Henry of Battenberg, Princess Maude, the Grand Duke Michael and Countess Torby, the Princess of Monaco, the Duc d'Orleans, the Countess Grosvenor and Lady de Trafford were a few of the other notable people present.

Champion Kid Casey in Paramount-Bray.

Changes in the release date schedule for Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoons make possible the debut of a new leading man in these drawings, "Kid Casey, the Champion," originated by Fred Moser, who will appear before Paramount audiences for the first time on June 15. His initial adventure will take the place of "Colonel Heeza Liar and the Bandits," the release date of which has been advanced one week. Subsequent animated cartoons, which have already been announced, will appear in their original order, but with the release dates also advanced one week in each case.

THE GIRLS ACROSS THE WAY (Biograph), June 5.—Another of the Biograph reissues, acted by Mae Marsh, Robert Harron, Chrystie Miller and Mildred Manning. The story is simple, clearly told and strong in heart interest.

THE SELIG-TRIBUNE, NO. 45, 1916 (Selig), June 5.—Monster aeroplane for U. S. Army, Washington; fire in Detroit motion picture exchange; Boy Scouts build bridge at Ricer Grove, Ill.; Sinn Fein parade at Dublin; scenes after the rioting in Dublin; International auto race at Indianapolis, Ind.; German and Irish parade at San Francisco; Garden party at Governor's Island, N. Y.; Mrs. Finley J. Shepard and Finley J. Shepard, Jr.; Oyster Bay, parade of Roosevelt boomers; Col. Roosevelt addressing the crowd at his home.

NEW YORK PAST AND PRESENT (Vitagraph), June 5.—An excellent guide to many of the most interesting buildings and locations of New York City is furnished by this one-reel release. The plan of reproducing the early life of such historical spots as Bowling Green and Washington's Headquarters enhances the interest of the reel.

MIDNIGHT AT THE OLD MILL (Kalem), June 6.—Ham and Bud have a weird experience in this one-reel farce. Both worthies are nearly frightened out of a year's growth while trying to obtain a subject for a number of doctors to experiment on. A quick moving comedy of average merit.

IN CINDERELLA'S SHOES (Kalem), June 7.—In this one-reel comedy Ethel Teare gets most of her comedy out of a pair of shoes that are several sizes too large for her. This is contrary to the original Cinderella's experiences, but Louis B. Gardner has built a number of clever comic complications around Ethel's over-generous footwear, and Gus Leonard, Jack McDermott and Victor Rottman help her to keep the action stepping lively.

THE SELIG-TRIBUNE NO. 46, 1916 (Selig), June 8.—Hospital in Lincoln Park, Chicago, during G. A. R. parade; school girls have outing at Manchester-by-the-Sea, N. H.; San Francisco, encampment for citizen soldiers; monster procession, London; Republican candidates at Congress Hotel, Chicago; President Wilson at Memorial Day services, Arlington, Va.; fashion show at Madison Square Garden, New York; Preparedness Parade, Chicago.

THE SEA DOGS (Vim), June 8.—Several of the incidents in this one-reel farce are not only good for a hearty laugh, but required a deal of hard work and expense to transfer them to the screen. Plump and Runt are the chief fun-makers, and the scenes where Plump is forced to tow the boat while walking on the bottom of the sea, is one of the best features of the reel.

THE TREASURE TRAIN (No. 83 of "The Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series) (Kalem), June 10.—The operator at Lone Point again puts the railroad in her debt by preventing a robbery on the line at the risk of her neck. S. A. Van Petten is the author of the scenario and Producer James Davis has staged it with his usual keen eye to correct local color. P. S. Pembrooke, Harry Schum, Roy Watson, Ed. Gibson and G. A. Williams supplement the efforts of the nervy Helen Gibson.

TWO SMITHS AND A HAFF (Lubin), June 10.—There is a good deal of plot to this one-reel comedy, but not much amusement. The picture was written and directed by Clay M. Greene, and is not up to his usual standard. Francis Joyner, George R. Clarke and June Daye have the leading characters.

VERNON HOWE BAILEY'S SKETCH BOOK OF BERLIN (Essanay), June 7.—The sketches of the German capital showing the palaces and the principal government buildings, make this reel doubly interesting. The artist retains his old cleverness with the pencil. A western scenic is on the same reel.

JUGGLING JUSTICE (Kalem), June 9.—Sis Hopkins turns suffragette in this one-reel comedy, runs for Justice of the Peace, is elected, and adminsters the law in a manner wonderful to behold. The reel is full of amusing character types and laughable situations. Rose Melville's beaming smile is of vast importance to Sis, the actress never seeming to tire of her creation. Henry Murdock and Frank Minzey are prominent members of the cast. The author of the scenario is Samuel J. Taylor.

A DOLLAR DOWN (Vim), June 9.—The dollar applies to the first installment paid on a piano by Pokes. His adventures with the instrument are surprising, to say the least. He plays upon it, then sits astride of it and rides it down the street. Jabbs is also in the picture and holds up his end of the merry-making. A novel reel.

GOING WEST TO MAKE GOOD (Selig), June 10.—Tom Mix is the author, producer and star of this one-reel drama. The scene opens in the East, but soon shifts to a western ranch and ends with a stage hold-up and a dashing rescue of the heroine by Tom. Expert horsemanship adds to the interest of the reel. Victoria Forde and Joe Ryan are members of the cast.

OUR PEOPLE (Essanay), June 3.—This three-reel photoplay chronicles the doings of the inhabitants of a small town. A run on the local bank forms the big dramatic moment. The story is wholesome and well supplied with character studies. The sub-titles are cleverly worded. Bryant Washburn, Gertrude Glover, Thomas Commerford, Richardson Cotton and Florence Oberle form a strong cast.

THE FANGS OF THE TATTLER (No. 11 of "The Social Pirates") (Kalem), June 5.—The methods of a blackmailing editor are exposed in this instalment of the George Bronson Howard serial. The picture keeps pace with the previous releases. It was reviewed in the issue of June 10, page 1901.

THE YAQUI CUR (Biograph), June 6.—Made by Griffith several years ago, these two reels comprise a strong Indian drama, well worth re-issuing. Robert Harron, Walter Miller and Lionel Barrymore are in the cast. A review appeared in the issue of May 6.

THE STONING (Edison), June 6.—A three-part re-issue that will be remembered as one of the most successful photoplays ever released by the Edison company. A finely acted story, filled with the truth and beauty of life.

ORPHAN JOYCE (Essanay), June 6.—A two-reel drama in which little Miss Joyce Fair has one of her juvenile roles that find favor with many patrons of the screen. The story tells of a little orphan who is adopted by a wealthy couple, the child repaying them by saving the household from being robbed. The youthful star is as winning as ever, and is assisted by John Cossar and Marian Lydston.

THE SCAPEGRACE (Lubin), June 8.—The story of a banker's son who steals from his father and commits suicide when he is found out, this three-reel photoplay by Josephine McLaughlin offers nothing new in plot, but has the merit of sticking to its theme. The material has been ably handled by the director, Jack Byrne, and is acted by a competent cast which includes George Routh, Bird Hopkins, Alan Forrest, Adelaide Eronti, Ada Gleason and Evelyn Page.

THE STAINED PEARL (Knickerbocker), June 9.—Frank melodrama is this three-part subject. The action is fast and the story contains interest. Henry King has the leading role, that of the captain of a ship one of the crew of which brings aboard a pearl he has stolen. Two murders already have been done to secure the jewel, and before the story is finished two or three others are killed. In major part the picture is staged on ship-board.

A TEMPERANCE TOWN (Selig), June 5.—A three-reel screen version of Charles Hoyt's celebrated character comedy, "A Temperance Town," featuring Otis Harlan as Mink Jones, could not possibly fail to provide excellent entertainment. Hoyt's good-natured satire on vice committee and temperance reformers has no dry moments, and his sketches of the leading citizens of a country town are humorously true to life. The picture was directed by T. N. Hefferon, and Otis Harlan is supported by Grace Darmond, John Charles, James Bradbury and Leslie J. King.

Fox Film Corporation

HYPOCRISY, June 5.—A notable five-reel melodrama that the audience seemed to find worthy. It is a substantial picture holding up to scorn the "bluff and pretense" of a certain circle of modern society and of people who manage to live in luxury on nothing a year at the expense of others who are worth more to the world than they ever thought of being. A longer review will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Mutual Film Corporation

REEL LIFE, NO. 5 (Gaumont), June 4.—Fine pictorial glimpses of Elephant Butte Dam, New Mexico, with interesting statistics concerning this project, are first shown in this. Then comes entertaining views of the way in which Hampshire hogs are raised and bee farming is conducted. The number is full of instructive views.

A PLANE STORY (Vogue), June 6.—A slapstick comedy that will be found rather amusing. The plot concerns the attempted theft of a certain code book. An aeroplane and its owner figuring considerably. The action of the last few scenes waxes exciting, giving the production a good climax.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 75 (Gaumont), June 7.—The wedding of Dr. Grayson, training camp at Ft. Wadsworth, preparedness parades, a daring air stunt by Rodman Law, and other interesting features are included in this.

JERRY'S BIG LARK (Cub), June 9.—A farce comedy number in which Jerry (George Ovey) after various other amusing adventures meets with a motion picture company, mistakes artifice for reality and gets mixed up generally.

WHERE WIVES WIN (Falstaff), June 10.—This is an unusually good comedy number wherein the daughter of a truck driver receives her lover in her father's home and makes him dance so much that while she helps her mother with the dishes he falls asleep and dreams that he is a western cowboy. He rides down stairs on a white horse and sees his sweetheart's mother haul her father out of a saloon, lasso him and give him a run home while she rides the horse.

THINNEN STOUT (Beauty), June 11.—An amusing farce comedy in which Orral Humphrey plays the role of Stout, Lucille Ward that of Mrs. Stout, and John Gough that of Thinnen, who claims to be able to make people thin or stout as they desire. Some comical occurrences take place in the institution, various domestic disturbances are also in order, and altogether the offering is of fair entertainment value.

REEL LIFE, NO. 6 (Gaumont), June 11.—An interesting group of subjects will be found in this issue of the magazine in film, including the construction of a $1,000,000 concrete bridge over the Tennessee River, which is a fully detailed and remarkable illustration, the making of a moving picture, showing the manipulation of a theater audience by a director in the photographing of "The Idol of the Stage," and Gaumont animal studies which were photographed at Bronx Park.

HIS BLOWOUT (Vogue), June 11.—A slapstick comedy containing only a moderate amount of entertainment value. It concerns principally the attempt of two novices to take care of the business of a plumber while he is away. It would be difficult to outline the plot which is as usual with this kind of picture a jumble of various things.

REAL ESTATERS (Falstaff), June 12.—Oscar and Conrad buy two lots, with running water. They find they have purchased a section of the ocean beach and have considerable fun with the agent who sold them. This is just a whimsical idea and gets up a fair amount of amusement.

SEE AMERICA FIRST, NO. 40 ("Yellowstone National Park") Gaumont), June 14.—This number contains some beautiful views of Yellowstone National Park showing various terraces over which the mineral water trickles, Shoshone Lake, and the geysers. An animated cartoon entitled "Johnny's Stepmother and the Cat."

JOHNNY'S STEPMOTHER AND THE CAT (Gaumont), June 14.—On the same reel with the above this animated cartoon will be found distinctly amusing. Johnny's stepmother goes uptown and leaves him to mind the cat. The cat gets frightened and breaks up the china and Johnny is locked in the closet in punishment for same.

DOUGHNUTS (Falstaff), June 17.—Riley Chamberlin appears in this as a street car conductor on a vacation. He marries a girl who cannot cook, and her food brings him weird nightmares. The dog and the fat boy eat her doughnuts and both are sent to the hospital. A light comedy subject with smiles running all through it.

DELINQUENT BRIDEGROOMS (Vogue), June 18.—A knockabout number, by Robert A. Dillon, featuring two hoboes and two well dressed gentlemen who get their wardrobes mixed and all land in jail. This has no particular novelty in plot, but has some fairly amusing moments in it.

Mutual Film Corp. Specials

THE PILGRIM (Mustang), June 9.—A two-reel Western drama, by Edward Kaufman, with Frank Borzage, Anna Little, Jack Richardson and others in the cast. This is much better than the average Western number in presentation. The action is not pronounced, but works up well to the climax, where the traveler saves a man's life after stabbing him, wins the girl's love and then gives it up to resume his tramping. The production arouses considerable feeling in the observer and is altogether effectively done.

THE LION NEMESIS (Centaur), June 10.—A two-reel number, featuring Wm. Clifford, Margaret Gibson, Al Garcia and a well trained lion named Monte. The lion is presumed to be possessed by the soul of a murderer, according to the Arabic legend. The girl is lured away by the Rajah, who has hypnotic powers. The one thing he fears is the lion, and at the end of the story the beast kills him and saves the girl. The soul of the murderer is then released. This makes on the whole a better offering than usual of this semi-mystic sort. It is not extremely dramatic, but keeps a close hold on the interest.

BROTHERS EQUAL (Thanhouser), June 13.—A two-part production based on race prejudice. In visiting an estate of his father the heir of the estate meets a white man who he afterward discovers is the son of a colored woman by his own father. The mother, a leper, about to be burned to death, is rescued by her son, who then kills himself in the presence of the white girl with whom he is in love, his brother and others. The picture, although not a pleasant one, inspires thought. It portrays the young man after preaching equal brotherhood to the negroes discovering what the problem means when brought home to himself.

MEDICINE BEND (Mutual Masterpicture de Luxe—Signal), July 3.—An unusually attractive five-part Western melodrama directed by J. P. McGowan. The production is a sequel to "Whispering Smith" and is played by an excellent cast headed by J. P. McGowan and Helen Holmes. A full review of this production appears on another page of the magazine.

THE SHERIFF OF PLUMAS (Mustang), June 16.—A two-part Western featuring Charles Newton. Helen Rosson and William Stowell are also in the cast. The picture is well produced and entertaining, and tells the story of a sheriff with a shadowy past. The unexpected appearance of an old pal in company with whom he used to tap safes is the cause of a tragedy in which each shoots the other. The story is not exactly a probable one in some respects, but is entertaining.

Mutual Special Feature

SECRET OF THE SUBMARINE, NO. 4 (Special Feature), June 12.—Chapter four of this serial leaves a good impression and shows a marked improvement over some of the previous chapters in adaptation and production. The action, which is continuous, is interesting and well arranged. With all concerned endeavoring to gain possession of the secret which is snpposed to be contained in the book bought by Stephansky, Cleo is seized and bound and placed in the cellar of the Stephansky home, where a bomb is later exploded, and we are left to wonder how Cleo escapes.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

PATHE NEWS, NO. 41, 1916 (Pathe), May 20.—Interesting items of this issue are General Cousins decorating soldiers' widows with honors gained by their husbands at Verdun, at Greenwood, S. D., one hundred and sixty Sioux Indians are admitted to U. S. citizenship, the first National Guard seaplane put in operation, and various scenes from the European war front.

LUKE LAUGHS LAST (Phunphilms), June 5.—An amusing farce comedy in which Lonesome Luke in the role of a butler is the center of a pretty mixup, accidentally capturing two burglars at the same time. Some of the comedy types in this film are unusually comical—the fat policeman, for instance, and his partner, "tall and lanky." This is an unusually stirring comedy.

THE FATAL PIE (Pathe), June 5.—This amusing animated cartoon from the pen of Rube Goldberg concerns principally Lotta Mincemeat, her father, Julius Mincemeat, Nut, her sweetheart, and Pickup, her wouldbe sweetheart. A peculiar turn of fate in which a pie stuffed with dumdum bullets plays a forceful part lands Lotta and Nut in the same garbagemobile, after various unhappy incidents. On the same reel with "Head-dresses of Holland."

HEAD-DRESSES OF HOLLAND (Pathe), June 5.—An unusually interesting subject showing in colors the many quaint head-dresses worn in different parts of Holland.

THE ZINC MINES OF LANG HIT (French Indo-China) (Pathe), June 5.—In this picture will be found instructive views to the extent of possibly four hundred feet of film, showing how zinc is mined, crushed, conveyed to the smelters, etc., in French Indo-China at the mines of Lang Hit. On the same reel with "Around Mount Fuji."

AROUND MOUNT FUJI (Picturesque Japan) (Pathe), June 5.—A most beautiful scenic consisting of views of a dormant volcano, showing the people at work in its vicinity, the lakes with which it is surrounded, and other attractive and beautifully photographed scenes.

Pathe Exchange, Inc., Specials.

THE IRON CLAW, NO. 15 (Feature), June 5.—"The Double Resurrection" is the name of this episode, which is as thrilling as the rest of this series. This time Davy reappears as a mysterious veiled lady, is afterwards pursued into a certain attic by Legar and his men, and is apparently thrown from the window in a trunk. It transpires, however, that Davy has let himself through the floor by means of a trap over which the bottomless trunk had stood. Margery is also kidnapped again, and rescued by the "Laughing Mask."

WHO'S GUILTY? NO. 5 (Arrow), June 5.—"Sold Out" is an intensely interesting number of this series. A young woman marrying the man of her choice goes with him to the mining country and invests ten thousand dollars, given her as a wedding present by her father, in the mines. Before they have begun to pay she becomes discontented. A tragedy occurs later in which the husband, defending his wife against a former rich lover, who has swindled her out of her mining stock, is the indirect cause of his wife's death. Well produced and well photographed. A full review will be found on another page.

WHO'S GUILTY? NO. 6 (Arrow), June 12.—The title of No. 6 of the series is "Sowing the Wind." The production, in which Octavia Handworth appears, as well as Anna Nilsson and Tom Moore, is well staged and intensely interesting. The story concerns an unhappy play of circumstances in which two brothers employed in the same office, their employer, his daughter and housekeeper are involved. An unjustified suspicion and its consequences make this one of the best of the series.

Universal Film Mfg. Company

A COLLEGE BOOMERANG (Imp), June 18.—This number, by Catherine Carr, features Edith Robert and Harry Benham. The girl acts as maid while working her way through school, and wins the love of the young professor of chemistry in spite of a false accusation of dishonesty made against her. The plot is not particularly new, though rather pleasing in sentiment.

WANTED, A HUSBAND (Nestor), June 19.—A comedy, by Al E. Christie, featuring Neal Burns, Betty Compson, Ethel Lynn, Stella Adams and Joe Janecke. The young wife pretends a young lawyer is her husband, during the absence of the real one. This leads to amusing complications. This rather conventional story includes some interesting scenes taken at Coronado Beach, Cal.

THE GRIP OF CRIME (Big U), June 20.—A story of an Italian scissors grinder and his child, by Calder Johnstone. The old man is used as a tool by some blackmailers. He is arrested and the child's story saves him; the gang members are punished. The story is quite appealing. Thomas Jefferson and Lena Baskette appear.

HIS PICTURE (Imp), June 20.—A pleasing comedy subject, featuring Violet Mesereau and Wm. Garwood as a young married couple. The wife dresses as a little girl in order to allay her suspicions regarding hubby's conduct. She carries out the part effectively. This is novel and amusing in a quiet way.

A JAIL BIRD'S LAST FLIGHT (L-KO), June 21.—This pictures the experiences of two male flirts, lured to the police station by a pretty lady cop. Billy Armstrong, Gene Rogers and Carmel Myers play the leads. The running scene, explosion in jail and other episodes are laughable. Slightly rough in tone but amusing and acceptable.

THE YOUNG SLEUTHS (Powers), June 22.—A juvenile subject, featuring Frank Butterworth and Irma Sorter. The boy and girl play detectives and assist in catching a bank thief. This is rather slow in action, but gets more interesting toward the close. It makes a fairly strong juvenile number.

THE FALL OF DEACON STILLWATERS (Joker), June 24.—A character comedy of the eccentric type, by A. E. Bishop, featuring Gale Henry, Wm. Franey and others. The deacon is appointed by the Anti-Sin Society to stop prize fighting. He winds up by taking part in a fight himself. This is slightly rough in tone, but has a number of laughable incidents.

Universal Film Mfg. Company Specials

THE SHERIFF OF PINE MOUNTAIN (Rex), June 11.—A two-reel number, by Wm. Addison Lathrop, featuring Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips and others. This is a story of the northwest, in which a young sheriff collides with a gang of opium smugglers. The settings comprise a winter landscape with a heavy fall of snow on the ground, a dog team, smugglers' den, etc. The story is conventional in plot, picturing the way in which the sheriff and brother of the girl clash and then make up their difficulties. The story has no particular novelty, but the cast is pleasing and presentation agreeable.

THE WRECK (Universal Special), June 12.—No. 7 of the "Peg o' the Ring" series. The opening scenes contain considerable repetition of things already pictured. Peg recovers and discovers that she has falsely accused Lund, Jr., of being one of the counterfeiters. She tries to clear him of this implication. The circus is started again and Peg once more appears in her act. The second reel closes with Peg and Lund, Jr., jumping from a freight car running wild, to escape an approaching train. The number as a whole does not contain much action.

THE MAN FROM NOWHERE (Red Feather Photoplay), June 19.—A five-reel feature offering, by Wm. H. Clifford, unusually well constructed and directed carefully by Henry Otto. King Baggot is featured as a young man, sent to prison for killing his own sister, though he is entirely innocent of the crime. The events are dramatic and consistently worked out. There is quite a lot of originality in plot and incidents. It is one of the best all-around five-reel subjects shown by this company in some time. Irene Hunt, Helen Marten, Joseph Gerard, Frank Smith, Johnnie Walker and others also appear. A first rate subject.

THE FINER METAL (Rex), June 19.—A two-reel number, by Harry Ditmar, featuring Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips, Wm. J. Welsh and Chas. Ogle. The characters concerned are a bank president, his wife and the cashier. There is a piece of unusually good drama in the second reel, where the president spares Carlton and then allows the woman to flee without learning who she is. This situation alone makes the offering one of unusual strength. The parts are all well played. A good number.

THE CRY FOR HELP (Universal Special), June 20.—No. 6 of the "Peg o' the Ring" series. Both Peg and Lund, Jr., escape from the counterfeiters' den after exciting experiences. Secret Service men strike a trail which is about to connect Mrs. Lund with the gang, but Peg, in a sudden seizure, hysterically points to Lund, Jr., as the guilty one. The number contains a number of quite thrilling incidents.

THE SCARLET MARK (Victor), June 21.—A two-reel offering, by Catherine Carr, in which Mary Fuller plays the double role of Allison, a wealthy girl, and Wanda, an adventuress. This would have been more convincing if Wanda had not been employed directly, but had managed to substitute herself secretly as the rich girl. The situation as presented is too improbable to carry the illusion strongly. There is also a little too much coincidence in the closing scenes. This contains some fairly strong plot material but is faulty in construction.

WHAT COULD THE POOR GIRL DO? (Nestor), June 23.—A two-reel burlesque comedy, by Al E. Christie. Eddie Lyons, Billie Rhodes, Lee Moran and others are featured. Jed, a country youth, falls in love with a young lady safe cracker, who has come to the country to reform. The gang, led by Dirty Jerry, follows and takes her back. Jed goes to the city on a rescue expedition and some rapidfire situations ensue. A chase scene, a dash over rooftops, and rough and tumble gang fighting are features. This has numerous precedents, but is strong on action and enacted by a pleasing cast.

THE GHOST OF THE JUNGLE (Bison), June 24.—A two-reel number, written by Rex de Roselli, who plays a leading role, assisted by Yona Landowski, Guy Hedlund, Colin Chase and others. The South African settings are pleasing and the plot better than the average for this type of story. The girl is lured away from the cabin by an adventurer, who also carries off the father's diamonds. The father gives pursuit and meets with terrible suffering in the jungle. The animal scenes are exciting and interesting.

HEARST-VITAGRAPH NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 45, 1916 (Vitagraph), June 6.—Boston, recruit fireman at drill; anniversary celebration at Berkeley, Cal.; Boston, Spanish War Veterans memorial; services at Soldiers' Home, Hampton, Va.; new monorail car test, San Francisco; Women's Federation delegates at Vitagraph studio; Dr. Mary Walker and Frank Daniels; Harvard regiment given flag; President Lowell and General Wood review regiment; prominent men in Republican ranks; New York, burial of Policeman Henry Schwartz; Harlem River regatta; Peace Advocates gather at Washington; push ball contest, New York.

THE REDEMPTION OF DAVE DARCEY (Vitagraph), June 12.—A five-part melodrama in which the title role is splendidly impersonated by James Morrison. The development of the story is not done in a professional manner, and several rough spots are noticeable; but withal the picture is entertaining. It deals with the regeneration of a crook and contains a number of spectacular scenes. A full review appears on another page of this issue.

HEARST-VITAGRAPH NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 46, 1916 (Vitagraph), June 9.—Prominent politicians at the Republican Convention, Chicago; fete day parade, New York; destroying eggs from China at San Francisco; Cornell crew training at Poughkeepsie; Preparedness Parade, Chicago; launching barge, Manchester; naval cadets receive diplomas, Annapolis; President Wilson and Secretary Daniels at Naval Academy; private school girls at the seashore; Battleship Oregon, San Francisco; Portland, Maine, congregation paint church; New York Police at military camp; Red Sox and Phillies at Boston; Brooklyn waifs have dinner at Coney Island, anniversary of Boston artillery company.

World-Equitable

PERILS OF DIVORCE (Brady-Made), June 12.—A melodramatic story showing how a wife is cast off by her husband when in reality she is entirely guiltless. The picture was correctly produced by Edwin August and adequately acted with Edna Wallace Hopper in the role of the wife. A review may be found on another page of this issue.

MUNSON ART FEATURE RELEASED JULY 17.

On July 17, Samuel S. Hutchinson will present to the public a high-art, six-part photoplay featuring Miss Audrey Munson, the famous model, in the title role "Purity." The subject is an allegory written by Clifford Howard for the renowned Miss Munson,, and directed by Rea Berger under the personal supervision of Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, Inc. Prominent in the cast supporting Miss Munson are Eugenie Forde, Nigel De Brullier and William Carroll.

The play is based on Greek mythology—with Purity, represented by a nude female figure, exerting an influence for good over the world. Then, as stanzas of allegorical poetry are composed by a poet, the characters, Evil, Beauty, Art, Music and Drama are introduced in the flesh.

AHEARN COMEDIES FOR RESERVE.

C. Lang Cobb, Jr., manager of soles and publicity of the Reserve Photo-Plays Company, producers of Ray Comedies, has just returned from the Cleveland studio and reports excellent prospects for the future. In conjunction with the single reel comedies releases beginning June 21, the Reserve Photo-Plays will release through Mr. Cobb a series of comedy cartoons by "Ahearn," head of the Ntwspaper Enterprise Association, which controls many papers in the Middle West.

Mr. Cobb has so arranged the future releases as to allow for a serial of six episodes of Johnny Ray in "Jerry the Janitor," which will be followed by the "One Armed Paper-hanger with the Hives," a one-reel subject.

KERRIGAN COMPANY IN YOSEMITE.

Universal City, Calif., June.—J. Warren Kerrigan and a large company of Universal City players, including Miss Lois Wilson, who plays opposite him, Miss Maude George and Harry Carter, are in the Yosemite Valley filming scenes for "The Beckoning Trail," a five-reel feature photoplay written by F. McGrew Willis of the Universal City staff. Director Jack Conway expects to take a large number of the scenes in the famous National Park and vicinity before the company returns to Universal City for work on the big stages.

MYERS-THEBY RELEASES BEGIN JULY 5.

July 5 has been determined upon as the date for the first release in the General Film service of the Vim feature comedies starring Harry C. Myers and Rosemary Theby. "Housekeeping" is the title of the first release. One of these feature comedies will be released each Wednesday in the General service. "Spring Cleaning" is the title of the second release.

"A MILLION FOR MARY" (Flying A).

Aaron Hoffman, the well known playwright and author, has written the vehicle in which the famous stage comedians, Kolb and Dill, will make their debut under the "Flying A" banner. The direction of this comedy has been placed in charge of Rea Berger under the direct personal supervision of Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"THE REPRISAL" (Selig).

"The Reprisal," a Selig Diamond Special, produced by William Robert Daly, from the story written by Elizabeth R. Carpenter, will be released Monday, June 19, in regular service through the General Film Company. "The Reprisal" is an unusually strong drama, and in every respect upholds the enviable standard set by Selig shorter-length productions. It features an all-star cast, including Fritzi Brunette, Jack Pickford, Guy Oliver, Frank Clark, Al W. Filson and Lillian Hayward. Miss Scene from "The Reprisal" (Selig).

Brunette and Jack Pickford are afforded many opportunities for versatile work, and they take every advantage of these.

The plot of the story deals with the fruitless love of a southern girl for the man of her choice. The man's brother interferes in the love match. The girl vows to be revenged and years later marries the brother. How all the wrongs are righted and how the woman finally comes to understand that her thoughts of revenge are really thoughts of love add in making "The Reprisal" an absorbing production. The scenic effects are exceptionally good, and there is a succession of climaxes.

MASSIVE SET USED IN COMEDY.

What is considered the most massive set ever used at Universal City was provided by Charles Rankin, director of productians, and his department for using in filming a number of the scenes in "The Bell Hop," in which Pat Rooney is being featured, under the direction of Roy Clements. As indicated by the title, it is the lobby of a big hotel, and in it is produced some of the clever comedy which has made Rooney a favorite on the vaudeville stage in all parts of the United States. Working with Rooney are a number of the best known players of Universal City, including Adele Farrington, Beulah Lewis, Hayward Mack, Jay Belasco and Ed Sedgwick.

MORE GAUMONT ANIMAL STUDIES.

In the sixth "Reel Life," the Mutual magazine in film, the Gaumont company will show more of its popular animal studies. These have been taken by Elwin R. Sanborn. Although pictures of animals in captivity, Mr. Sanborn has caught them so characteristically that his film is being used by naturalists for purposes of scientific study. The film shows the beaver at work and at play, and the white peacock and the zebra.

As "Reel Life" has at least three divisions of interest, the reel for the week also contains pictures of the million-dollar concrete bridge being built over the Tennessee river at Chattanooga, and entertaining views of how a motion picture director handles two thousand extra persons in a photoplay.

NEW ENGLAND SOLD FOR "YELLOW MENACE."

Andrew J. Cobe, vice-president and general manager of the Unity Sales Corporation, announces that through negotiations conducted between himself and Herman Rifkin, general manager of the Eastern Feature Film Company, that concern has purchased the New England rights to "The Yellow Menace," the sixteen-episode serial starring Edwin Stevens, and featuring Florence Malone and Margaret Gale. The states covered by Mr. Rifkin's franchise include: Maine, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

"JAFFERY" (Frohman).

Interesting personalities will surround C. Aubrey Smith in "Jaffery," which the Frohman Amusement Corporation is filming from the new novel of that name by William J. Locke. Almost without exception those who have been chosen for the various parts are known equally well on the stage and screen. Ability as well as appearance are particularly necessary in making a picture from this book, for its effectiveness rests largely upon portraying the subtle shades of characterization which Mr. Locke's pen has so skillfully conjured.

Eleanor Woodruff went from the stage to photoplay work. Eric Blind has been familiar to play-goers both in England and America for many years, his principal engagements here being with Mrs. Fiske and Margaret Anglin. Paul Doucet has just completed his engagement with Elsie Ferguson, playing Fritz Schiller in "Margaret Schiller." Florence Deshon, after finishing an engagement with "My Lady's Dress," was first called to picture work by The Famous Players company. Doris Sawyer is an English actress whose last parts before leaving for America were Ruth in "Hindle Wakes," and Agnes in "Jim the Penman."

With such material to portray Mr. Locke's story, so thoroughly known in book form, the Frohman company should produce a picture of unusual interest.

"A TRAITOR TO ART" (Essanay).

This is the tragic story of a girl's struggles to succeed as an artist in a great city, calling for an emotionalism in portraying her sufferings and lack of success that keeps the drama at a high pitch of tension. It is tragic almost throughout, relieved, however, by light touches of the sometimes happy days of studio life, where the artists, successful and unsuccessful, romp at their Bohemian dinners. These touches act more as a foil to the more somber elements which is intended to show the almost unsurmountable barriers that lie in the path of those who hope for success, alone and unaided. There is nothing of the sordid in the play, however, reaching more a depth of pathos that touches the heart and wins the sympathy. The story also is brightened by the climax, after the girl had succumbed to the inevitable and admitted herself a failure, she finds she has won the love of a young minister. Although she awakens to the fact that a career is not for her, she finds happiness in love and in the fact that through her duties as the minister's wife she at last can be of some use to the world.

"THE FALL OF DEACON STILLWATERS" (Universal).

The Woman's Confederated League of Clubs and Rolling Pins is in session. They are about to elect a president and it looks very much as if Deacon Doolittle (William Franey) will be elected, although he is a mere man. You see Beatrice Fitznoodle (Gale Henry), the chairman of the Associated Hen Fest, is strong for the deacon, and if there is any way she can swing him into office she will do it.

On the afternoon when this imposing flashlight group picture was taken the deacon was addressing the Anti Sin League, an auxiliary of the Confederated League. All the women are hanging on to the deacon's every word. He is telling them that wine and women "never got no man nothin'," that drink is damnation and dice are the devil's own work.

As a matter of fact the Deacon is a hot old sport and pulls off cock fights in the basement of his home every once in a while, is a regular feller with the ladies and has been caught in cabaret shows. He once knocked out a famous pugilist. He can be seen doing his double dealing work in the Joker comedy, "The Fall of Deacon Stillwaters," which will be released on the Universal program on June 24th.

"THE ETERNAL QUESTION" (Metro).

Mme. Petrova, the gifted actress, will be seen in the starring role in "The Eternal Question," a five-part Metro wonderplay, produced by the Popular Plays and Players, which will be released July 3. This feature was produced under the direction of Burton King and the supervision of Harry Revier, supervising director at the Popular Plays and Players studio. A strong supporting cast includes Arthur Hoops, Mahlon Hamilton, Edward Martindel, Warren Oland, Henry Leone, Howard Missimer and Evelyn Dumo.

The story of "The Eternal Question" deals with the discussion of two club men on the eternal question, woman. One held that birth and breeding made the woman, while the other contends that clothes were largely responsible. They made a wager to test their theories. A young woman, the role essayed by Mme. Petrova, playing a grind organ and carrying a monkey, comes along at this time. She is selected for their subject.

There are a wealth of interesting situations and big scenes in "The Eternal Question."

"THE GENTLE CONSPIRACY" (Flying A).

The combined efforts of Author Charles M. Peck and Director Carl M. LeViness offer Miss Vivian Rich a golden dramatic opportunity in the two-part "Flying A" drama, "The Gentle Conspiracy," in which Alfred Vosburgh and the famous character actor, George E. Periolat, have the supporting roles. This is the story of an idle girl who tires of her unromantic life of luxury and seeks romance in the city, where she falls in with a fast young man and is killed in an automobile accident.

Scene from "The Gentle Conspiracy" (Flying A).

In her second part she comes to the home of the rich girl as a burglar in the dead of night and is caught. Her striking resemblance to the dead daughter is discovered, and she is adopted, in a gentle conspiracy to defraud the blind mother who has not been told of the death of her daughter. It later is proved that the adopted girl is the daughter of her mother's sister.

"The Gentle Conspiracy" is to be released by the Mutual on June 19.

PARAMOUNT POSTER ATTRACTS ATTENTION.

The Fenway theater, Boston, Mass., has been using a most effective bit of poster advertising for Paramount Pictures, one which is attracting widespread attention and causing general comment, although very few words are used. The management is getting out a quarter-sheet poster in two colors bearing an eight-inch Paramount trademark, which at once arrests the attention.

PICTURES AT CHURCH CONFERENCE.

Motion pictures of an educational, religious and scenic nature played an important part in connection with the Twenty-seventh Delegated General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, held in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., during the month of May. Great care was taken in the selection of proper equipment and the results obtained proved conclusively that motion pictures could well be adapted for use in connection with church work. In the Convention Hall, another Simplex Projector with dissolving stereopticon attachment was installed.

The Board of Foreign Missions held their meetings at the Casino and here a special platform was erected outside of the building. This platform supported the metal booth which contained a Simplex Projector.

"THE GHOST OF THE JUNGLE" (Universal).

No, this is not an illustrated song slide for "Howdah, how do you do," the new Universal fox trot; it is not even a scene from "Hawaii, how are you?" It is a scene from "The Ghost of the Jungle," a Bison two-reel animal drama in which Rex De Rosselli and Yona Landowska play the leading roles.

A complete native African village was built for "The Ghost of the Jungle," and two hundred of the blackest negroes west of the Rocky Mountains got temporary jobs while Director Hunt was busy filming the great animal picture.

A great deal of double exposure work was done in the picture and some of the "supernatural effects" have been admiringly commented upon. In one scene the heroine dies of fever in the African jungle and her spirit is seen leaving her body when death comes. Her spirit again plays an important part in the development of the plot when it leads the man who left her alone to die to his own doom. She is seen leading the way down a raging torrent which ends in a waterfall and over this waterfall the man who has deserted her finally plunges to his death in a frail canoe. "The Ghost of the Jungle" teems with exciting adventure and tragedy.

"THE LOVE GIRL" (Bluebird).

The release of "The Love Girl" on July 10 will mark the second issue on Bluebird's summer program of features. Originally announced as "Ambrosia," the change of title to "The Love Girl" was decided upon for commercial purposes and is considered by the producers to be in the nature of an improvement.

The leading players will be Ella Hall, who enacts "the girl;" Harry Depp, a youthful actor who is really the "leading man" of the piece, although still in his "teens;" Adele Farrington, Betty Schade, Kingsley Benedict and Grave Marvin. The writing and producing has been done by Robert Z. Leonard and the play is in five acts.

Hindu mysticisms and occult science play an important part in the plot, and there will be a lesson for "faddists" in the final discovery that the disciple of Budda is shown to be an impostor with a criminal record. This unmasking of villainy is accomplished by the boy and girl, who exercise better judgment and show more common sense than their elders.

The boy and girl will interest every theatergoer through the naturalness and charm of their acting—they are such perfectly logical and healthy children, clean-minded and hoydenish that they fairly romp through the five acts, while showing their elders the sensible way to arrive at results.

VIVIAN MARTIN IN INITIAL MOROSCO PICTURE.

Vivian Martin, who recently arrived in Los Angeles to take up her engagement with the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company and Pallas Pictures, is now engaged on her first vehicle to be released under the Morosco brand on the Paramount Program. "Nell of Thunder Mountain," by Alice von Saxmar, is the title of Miss Martin's new subject.

The story tells of Nell, a mountain girl reached by the spirit of progress to the extent of rebelling against the sordid conditions and stifling scope of her life. Although different from her people, she yet retains a great love for her own kind. The photoplay will present an unusual ending that will grip any audience with its logic. The star and supporting cast under the direction of Frank Lloyd is now at work in the pine forests at the top of the San Bernardino mountains in a spot noted for its wild beauty. The cast includes Edward Peil, William Jefferson, Jack Livingston, Louise A. Emmons, Alice Knowland, Herbert Standing ond John McKinnin. James Van Tress is master of the tripod.

"DESTINY'S TOY" (Famous Players).

Louise Huff makes her first appearance as a featured player in the productions of the Famous Players Film Company when "Destiny's Toy," written and directed by John B. O'Brien, is released on the Paramount Program on June 15. This is Miss Huff's second Famous Players role, however, as she appeared in that company's adaptation of Denman Thompson's "The Old Homestead."

In this production Miss Huff has an exceptionally strong supporting cast, including J. W. Johnston, John Bowers and Harry Lee. The major portion of the action was staged on Block Island, the picturesque scenery of which makes it an admirable location for that part of the story which has to do with the life of Nan Carter, the role played by Louise Huff, after she has been rescued from shipwreck by Barnacle Joe and has been adopted by the kindly old fisherman.

"Destiny's Toy" is a combination of romance and desperate battles, the fight in which the police raid the headquarters of the gang being one of the fiercest struggles ever recorded on the screen. Special music has been arranged for this production by G. Schirmer, copies of which are obtainable from the various exchanges.

"SUBMARINE" COMPANY DOING STUNTS.

The entire "Secret of the Submarine" company, under the leadership of Director George Sargent, recently journed down to Los Angeles to film some of the exciting scenes with an aeroplane which furnishes a series of exceptional thrills in the big picture.

After a revolver duel between Lieut. Hope, U. S. N. (Thomas Chatterton) and Lamor Johnstone (Gerard Morton) the aeroplane catches fire and burns in mid-air. When this part of the scene was being taken the fire got too warm for comfort, the aviator adding unexpected realism to the film by the way in which he made an almost perpendicular dive for ground and safety. It was a narrow escape, but the speed of the machine forced the flames and smoke to the rear and away from the wheel until the ground was reached. Miss Juanita Hansen, leading woman of the company, has become an enthusiastic aviatrix since working in this picture.

"REEL LIFE" (Gaumont).

The Gaumont company, producer of the interesting single reel Reel Life, the Mutual Magazine in Film, has outlined several interesting programs in this weekly release. It is the policy of the company to have "Reel Life" edifying as well as entertaining, the same in character as a magazine. For this reason its subjects are chosen with great care. There are usually three different ones upon each reel for the sake of diversity.

"Reel Life" No. 7 is largely devoted to Gaumont animal studies. It also has an entertaining section showing the work of students at an agricultural college. The following issue, No. 8, may be the means of saving many lives, since it shows how gasoline may be safely handled. This is one of Gaumont's important contributions to the "Safety First" crusade. There is an interesting series of pictures showing the New York City Street Cleaning Department at Work. A third section shows the growth and habits of the snail.

Until it is flashed upon the screen in "Reel Life" No. 9, few people will know that spinning of wool as a home industry is not a lost art in America. The Gaumont camera man stumbled into a mountainous section of Georgia, where he was surprised to find the women of the families of even well-to-do farmers were engaged in carding and spinning wool for home use.

There are pictures of ancient Egyptian temples, mammoth pyramids and kingly tombs that were old when King Solomon ruled in Jerusalem. A third section of this issue is made up of more of Gaumont's popular Animal Studies. Bird Life will be featured.

"Reel Life" is released as a Mutual Picture every Wednesday. No. 8 was issued June 18.

PARAMOUNT PICTOGRAPHS SHOW FIRST AIDS.

First aid to the injured has been picturized in an interesting manner by the Paramount Pictures Corporation in a release of the Pictographs showing what the emergency aids are and how they may be applied in various cases. The pictures were posed by a young boy and a nurse and the films show what ready remedies should be applied in certain accidents, how a pencil and a bandage may be utilized in making a tourniquet to stop the flow of blood, how a wounded knee may be bandaged, and what to do for gash in the head, an injured hand and cuts about the face.

MARY MILES MINTER AT AMERICAN STUDIO.

Mary Miles Minter is now busily using her wonderful powers in her first picture for the American Film Company, Inc., under the personal supervision of Samuel S. Hutchinson. It is "Youth's Enduring Charms," a striking appropriate title for this tiny actress' photoplay effort. The story is by Mabelle Heikes Justice, and direction has been placed in charge of William C. Dowlan, a director of recognized ability.

MORE PIANOS AT UNIVERSAL CITY.

"If we keep on we'll soon have enough pianos to stock a piano house," remarked Charles Rankin, manager of productions, at Universal City several days ago, on the arrival of two grands and one upright. The twenty-six companies working at Universal City make frequent use of the pianos, and as many as fourteen instruments have been known to be on the sets in a single day.

NOTES OF THE TRADE

HERBERT RAWLINSON, who for some time has been a featured player under the direction of William Worthington at Universal City, has been transferred to the Robert Leonard company and will be featured with Miss Ella Hall, under the direction of Leonard. Under his new director, Rawlinson will appear in a five-reel feature photoplay entitled "Little Eva Edgarton."

* * *

Arthur Acord, popular hero of Mustang-Mutual releases, is in his home at Santa Barbara seriously injured, the result of being thrown from his mount while enacting a scene for "Sandy, Reformer," a forthcoming release. As a result of Acord's injury, work on the production has been halted, pending his recovery.

* * *

During the time the members of the New York police department will be engaged in military training at Fort Wadsworth, perfecting themselves in the handling of the big coast defense guns, the Vitagraph Company of America has generously offered to supply a moving picture entertainment with a change of program nightly.

* * *

Lillian Hayward again appears as a vampire type in "The Germ of Mystery," a Selig drama in course of production by William Robert Daly.

* * *

Before proceeding with the work of picturizing the five-reel feature, by Harvey Gates, starring Ruth Stonehouse, Director William Worthington will produce a one-reel political photoplay, with the leads played by Jessie Arnold and J. F. Connolly. It is entitled "Cross Purposes," and is written by Bess Meredyth.

* * *

"The Girl Philippa," story by Robert W. Chambers, which ran in one of the popular magazines, is being produced by the Vitagraph Company under the direction of S. Rankin Drew. Anita Stewart will be seen in the title role. Others in the cast are S. Rankin Drew, Brinsley Shaw, Anders Randolf, Frank Wupperman, Ethel Corcoran, Alfred Rabock and Julia Swayne Gordon.

* * *

Twelve lions, six leopards and a number of elephants, in addition to various other members of the Bostock animal aggregation, appear in numerous of the scenes of "The Siren of the Jungle," a two-act Centaur-Mutual drama, starring Margaret Gibson and William Clifford.

* * *

"The Deacon's Demise" has been finished by Director Lynn Reynolds, in five reels, and will be released as a feature. Reynolds declares that it is the best story he has made. Myrtle Gonzales is featured, supported by Val Paul and Fred Church, with a strong cast including Lule Warrenton, George Hernandez, Frank MacQuarrie, Nanine Wright and Jack Curtis. Reynolds is preparing another story for production, in which Miss Gonzales is featured, but the title has not been announced.

Carl Rich, the five-year-old son of Charles J. Giegerich, a well-known New York newspaper man, has joined the ranks of motion picture stars and has already made his initial appearance in "The Redemption of Dave Darcey," a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, announced for release early in June.

Little Carl enjoys the distinction of appearing as the character impersonated by Jimmie Morrison when a child. What made special appeal to players and director was Carl's almost uncanny resemblance to Mr. Morrison, both as his natural self and when made up for the character.

Miss Cleo Madison and her co-director, William V. Mong, have completed "An Eye for an Eye," in two reels, featuring Miss Madison, and with a cast including Mong, L. M. Wells, Charles Gunn, Bertram Grassby and B. T. Henderson. Many of the scenes were taken in the Malibu mountains near Los Angeles, and some beautiful photographic effects were secured. Miss Madison expects to produce next a three-reel film play entitled "Tilly, the Little Swede," written by Mong.

* * *

Director T. N. Heffron, of the Selig Company, has begun work on "The Old Man Who Tried to Grow Young," a drama in three reels. The cast includes Al W. Filson and Vivian Reed.

* * *

Dr. Mary Walker was one of the prominent members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs who visited the Vitagraph studios at Flatbush recently on special invitation of Messrs. A. E. Smith and J. Stuart Blackton. It was Dr. Walker's first introduction to the mysteries of motion picture production and she was as happily interested as a young girl with her first mechanical doll.

Director Eugene V. Mullin, of the Vitagraph Company, is hard at work upon a three-reel melodrama with Evart Overton, Denton Vane, Miss Mayfield, Logan Paul and Adele Kelly in the cast. This production will be released under the Broadway Star trademark.

Allen Holubar has produced his second one-reel society drama, entitled "The Primitive," featuring Ruth Stonehouse and himself, with Jack Holt playing the heavy. Miss Stonehouse consented to appear in this drama while awaiting the preparation of the five-reel feature, in which she is to be starred. Holubar will begin next week on another one-reel film play, which he has written.

* * *

S. Rankin Drew has begun work on a new Vitagraph photoplay, picturized from a popular serial by Robert W. Chambers. It is to be a Blue Ribbon Feature, in which an all star cast including Anita Stewart, Brinsley Shaw, Anders Randolf, Frank Wupperman, Julia Swayne Gordon and Mr. Drew will be seen in the principal characterizations.

* * *

Lionel Barrymore is the co-author of "The Criminal's Thumb," a three-reel Gaumont-Mutual detective drama, in which Iva Shepard and Alexander Gaden are starred. John Reinhard, Henry W. Pemberton, Lucille Taft and several other members of the regular Gaumont-Mutual stock company appear in support of the co-stars.

* * *

Director Lloyd Carleton is working on the production of "The Shepherd," prepared for the screen by Eugene B. Lewis, from the story of Elwood Hemming. The featured leads are played by Dorothy Davenport and Emory Johnson, supported by Richard Morris and Alfred Allen.

* * *

E. H. Sothern began work as a Vitagraph star on June 1. His first picture as a cinema player will be a domestic drama by Paul West, in which the distinguished actor will be seen as Blake Waring. The picture is being produced under the direction of Frederick Thomson, Mr. Sothern being supported by a specially selected cast.

* * *

Pat Rooney is at work at Universal City, under the direction of Roy Clements, filming the first two reels of a comedy series entitled "The Bell Hop," written by Charles E. Van Loan, especially for Rooney. Rooney is supported by Adele Farrington, Ed Sedgwick and Hayward Mack and a number of others of the Universal City stock company.

* * *

Director Fred ("Bing") Thomson, known throughout the motion picture world as one of the most capable directors, has returned to the Vitagraph Company and will direct Mr. E. H. Sothern, the famous legitimate stage star in his screen career. Supporting Mr. Sothern in his first picture are Peggy Hyland, a recent acquisition by the Vitagraph Company; Rose Tapley, Charles Kent and Florence Radinoff.

* * *

Director George Cochrane has started making a one-reel comedy drama, entitled "When the Stars Foretell," the leads being played by Marjorie Ellison and Jack Connolly, supported by Malcalm Blevins and Herbert Law. The story is by Calder Johnstone, of the Universal City staff, and is the tale of a girl with an uncanny sense of forecast.

* * *

Frank Daniels is still working with Alice Washburn, under the direction of C. Jay Williams in the superlative single-reelers, which are released by the Vitagraph weekly.

Mitchell Mark in Boston?

Rumor Has It That the Picture Theater Magnate Is Contemplating Building a Picture Theater in Boston—Denied by Al Newhall of the Strand in Lynn, a Mark House—Building Theater Now in Worcester.

By William M. Flynn, Boston Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

BOSTON, MASS.—It is persistently rumored about this city that Mitchell Mark, one of the most prominent moving picture men in the East, is planning to build a magnificent new theater somewhere in Greater Boston. Al. Newhall, who is associated with Mr. Mark at the Strand theater in Lynn, says he is not going to build a theater in Boston. However, the rumor refuses to be downed and exhibitors and exchangemen are speculating as to where the new theater will be located should it become a reality.

Mr. Mark has been very successful as an exhibitor and his connections with the Strand theaters in New York and Lynn, the Comique in Lynn and theaters in Buffalo, N. Y., and other cities in this section of the country has given him greater experience and a wider outlook than most exhibitors are fortunate enough to possess. There are many persons who believe that another large moving picture house in the heart of Boston would not only find it difficult to show a profit, but would also hurt the houses that are there now.

Available down-town sites are practically all occupied by moving picture theaters at the present time, and with the tremendous verhead expense, the majority of them are laboring under the advent of another playhouse would spell disaster to one or more of them. In view of the existing conditions it is believed that if another large house is contemplated by anyone it is to be built somewhere outside of the so-called theater district of the city, possibly in one of the suburbs.

Mr. Mark is building a theater in Worcester at the present time.

General's New Boston Offices.

Boston, Mass.—The New England branch of the General Film now boosts of the largest moving picture exchange in New England. Manager Edward J. Farrell, who went to New York on an important business matter this week, is highly pleased with the new home on Ferdinand street. The lower floor of the building contains the executive offices, the booking department and the exhibiting room. Upstairs are the poster ond shipping departments, while the poster department and vaults are situated in the basement. There are thirty-three vaults capable of storing 20,000 reels of film.

Preparing for Patriotic Film.

Boston, Mass.—Emile Chautarde, the well-known director of the World Film, was in Boston last week looking over some settings for the new World picture he is to direct, called "Nathan Hale." He went out to Dover, Mass., and also visited Salem and inspected several prospective sites in both communities. While in Boston Chautarde was entertained by Frank Grady, manager of the local office of the World Film, who is now actively waging an advertising campaign which he claims has been a tremendous help to exhibitors showing his releases. Alice Brady and a company of players were in New Bedford last week posing for some scenes in Miss Brady's latest vehicle, "Miss Petticoats." The Park and Fenway theaters in Boston are now handling Brady-made programs and other large theaters showing Brady-made goods include the Empire at Providence, R. I.; the Empire at Portland, Me.; the Eagle at Manchester, N. H., and the Park theater at Worcester.

Heard at International Exchange.

Boston, Mass.—Mr. Frank H. Vine, New England manager of the International Film Service, is enthusiastic over the new Hearst International Pictorial series, the first of which was released in this territory on June 15. The new series was formerly put out by the Hearst-Vitagraph Company, but since the reorganization of the Vitagraph Company it has become a distinctively Hearst product and receiving all the benefit of the publicity in the Hearst organs in this territory.

Abe E. Penn is the latest addition to the staff of road men connected with the local office of the International. Penn is new to the moving picture business, but with his reputation as a salesman and his knowledge of people and conditions in New England, through which he will travel, he is expected to prove a valuable addition to the staff working under the dirtction of Manager Vine.

Walter S. Davidson, who was formerly connected with the Boston office of the Pathe Company, is also on the road for the International and reported to be doing very well. Most of his efforts are confined to the State of Maine, where he is said to have a host of friends among the exhibitors.

The Boston Journal has launched a novel moving picture contest—a contest which offers an opportunity for fifteen young women and fifteen young men to appear in a moving picture to be made and produced in Boston and also gives the local scenario writers a chance to see what they can do. The name of the company that is to film the picture has not been made public.

The contest is based on the popularity vote idea. The leading fifteen young women and fifteen young men are to be selected as the cast for the photoplay, and the young woman and man receiving the greatest number of votes will be selected to play the leads. As the photoplay is produced it is planned to publish daily the locations at which various scenes will be taken, and all particulars of interest in connection with the filming of the picture.

The contest will extend over a period of three weeks and in addition to the other honors, cash prizes are to be awarded to the winner of the scenario contest and the leading vote getters. The contest is open to all young women and men who are at least sixteen years old and of good moral character. The rules also provide that the scenario must be written about a girl named Flo.

NEWARK NEWS LETTER.

By Jacob Kalter, 51 Strand Theater Bldg., Newark, N. J.

Levison Returns From Trip.

Newark, N. J.—Leo F. Levison, manager of the local branch of the World Film, has just returned from a most successful trip on the Atlantic coast, stopping off at Long Branch, West End, Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, Manasquan and Point Pleasant. He reports that the exhibitors and hotel men in this territory are complaining bitterly of the delay in the summer season. He also states that according to Dame Rumor, Walter Rosenberg will reopen the Parker theater, Long Branch, and run same in conjunction with the airdome adjoining the new Broadway theater.

Mr. Exhibitor:—You will get more helpful information by carefully reading one trade paper weekly than by skimming over three or four. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the one paper you need.

"Myra" Doing Well.

Newark, N. J.—H. W. Johnston and A. H. Westfall, working the Jersey territory of the International Film, dropped in the other day. They report exceptional bookings on the new serial "Mysteries of Myra."

Rambonnet With Universal.

Newark, N. J.—Edwin A. Rambonnet, formerly with the General Film, has joined the staff of the Universal, at 286 Market street, as roadman. In his new car Mr. Rambonnet expects to make many trips throughout the state in search of business. Mr. L. Gainsborg, manager of the Newark branch, also reports that S. E. Fried, his other road man, is doing exceptionally fine business.

Keystone Park Opened.

Newark, N. J.—M. Rubenfield has opened the airdome at Broad street and Eighth avenue. The place will be called Keystone Park. Every Tuesday evening will be country store and on Thursday evenings amateur night will be held.

Kimball Representation in Newark.

Newark, N. J.—Eugene F. Licome, representing the W. W. Kimball Company, organ builders of Chicago, was in Newark all week seeing the exhibitors in regard to his organ for the motion picture theater. Mr. Licome comes here from New York.

World's Free Reels.

Newark, N. J.—"Something for nothing." Don't believe it? Yes, you can secure free sales reels for the World Film's pictures by applying to Leo F. Levison, Newark manager. Mr. Levison reports tremendous demands for these novelties, Fox's Carlton, Newark, having exhibited the same picture four times in a week. "No trouble at all booking pictures at this price," he says.

Philadelphia Prospers

Opening of the Summer in the Quaker City Brings No Falling Off in Attendance at Moving Picture Shows—Early Closing of the Larger Theaters and General Prosperity of Local Business Reasons for the Good Attendance.

Special to Moving Picture World from Philadelphia News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—A most peculiar situation confronts the exhibitors of Philadelphia and vicinity at the present time. Despite the unseasonable period of the year the most satisfactory conditions are being experienced at the majority of local theaters. During the past several weeks the moving picture theaters have been exhibiting to large houses and there seems to be no indication of any tendency contrary to this analysis. Large theaters such as the Stanley, the Arcadia, the Palace and many others report unusual crowds and in many instances they have been forced to close the box office long before the accustomed time. Generally, at this time of the year, the moving picture industry suffers a relapse and small attendances are the result. This is due largely to the warm weather and the fact that many persons commute to nearby resorts where they can escape the hardships of the warmer weather.

While the weather to date has been of a most unseasonable character, the mere fact that summer has set in generally serves as a notice to the public to discontinue the practice of visiting their favorite theater and the exhibitor suffers as the result. Many reasons are being advanced to explain the contrary conditions now prevailing, but the main cause seems to be the general prosperous conditions of practically every line of business. Commercial and industrial establishments in this vicinity are operating to capacity and labor is at a premium. This has naturally resulted in bringing about a state of affairs whereby the average working man has more money to spend on luxuries such as theaters, smoking, visiting, etc. Most exhibitors are willing to attribute their good fortune to this reason and a strong feeling of optimism is prevalent in moving picture circles in this grand old Quaker City of Philadelphia.

Majestic, Fine Shore Theater, Opens.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Monday, June 5, marked the opening of the Majestic theater, Jersey Shore's largest and most modern moving picture theater. The management of the theater had published notices to the effect that the theater would be opened to the public on Saturday, June 3, but through some misunderstanding it was found impossible to do so on that date, hence the postponement. Notwithstanding this fact, a large crowd was on hand to witness the first show in the Majestic and they were certainly not disappointed in either the accommodations afforded or the character of the pictures exhibited.

New Amusement Incorporation.

Highlands, N. J.—The Highlands Amusement Company has recently been granted a New Jersey charter. The character and object of the new concern is to conduct moving picture theaters. Harry A. Sculthorp, Jesse Sculthorp and George E. Jenkinson, Jr., are the principal incorporators.

New Producing Company.

The Felber Film Company has been incorporated in Delaware to manufacture moving pictures. The new concern has been capitalized at $50,000, John E. Fitzgerald, John T. Costello and John E Felber being the principal incorporators.

Ben Zerr Leases Star Theater.

Reading, Pa.—Ben H. Zerr, well-known moving picture exhibitor of Reading, Pa., proprietor of the Schuylkill Avenue motion picture theater, has leased the house to Haas & Moyer, owners of the Star theater, located on South Tenth street. The new management will make an effort to give the Schuylkill avenue potrons the best pictures available and will continue the majority of the features instituted by Mr. Zerr.

NEW THEATER IN RALEIGH, N. C.

Aaronson & Brown's New Strand a House to Be Proud of.

By Clarence L. Linz.

RALEIGH, N. C.—Aaronson & Brown have opened their new Strand theater, one of the real show places of the South. The foyer is handsomely finished in marble and the interior walls are finished in Venetian marble. The lighting and ventilating systems are as near perfect as possible. The lights are so arranged that not a single shadow is thrown nor are any of the lights visible to the audience even in the top row of the balcony. The house has six ventilators controlled from the roof, where two large fans are so arranged as to inject and eject air as required.

The projection room is built to afford the greatest possible amount of safety. It is above the balcony and the walls and ceiling are of concrete. In the lobby is a writing desk, public telephone and distilled ice water is obtainable. Retiring rooms for men and women patrons are located on the balcony.

A direct view of the stage and screen is obtainable from each seat. They are upholstered in green leatheroid, and the doors are covered with the same material.

C. E. Tandy Visits Asheville.

Asheville, N. C.—C. E. Tandy, general manager of the Southern Paramount Picture Corporation, was a visitor here last week. He came to Asheville to confer with S. A. Lynch, president of the corporation, on the affairs of that organization. Mr. Lynch announces that the corporation has procured Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas in addition to the other states it now controls. Mr. Lynch, Mr. Tandy and their associates have controlled the output of Paramount pictures in the Southern states for some time. Both the gentlemen named are among the best-known films men in the country.

Baltimore's New Fire Regulations

City Committee Recommends Changes in Local Building Laws That Will Be Important to Exhibitors and Exchange Managers.

By J. M. Shellman, 1092 Mt. Royal Ter., Baltimore, Special Correspondent.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Among the many recommendations that have been made by the committee on fire prevention of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, which should be called to the attention of all the exhibitors and owners of moving picture theaters in this city are listed below.

The committee made its investigations during the months of January, February and March of this year. The following are the recommendations of import which might affect the moving picture theaters:

That the building laws be amended, with special attention given to modern requirements for construction and fire prevention, particularly as to limitation of areas and to private fire protection.

That additional ordinances be adopted and the present ones be amended to form a complete code of regulations governing the manufacture, sale, storage and transportation of explosive and inflammable substances.

That a systematic inspection of old wiring be made, defects corrected and all wiring be subsequently reinspected at suitable intervals.

Manager Wales Introduced.

Baltimore, Md.—H. E. Friedman, who is soon to leave the Washington, D. C., branch of the World Film Corp., brought Manager Wales over to Baltimore on Monday night, June 5th, and spent several hours visiting his many exhibitor friends in this city with the purpose of introducing Mr. Wales to them and to bid them all goodbye before he leaves for Chicago to become associated with the Pathe office there. Mr. Friedman has many friends in Baltimore and all wish him good luck.

L. A. DeHoff Worked for Benefit.

Baltimore, Md.—Through the activities of L. A. DeHoff, manager of the New theater, 210 West Lexington St., a large portion of the success, attendant to the benefit card party and dance given at Evergreen-on-Ave., the beautiful estate of Mrs. T. Harrison Garrett, should be accredited to him. Moving pictures were a feature of the event, and Mr. DeHoff worked very hard on the preparations. The proceeds gained through the affair will be sent to Mrs. John W. Garrett and Edith Wharton, the novelist, in Paris, for the benefit of the American hospitals in France.

G. S. Benjamin's Showmanship.

Baltimore, Md.—As a unique advertising feature, G. S. Benjamin, manager of the Red Moon theatre, 20 West Baltimore St., had the lobby of his house decorated with Chinese lanterns, banners and flags and employed a travelling showman, A. Anderson, to give a demonstration exhibit and talk in front of the theater explaining how opium is smoked. This was all done to call attention to the showing of the Bluebird feature, "Hop, the Devil's Brew," which was playing there on Saturday, June 3rd. In addition to the show, Mr. Benjamin costumed his usher as a Chinese mandarin, and he did a few stunts in front. The exhibit consisted of a Chinese drum, daggers, sandals, etc. A splendid crowd was attracted to the house.

I. O. O. F. Campaign at Hippodrome.

A big I. O. O. F. campaign is now being carried on at the Hippodrome theater, through Harry Woods, the manager. This campaign will be continued until June 30th, and it is stated that through this activity a wonderful help has been given the beneficiary organization. It is understood that it has been successful in every way.

New Theaters Near Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md.—The contract for the one-story $10,000 picture theater, to be erected at Pennsylvania and Fulton Aves., has been let to Gustav Stohr, 2851 Pennsylvania Ave. It is stated that contractor Stohr wants sub-bids on the electrical fixtures. J. R. Forsythe, 232 St. Paul St., is the architect.

Baltimore, Md.—Plans are now being drawn up by architect, A. Lowther Forrest, Law Building, for additions to be made to the old Casino building located at 2 East North Ave., to cost $100,000.

Hancock, Md.—Plans are now nearing completion by Architect A. J. Klinkhart, 29 West Washington St., Hagerstown, Md., for a three-story moving picture theater, store and apartment building in the city by Chas. Myers, Station Agent of the W. M. R. R. of this city.

Hampden, Md.—Through Julius J. Goodman, representing the Goodman Estate, the Ideal airdome of Hampden has been purchased. At the end of this season it is the intention of these interests to erect on this site a dance hall and moving picture theater with a seating capacity of 1,200.

ASSISTANT OPERATORS ORGANIZE IN NEWARK

Will Attempt to Induce City Authorities to Issue Licenses to Competent Assistant Operators.

By Jacob J. Kalter, 51 Strand Theater Bldg., Newark, N. J., Special Correspondent.

NEWARK, N. J.—At a recent meeting held at Iroquois hall, the assistant moving picture machine operators banded themselves into an organization to be called the Assistant Motion Picture Machine Operators' Association of Newark. The new organization is not affiliated with any other body, and is not connected with organized labor.

The main purpose of the association is to attempt to induce the local city authorities to issue licenses to all qualified assistant operators. The new organization also intends to see that only licensed assistant operators shall work in the booths.

Jacob J. Kalter, Newark representative of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, acted as temporary chairman, and in opening the meeting explained briefly the objects of the association. The officers for the ensuing term were then elected. They are: Morris R. Heslowitz, president; Martin Kirschner, vice-president; Edward Krasny, secretary; William Reyle, treasurer; George Zwiekel, business agent; Milton Feldmeyer, sergeant-at-arms. The association gave a rising vote of thanks to the MOVING PICTURE WORLD for the interest displayed by that publication in the new association.

On Tuesday, June 7, a delegation consisting of M. R. Heslowitz, Martin Kirschner and William Reyle of the association, with Jacob J. Kalter of the WORLD as spokesman, conferred with Captain C. Albert Gasser, of the bureau of combustibles and fire risks in regard to issuing apprentice licenses. Mr. Gasser stated that he was heartily in accord with the objects of the organization and would do his part in keeping the booths protected. It is due almost entirely to Mr. Gasser's efforts in the past that the Newark booths have been so free from fires and other danger. The result of the conference was more than gratifying to the committee, and the asistants of Newark are anticipating with pleasure the day when they will receive their licenses.

IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

Len. L. Berman with Masterpiece Film.

Washington, D. C.—Len. L. Berman, formerly with the local V-L-S-E, and who has been traveling through North Carolina booking "Cabiria," "Neptune's Daughter," and "The Spoilers," for M. Rosenberg, will continue to cover that section with these and other features for the Masterpiece Film Company, of 1325 Vine street, Philadelphia, Pa., which organization recently took over the business in this territory formerly handled by Mr. Rosenberg before he went west.

Another Crandall Dividend.

Washington, D. C.—The Crandall Amusement Company recently announced that another dividend of five per cent. has been declared by its board of directors. From their size and the rapidity with which the dividends come, this company must be enjoying exceptional business.

Object to Censored Films

Washington, D. C., Exhibitors to Make Strenuous Objections to Censored Film from Maryland Thrust Upon Them—Patrons Don't Want Mutilated Pictures —Want to Have the First View of the Films.

By Clarence L. Linz, 635 Tenth St., N. E., Washington, D. C., Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The exhibitors of the District of Columbia are soon to hold a meeting to voice their objections to any move on the part of the local exchanges to pass on to them films that have previously gone before the censorship board of the State of Maryland and perhaps have had the most vital portion stricken out.

The theater managers, particularly those who show nothing but features, are wondering what the outcome will be. In commenting on the matter, Joseph P. Morgan, who is associated with Harry M. Crandall in the management of a string of houses here, said: "The exchanges should see to it that all films make the rounds of the theaters in Washington, Virginia and North Carolina, which states, with Maryland, form the Washington territory, before going into Maryland. This would insure to us here in the District of Columbia and the exhibitors in the other states named, where there is no censorship, pictures that have not been all shot to pieces at the will of three people who cannot possibly speak for the other hundreds of thousands of people who must and want to see the same pictures untouched.

"I feel that the exchanges owe to their other customers to see to it that they are served before those in Maryland. To do other than this is going to put the exhibitors in the uncensored territory in a very embarrassing position. For instance, in Baltimore, if an exhibitor there shows a vital scene taken out somewhere in the middle of a reel, if their patrons complain, can say: 'Well! You must not blame us; your board of censors ordered that part eliminated.' We of Washington have not that excuse for the people will say to us: 'The Maryland Board of Censors has not the right to say what we shall see and we believe you should give us reels that are not all jumbled up or which have parts missing,' and they will be right.

"There is another point to look at. If we tell our patrons that Maryland has censored our pictures it is going to start another hue and cry for home rule and home censorship; we are putting a thought into the heads of those who would perhaps just jump at a chance to start something.

"I am firmly of the belief that if the people of Baltimore really knew what this board of censorship is and what it will do, there would be a kick for its elimination. The public generally has no conception of what is going to happen. Now, if the exchanges do as we suggest—serve us first, right down to the last exhibitor —the moving picture theater patrons of Baltimore are soon going to complain of an inability to see other than ninety-day films that are perhaps rainy and more or less battle-scarred. Our patrons do not want to see disconnected stories, and we do not want to show them."

Other Washington exhibitors interviewed on this subject hold views very similar to those expressed by Mr. Morgan, and they believe that in the end the plan suggested would prove of great benefit to the Maryland exhibitors in ridding themselves of censorship.

WATCH YOUR C. O. D. RETURNS.

Petty Larceny by Express Employes May Not Be Noticed.

Washington, D. C.—Another aggravating matter that is very productive of cuss words is a new stunt alleged to have been pulled off by one or more express agents in the territory. It is said that these men so manipulate their C. O. D. returns as to make quite a little change on the side. For instance, the complaining exchange manager stated that some time ago he sent a case of films and paper as C. O. D. $15.70. The man who handled the transaction as on employee of the express company changed the wrapper to read $15.50 and sent that amount back to the shipping office. The victim was very loath to make any very big complaint as long as the matter remained involving only a few cents, and in overlooking it he evidently led the manipulator to believe they were getting away with a good thing. Much to his surprise very recently a $15 C. O. D. came back $10—somebody had gotten away with a five spot. The authorities were then notified and they quickly made up the difference, promising immediate action to see that there would be no recurrence of the trouble. Exchangemen and others doing a C. O. D. business should watch their returns closely to see that they are not similarly victimized.

Worthless Check Nuisance.

Washington, D. C.—Some of the local exchangemen are again complaining against the prevalence of worthless checks, one of their number having received seven in a single day, although that is perhaps a rather unusual occurrence. Bad checks, however, are not so much feared as in the old days, for most of the exchanges now demand payment for service in advance and some ask in addition that a deposit for one or two weeks of service be made. The time is fast coming when some few men who knowingly give worthless checks are going to be made to answer in court for their actions. The exchangemen have right along hesitated about doing so, but are becoming exasperated and want some man punished to the limit as an example to all others similarly inclined.

International Takes Over V-L-S-E, Business.

Washington, D. C.—The International Film Service, Inc., which recently opened offices here with Fritz B. Wathne as manager, has taken over the business formerly handled by the V-L-S-E exchange involving the booking of the Hearst-Vitagraph Weekly, now to be known as the Hearst International News Pictorial Capital City Notes.

Marcus Notes had as his guests at the Casino theater, Seventh and F streets, Northwest, several hundred newspaper men, representing papers all over the United States, at an initial showing in this territory of the photoplay "Where Are My Children?"

Tom Moore, of the Garden, Strand and Plaza theaters, has just presented himself with a $5,200 Pierce-Arrow automobile. For comfort the machine approximates a Pullman car, and Mr. Moore is more or less envied by all his friends.

Sidney B. Lust, owner of the business of the United Film Service in this territory, has purchased another print of "Tillie's Punctured Romance" and state rights for Florida, Tennessee, South Carolina, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas. He previously had control of the District of Columbia, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina for this picture.

Sherman Mason, formerly an exhibitor of New York City, has taken over the Midcity theater, at 1223 Seventh street, Northwest, and intends operating the same as a strictly colored theater.

Screen Club Makes Good

Pittsburgh's Film Organization Proves Its Power in Effecting the Death of a Ridiculous Ordinance That Would Have Banished Film Exchanges from the City—Fire Marshal's Attempt to Scare the People Foiled.

Special to Moving Picture World from Pittsburgh News Service.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Through the efforts of the campaign committee of the Pittsburgh Screen Club a proposed ordinance to relegate all film exchanges to the suburbs of the city was finally defeated at a session of the councilmanic committee on public safety last week. The attempt of County Fire Marshal Thomas L. Pfarr to foist the ridiculous measure upon the lawmakers of Pittsburgh was laughed at by the moving picture men, but nevertheless created some uneasiness for a time. Considerable indignation over the proposal was expressed by film concerns and real estate interests alike, in view of the recent removal of many of the exchanges from the old district in Ferry street and Fourth avenue, known as "film row," into modern fireproof quarters.

Tried to Scare Pittsburgh.

The ordinance originally considered by council was to limit the height of buildings used in the film business to 90 feet. In testifying before the councilmanic committee Marshal Pfarr asserted that there were enough explosives in downtown Pittsburgh in the form of moving picture films to blow up the entire business section. He further advocated his ordinance to prohibit the use of any building either for the manufacture or storage of films except in the suburbs. Another clause in Marshal Pfarr's proposed measure was to issue an order prohibiting any child under five years of age from attending a moving picture show and forbidding the carrying of bundles and baskets into theaters, as these things would add to the loss of life in event of a panic.

At the final hearing on the proposed ordinance John McAleer, chairman of the campaign committee of the Pittsburgh Screen Club, opposed the measure successfully. He demonstrated the lack of explosive qualities of film under ordinary conditions by attempting the (?) hazardous feat of burning a strip of film while holding same in his hand. Among film men who testified as to the ridiculousness of the ordinance was B. F. Lyon, manager of the International Film Service, who refuted the charge that films are dangerous as explosives and stated that danger of fire from that source is very small, as a result of the precautions taking in handling them.

Pittsburgh Screen Club Nominations.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—One of the liveliest and best attended gatherings ever held by the Pittsburgh Screen Club was the nomination meeting held recently in the club headquarters, Lyceum Building, Pittsburgh. President H. B. Kester occupied the chair. Following the reports of the committees the candidates for officers and board of governors for the annual election, July 2, were named.

The nominees are: For president, H. B. Kester, A. W. Cross, A. H. McClelland, Charles Seltzer; vice-president, H. A. Lande, J. P. Donovan, G. R. Ainsworth; secretary, Wm. Mayer; treasurer, Chas. Reamer, David Simon, Mayer Silverman, John Long; corresponding secretary, M. J. C. Kornblum; official organizer, Max W. Herring; board of governors, three-year term, G. R. Ainsworth, M. Feitler, George Sweitzer; two-year term, Chas. Seltzer, George Oldfield, C. W. Eckhardt, John McAleer, John Long; one-year term, Mayer Silverman, D. L. Harmon, A. J. Barthell.

New House in Connellsville Ready.

Connellsville, Pa.—The attractive new theaters of Messrs. Wagner and Wishart, at Connellsville, Pa., is receiving the finishing touches of decorators and furnishers and will be ready for opening about July 1. It will be called the Paramount, and promises to establish a place among the foremost theaters in Western Pennsylvania. The building itself is fireproof and thoroughly up-to-date in every way, having cost about $30,000 to erect. The seating capacity will be 1,000. Among other features of the house the projection booth is built of steel and is located on the outside of the theater. Two Simplex machines are being installed. Wagner and Wishart have conducted the Globe theater in Connellsville for the past four years with much success, and they are embodying in the Paramount the results of their experience. When the new house is opened the Globe theater will be discontinued and the building it occupies converted into storerooms. C. A. Wagner, who has personally looked after the Globe, will continue in the active management of the new house. The large patronage which the Globe has enjoyed will assure the popularity of the Paramount among the moving picture goers of Connellsville and vicinity.

Vaudeville House Books Film.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Sheridan Square theater, in the East Liberty district, Pittsburgh, has booked a number of big features to be shown in connection with its vaudeville, and a decided change in the policy of this handsome house is contemplated. Manager Hooley states that if the film attractions prove a success a regular program of pictures will be continued beyond the summer months. In preparing for the inauguration of the new policy the beauty of the large theater has been enhanced by new decorations and the lobby is a bower of palms and flowers. Pathe's "Who's Guilty?" serial will be shown three days to an episode, beginning June 15. The Essanay Chaplin film "Police" was shown June 8, 9 and 10, in addition to the George Kleine serial "Gloria's Romance," which has also been booked.

Albert Ayles Takes Over the North End.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The North End theater, on Perrysville avenue, near East street, Northside, Pittsburgh, has been taken over by Albert Ayles, formerly operator at the Royal theater, East street, for several years past. Located in one of the best residential sections of the city, the North End has an exclusive patronage and will continue to maintain a high standard in its pictures. The house is attractive and up-to-date and seats about 450.

May Build New Theater.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Baziotes & Antonopolos, owners of the Olympic theater, Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, has purchased for $150,000 the property at 317-319 Diamond street, at the rear of their theater. It is likely that an addition to the Olympic or a new picture house will be erected by these well-known exhibitors, but no definite plans have as yet been formulated, as the building on the site is now occupied under lease for another year.

Buys Theater at Springdale.

Springdale, Pa.—The Grand theater has been purchased by J. A. Faulx, who is remodeling the house and adding greatly to its attractiveness by new decorations on both exterior and interior. Feature pictures are to be shown in the near future.

W. K. Provan With Pathe.

W. K. Provan, formerly assistant manager of the Pitt theater, Pittsburgh, has recently joined the road forces of the Pittsburgh Pathe Exchange and looks after the Northwestern Pennsylvania territory. Mr. Provan makes his headquarters at Erie.

George P. McKee Comes to Local Fox.

The Pittsburgh offices of the Fox Film has strengthened its road staff by the addition of George P. McKee, an experienced film man, formerly of Washington, D. C.

Wolf & Brown, prominent exhibitors in the Western Pennsylvania section, have recently purchased the latest model Motiograph projection machines for their theaters in Cresson, Lilly and Ebensburg. The machines were installed by Ludwig Hommell & Co., Pittsburgh.

A mammoth electric sign, in the form of an American flag, has been erected atop the Liberty theater, East Liberty, one of the finest of the larger theaters in Pittsburgh. The emblem is visible for a great distance and makes the Liberty stand forth conspicuously at night.

AN INTERESTING THEATER.

Colonial Theater's Use of Colored Light Globes Novel and Effective.

By Clarence L. Linz.

BLUEFIELDS, W. VA.—The Colonial theater which was recently opened here has a seating capacity of about 350. It is equipped with a huge orchestrion and everything has been done by the management to insure the comfort and entertainment of its patrons, including gold fiber screen and two modern projection machines.

A feature of the house is the electric illumination. In each of the globes there are three sets of lamps, one of yellow, one of red and the third green. If there happens to be a fire scene, the lights within the theater imitate the reflection from the flames by the use of the red globes; for night scenes the green lights are used, and during all of the daylight scenes the yellow-globed lights are in use. These changes are all controlled from the operator's booth, and the operator has become very efficient in his handling of these lights to the end that many pleasing spectacles are produced.

The house is in charge of James L. Brown, formerly manager of the Orpheum theater, which was recently darkened. The Colonial is owned by Mr. Matz, of the Matz hotel. It is understood that he is considering the erection of a new theater that will have a seating capacity of 1,600.

Serving a Mountain Territory.

Ponceverte, W. Va.—Mr. Eagan, who maintains a branch here for the General Film and the motion picture theaters located in the coal field country, carrying as high as five hundred reels in stock, has a new Buick which he uses to make quick deliveries to his patrons.

An Attractive Little Theater.

Alderson, W. Va.—The Russell theater, a very attractive small-town house, has recently been opened by its owner, R. R. Russell. The theater has a seating capacity of about four hundred on the floor, which is reserved for the white patrons. In addition there is a balcony for the colored population. Two modern machines have been installed in an up-to-date operating room, and a very complete orchestrion is a great attraction.

Royal and Dixie Combine.

Princeton, W. Va.—Mr. Pearce, of the Dixie theater here, has taken over the Royal theater, formerly operated by F. A. Mole, and is consolidating the two programs with the intention of closing the Dixie. This latter is a small house with perhaps a seating capacity of about 350. The Royal can accommodate about seven hundred patrons and is in a very good location.

Richmond, Va. Turns Down Censorship

Ordinance Committee Votes 6 to 2 Against Local Censoring of Film—Police Have Powers Enough to Handle Matter.

By Clarence L. Linz, 635 Tenth St., N. E., Washington, D. C., Special Correspondent.

RICHMOND, VA.—The Ordinance Committee of the City Council recently voted adversely on the proposed motion picture censorship ordinance which has been more or less in the limelight for some time. The final vote was 6 to 2. As previously reported in the columns of the Moving Picture World it had generally been thought that the committee would take this action and the result of the vote caused little or no surprise among the exhibitors of this city. A number of the members of the committee had expressed the opinion that a rigid censorship could be enforced under existing law if required, and these and other officials of the city have contended that the employment of a paid board of censors was not necessary.

The Council had before it two separate propositions involving censorship. At the meeting at which rejection took place, Clerk of Committee A. H. McDowell read a letter from Congressman Montague, at Washington, containing information to the effect that the bill for national censorship of motion picture films would probably not be acted upon at this session of the National Congress. The motion for rejection was made by Councilman Walsh and voting with him were Messrs. Cheatwood, English, Ferguson, Gunst and Ladd. Those voting in favor of reporting the ordinance with the recommendation that it be adopted were Messrs. Christian and Paul.

The members of the Council were informed by Manager Chesley Toney of the Theato that the Richmond managers were just as anxious as anyone else to have the proper kind of pictures out of regard to their patrons. He declared that the proposed ordinance would drive the small theaters out of business as it called for the payment of 50 cents on all films viewed by the censors. Moses Hofheimer offered to supply those interested in censorship with free tickets for a 10 o'clock matinee when they could look over the films in his theater before they were regularly exhibited.

New Hopewell Amusement Co.

Hopewell, Va.—The Gayety Amusement Company of this place was recently granted a charter by the Virginia state corporation commission. The incorporators are J. C. B. Gholson, of Hopewell, Va., president, and O. M. P. Brown, of Washington, D. C., secretary. The maximum capital stock is placed at $50,000 with a minimum of $5,000, the par value being $10 per share.

Lynchburg's Gayety Will Be Pretty.

Lynchburg, Va.—There will be no prettier motion picture theater in this city than the Gayety when the improvements contemplated by C. A. Goebel, its present manager, are completed. Contracts have recently been awarded and the work is well under way. The interior of the house is to be gone over completely. The decorations are to be quite elaborate. On the side walls there will be a number of panels showing Swiss scenes and dancing girls, harmonizing with borders of rich colorings and a ceiling of pale blue, and the effect of this will be very attractive. The lighting system has been changed over to the new indirect type. An improved ventilating system is also being installed and it is expected as a result of this, the house will be kept cool and comfortable at all times during the summer months. This in itself is a very worthy improvement.

During the six months that he has been manager of the Gayety theater Mr. Goebel had made a host of friends.

L. Walker to Open Theater.

Pocahontas, Va.—L. Walker, who was formerly engaged in another line of business here, has undertaken to remodel his store so as to convert it into a motion picture theater with a seating capacity of about 350. Mr. Walker expects to open for business about July 1. There are two houses here already showing motion pictures; the Opera House has a seating capacity of about 350 and the Star theater will accommodate perhaps 200. Both of these are controlled by a Mr. Mulholland.

Bedford City, Va.—Robinson Brothers, of Christiansburg, Va., have purchased the interests of Harrison & Tate in the Lyric theater here, and extensive improvements to the house are contemplated.

ST. LOUIS NEWS LETTER.

By A. H. Giebler, St. Louis Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

Weather Man Features "Rain"—Long Run Feared.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Exhibitors have been casting their eyes skyward the last few days—when they could see the sky—and making doleful forecasts that the bad weather that played a summer's engagement in this section of the country last year will make a return booking this season. June, so far, has been a little better than June a year ago, but it has been far from satisfactory. We have had five or six rainy days—and what is worse, rainy nights—so far this month, and the days when it does not rain the air is too chilly for al fresco performances. Last year was disheartening. Lots of exhibitors lost enough money trying to keep their outdoor places going through May and June to put a crimp in the whole summer's business, and many who stuck it out and played the whole season, just did beat the wolf by a few yards. Usually St. Louis is an ideal airdome town. Year before last the season was long and hot and dry. There were not more than five evenings during the whole season that outdoor performances could not be given. The number of airdomes in St. Louis is not as large this year as last summer, and many have waited until late in the season to open. Many film men prophecy a gradual decline of the airdome business if our weather does not prove more satisfactory, with the probable exception of cases where the theaters and airdomes are adjoining, and the programs and audiences can be moved into the house when the clouds begin to weep.

Ontario Operators Win

Provincial Parliament Refuses Request of Exhibitors and Will Not Reduce the Apprenticeship Requirements.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard St., E. Toronto, Ont., Special Correspondent.

TORONTO, Ont.—Officers of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association of Ontario waited upon Hon. J. W. McGarry, not long ago, to press for a reduction of the training period for apprentice operators from one year to six months. The claim was made that so many booth men had enlisted for war that there was a danger of labor shortage, while several exhibitors expressed the belief that they might be compelled to close down their houses for want of machine operators The government's representative promised to investigate the matter.

A few days later a delegation representing the Moving Picture Projection Machine Operators' Union waited on the authorities to point out that there is a sufficiency of "grinders" for all present needs and any reduction in the training period for "rookies" would receive the serious objection of the operators, who claimed that the exhibitors were merely trying to flood the labor market in order to weaken the wage feature. It was pointed out that the scale for union operators in Toronto is only $15 a week, whereas operators in many cities in the states were making much higher wages.

The representatives of the exhibitors suggested to the government that the training period for apprentices be determined according to the individual merits of the new men in place of being a stated time for all apprentices.

On June 6 it was announced here that in view of the representations of the operators as to the number of men available, no change would be made in the statutes insofar as restrictions for apprentices are concerned, especially as it had been found that more qualified operators had taken out licenses for the year starting June 1 than there were licensed moving picture theaters in Ontario. At the time that this decision was reached all operators in Ontario had not yet applied for a renewal of the Provincial cards. The operators have, therefore, scored a victory over their employers.

There are more than four hundred licensed and qualified operators in Ontario at the present time, it is declared.

I. Soskin with Paramount Staff.

Toronto, Ont.—I. Soskin has been added to the staff of the Paramount Pictures Corporation here as the direct representative of Messrs. J. J. and Jules Allen, president and secretary respectively of the company. Mr. Soskin was the Paramount representative in Vancouver not long ago and he was recently transferred to the managership of the branch at St. John, N. B., right across the continent. Mr. Soskin has been authorized by the Allens to have general supervision of the business under their direction.

Walter Davidson Joins World Film.

Toronto, Ont.—Announcement has also been made that Walter Davidson, until recently at the headquarters of the Canadian Universal, at Toronto, has joined the head office of the World Film in Toronto. Mr. Davidson is widely known in Canadian film circles. Mr. Burton has left the World.

Miss T. Burns has left the staff of the Toronto Mutual branch to enter the employ of the V-L-S-E at the Canadian headquarters in Toronto.

E. Y. Watson, moving picture editor of The Sunday World, Toronto, has left the employ of that paper. Mr. D. K. Billings, another member of The World staff known to film folks here, has also resigned. Mr. Billings was Toronto correspondent of this paper for many months.

League's Civic Work

Cleveland, O., Motion Picture Exhibitors Put Shoulder to the Wheel in Campaign for "Better Babies"—Raise Several Thousand Dollars—Theaters That Showed Special Film for the Dispensary and Hospital.

By Hubert Persons, Standard Theater Building, Cleveland, O., Special Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, O.—The biggest and most far-reaching activity Ohio motion picture exhibitors have ever engaged in, is the way Benjamin J. Sawyer, president of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League characterizes the "better babies" campaign the league has just completed.

For the week ending June 10, 146 picture theaters in Cleveland and suburbs, showed the film "A Baby's Fight for Life," for the benefit of the Babies' Dispensary and Hospital, and contributed one cent a head for every person viewing the film. Not only did the picture men contribute money to the campaign to raise funds to help the babies, but they gave the use of their theaters and permitted Camp Fire Girls in nurses' costume, to solicit funds for the dispensary in each theater.

Ten downtown theaters showed the film June 3, following a parade formally opening the babies' campaign. Contributions from persons in audiences in these ten theaters reached nearly $600, in addition to the contributions from the theater owners. The total amount the moving picture men have succeeded in raising for the babies has not been tabulated as yet, but it is certain to be several thousand dollars.

Theaters That Showed the Special Film.

Special Film to Help French Orphans.

Cleveland, O.—Miss Katherine Russell Bleeker, of New York, has just completed a reel entitled "The Perils of Society," to be shown at the Metropolitan theater the latter part of this month for the benefit of the fund Cleveland society women are raising to aid the French war orphans. Some of the scenes were laid in the old Garfield homestead, the former residence of President Garfield at Mentor. Other pictures were taken at the Country Club, the Hunt Club at Chagrin Falls, the Cleveland Yacht Club, and the town house and country estate of Charles A. Otis. One scene shows a number of society folk disporting themselves in the swimming pool at the Cleveland Athletic Club.

The Enjoy-U's Own Weekly.

Cleveland, O.—Gustave C. Schroeder, proprietor of the Enjoy-U. theater, 7700 Lake avenue, plans to give his audiences weekly features of his own making, as the result of an experiment he tried on Memorial Day. Schroeder mounted a motion picture camera in his automobile and drove about among holiday crowds in his neighborhood.

The result was a goodly number of feet of snappy neighborhood stuff which his audiences enjoyed a week later on the screen. Now Schroeder will repeat the experiment weekly.

"Where Are My Children?" in Ohio.

Cleveland, O.—"Where Are My Children", the film argument against race suicide, opened June 10 at the Cleveland Opera House. It was first privately screened by Manager George Gardner, before an audience of city officials, clergymen and educators.

E. P. Strong and Fred Desberg, of this city, have incorporated a company to handle the film in Ohio. It is attracting wide attention.

Benefit at the Lucier.

Cleveland, O.—The Woman's Guild of St. Peter's Church gave a benefit performance at the Lucier theater, Wayne and Detroit avenues, June 13. The film offering was "God's Country and the Woman."

Children Dance at the Olympic.

Cleveland, O.—The Olympia theater, E. 55th street and Broadway, was packed to the doors the nights of June 10 and 11, when Miss Katherine Ressler, presented seventy-five children of the neighborhood in a dance revue." According to W. H. Miller, manager of the Olympia and the Haltnorth theaters, the children are the best drawing card of the year for him.

May Build Theater in Youngstown.

Youngstown, O.—C. W. Deibel, in seeking a permit from the city council to construct an elevated foot bridge over an alleyway connecting two pieces of property he owns, declares he intends to construct a motion picture theater with a seating capacity of 2,500 if council grants him the permit.

CINCINNATI NEWS LETTER.

By Kenneth C. Crain, 610 1st Nat. Bank Bldg., Cincinnati Correspondent.

McMahan & Jackson Get Another Big Film.

CINCINNATI, O.—McMahan & Jackson have added to their list of big features the Great Northern Film Co.'s production, "The End of the World," a six-part film portraying what happened when a comet struck the earth. It will be handled on a state-rights basis, like some of the other features which the Cincinnati firm controls. "The Dumb Girl of Portici," which McMahan & Jackson own in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana, is showing to capacity business, they report, while "Diana," which was shown here in conjunction with the Pavlowa film, is also drawing well. The firm entertained a remarkable assemblage of stage and literary notables recently on the occasion of the visit of the touring Friars to Cincinnati. The attraction was a private showing of "The Burglar and the Lady," a film version of James J. Corbett's stage success, in which he is featured, and as Mr. Corbett was a member of the Friars' company, the occasion was opportune for the special exhibition, which was apparently much enjoyed.

Small Fire at Museum Theater.

Dayton, O.—A small fire in the operating room of the Museum theater, at 218 Valley street, caused a loss of about $75 by the destruction of a film and some other damage, and incidentally illustrated that a panic is not necessary when a blaze occurs. Manager Charles Wood calmly announced to the audience that there was a small fire, but that there was no cause for alarm, and the audience, under his instructions, moved out with equal calm. The fire department prevented a possible spread of the fire, extinguishing the blaze at once. Manager Wood's coolness undoubtedly contributed largely to the prevention of possible trouble.

Children's Films at Zanesville.

Zanesville, O.—The organizations interested in having pictures designed especially to interest and instruct children have succeeded in making arrangement for special programs once a week, on Saturday mornings, and the several exhibits which have been held were all well attended. A typical program shown recently included a Pathe colored picture, "The Adventures of a Madcap," and several other comedies, as well as some scenic pictures.

Beloit, Wis.—Frank McCarthy is now manager of the Rex and Strand theaters.

IN DETROIT.

Admission Raise at the Alhambra.

Detroit, Mich.—Thomas D. Moule, manager of the Alhambra theater, Woodward and Kenilworth avenues, Detroit, announces that on account of the ever-advancing cost of first-class programs and of the increased cost of every other item in the conducting of a high-closs theater, they are confronted with the necessity of increasing revenue, or of presenting mediocre attractions. "As we prefer to maintain our policy of 'No picture too good nor too expensive for the Alhambra,'" he says, "we will, commencing Sunday, June 11, charge 15 cents for all seats (except boxes), on the main floor, and ten cents for all balcony seats (including boxes). Main floor boxes will be 25 cents, and all seats ten cents at matinees as usual.

Gilligham Out of G. F.

Detroit Manager of General Film Exchange Resigns to Open His Own Distributing Company—Calls New Concern National Film Company—Offices at 189-191 Woodward Avenue—Some of Mr. Gilligham's Activities.

By Jacob Smith, 503 Free Press Bldg., Detroit, Mich., Special Correspondent.

DETROIT, MICH.—A. J. Gilligham, of this city, a national light in the film world both as an exhibitor and exchange man, and the oldest in point of continuous service of the General Film Company, has resigned the managership of the Detroit exchange, ond has opened offices at the New Empire theater building, 189-191 Woodward avenue, where he occupies the entire third floor. Mr. Gilligham will conduct an exchange business under the style of the National Film Company, the name under which he formery operated before he sold to the General.

Mr. Gilligham started as an exchange man some ten years ago, operating the National Film Company in Detroit and the Vaudette Film Company in Grand Rapids. There were six motion picture theaters in the United States when he opened the Vaudette theater in Grand Rapids in 1906. Since then he has gradually been increasing the number of houses until they include the Majestic, Orpheum, Strand, Idle Hour, Original Vaudette and Monroe Vaudette, and the New Empire in Detroit. The Grand Rapids theaters are operated as the Gilligham & Smith Enterprises, Mr. Gilligham being president and the largest stockholder.

When the General Film Company took over the National and Vaudette Film companies, Mr. Gilligham was appointed manager of the Detroit exchange immediately opened, and has continued in that capacity until sending in his resignation June 1st.

Mr. Gilligham has extensive motion picture holdings as well as numerous valuable real estate investments which require a great deal of his time. Besides the interest in the theaters above mentioned, he is vice-president of the Union Amusement Company, operating the Detroit Opera House; he is substantially interested in the new Circle theater in Indianapolis; he owns the property on which is located the Park theater, Woodward avenue, near Elizabeth street; he is just placing on the market 24 acres at Livernois and Twelfth streets which he has sub-divided into lots; he is president of the Detroit Screen Club; member of the Motion Picture Board of Trade; Thirty-Second Degree Mason; Member of the Mystic Shrine, F. & A. M., Wolverine Automobile Club, Board of Commerce, life member of the Lodge of Elks as well as other clubs and social organizations.

Mr. Gilligham will always be glad to welcome exhibitors, exchangemen and those interested in the motion picture business at his new offices, New Empire Theater building, 18-191 Woodward avenue, where he owns the lease on the entire building.

Detroit Board of Commerce Cruise.

Detroit, Mich.—When the steamer City of Detroit sailed away from the foot of Third street, Thursday morning, June 8, it had on board John H. Kunsky, George W. Trendle and Howard Pierce, as well as I. Reubens, the latter going as a motion picture operator. The trip is an annual one in the form of a cruise taken by the Board of Commerce for its members. A different route is taken each year and new places of interest are visited. The trip lasts five days.

At This Paper's Detroit Office.

Detroit, Mich.—Every day we run into exhibitors and exchange men who tell us that they couldn't get along without the Moving Picture World—and that it is the best and most complete journal devoted to the trade. Occasionally someone calls at the office to find out why the paper can't be purchased at every newsstand. In this connection we want to say that the circulation of the Moving Picture World is practically all paid-for circulation and represents individual paid-in-advance subscriptions. This is the best kind of circulation for the advertiser. Don't depend on being able to get the World at a newsstand—subscribe for it by mail and get 52 issues direct to your office or residence for only three dollars. It's the best investment you can make.

Centreville's Community House.

Centreville, Mich.—Work was commenced June 3 on the new Centreville theater, which it is expected will be completed by September 1. The cost will be in the neighborhood of $10,000. It has been financed by a stock company consisting of fifty members—citizens and farmers of this village. It is designed to fill a place in the community life and make Centreville a better place in which to live.

J. P. Church Managing the Forest.

Detroit, Mich.—John P. Church is now manager of the Forest theater, Woodward avenue near Forest, which is under the same ownership as the Your theater.

New Deltha Theater.

Detroit, Mich.—Seating capacity for 1,200 persons on one floor is to be provided in the Deltha theater, which is to be erected on the west side of Holcomb avenue, just north of Mack avenue, for the Deltha Amusement Company.

David Stott Dies.

David Stott, proprietor of the Broadway-Strand theater, Detroit, died suddenly of ptomaine poisoning on Sunday, June 4. He was buried the following Wednesday.

Worth a Passing Glance.

Detroit, Mich.—The Garden theater, now under the management of Joe Woods, and the Strand, under the management of Dewitt C. Shook (both Kunsky theaters) have followed the example of the Alhambra and announced a daily-change policy instead of changing four times a week.

The Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation of Michigan has filed articles of association with the Secretary of State at Lansing, Mich. The amount of authorized capital stock is $200,000 and the stockholders are Harry I. Gorden, Charles Beals and Edward W. Butcher.

Good luck and best wishes to Edward W. Butcher, manager of the Broadway-Strand theater, who became a benedict on Wednesday, June 7, at Troy, N. Y., his former home.

Port Huron and Detroit parties are negotiating for the City Opera House, Port Huron, Mich., on Military street, and to erect thereon a handsome new motion picture theater. The plans already drawn call for a house seating 1,500.

The Stratford theater, Dix and Ferdinand avenue, Detroit, under the management of E. V. McGrath, has declared a dividend every month since it opened, March 11.

Charles G. Roos, formerly with the Atlas Feature Film Company, of Detroit, recently called at our office. Mr. Roos is superintendent of photography with the Canada Film Company, at Galt., Ont., which firm is now engaged in producing an elaborate war picture.

Watch Your Thermometers

Louisville Exhibitor Gives Worth While Talk to World Readers on the Importance of Keeping an Equable Temperature Throughout the House While Show Is On—Pointers on Comfort That Every Exhibitor Ought to Realize.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., 1404 Starks Bldg., Louisville, Ky., Special Correspondent.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—According to one of the leading moving picture men of this city, careful regulation of temperatures in moving picture theaters is something that is overlooked in the majority of cases. This exhibitor has placed a number of thermometers in various parts of the house, and either in winter or summer a close watch is kept on them and the temperature kept at about the same pitch. This house has a washed air cooling system in addition to its many fans and is enabled to keep the air equable either in winter or summer. Many exhibitors place a thermometer somewhere near the front of the house, look at it once or twice a day, and think they are regulating temperatures. As a fact it is necessary to view the thermometer every quarter or half hour in order to keep the house really comfortable. It is comparatively an easy matter to keep a house cool that is merely half full, but as it fills up it is necessary to use artificial cooling.

It Pays to Watch Closely.

Early in June a case was called to attention where the audience was fanning itself in an effort to keep cool, while through oversight the side doors to the theater were securely closed. A glance at a theromometer would have called the manager's attention to the fact that everything was not as it should be. Another house in an effort to hold down expenses is guilty of the penny wise and pound foolish system of turning off its electrical fans about half way through the second night performance. According to this manager the house is half empty during the latter part of the last show, and its a waste of current to use the fans. However, he overlooks the fact that after sitting under a fan for three quarters of an hour the patron feels uncomfortably warm when the breeze is cut off, and stale air from the previous performance has not escaped from the house.

Make It Some One's Regular Job.

"Of course it is possible to overdo ventilating" said this manager, "as in the case of a house that had its side doors wide open last December in an effort to cool off the house. A number of people became chilled, and dissatisfied with the management. What's everyone's business is no one's business and the wise manager should detail one of his ushers, door men, or someone to keep close watch on the thermometers, and hold him responsible for any slip ups."

New Aristo's Sunday Matinee.

Louisville, Ky.—The New Aristo theater, Second and A streets, has taken advantage of the fact that it is in a residence neighborhood that is free on Saturday afternoons, and has just announced that hereafter matinees will be held on Saturday afternoons as well as Sundays. While most of the theaters run Sunday matinees even in the suburban districts, this theater is the first to announce regular Saturday afternoon performances. The neighborhood is excellent for such a program which the management feels confident will prove a success.

Switow Wants to Retire.

Louisville, Ky.—M. Switow, head of the Switow Amusement Co., which has built many moving picture theaters in Louisville, Kentucky and Indiana during the past few years, reports that he is preparing to retire from the industry, and is disposing of his moving picture theater holdings. During the past few months Mr. Switow has sold his holdings in a number of houses, and most of his holdings are now confined to local theaters. His success in the moving picture field has been phenomenal.

"Manhaters," Local Film, Ready.

Louisville, Ky.—J. Johnson Mussellman, manager of the Star theater, and actively connected with the management of the Princess Amusement Company, operators of the Orpheum and Casino theaters, played "Henry," the leading part in the "Manhaters," a Ruth picture produced by the McHenry Film Co., for the Broadway Amusement Enterprises. The completed film will be shown at the Novelty, during the week of June 18, and later at the entire string of Broadway houses. Miss Sara Weissberg won the leading role of "Ruth." Mr. Mussellman went through the throes of a fake wedding on the wide steps of the Jefferson County Court House. William Conklin directed the picture, while Arnold Rocardo did the camera work. The picture took in a number of interesting local scenes, mostly in the finer residence districts. What will add greatly to the picture's drawing power is that it is entirely free from advertising matter, and is really merely an interesting little local photoplay.

Local Business Notes.

Louisville, Ky.—That a really high class film production never becomes dead is the contention of Manager Lee Goldberg, of the Mary Anderson theater, who again showed "The Spoilers," The Rex Beach story in which William Farnum, Thomas Santschi, Kathleen William take the leading parts. This film was shown on a number of occasions at the Mary Anderson, and always pulled good attendances. Mr. Goldberg brought the film back and showed it for four days at the local Keith houses starting the run on Wednesday, June 7. It is said that many Louisvillians have seen this picture a number of times, but are not tired even yet.

The Orpheum theater, Louisville, has been doing a good deal of advertising in connection with its showing of the new serial "The Secret of the Submarine," which will be run in single chapters for fifteen weeks, the showing having started on Sunday, June 4. The Cherokee theater, in the Highlands, which will also show the serial, has been running slides announcing the picture for several weeks previous to the first showing.

New Middlesboro Theater.

Middlesboro, Ky.—The Brown Amusement Company, operators of the Manring and Amuzi theaters, has confirmed the report that the company will shortly build a new theater. The new building will be of fireproof construction, will seat 450 to 500 people. The newest types of heating and ventilating plants and a mezzanine balcony will be installed. When completed the house will be the largest and finest in the mountain district of the state.

Kentucky News Items.

Eminence, Ky.—The New Grand, an airdome, was recently completed and has just been opened to the public.

Prestonburg, Ky.—The management of the New Magnet theater has opened its new house, which is very attractive though small.

Weeksburg, Ky.—The Weeksburg Amusement Co., with a capital stock of $2,000, has been incorporated by E. M. Brown, S. V. Haworth and G. A. Lund.

Irvine, Ky.—J. H. Stivers has just returned from Cincinnati where he purchased equipment for the new Garden-Gods theater, the new airdome which will shortly be completed. A power plant with a voltage of 220 has been installed, and Mr. Stivers expects to open the new picture dome in a blaze of light.

TENNESSEE NEWS LETTER.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., 1404 Starks Bldg., Louisville, Ky.

Where Negro Theaters Pay.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—Exclusive negro picture theaters have done so well in Nashville, which has a large colored population, that the Bijou Amusement Company recently opened the old Bijou theater as an exclusive colorod theater. The Bijou, on Fourth avenue, was at one time a part of the Jake Wells circuit in the South. With the opening of this theater the colored people will be well represented by photoplay houses. It is planned to keep the place up to a high standard and show the best photoplays obtainable. The building has been put in good repair and made a good opening with the circus play "Peg O' the Ring."

Free Films in Parks.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Free moving pictures have been started at Chattanooga in Warner Park, under the auspicies of the park commissioners, and operated by a Main street moving picture man. Nashville will also start similar pictures before long. Advertising slides will be shown between pictures. It has been stated that the pictures would be interesting photoplays and that travel stuff and so called educational pictures dealing with the manufacture of this and that would be barred. Conducting free moving pictures along this line is a new idea in the Chattanooga district.

Co-operative Boosting.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Several of the Chattanooga theaters recently came out with a co-operative advertisement reading "It's always cool in the Alcazar, Fine Arts, Alhambra, Superba and Bonita picture theaters." The Typhoon cooling system is used in all of these houses. The Alcazar is featuring its cool house in its advertisements which carry a line "Come in and get cool." The ad paid them all, no doubt about it.

Local Notes About Film Shows.

The Majestic Amusement Co., of Memphis, Tenn., recently booked the intensely interesting new serial "The Secret of the Submarine." The picture will be shown at Empire theater, No. 2 every Wednesday, and at Empire, No. 1 on Thursdays. Price of admission at these two houses is five cents.

The Strand theater, of Memphis, Arthur Lane, manager, recently announced a new feature program whereby five or more reels of feature material will be shown nightly with a daily change in program.

According to the Majestic Amusement Co., of Memphis, Tenn., Charlie Chaplin is as funny or funnier in the Mutual releases than in his former productions.

The Gay theater, of Knoxville, Tenn., recently played a return engagement of "The Love Mask."

The Glendale Zoo, at Nashville, is now featuring band concerts and moving picture shows as added attractions, and is opening the season with a good run of business.

The Belmont theater, the popular little suburban house of Nashville, located at Sixteenth and Grand avenue, is offering long bills. Eight reel programs are not unusual at this theater.

Strand Cuts Out Screen Ads.

Evansville, Ind.—The Strand has barred advertising matter. Music from the Fotoplayer will take its place.

INDIANA NEWS LETTER.

Special to Moving Picture World from Indiana Trade News Service.

O. E. Banschbach to Manage a Shelbyville Theater.

SHELBYVILLE, IND.—Otto E. Banschbach, for a number of years associated with Frank Rembusch as manager of his theaters, has taken charge of the Grace theater of this city. The new manager was brought here because Rembusch and Charles Blackstone, who have associated for several years, have dissolved their business interests. Rembusch is a national figure in the motion picture world and is the inventor of the screen which revolutionized projection.

Miss Barrett Buys Evansville Theater.

Evansville, Ind.—Miss Marie Barrett, a former newspaper woman, is the first woman owner of a motion picture theater in Evansville. She recently purchased the Theatorium, one of the best houses of the city, and has been operating it successfully since she secured ownership. Miss Barrett has been taken into motion picture circles and does her share of the things that make the exhibiting business successful here.

Fresh Air Mission Benefits.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Mrs. Charles A. Stevens, who has charge of the Terre Haute Fresh Air Mission, has enlisted the aid of moving picture house owners of the city and will give benefit shows in a number of the houses beginning immediately. It has always been customary for the moving picture men to help out in this work, and they are beginning early this year.

H. H. Riner Buys Princess Theater.

Plymouth, Ind.—H. H. Riner has purchased the Princess theater from Aley Dawson, taking possession recently. The theater was closed for a week while the new owner put it in repair, sadly needed, and has reopened to good houses. Riner is known as a live wire in these parts and is capable of making the show a great success.

Indiana Notes of Interest.

Winchester, Ind.—The Dreamland management is receiving many compliments because of new decorations and the installation of a new machine, bring the Dreamland up to Winchester standards.

Attica, Ind.—Attica is commenting on the "different shows" which are to be found at the Arcade. The management has introduced the Burton Holmes travel pictures, something new in Attica, and the reward has been worth while.

Rockville, Ind.—Tad L. Johnson has purchased the Cozy theater. Melville Johnson will be the new manager.

Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Ft. Wayne has had its "Society Show." It was a real society show for the "little four hundred" of the little city turned out in full force to help make a picture which is to be shown at the Jefferson. The leading parts were taken by youngsters of talent.

Richmond, Ind.—Dunlavy and Bond of Detroit have purchased the Union airdome of this city and have changed the name to the Garden as well as making a change in appearance which will make the theater fit the name. Vines and shrubbery and interior decorations have been added.

Camden, Ind.—Merchants are giving free motion picture shows at night.

Indianapolis, Ind.—"The Little Girl Next Door," the big screen production based on vice conditions as revealed by an investigation by an Illinois vice commission, was shown at the Regent recently and no mistake was made by Bingham, Crose and Cohen, owners of the Regent, when they booked the production which had taken Chicago by the ears. Indianapolis filed in and out of the doors of the theater continuously and the picture was well received.

Daylight Movement in Minneapolis

Local V-L-S-E. Office Decides to Take the Extra Hour of Daylight—Calls Office Hours from 7 till 4.

From Perry S. Williams, Special Correspondent, Address Minneapolis Tribune.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The V-L-S-E officers here have set an example for the other exchanges in the city in the matter of early closing during the summer months. A statement issued by the manager announces the company has decided to make a new trail if necessary and has joined the extra hour of daylight movement. So far no other establishment in any line of business in Minneapolis has tackled the extra hour proposition although much talk has been going on about it in the newspapers. The V-L-S-E employes now are coming to work at 7 a. m., and quitting at 4 p. m., instead of working from 8 a. m., to 5 p. m.

S. N. Robinson Heads Local Fox.

Minneapols, Minn.—S. N. Robinson, formerly manager of the Fox Los Angeles office, has been made manager of the Minneapolis exchange in the Jewelers exchange building. He succeeds Earl A. Westcott who is to become western representative for the Fox company. Mr. Robinson worked under Mr. Westcott here several months ago.

J. C. Wolff Will Guide Local Unicorn.

Minneapolis, Minn.—W. L. Merrill, who has been in charge of the Unicorn office in the Produce building has been promoted. The shift in authority was announced as Mr. Merril left for a vacation of some length, after which he is to be given a higher position with the Unicorn service. He is being succeeded here by J. C. Wolff, who was manager at the Minneapolis exchange at a previous time.

I. A. T. S. E. Local Elects.

St. Paul, Minn.—The officers elected by Local 356, I. A. T. S. E. are: George La Victor, president; Guy Whitticar, vice-president; Earl Hoffman, recording secretary; Albert Trizone, financial secretary; Harry Cunningham, business agent and W. S. Smith, sergeant-at-arms.

K. L. Niles Buys Menomonie House.

Kasson, Minn.—K. L. Niles, a newspaper man of sixteen years' standing and formerly editor of the Republican here and the Adams Review at Adams, Minn., has purchased the Orpheum theater at Menomonie, Wis. He also is owner of the Idle Hour theater here with Mr. Dyer.

Hardin Theater Notes.

Hardin, Mont.—M. L. Patton and A. L. Bliven of Alberta have bought the Pearl theater here from R. W. Hickman. Mr. Hickman will move to Vandalia, Ill. Mr. Bliven is a theater manager of experience having managed theaters at Council Bluffs, Iowa; Omaha, Neb., and Superior, Wis. Dan King will erect a new theater in Hardin.

Edward Hinz Will Build Theater.

Austin, Minn.—Edward Hinz, already owner of three theaters in this city, seems to have an insatiable ambition in the moving picture field. He has announced plans for a new playhouse. His present interest are the Cozy, Lyric and Princess.

Batters Will Try Their Averages.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A. A. Hixon, assistant manager of the Minnesota Metro office, has gathered a team of baseball men from among the employes of the 25 exchanges in the city and has challenged the Twin City Screen club to organize a nine and fight out the burning question of superiority. Hixon plans to stage the game on some Sunday morning at Nicollet park while Mike Cantillion is on the road with his Minneapolis baseball league team.

Business Good in Both Dakotas.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Business in the theaters of the small towns throughout North and South Dakota is brisk and indications point to a continuation of that healthful condition. This is the report brought back by H. C. Remington, who covers the field in the Dakotas for the Paramount exchange at Minneapolis. He has been on the road continuously since March 1 and had an opportunity to get a first-hand view of the situation.

Minneapolis Short Notes.

Newton Davis, a film road man of some experience, has been added to the city staff of the Universal exchange here.

The Theater Equipment Co., has taken offices in the new Film Exchange building, constructed exclusively for film business. It has taken advantage of a removal to larger quarters and installed a machine repair department with W. C. Phillips in charge.

The Independent Film Corporation again makes an announcement of enlarged service to its trade. J. E. Moor, one of the proprietors, says that the weekly release of the company now will be twenty-one reels.

Carrington, N. D.—Ralph Botts and John Lang have purchased the Grand theater.

Elgin, N. B.—Jacob Balliet has let the contract for the construction of an opera house.

Hillsboro, N. D.—Mr. Harry Hay has purchased the moving picture theater from J. M. Freeman.

New Orleans Lowers Tax

Parish Tax Assessor Takes Lower Idea of Value of Film on Hand at Local Exchanges—Managers Still Consider Their Assessments Too High and Have Asked to Have the Matter Threshed Out in the Civil District Court.

By George M. Cheney, New Orleans Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—As announced in Moving Picture World, eight exchanges of New Orleans filed suits in the Civil District Court last Friday afternoon against the Board of Assessors of the Parish of Orleans for reductions of assessments on film. The companies and amounts of assessments and amounts they want reduced are:

Mutual Film Company...	$27,000 to	$7,000
World Film Corp.....	20,700 to	2,900
V. L. S. E., Inc.....	20,000 to	2,000
General Film Co.....	20,700 to	5,500
Consolidated (Univer.)..	22,500 to	5,500
Sou. Paramount.....	15,500 to	3,500
Pathe, Inc.....	20,700 to	3,500
Fox Film Corp.....	20,500 to	1,700

The exchange men declare in their petition that the taxation is onerous and unfair. They state that they are willing to pay a fair price per foot for all film carried locally, but that they do object to paying for 20,000 feet, for instance, when only half that amount is carried. An early hearing of the case is expected.

Big Film Men Visit New Orleans.

New Orleans, La.—This city has been favored with visits of a few "big guns" in the business. Only a week ago, Harry C. Drum, of the World Film Corporation, was entertained during a short stay here. Then Pat Powers, treasurer of the Universal, dropped off in New Orleans for a few hours between trains to the coast. Mr. Powers didn't have time to visit the exchanges, but held a few chats with picture men in the vicinity of Herman Fichtenberg's Plaza theater. Arthur Lucas, manager of the Triangle, was the latest visitor. He left New Orleans continuing his journey westward.

Sabbath Referendum at Bogalusa.

Bogalusa, La.—A petition signed by hundreds of women, has been presented to Mayor Sullivan, and it asks that Sunday motion pictures and baseball be abolished. A much longer petition, signed by 800 Bogalusans, and requesting that Sunday amusements be allowed to continue, followed it. Ever since the agitation started, an old Sunday blue law was dug up, and Bogalusa is observing it strictly. It incidentally develops that in the coming election to decide the question, women, that is, married women, will be allowed to vote for the first time in the history of the state.

They Assisted at Nola Barbecue.

New Orleans film men and representatives of the local and trade press "assisted" at a barbecue on the grounds of the Nola Film Company Thursday afternoon. Ernst Boehringer, manager of the Triangle theater was master of ceremonies by virtue of having barbecued the meats, working over the pit from early morning. William Hannon, president of the Nola Company, was official host and a good time was had by all.

Among the exchange men present were S. T. Stephens, of Mutual, and Al G. Shear, of Consolidated. Among the newspaper men present were R. S. Pritchard, moving picture editor of The Item; N. S. Thatcher, moving picture editor of The Times-Picayune. Messrs. Morton and Bowdin Caldwell, the former the advertising manager of The Item, were also present. A. G. Newmeyer, business manager of The Item, and James M. Thompson, the publisher, also dropped in.

Everybody talked shop a good deal, and seemed to enjoy it. The Nola Company's plans for the near future were also under discussion. These include the engaging of a complete producing company of the first order under a successful director. Operations are scheduled to begin on a large scale within less than thirty days.

Changes in Local Fox Forces.

New Orleans, La.—Louis Levin, the new Southern Division Manager for Fox, left on May 29 for Dallas. Mr. Levin announced an important Fox change at Atlanta. In that city Thomas W. Brady, formerly a Fox road man out of the Detroit office, has been appointed manager of the Atlanta headquarters, succeeding O. P. Hall, resigned.

Paul Engler, heretofore acting manager at the Fox Atlanta office, has been made personal representative of Mr. Levin, and as such will be transferred to New Orleans.

Mr. Levin finds a healthy increase apparent at the New Orleans office, and excellent prospects for his company throughout the whole of the Southern territory.

Film Favorites as Fashion Leaders.

New Orleans, La.—Madam Antoinette Evans, wife of R. King Evans, New Orleans manager of the V-L-S-E exchange, who several months ago put on a fashion show at the Crescent theater in conjunction with the showing of the Paramount program there, has been engaged by the New Orleans Times-Picayune to write a series of fashion articles for that newspaper. Mme. Evans will conduct her own daily department. Her wide acquaintance with film folk will enable her to answer any questions as to just what the noted film planets are wearing—and not wearing. Mme. Evans is of an engaging personality herself, and, with her husband, has won many real friends.

Southern Film Convention Notes.

New Orleans, La.—It is not too early to talk about the convention of the Southern Motion Picture Trades Association, thinks J. Eugene Pearce. Mr. Pearce, who is president of the association, said so recently, while making several interesting announcements. In the first place, it is probable that the exposition will be held in January, and not in February, during the Mardi Gras season, as was originally planned. The exposition will last four or six days, Mr. Pearce said, and already, from the promises he has received from manufacturers, the greatest, glitteringest galaxy of film stars ever sent South will assemble in New Orleans for the big film show. Mr. Pearce this week began to send out exposition literature broadcast. He has determined to give over a part of his handsomely appointed Canal street offices to a secretary whom he will appoint shortly to attend to exposition matters. Assisting him in arranging various details are Al. G. Shear, manager of the Universal-Consolidated, and Karl A. Bugbee, manager of Metro's Crescent City office.

New Orleans News Notes.

Fire caused a loss of $1,025 at the People's theater, Andrew Taenz, proprietor, at 2735 St. Andrew street. Flames started from a projection machine and spread to the main floor.

P. V. Black, owner of the Grand theater, Donaldsonville, La., and J. C. Landen, of the Istrione theatre, Jackson, Miss., were visitors this week on Exchange Row, and purchasers also.

"The Battle Cry of Peace," indorsed by unprecedented advertising in the New Orleans Times-Picayune, which newspaper brought the noted film to the Crescent City, is entering on its second week to crowded houses.

The Pathe office this week broke all collection records. "After all," Manager Raoul Junet said, "that's the only things that count, anyway. Pathe has gone ahead consistently in this city, without a bit of braggadocio to help along. I find that business is on the increase, and that the Goldberg cartoon series will prove a winner in the South."

Bay St. Louis, Miss.—Bay St. Louis is soon to have an airdome that will show the latest feature releases. The new theater opened June 3, and its owner is E. E. Saucier.

Jackson, Miss.—The Plaza airdome, which opened on May 22, with Bell and Carleton as managers, reports exceptionally good business.

PICTURES IN GEORGIA TO PAY FOR PROHIBITION.

Rates for Yearly Theater Licenses Raised—Exchange Licenses Also Go Up.

By A. M. Beatty, 43 Copenhill Ave., Atlanta, Special Correspondent.

ATLANTA, GA.—Prohibition in Georgia is causing a decrease in revenue over the state, and in order to meet expenses municipalities are busy endeavoring to raise tax on not only necessities, but the pleasures people enjoy.

The Atlanta tax committee is making vigorous efforts to bring the income of the city up to total of last year, when the near beer licenses were paid.

The committee took up the question of raising the tax on soft drinks, but found that the services of the city attorney were needed before any move in the matter could be made.

The committee however, turned its attention to moving picture shows and raised the rates a sliding scale of $100 for 5-cent houses, $200 for 10-cent houses and $300 for houses charging more than 10 cents.

Film distributors will have to pay more taxes in future, their license being raised from $50, on those doing a business about $8,000 and $200 for those above that amount.

R. H. Goodman With Mutual.

Atlanta, Ga.—Robert Hastings Goodman, who made his stage debut in Atlanta about twenty years ago, has returned home to be connected with the local office of the Mutual Film. When he received orders to report to the Mutual offices in Atlanta, Mr. Goodman was actively engaged in helping with the rehearsals of the Friars new Frolic.

Alpha Fowler Buys the Vaudette.

Atlanta, Ga.—The Vaudette theater, for eight years one of the leading motion picture houses in Atlanta, has changed hands. Alpha Fowler, former manager of the Alpha theater, has returned to Atlanta from a trip to New York City to take sole charge of the Vaudette. He succeeds John and Gus Evins, who have not yet announced their plans for the future.

KANSAS CITY NEWS.

Juvenile Film Movement in Kansas.

Kansas City, Mo.—Coming hand in hand with the women's clubs and the Parent-Teacher councils, is the project of supervised pictures for children in Kansas by a committee of Topeka women. It is said they are contemplating the establishment of a community theater. It is said that with the closing of school, the special matinees will be discontinued, and plans promoted for the community theater. If such a place is not erected especially for these events, it is probable that a hall will be rented and equipment purchased.

At Kirwin, Kansas, moving picture exhibitions are put on every Saturday afternoon at the local theaters under the direction of the women. The pictures exhibited are supervised in every sense of the word.

Among the Kansas City Exchanges.

The Kansas City Feature Film Company reports an excellent business. New contracts are coming in in great shape and it looks like a banner year for Flintom's firm. Three pictures which are taking in exceptionally good shape are: "The Eternal City," "The Hypocrite" and "The Alien."

A recent caller at the local office of the General Film was E. A. Schuster, auditor of that company. Mr. Schuster was here for several days.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.

C. A. Jones, traveler with the Universal recently left Kansas City on a trip of unusual duration. On this journey Mr. Jones will visit the eastern line of Colorado.

The employees of the local Pathe office recently held a banquet at the Baltimore hotel, the occasion being as a result of the revenue derived from the profit-sharing plan of the Pathe. The following were present: C. S. Edwards, Jr., William Beckenstein, Hattie Bolton, Ruth Richards, E. E. Heller, K. A. Agnew, Darline O'Dell, Mary Bowman and Emma Guenther.

Pathe's New Publicity Department.

Kansas City, Mo.—C. E. Edwards, Jr., local Pathe manager, has installed a publicity department, placing Howard Jamison, who formerly traveled in southern Kansas and northern Oklahoma at the head. The chief function of this department for the present at least, will be to boost serials. It will not be so much a publicity department as it will be a co-operative department. The idea is to work with the various newspapers and exhibitors throughout the district with the view of boosting not only exhibitor's shows but Pathe pictures.

Theater Changes Hereabouts.

Hoxie, Kans.—T. F. Meneffe is building a new moving picture house here.

Scottsville, Kans.—Louis Christie is considering the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Seneca, Kans.—Albert Koelzer, manager of the theater here, has sold his house to Mr. Turley, who takes immediate charge.

Belleville, Kans.—July 1, is the date set for the opening of a new theater here. There is at present but one house in the city.

Kansas City, Mo.—Mr. Parow, of Fowler, Kansas, is building a very modern theater at Buckmen, Kansas. It will be managed by his brother, who is an experienced motion picture man.

Wellington, Kans.—Mr. Chris Grayman of Wellington, has leased one of his theaters to Mr. Rundell, who formerly managed the Imperial theater of that city. Mr. Grayman decided to broaden his field a little, and he did not want to be burdened with two shows in the same place. Mr. Grayman is known as a successful theater manager.

J. E. Folan, traveler for the Pathe, was recently in the office of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD representative, and gave some very interesting material regarding theaters in small towns in Kansas. He told of one house at Norway, Kansas, that seated 250 people while the population of the town was just that number. Mr. Folan says the house is packed at every show.

Another prominent exhibitor is N. N. Morris of Mangato. Although the town has a population of but one thousand, the theater is one of the most upward in the state.

Enjoin Sabbath Closing

Wichita, Kan., Exhibitors Apply to District Court to Keep City Commissioners and Police from Enforcing Local Ordinance That Forbids Sunday Pictures—Interesting Line-Up of Forces.

Special to Moving Picture World from Kansas City News Service.

WICHITA, KANS.—Eight moving picture exhibitors of this city have applied to the District Court for an injunction to keep the city commissioners and police from enforcing the local ordinance against Sunday theaters. Those who brought the suit are as follows: L. G. Hicks, Don Powell, J. M. Benson, A. R. Ford, Joe C. Fox, C. C. McCollister, E. L. Martling and the Southwestern Amusement Company. The case was brought before presiding Judge Thomas C. Wilson on June 3 and was postponed until June 17, on account of the absence from the city of City Attorney James Conly.

The petition alleges that the ordinance is void because there is nothing legal to uphold its adoption; that the Kansas constitution is being violated; and the rights of citizens of this country as presented in the constitution are being infringed on by forcing the houses to close on Sunday. These however, will probably not be the main points which the exhibitors will adopt. The basis of the fight will be on the argument that the people of the city are in favor of keeping the moving picture houses open. This, it seems, will be a much stronger argument than any of the others, as they would require much legal squabbling.

E. C. Mills Will Lead Picture Men.

The exhibitors of the city have enlisted the aid of E. C. Mills, assistant manager of the Kansas City branch of the Mutual. Mr. Mills has been through campaigns of this sort in Oklahoma and Texas and is an experienced man. It is said that most of the city commissioners are on the part of the exhibitors, but they fear the political effect of repealing the ordinance. They would undoubtedly welcome an injunction of this sort, as it would make them neutral, while a repeal would make them unpopular with those favoring the strict observance of Sunday.

Blue Stockings Hire Counsel.

The Sunday observers, fearing that the city commissioners will not protest with sufficient vigor against the repeal of the ordinance, have retained O. A. Keach, a well known lawyer, to uphold their side of the case. The city churches have appointed a committee of three of the leading ministers to present their view of the question, one of whom is Guy L. Brown, who, for four years was supervising theater censor for the city commission and church federation of Trenton, N. J., and who was at the head of the "Clean Theater Movement" in New Jersey.

The exhibitors held a mass meeting at the Palace theater on June 4, which was attended by a very large crowd, so large, in fact, that many persons were turned away. The pastor of the Unitarian Church, Rev. L. M. Birkhead, was in charge of the gathering, and made a talk favorable to opening the theaters on Sunday. Mr. Mills was also present at this meeting, making the first big talk of the campaign. Mr. Mills did not touch on the subject of the unconstitutionality of the law governing Sunday closing, but based his argument on the theory that the people of Wichita wanted their moving picture theaters opened on Sunday, the same as they want Sunday baseball.

The outcome of this fight is being watched with much interest by all Kansas exhibitors and by the Kansas City exchanges, who are lending every effort to the managers. Wichita is the second city of Kansas in size, and any action it may take on this issue will probably reflect on the smaller towns of the state where Sunday pictures are also prohibited.

Colonial's New Policy.

Wichita, Kans.—Don Powell, proprietor of the Colonial, has recently taken a very important step in the policy of his house, raising his price from five to ten cents per performance. Coincident with this he also signed a Blue Bird contract requiring a two-days run each week.

The Regent's Fern Pots.

Kansas City, Mo.—The new Regent theater of this city has gone one step farther than most theaters in regard to floral decorations. On the outside of the house, suspended from the beautiful canopy, six bowls of ferns have been hung. The bottom of these bowls has been covered with a grassy substance and the effect is certainly very pleasing. This house is located on Kansas City's busiest street and the freshness and novelty of the display is exceedingly refreshing, and especially pleasing to the eye.

To the Allisons, a Girl.

"Doc" Allison, of the paper department of the Kansas City Feature Film, has been busy informing his fellow-workers of the addition of a baby girl to his family. Although the maiden is rather young to map out her own career, it is freely predicted that she will eventually land in a Paramount picture. The child has as yet not been named, but the office force is full of suggestions and Mr. Allison still has hope.

G. B. Howe Heads Local Associated.

After three years consecutive labor with the Universal Film and Supply, G. B. Howe, assistant manager, recently resigned his position. He is now active head of the Associated Film Service, 319 Gloyd Bldg., formerly owned by H. H. Gill. Mr. Gill recently organized the Motion Picture Supply Company and his time will now be spent on directing the activities of that firm. He still retains an interest in his former enterprise, however.

The Road Man and His Roadster.

Kansas City, Mo.—Salesman J. Erwin Dodson travels out of the local Universal Film and Supply Company's office in an automobile. With pleasant weather in the near future, and the convenience of a machine as a time-saver, Mr. Dodson opines that he will not only gain more prestige among the exhibitors but will materially increase his sales record. As it now stands Mr. Dodson is the last winner of the $25 monthly prize contest offered by the Universal for the salesman getting the most business.

W. Beckenstein Goes to Unicorn.

William Beckenstein, traveler for the Pathe, is now connected with the Omaha office of the Unicorn Film Service, having recently severed connections with the Pathe. While here Mr. Beckenstein represented Pathe in Kansas and Missouri, nearby Kansas City. C. S. Edwards, Jr., manager of the Kansas City branch, has not yet filled the vacancy.

Contracts with over 200 moving picture theaters in Kansas and Missouri for showing the "Iron Claw" is the record made by C. S. Edwards, Jr., local manager of the Pathe exchange. This is exclusive of thirty-nine in Kansas City. This is a record that is probably not equaled by any other serial now being shown in this territory and speaks well for Edwards' travelers.

A Big Dallas Studio

J. D. Barton Investigates Possibilities Around Texas Metropolis for the Production of Moving Pictures—Said to Have Contracted With Margaret Anglin for Two Years to Make Screen Productions.

By S. A. M. Harrison, 618 Comal St., Dallas, Texas; Special Correspondent.

DALLAS, TEXAS.—A motion picture studio said to represent an outlay of $500,000, and to be backed by leading producers of the East, is a prospect for Dallas. Margaret Anglin will be featured in the productions, it is announced.

J. D. Barton of New York, a motion picture producer who has obtained a two-year contract with Miss Anglin and James Shesgreen, her manager, was in Dallas recently investigating the possibilities of a site for the studio. They are to produce eight pictures a year.

Mr. Fitzhugh, who has been associated with the motion picture business for several years, said the Dallas climate the year round is better than that of either California or the East for the production of motion pictures. He explains that heavy fogs especially in the winter, interfered with taking pictures around New York, Chicago and California, and that these conditions would not be encountered here.

New House Manager for the Queen.

Dallas, Texas.—Nash Weil, formerly of San Angelo, has been appointed assistant house manager of the Queen theater at Dallas. John DeStefano is the house manager. This is one of the many Hulsey enterprises scattered over the state.

First Annual Frolic, Dallas Screen Club.

Dallas, Texas.—The Dallas Screen Club entertained their many friends with their first Annual Frolic at the Majestic theater at Dallas on June 4th, giving matinee and night performance, and from all appearances it was a success. The program consisted of "vodeville" and first run pictures, the latter being donated by the different film exchanges in the city.

Boyer Buys Southern Cabiria Co.

Dallas, Texas.—On May 27th a sale was consummated whereby F. J. Boyer took over the Southern Cabiria Co. from his former partner, L. C. McHenry. The company is doing business at the old stand and report an excellent business.

At It in Houston.

Houston, Texas.—The Houston exchanges are experiencing the same trouble that the Dallas exchanges have, that is, the sub-rental of films, and they have combined their efforts to eliminate anything of the kind. They are going to take full advantage of the State law for protecting themselves against this mode of stealing.

Solan Takes Over Texas Theater.

Houston, Texas.—G. W. Solan is now owner and operator of the Texas theater at Houston, Texas. Guy Graham, administrator of the estate of Tony Solan, former owner of this theater, has been discharged by the court.

New Travelling Salesman.

Dallas, Texas.—A. W. Pluess has been added to the traveling force of the V-L-S-E office at Dallas, with San Antonio as headquarters. Mr. Pleuss has succeeded W. B. Nelson, who has returned to Chicago.

Among Texas Exhibitors.

Dallas, Texas.—W. D. Nevills has closed the Nickelodeon theater at Dallas for an indefinite time, and it is rumored that same is to be remodeled. This theater was one of the first to be operated in Dallas when moving pictures were in their infancy in Dallas.

Dallas, Texas.—E. T. Peter, manager of the United Film Exchange, who has been quite ill recently, has recovered.

Temple, Texas.—J. J. Hegman of the Crescent theater in Temple, was a recent visitor to Dallas.

Shreveport, La.—E. V. Richards of the Sanger Amusement Co. at Shreveport, La., visited the film exchanges in Dallas recently.

Amarillo, Texas.—W. H. Coons of the Mission theater at Amarillo, was in Dallas, week of May 29th.

LONG RUNS RULE IN DENVER.

Local Public Makes Three Day Runs Profitable—Features in Small Towns.

By E. C. Day, Denver Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

DENVER, COLO.—The daily change in program, which a year or so ago was believed to be absolutely necessary for the success of any moving picture theater is gradually being shoved into the discard. First the big Denver theaters tried two day runs and have increased it from time to time until now no picture is put on for less than three days and in a majority of cases its run is even longer.

The plan also has been found to be a success in the smaller towns and even the neighborhood houses in Denver are holding big features for two days and making a success of the venture.

Albuquerque has gone a step further and demonstrates that even a small community can stand a week's run with a big feature. This town of 11,000 saw its first week's run with "The Birth of a Nation" as the attraction. Then it put on "The Battle Cry of Peace" for seven days and followed this with "Ne'er Do Well." Each was a success and now "Sherlock Holmes," "God's Country and the Woman," and the Unwritten Law" have all been booked for, each for a week's run. It is proposed to stick to the plan permanently

V-L-S-E. Service Department.

Denver, Colo.—Frank Harris, manager of the V-L-S-E exchange in Denver has added a service department to his already efficient office. It has been placed in charge of A. G. Edwards, an experienced advertising man.

Explaining the objects of the latest departure, Mr. Harris said: "It has been the plan of our exchange, as well as all others in this section to devote our entire time to finding a market for our pictures. Once we had booked a feature we dropped the matter. The new service department will follow each booking to the date of its exhibition and Mr. Edwards will assist the exhibitor in exploiting every picture that is rented by the exchange. He will write newspaper advertisements, or advise exhibitors in the conduct of special advertising campaigns. This plan will help the exchange as well as the exhibitor.

Vick Roy to Manage Tabor Grand.

Denver, Colo.—Another change in the management of the Tabor Grand opera house has brought back to the moving picture industry one of its earliest and best boosters, L. B. Vick Roy. As manager of concessions at City Park, he was first introduced to the local public. Moving pictures were a novelty and Vick Roy threw them onto a screen which was built out over the lake. They were shown free for the purpose of attracting a crowd with a view of building up his consession business.

At the time downtown exhibitors complained of the free show. However, it developed that the scheme did more to build up the moving picture business in Denver than any other one thing.

Vick Roy, while a pioneer in the amusement game has never before conducted a moving picture theater. He took over the Tabor after several weeks observation of its successful operation by Peter McCourt. The policy of showing only big features with a minimum admission charge of 25 cents will be continued.

William B. Hene who has been manager of the house for McCourt will continue in the same capacity for the time being at least. The Tabor has just completed a two weeks run of the "Unwritten Law." No picture is shown for less than one week.

Subrenters Caught Through Labels.

Denver, Colo.—A flagrant case of subrenting of films has been discovered by exchange men in Denver. A Nebraska exhibitor who has been served through Denver offices and who has given local managers more grief than all of their other patrons on account of delays in returning films, has been caught subletting pictures to exhibitors in nearby towns and a warm session is in store for him.

The scheme was discovered through express labels that the exhibitors had failed to remove from the shipping cases before returning the films. Whether the parties to whom the pictures were subrented were in on the plan and divided the expense of one rental for two or three showings, or whether the exhibitor who did the sub-letting reaped the harvest alone has not been definitely ascertained.

However, the exchange managers have forwarded bills for the amounts that would have rightly come to them through the proper renting of films, and have served notice on the guilty party that his place will be attached unless he remits.

Theater Changes Hereabouts.

Alamosa, Colo.—Carter & McMahon opened their new moving picture theater here June 10.

Douglas, Wyo.—W. J. Butler has almost completed work on his new theater and expects to be showing moving pictures regularly before July 1.

Thermopolis, Wyo.—Otto Schmidt late of Basin, Wyo., sold one theater and bought another. He disposed of his interest in the Big Horn theater at Basin to G. H. Ellicott and immediately purchased the new Opera House at Thermopolis. The latter will also be named the Big Horn and will make a feature of high class pictures.

Breybull, Wyo.—This city has one new theater and another is in course of construction. The Amusement Hall which has been used by road shows and for dances and amusements of various sorts has been taken over by J. C. Preston and turned into a moving picture theater. Liebrecht and Bickert have started work on a $5,000 photoplay house which they expect to have in operation by the middle of July. The new theater will be known as the Bijou.

Lusk, Wyo.—W. L. D. Beedy, owner of the Opera House at Lusk, has sold out to J. C. Manning. He will continue to show pictures in the theater.

PRAIRIE STATE NEWS LETTER.

Special to Moving Picture Wor ld from Midwest News Service.

Theater Changes in Nebraska.

KEARNEY, NEB.—The Crescent theater will be replaced by a $15,000 moving picture theatre to be erected by Fred G. Keens.

Waco, Neb.—Smith & King sold the moving picture theater here to Harry Hedrick.

Theaters and Changes in Iowa.

La Porte City, Ia.—H. I. Salmon, of this city, has purchased the Royal theater at Albert Lea, Minn.

Waterloo, Ia.—Nick Webber sold the Crystal theater at 212 East Fourth street to Wm. McIntosh.

Gilmore City, Ia.—The partnership of Willard & Keck has been dissolved and Keck is now sole owner of the Cozy theatre.

Mystic, Ia.—Manager Charles Fuller, of the Gem theater, will erect a new theatre.

Sac City, Ia.—Frank G. Smith and Claude B. Kerr will operate a moving picture airdome here this summer.

Wapello, Ia.—H. C. Wittman, formerly manager of the American theater in Muscatine, has purchased the Gem theater here.

Sheldon, Ia.—B. C. Boggs, of Anthon, Ia., has purchased the Harvey theater. He will be assisted in the management by J. A. Bernard, of Anthon.

Shenandoah, Ia.—L. D. Hall has sold the Zenith theater to H. B. Holdridge, of Madison, S. D.

SAN FRANCISCO NEWS.

Northern California Notes.

Lindsay, Cal.—F. H. Smith of the Empress theater has opened a fine airdome for the summer.

Porterville, Cal.—Howell Bros. have equipped an airdome for the summer months and will occupy this until the house now in course of erection is completed. The cooling system to be installed in this will make the use of an airdome unnecessary in the future.

Exeter, Cal.—The Una theater will be closed for the summer shortly and use will be made of a fine airdome. The latter has brick side walls and is a very attractive place.

Visalia, Cal.—The American airdome will be opened shortly with moving pictures and vaudeville. The walls of this airdome are covered with advertisements, but forest effects have been produced with these, making the setting quite artistic.

Lindsay, Cal.—F. G. Hyde, an exhibitor of this place, was injured recently in a mine explosion and nearly lost his eyesight.

Hayward, Cal.—The Hayward theater has been closed and important alterations will be made by G. F. Madsen, the proprietor. The house will also be renovated throughout and new draperies installed.

Pinole, Cal.—M. Tcherassy, who conducts a theater at Richmond, Cal. is equipping a large house here, the projection equipment being furnished by Walter Preddey, of San Francisco.

Pittsburg, Cal.—S. Enea, who conducts the Palace theater, has purchased a Powers Cameragraph No. 6 B. from G. A. Metcalfe of San Francisco.

Stockton, Cal.—The Grand theater has been sold by M. D. Serrano to W. T. Metcalf.

Fresno, Cal.—White's theater will be closed during the summer season, except for two nights each week.

Globe Film Exchange Moves.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Globe Film exchange, conducted by I. H. Lichtenstein, which has been located for the past two years on the third floor of the Pantages theater building, has removed to better quarters on the fourth floor of that building. New shelving and fixtures have been installed and the exchange is now in better shape than ever to serve its customers.

California Motion Picture Company Activities.

San Rafael, Cal.—The photographic work on "The Woman Who Dared" has just been completed, with the greatest stage set ever made by this concern, and the task of assembling the big production for its trade showing at the new Rialto theater, New York City, will be rushed. Otis Skinner, who was recently at San Francisco in "The Cock of the Walk," visited San Rafael while here and selected a residence in which to live during the production of "Kismet."

Another Frisco Theater?

San Francisco May Have Another Immense Theater on Market Street, Between Fifth and Sixth—Will Have Seating Capacity of 3,000 Persons—Protests Against It Have Been Made, But Backers Expect the Permit.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North St., Berkeley, Cal., Special Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—If present plans are carried through, and official sanction can be secured, another great theater will rise shortly in the amusement center of the city on Market street between Fifth and Sixth streets. D. M. Fraser recently had plans prepared for a large house on Stevenson street, a thoroughfare running parallel to Market, and has asked for a permit to construct a covered bridge over this narrow street to secure an entrance from the main artery of the city. It is the plan to erect a moving picture and vaudeville house with a seating capacity of more than 3,000 and to use the Empire theater, a five cent moving picture house, as an entrance and lobby. This lobby would be almost two hundred feet in length and would be on an easy grade from Market street, passing over Stevenson street at a height of sixteen feet.

Upper Market street theater and property owners feel that such an arrangement would greatly upset property values and have appeared at the hearings of the Street and Building committees to protest against the granting of a permit for this bridge. Sid Grauman, manager of the Empress theater, appeared before these committees of the Board of Supervisors recently with a long petition signed by property owners and merchants in this block protesting against such action being taken, but the petition was turned down as the Supervisors recommended that the permit be granted.

Paramount Releases Catalogued.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Progressive Motion Picture Company has just issued a splendidly illustrated catalogue of three hundred and fifty pages of all the Paramount releases and is now distributing this among exhibitors in the Pacific Coast states from its exchanges at San Francisco, Los Angeles and Seattle. The publication is in great demand as the cuts illustrate the advertising matter available, even the heralds being reproduced.

World Closes Big Contracts.

San Francisco, Cal.—M. E. Cory, manager of the local branch of the World Film, reports a heavy volume of business of late on Brady-made pictures some of the contracts signed being among the heaviest ever made for films here. The Turner & Dahnken circuit has taken these for its Tivoli theater here and its T. & D. houses at Portland, Oakland, San Jose, Reno and Watsonville, first runs being secured for each place. Charles Goddard of Sacramento, Cal. has contracted for these pictures in the Capitol City and after the first of September will be able to show them in his fine 1,700 seat house now in course of construction.

Large Film Stock Moved.

San Francisco, Cal.—The George Kleine and Kleine-Edison releases handled for the past year by Sol. L. Lesser have been taken over by the local George Kleine office recently established at 288 Golden Gate avenue and this place now presents a very busy appearance. As the accumulation of films and advertising matter had become quite extensive the task of moving proved to be quite a strenuous one as can be attested to by office manager F. E. McCoy.

Mutual Manager Visits Studios.

San Francisco, Cal.—X. K. Stout, manager of the local branch of the Mutual, made a short trip to the southern part of the state recently accompanied by Mrs. Stout, following a visit here by S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Manufacturing Company. After spending a short time at Los Angeles a trip was made to Santa Barbara by automobile and the studios in that vicinity inspected.

Country Exhibitors Visit City.

San Francisco, Cal.—During the past week a number of exhibitors from interior cities have been here to arrange for summer service and exchanges have done an increased volume of business.

H. D. Hubbard, of the Photo Play theater, Calistoga, Cal., was here a short time ago arranging for the opening of his airdome and was given a special review of "Carmen," featuring Geraldine Farrar, which was booked for the opening attraction.

J. B. Barnard of Niles, Cal., whose theater is within a half a block of the Essanay studio, which is now closed, was also a recent visitor here, as was John Di Stasio of Sacramento.

Other visitors were M. Schuhmann of the Gem theater, Pleasanton, who booked the Paramount program, and Mrs. Viola Rice of White's theater, Salinas, who is showing Paramount pictures five days a week.

Pictorial News Proving Popular.

San Francisco, Cal.—The popularity of the Pathe News here is steadily growing and the Rialto, Tivoli and Hippodrome theaters are all featuring first runs, quite a showing for the downtown district. The latter house has booked the Pathe serial "Who's Guilty?" and this has started off to a flying start.

San Francisco Brevities.

The Royal Feature Producing Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $7,500 by V. S. Jones, M. P. Hansen and W. H. Kiler.

Winter's theater, a new house at Templeton and Mission streets, has been opened by Charles Moser with a Paramount and select feature service.

C. L. Williams, head of the C. L. Williams Company, Mechanics bank building, has been seriously ill but has recovered sufficiently to be able to attend to his duties again.

H. S. Levin, the well known San Francisco exhibitor, has purchased the theater at San Mateo, Cal., formerly conducted by the late Charles Hart.

Mrs. Mabel C. Boody, formerly with Balboa, has opened a Marinello shop in the Flood building.

E. H. Emmick, of the Peerless film service, is preparing to make a trip to Los Angeles again shortly and will visit exhibitors on the way. He has been making these trips so frequently of late that he might almost be classed as a commuter.

O. V. Traggardh of the Union Film & Supply Co. is awaiting the arival of the first Tom & Jerry releases, having made extensive arrangements to introduce these here.

Harry Hunter, formerly manager of the branch of the Union Film & Supply Co. at Los Angeles, was here recently from Portland, Ore., and has gone to Butte, Mont. to open a film exchange.

F. Courneen, formerly of the local office of G. A. Metcalfe, has been sent to the Seattle branch of this supply house.

The Lyric theater on Fillmore street has dropped its vaudeville and is now showing moving pictures exclusively.

Censors in Oregon

Portland Body Considered by Exhibitors to Be the Nucleus of Censorship in Beaver State—Portland Censors Circulate Reports to Tributary Towns—New Boards Formed.

By Abraham Nelson, 601 Journal Bldg., Portland, Ore., Special Correspondent.

PORTLAND, ORE.—This city is considered by the state's exhibitors as containing the nucleus of the censorship in Oregon. So-called reform bodies in the smaller cities send to the state's metropolis for censorship data and the Portland censors supply the other censor boards of the state with lists of its condemnations and eliminations.

Within the past few weeks a new board has been established at McMinnville and reform organizations are demanding a censor board at Corvallis. Each of these towns have but two theaters. The McMinnville board consists of three women and two men and exists by virtue of a new city ordinance. The members journeyed to Portland on May 30th and consulted with F. T. Richards and Mrs. E. B. Colwell, chairman and secretary, respectively, of the Portland board. The McMinnville board then went back to the valley town and blossomed forth armed with elimination blanks similar to those used by the Portland body and commenced to censor pictures. The Pathe brand was the first affected. A misunderstanding arose as to what the Portland board had told the McMinnville board its opinion was of "The Iron Claw," and this picture nearly received rough handling by the new censors until the misunderstanding was cleared away. The McMinnville board was set upon condemning a picture in the "Who's Guilty" series until B. J. Sperry, manager of the Portland Pathe office, made a flying trip to the valley town and convinced the censors their action was too drastic. The compromise ruling of the board was the elimination of about 200 feet of film. Roy Madden, road man for Mutual, also made a trip to McMinnville to treat with the new board.

The Portland censor board has on its mailing list the censor boards at Medford, Ashland, Salem, Pendleton, Eugene and McMinnville.

Sunset Reopens.

Portland, Ore.—After being closed for two weeks for alterations in the lobby, the Sunset theater opened June 4, again under the ownership of J. A. Jennings, who remodelled the house two years ago. E. M. Loy, former booker at the Metro exchange, is manager of the house. The policy will be straight first run pictures at 5 and 10 cents.

Newcomers.

Portland, Ore.—Leonard Clark, former booker at the General Film Exchange, and now with Universal, is a happy father. The reason is an eight-pound boy born June 2. It is highly proper that this event should be given space in these columns as the marriage of Mr. Clark to Mary Damain, then stenographer at the G. F. office, was also chronicled herein about a year ago. Verily, time doth pass.

Jimmie Cassell, who edits the photoplay column of the Portland Oregonian, is also a happy father. The event came to pass about the same time as Mr. Clark's.

Lunch Still Interesting.

Portland, Ore.—The weekly luncheons of the Oregon Motion Picture Men's Association are still well attended. The newest member to be initiated into the organization is M. O. Leonhart, of the T & D. The initiating ceremonies in his case consisted of making him pay for his own lunch.

The deceptive titled one-day-of-rest-in-seven law is still receiving the attention of the association, and present at the luncheon of June 1 was Dan Kelleher, president of the Independent Retailers Association, who are leaders in the fight against the measure.

New Enterprises in Idaho.

Boise, Idaho.—A new airdome opened here May 27. The seating capacity is 850. Manager Mitchell of the Liberty theater and Liberty gardens also operates the airdome.

Emmett, Idaho.—A theater seating about 800 will be erected here.

Will Change Twice a Week.

Portland, Ore.—The T & D, Portland's largest photoplay house, has changed to a twice a week change policy. Manager Leonhart stated the reason for the change was that the film market had so adjusted itself that two good programs weekly were now available. The T & D has signed up for World pictures commencing June 21.

Changes in Portland Managers.

J. V. Lynn, recently road man for Universal, has become publicity manager for the Peoples Amusement Company and will handle publicity for the Peoples and Pickford theaters. Mr. Lynn formerly occupied a similar position at the Peoples.

Lester Fountain, who opened the A & H Hippodrome and made the house a phenominal success from the first day, has returned to Los Angeles where he is manager of the local A & H house. Walter C. Smith, manager of the Spreckles Hippodrome, San Diego, has been transferred to Portland and arived June 2 to take charge of the Hippodrome here.

Travelling Visitors.

Portland, Oregon.—Ira J. Dodge, manager of the George Kleine offices in Seattle, was in Portland recently in the interests of "Gloria's Romance." He reports a big volume of business on this picture and has booked it at the Pantages in Tacoma and Spokane. He reports that E. J. Donnellan, formerly manager of the S. & C. Empress in Seattle, has become traveling solicitor for Kleine, working out of the Seattle office, and will book the Billie Burke picture on the road.

W. C. Ryder, manufacturer's representative for Melies, was a recent visitor looking over the field for Knickerbocker features and Vim comedies and made his headquarters at the General Film exchange while in Portland.

Local Briefs.

Portland, Ore.—F. M. Simonton closed with Edwin James of the Majestic to show E & R Jungle films in that house.

Portland, Ore.—J. R. Harrington, manager of the Universal exchange in Seattle, and Wm. Potter, manager in Spokane, attended a meeting of the Pacific Northwest managers here recently.

Stayton, Ore.—O. P. Leslie has sold the Star theater to Chas. S. Clark.

Portland, Ore.—The censor board's report for May shows no condemnations in 703 reels viewed, but 24 eliminations were ordered.

Spokane Considers City Censor Ordinance

Council May Pass Law Giving Power to Some City Official to Censor Both Pictures and Theatrical Acts.

By S. Clark Patchin, Spokane Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

SPOKANE, WASH.—An ordinance creating the office of a city censor for moving pictures and other theatrical productions has been presented to the city commissioners by Commissioner F. K. McBroom, because he now lacks authority to prosecute violators of present city regulations on pictures or acts.

The ordinance followed the presentation in Spokane of a couple of alleged "shady" productions, one a picture without regard to eliminations ordered by the National Board of Review. The proposed ordinance imposes a fine of not to exceed $100 for managers to which may be added 30 days in jail for false or misleading statements with reference to pictures to be shown. The ordinance was given its first reading and many objections were entered by members of the Theatrical Managers' Association.

Following a star chamber session of moving picture exhibitors and Commissioner McBroom the letter said. "The gist of the remarks of the managers was that they have always been good and carried out the suggestions of the Public Affairs department, and the proposed ordinance is entirely unnecessary. The ordinance did not suit some of them and they wanted it amended in some places. At one vaudeville house last week the performance was rotten, and one of the acts indulged in much unnecessary profanity during a drinking scene. I went to the theater one night and told the manager to stop the performers from using bad language and he promised to do so. When I went again the next night the same thing was going on as if nothing had happened. At one of the picture houses the recommended eliminations of the national board were not made after they had been ordered. We do not want to hurt anybody's business but these people have got to obey the rules."

Commissioner Argall presented an amendment which would give the city censor, created under the proposed ordinance, the right to bar a picture which tends to incite race riot or race hatred, or that shall represent or purport to represent any hanging, lynching, burning or placing in a position of ignominy any human being, the same being incited by race hatred. "After the European War," he said, "there will probably be motion pictures taken by one side or the other which will tend to arouse prejudices against one or more of the nations now in conflict."

Street Parade Film Case Settled.

A. B. Hager, of the Hager Amusement Enterprises, Idaho Falls, Idaho, and who operates the Orpheum theater there, has finally settled his suit, started almost a year ago, to recover damages for having his moving picture camera and some reels destroyed by the chief of police and deputies during a round-up parade. Manager Hager says: "I wish to state that the case was set for May 11 in the district court, but the day before the trial the parties whom I was suing opened negotiations and were willing to compromise, they paying me a sum of money to have the case withdrawn, which we did."

An Idaho Falls paper says: "The much talked of case of Al Hager of the Orpheum and Rex theaters versus Dow Williams, president of the War Bonnet Round-Up, and Larry Hansen, chief of police, has been amicably settled to the satisfaction of all parties concerned."

Spokane Brevities.

W. Potter, manager of the Spokane Universal Film in Spokane, has returned from Portland where he attended a meeting of the managers of the Spokane, Seattle and Portland houses, to confer relative to business. He reports business brisk in his territory.

Miss Lucille Zintheo, of this city, has been selected a winner of a recent contest and will be afforded a chance to be a motion picture star with the World Film company.

Priest River, Idaho.—J. Edward Feist has opened the Strand moving picture theater here and is running Mutual pictures.

Spokane, Wash.—A. R. Patton, traveling representative of the Mutual Film Corporation exchange, has returned from a several weeks' trip over the territory and reports that business is generally good.

Thompson Falls, Mont.—Carter Brothers at Thompson Falls have sold the Rex theater to J. H. Lux.

BRITISH COLUMBIA NEWS.

Moving Pictures in the Trenches.

Edmonton, Alberta.—A letter received by a local paper from the chaplain of the 49th Battalion of Edmonton, now on the firing line in France, conveys the information that the band of the 49th is engaged regularly in supplying the music for a picture show which has been established in a large tent slightly to the rear of the trenches. Two shows are given each evening, and this tent is on a circuit with several others of a similar nature. Power for the projection machine is derived from an old ammunition mechanical transport.

Calgary, Alberta.—Another interesting letter just received from the trenches was written by a Strathmore boy, who had the shock of his life one evening while in one of the moving picture tents which are such a factor in the entertainment of the soldiers. Among the pictures shown were several views of the Strathmore district, which he recognized immediately, and then followed other scenes in which appeared several of his former neighbors. This film was made about four years ago by representatives of an English company, who were in this country securing scenes of Canadian farm life.

Worth a Passing Glance.

Winnipeg, Man.—Manager Seamans of the Strand theater donated his entire net receipts on two recent days to the 197th (Scandinavian) Battalion. Recruiting speeches have been given at the Strand every evening for some time past, in an effort to secure additional men for the 197th.

Vancouver, B. C.—The British Columbia Electric Railway Company has recently put out a set of films demonstrating the many uses of electricity on the modern farm. These pictures were shown a short time ago at Chilliwack, B. C., under the auspices of the board of trade, and an explanatory lecture was given by G. Porter, chief electrical engineer of the company.

Vancouver, B. C.—A. D. Kean of Kean's Canada Film Exchange made the first comedy ever produced in Vancouver at the opening of the bathing season, May 20, recruiting principals and supers from the ranks of the Vancouver Amateur Swimming Association. The picture was shown at the Dominion theater during the week following, and on the opening night the members of the club attended in a body.

H. J. Allen Visits.

Vancouver, B. C.—H. J. Allen, in charge of the Calgary office of the Famous Players Film Service, was in Vancouver recently ahead of the British government's ten-reel war picture, "Britain Prepared," which will be shown at the Orpheum for the week of May 29 at prices ranging from 25 cents to $1.00. Manager James Pilling reports a very gratifying advance sale for this engagement.

After a few days spent in Vancouver and Victoria, Mr. Allen returned to Calgary.

To Break I. A. T. S. E.?

Vancouver, B. C., Theater Managers May Combine to Eliminate All Union Operators—Complain That Union, for Its Own Purposes, Spreads Alarming Reports of Dangers in Booths and Frightens Patrons.

By E. C. Thomas, 821 Rogers Bldg., Vancouver, B. C., Special Correspondent.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—A particularly drastic action is about to be taken by a large proportion of the exhibitors of this city, affecting their relations with the operators' union, and individually, with the members of the Vancouver Local No. 348, I. A. T. S. E. As given to the Moving Picture World representative by W. P. Dewees, managing director of the Rex Amusement Company, Ltd., operating the Rex theater, the plan contemplates the elimination of all union operators employed in the theaters which have entered into the agreement, and the substiution of non-union men. In some local houses non-union operators are at present employed, and these will of course not be affected by the change; but those who are members of the labor organization will be notified that if they wish to retain their position they must get out of the union forthwith. In any case, states Mr. Dewees, some of the men who have been considered agitators will be dismissed, and others given their places.

Complaint of the Managers.

The particular objection to the union lies in the stress they are stated to have laid on the dangers attending the work done by operators, and the consequent effect of these statements on the minds of the public. "After the manufacturers and exhibitors have spent untold thousands of dollars in educating the public to the absence of danger which exists in a moving picture theater," said Mr. Dewees, "and in providing elaborate safety appliances in making conditions so that it is practically impossible for an accident which would injure any member of an audience to happen, the operators have continued to spread alarming reports of the dangers attending the exhibition of films. Not only was this emphasized at the recent hearing in the Victoria relative to the proposed amendment to the Moving Picture Act, but the operators' union has even caused to be published in the local labor paper an article along the same lines. Our contention is that when the members of an organization exaggerate the dangers of the business that is supporting them, and in that way affect the prosperity of those engaged in the industry, they are a menace to the business, and should be put out of it." He also ridiculed the contention that a long term of apprenticeship is necessary before a man is competent to operate a projection machine.

Mr. Dewees stated that the matter of salary is not involved in the present move, and that no reduction is contemplated. Neither is there any intention of employing returned soldiers as operators. The sole object is the elimination of the union's control of the operating rooms.

Union's Interest in Legislation.

At the latest meeting of the Vancouver Trades and Labor Council, held June 1, Delegate Thomas of the Moving Picture Operators' Union called the attention of the council to the impending change, and charged that the reason for the move was that the operators had interested themselves in the legislation compelling applicants for operators' licenses to pass a practical examination. He stated that he had knowledge that all houses in the city had agred to do away with union operators, and included the vaudeville houses. It is not thought that there will be any change at the Pantages theater, however, and Manager James Pilling of the Orpheum has definitely decided to continue with union men.

Canada's Fair Representative.

Winnipeg, Man.—Mrs. Arthur LaRue, wife of one of the members of the Permanent Players stock organization at the Dominion theater, has been adjudged the Canadian winner of the "Beauty and Brains Contest" conducted jointly by the World Film Corporation and the Photoplay Magazine. She is the only one to be selected from Canada, and will leave for the United States in the near future to take up her new work, accompanied by her husband, who has also decided to enter the photoplay field.

"Secret of the Submarine" Coming.

Vancouver, B. C.—C. R. Dippie states that great interest is being shown by local exhibitors in the American's new serial, "The Secret of the Submarine," the first episode of which is expected here about the middle of July. Special advertising matter has been prepared for Canada under the direction of C. B. Price, general manager, and the nature of the subject should guarantee big business with the picture throughout the Canadian territory.

Pictures to Pay for Prohibition.

Winnipeg, Man.—The Macdonald Prohibition Act, which went into force on June 1, has brought about a very serious financial problem which promises considerable trouble before it is finally solved. With prohibition in effect, there will be a loss of more than $250,000 annually in public revenues, and in an effort to find some way of raising at least a part of this, a heavy tax on places of amusement has been proposed. Strong opposition to this plan is being voiced, but so far there is no assurance that the theaters will not be burdened with a large additional tax.

What Manager Groves Turned In.

Regina, Sask.—The last of the Sunday concerts promoted by Manager Barney Groves to swell the funds of the 195th Battalion was given on a recent Sunday evening, when the collection amounted to $104.50 at the Regina theater. This brings the total amount realized from these entertainments up to $1,015.55, and Mr. Groves has earned the lasting gratitude of every member of the battalion. Numbers were given by the 195th orchestra, the battalion male chorus, and various individual performers.

First Run Features at Rex.

Vancouver, B. C.—The enterprise of W. P. Dewees of the Rex theater in acquiring first run privileges for the leading brands of comedy, is exciting considerable comment in Vancouver. The Rex has just finished a successful three-day run of "Charlie Chaplin's Burlesque in Carmen," secured through the Big Four office in Seattle, and next comes "The Floorwalker," the first of the new Mutual Chaplins, with the last of the Essanay Company's productions featuring the perennial Charlie ("Police") to follow. In addition to all these features, the Rex has first run on all the Triangle-Keystones, showing two of these each week. The "Carmen" burlesque was run in conjunction with Keystone's "Stolen Magic," and did capacity business.

Crowded houses were also the rule at the Globe theater, where "Carmen" was shown for three days following the Rex engagement, and the World man found Manager Creighton in the box office, wreathed in smiles. All the productions mentioned are booked for second run at the Globe.

ESSANAY.

THE GIRL AT THE CURTAIN (Two parts—June 20).—The cast: Warren Bradley (Francis X. Bushman); Mary Burns (Beverly Bayne).

To Warren Bradley, a young attorney, half of an immense fortune is left, provided he marry a distant relative, a girl he has never seen. He is content, but, it seems, the girl is not. Mary Burns, a pretty country school teacher, refuses even to see him. Reverses, however, make her agree. She insists that they be married with a curtain between, so that neither shall see the other.

They separate immediately. Later she decides to get first hand experience as a business woman and goes to work as stenographer for Warren Bradley under an assumed name. After a few months Bradley deplores his marriage, having fallen in love with the stenographer. She returns the affection but thinks he is in love with a society woman. When he dictates a letter to Mary Burns asking her to divorce him, she can stand it no longer and reveals her identity. Warren tells her the real reason for wanting a divorce and both are happy.

THE FABLE OF THE UNDECIDED BRUNETTE (June 21).—A dark-eyed maiden was being rushed by two candidates, one a cheap man the other a provider. The cheap man was trench broke and could be kept busy changing the records on the phonograph. The provider was a financial featherweight. The brunette was up a stump when it came to making a choice. She could not bring herself to lean against a stingy old thing who never unbuckled. If she married the provider he would give her everything he owned, but what he owned you could put in a steamer trunk. Auntie's advice was for girlie to center her affections on some tractable person who was neither a prospective pauper nor a close-fisted clam. Brunette falls desperately in love with a general manager of set habits and calm, unheatrical generosity, who put things on a business basis.

Moral—It is necessary to make a few purchases both before and after marriage.

VITAGRAPH.

STUNG (June 19).—The cast: Hopper (Stanley Dark); Anita (Lillian Burns); West (Templar Saxe), The Boss (Charles Eldridge). Written by Stanley Dark. Produced by Wally Van.

"Putting one over" on his friends is hubby's particular hobby. Such jokes as allowing a friend to break his teeth on a wooden sandwich and frightening nervous old women by making their plates dance mysteriously before them are his usual style. When a rich old aunt calls at his house, preparatory to making her will, he drives her away in anger with his pranks. Then he thinks of a capital joke—by placing a love letter in his pocket he causes his wife to believe that he has an affinity. Wifey recognizes in this one of her husband's witticisms and decides to call a halt. Rushing up to him in a frenzy, she confronts him with the evidence, then snoots herself and falls over, apparently lifeless. When hubby sees the tragic result of his joke he, too, is about to end his life, when his wife comes back to life mysteriously and makes him see that the joke is on him.

CURFEW AT SIMPTON CENTER (June 23).—The cast includes Otto Lederer, George Kunkel, Webster Campbell, Jack Mower and Florence Vidor. Author, Edwin Ray Coffin. Producer, William Wolbert.

"Children under sixteen must be in bed when the curfew rings at nine, or, b'gosh, I'll run 'em in." This is the edict of the new constable at Simpton Center. When the married women of the town plan a "school girl" party they pay no attention to this order. The women at the party all dressed as school girls are having a fine time, while their husbands at home are enjoying themselves over the cards and a cold bottle.

Long after the curfew has tolled the hour they start for home, but the hawk-eyed constable throws cold water on their spirits when he insists on arresting them under the new curfew law. After a night in jail their bubbles, with much oratory, finally convince the constable that their wives are really over sixteen, and they are released, but the experience sets each hubby back one ten-dollar bill for one night's lodging.

WOULD YOU FORGIVE HER" (Broadway Star Feature Three Parts June 21).—The cast: Eleanor Baine (Miss Leah Baird); Frank Truax (Arthur Cozine), Walter Paxton (Jack Ellis); City Editor (Van Dyke Brooke). Author, Dodd Crane. Producer, Mr Van Dyke Brooke.

Truax, a reporter, arriving on the scene of the murder of the wealthy Paxton, finds a jade caught in the carpet at the murdered man's feet, and, knowing this as the secret means of entrance to the opium dive of Fon Too, he hides it to follow up the clue. He phones his paper, giving the details of the case, but withholding the story of the jade, in hopes of getting a "scoop" later on. On his way to Chinatown to visit Fon Too he stops for a moment to see his fiance, Eleanor, in the department store where she is employed, but is told that she has not appeared that morning. Worried, he goes to her boarding house, but is told once more that she has not been seen since the previous day.

Though reluctant to abandon the search for Eleanor, he is forced to do so when his editor demands a better story on the Paxton murder. He goes to Fon Too, to whom he is known, shows him the jade and, by force, wrings from him the fact that Paxton brought Eleanor there the previous night. He insists, however, that she has escaped and that he does not know where she is. Seeing that the Chinaman is telling the truth, Truax wastes no time on him, but starts once more for Eleanor's home, hoping to find a clue to her disappearance. On his arrival he finds that Eleanor is already there, but at first she refuses to see him.

He forces his way into the room, and, once inside, she tells him the story of how Paxton, though a married man, constantly annoyed her at the store. From time to time he asked her to lunch or for a drive with him and was irritated at her continued refusals. Then, the night before, while walking through a dark street, she was set upon by two men, chloroformed, and woke up in Fon Too's opium den. Here, still obstinate, she was given the choice of going to Paxton or Fon Too, and, having no recourse, she chose the lesser evil by accepting Paxton. Then she escaped and took a silent vow to be avenged on the brute who forced her to sacrifice her honor. That morning, when Paxton came into his office, she was waiting for him and shot him dead. At first she intended to hide, but now she is willing to give herself up, for in so doing she will be helping many other girls in the same predicament. Truax helps her out of her difficulty, and, although she thought that all was over between them after her disgrace, he still loves her, and his love almost recompenses her for all her suffering.

KALEM.

UNMASKING A RASCAL (Episode No. 10 of "The Social Pirates" Two parts—May 29).—The cast: Mona (Marin Sais); Mary (Ollie Kirkby); Fuller, a banker (Frank Jonasson); his wife (Mrs. Dunlap); Holden (Edward Chisbee); Stokes (R. L. Dell). Director, James W. Horne.

Fuller, the banker, when in Holden's cabaret, is Wentworth, a man about town. The plight of his ward whom he has defrauded marks him for the justice of Mona and Mary. Mona becomes "professional introducer" at the cabaret, and arranges matters so that Fuller, as Wentworth, becomes acquainted with Mary, who is a sight-seeing girl from the country. The acquaintance ripens, and one day Fuller makes a statement which Mary prefers to receive as a proposal of marriage, and her quick acceptance takes the banker's breath away. Mona, as has been prearranged, arrives at that moment and Mary joyfully announces her engagement. Fuller is dumfounded, for he knows that Mona has knowledge of his real identity. Stokes, an actor freind of the girls posing as a reporter, is worked into the climax that results in a brisk cross play of action which finally finds Mona and Mary recovering the amount of which Fuller has defrauded his ward.

A BUNCH OF FLIVVERS (May 30).—The cast: Ham (Lloyd V. Hamilton); Bud (Bud Duncan); the girl (Norma Nicholls); the Swami (A. Edmonson).

Ham has at last found a job—and he really works. In fact he works so hard that The Mysterious Stranger, a Hindu mystic, endows him with power to win Norma. Bud, without the aid of The Mysterious Stranger, is in strong with Norma and takes her in a canoe for a spin on the lake. But The Mysterious Stranger has the goods, for, lo and behold, Ham, pushing his lawn mower before him, actually walks out of the water and across the lake in pursuit of Bud and Norma. He captures Norma and sets out to buy a flivver car.

Bud succeeds in stalling The Mysterious Stranger's package of all-powerful pills. From then on life is just one flivver after another for Ham, for each one he purchases ends in smithereens. As long as he has $1.98 left he buys another. As Bud's jealous hand is at the bottom of the trouble you can imagine the fate in store for Ham when he finally sets out with Norma in a car and Bud, in disguise, is at the wheel. It's a riotous, breath-breaking ride, and finally ends when the car, Ham, Bud and Norma all race off the end of the pier.

A SMOKEY ADVENTURE (May 31).—The cast: Dick's wife (Ethel Teare), Dick (Victor Rottman); Sorebucks (Gus Leonard); his wife (Myrta Sterling). Producer, Harry Millarde.

Dick, the sales manager for Ropo Cigars, is instructed to get the endorsement of Sorebucks, a prominent citizen and noted cigar connoisseur. As Ropo is no better than its name, Dick naturally falls down. Then Ethel undertakes the job. She succeeds in getting into Sorebuck's home, and while he is under the deadening influence of a Ropo cigar is just about to secure a signature to the testimonial when Sorebuck's jealous wife appears on the scene and Ethel considers herself lucky to get out on the sidewalk safely. She sees Sorebuck about to set out in his car, and while the chauffeur is busy in the garage, she jumps into the car, grasps the wheel, and whirls off at great speed. Far out in the country she halts, and delivers her ultimatum, "You don't get back nor do you get a cigar to smoke until you endorse Ropo." There are all sorts of further complications before Ethel finally has her way.

SIS THE DETECTIVE (June 2).—The cast: Sis Hopkins (Rose Melville); Chauncey, the hired man (Henry Murdock); Rockgold, the dill pickle magnate (Richard Purdon); Jane, his daughter (Mary Kennedy); Jack (Arthur Albertson); the butler (Frank Minzey). Author, S. A. Van Petten. Producer, Robert Ellis.

Sis graduates with high honors from the correspondence school in "detecting" and sets out for the city with Chauncey, the hired-man, to become rich. She arrives in time to take a hand in solving the mysterious disappearance of the dill pickle magnate's daughter. Sis manages to blunder into finding the daughter, and sends Chauncey back after Rockgold, and the reward. While standing guard over Jane and Jack, who she thinks is the kidnapper, Sis learns that they were really eloping. The spirit of romance is kindled, and when Rockgold arrives Sis refuses the reward and holds the irate father at bay while Jane and Jack continue their interrupted elopement.

THE SPIKED SWITCH (No. 82 of "The Hazards of Helen"—June 3).—The cast: Helen, the operator (Helen Gibson); Engineer Trent (G. A. Williams); his daughter (Pearl Anibus); Hume, the fireman (P. S. Pembroke); chief dispatcher (Roy Watson). Author, E. W. Matlack. Producer, James Davis.

Trent returns to the throttle too soon after his recovery from illness. On the following day Ruth, his daughter, and Hume plan to elope. Trent, with a new fireman, is suddenly taken with a weak spell and when the fireman becomes panic-stricken there is a scuffle which ends with the fireman thrown to the ground while the fast freight speeds on. Trent, a moment later, is overcome and lies helpless in the engine cab. Flagmen notice that there is something wrong when the express whizzes by without the least attention to signals.

Word is sent ahead to Helen to derail the freight to save the passenger, the same trait on which Ruth and her lover are eloping. But trouble with the switch had caused the construction crew to spike it earlier in the da, and Helen finds it impossible to send the express on a siding. The down grade suggests a plan, and with the aid of an automobile she sends a box car speeding down towards the freight while she rips loose a plank from the top of the box car to prepare for a perilous leap. She braces the plank under the platform on top of the box car and as the flying express speeds by makes the thrilling leap, landing in a tumbled heap at the bottom of a coal car. It is but a few seconds before the train is brought to a stop.

LUBIN.

THE AVENGER (Two Parts—June 13).—The cast: Fred Worthing (L. C. Shumway); William Worthing (Sidney Hayes); Jack Forrest (Robert Gray); Manu (George Routh); Lukora (Velma Whitman); Adaba, the high priest (Melvin Mayo). Written by Julian Louis Lamothe. Directed by Leon D. Kent.

Manu, East Indian servant of William Worthing, an old collector of curios, telephones the police that he cannot open the door of his master's room. Jack Forrest, a young reporter, is at headquarters when the message is received. He tells the sergeant that Worthing's son, Fred, in India, is his best friend. Jack accompanies the police to the house, and entrance is forced. Worthing lies upon the floor, having been killed by a sword. Circumstantial evidence is found against Manu. He is tried and acquitted.

Worthing's son, Fred, arrives from India and Jack tells him of the crime. Fred finds a clue in the fact that the sword was standing upright, and searches the attic. He finds some rope lint on a post, and notes that the attic window is directly above the bedroom window. Then he finds a little image of Buddha among his father's effects. The last time he saw the little Buddha it was in an Indian temple with his father. It then contained a sacred bit of parchment, and old Worthing evidently had stolen it, and the Hindu servant murdered him as a result. The servant made his escape from the room by climbing out of the window on a rope to the attic. He had slid the bolt of the window with the sword through the transom, when the sword fell, it remained standing in the floor.

These deductions prove correct, for Fred and Jack see Manu return stealthily that night to obtain the parchment from its hiding place under the steps. Fred and Jack follow him to a tenement and discover that the Hindus have a temple there. When they peep through a crevice in the door, they hear Adaba, the high priest, promise Manu that as a reward for recovering the sacred parchment, he shall marry Lukora, the priestess of the temple. Jack wants to call a policeman, but Fred tells him that as Manu has been acquitted he cannot be tried again.

Fred determines to seek vengeance himself. He is a student and knows that this sect of Buddhists greatly fear the curse of their God. The next day he steals into the temple with Jack. He rubs some phosphorous on the idol of Buddha, substitutes powder for the incense, and on the slat where Manu is to place his head through the marriage ceremony, he places another chemical. He hides behind the altar with Jack. The Hindus come in and the ceremony is started. The priest throws incense on the sacred fire and all is darkness, and a voice says: "The curse of Buddha lies upon the murderer in this temple." When the fire leaps up again and Manu raises his head a mystic sign is upon his forehead. The Hindus flee from him in horror. The priest hands him a sword with a significant gesture. As Jack and Fred gaze at the lifeless body in the deserted temple, Fred feels that his father has been avenged.

SONS OF THE SEA (Three Parts—June 15).—The cast: Dave Meyhew (Cecil Van Auker); Dick Morley (Millard Wilson); Nellie (Lucy Payton); Tom Edwards (W. J. Spencer). Adapted by Josephine McLaughlin. Directed by Millard Wilson.

Dave Meyhew and Dick Morley are partners in the fishing business. Dave had cared for Dick when the latter was a poor lad. Both love Nellie, the daughter of a neighboring fisherman, and at the opening of the story the two boys have obtained a contract with a large sea food house and have decided to buy two up-to-date boats with their savings. Dick meets Tom Edwards, a crook and gun-runner, who gradually gets Dick to listen to his schemes. Dave and Dick propose but Nellie accepts the latter and goes to keep house for the boys.

Dick turns over his share of money to Edwards and the deception he must practice at home makes him irritable with his wife and his friend. Dave tries to break Edwards' hold but on account of the money, Dick won't listen to him. The day the boats are to be shipped, Dick is obliged to confess his loss to Dave and says he lost it gambling. Once Edwards has the money he tries to get rid of Dick and in a fight in the saloon, Dick kills the bartender. Through Dave's help the boy makes his escape in Dave's boat with Nellie.

A year passes. Dave has joined the revenue service and Dick with Nellie is trying to live honestly in the fishing business at San Diego. Edwards, transacting some gun smuggling, runs into him and persuades him through fear and hope of recovering his lost money to join him. Word is taken to the revenue cutter on which Dave is to proceed to San Diego on the gun-smuggling business and one day while on shore-leave, Dave overhears Edwards, whom he recognizes, and Pedro making plans to deliver the guns across the border. He returns to his ship and notifies the officer.

Dick, drinking and neglectful of Nellie, leaves her and helps Edwards in his schemes. The night of the smuggling comes and the cutter starts out. Edwards, Dick and others in the smuggling boat see the cutter and try to get back but are overtaken. Dick is wounded, but manages to jump overboard. Dave jumps after him, unaware of his identity. Nellie is praying in her hut when Dick, wet and wounded, staggers in. She gets him to the bed when Dave forces the door open and enters. The two are again brought face to face and Dave realizes that the man he has come to arrest is his old partner. Dick confesses and dies from his wound, leaving Dave and Nell to at last have the happiness so long denied them.

HUBBY PUTS ONE OVER (June 17).—The cast: Mr. Dasher (Francis Joyner); Mrs. Dasher (June Daye); Mrs. White (Lenore Peacock). Written by Lewis Allen. Directed by Clay M. Greene.

Mr. Dasher is a most economical individual, and persistently refuses to permit his wife to hire a cook. Tired of the grind of the kitchen work, Mrs. Dasher appeals to her neighbor, Mrs. White, for advice, and between them a plot for relief is concocted.

Mrs. Dasher telegraphs to a sister in a neighboring town to telegraph for her. This is done. Instead of proceeding to her, she repairs to the house of her neighbor, where she watches her husband's ludicrous attempts to get along without a cook, and how false have been his claims that housekeeping is a cinch. His first effort in preparing a meal results in failure, and while avoiding a conflagration caused by burning bacon, he sees his wife peering at him from her neighbor's porch.

The truth dawns upon him, and after a hasty meal at a restaurant, he hires a pretty maid and takes care that his flirtations with her are carried on before the open kitchen window. This, of course, brings his wife upon the scene. The peach of a maid is discharged and Mrs. Dasher declares that there is no virtue in deception and that she would prefer to do her own housework.

OTTO'S LEGACY (June 19).—The cast: Otto Finnegan (Davy Don); His Wife (Patsy De Forest); Sheriff (George Egan); Officer (James Cassaday); Officer (Bernard Siegel). Scenario written by Lily Wandel. Directed by Edwin McKim.

Otto Finnegan, a bricklayer, receives a legacy of gold pieces. As the bank is closed he conceals the gold pieces in a hollowed brick and cements the opening. This he buries in a vacant lot. Two sons of a policeman, who have been reading of Captain Kidd's buried treasure, dig up the brick, and, when surprised by the arrival of Finnegan, they hold him at bay with an old harmless pistol. A mason loading bricks from a pile in the same yard throws the "gold brick" in with the rest and before Finnegan can have the boys arrested it is built into the walls of a chicken house.

His loitering about the place creates suspicion, and, becoming desperate, he hires an automobile and drives it through the wall of the chicken house. The owner seizes one of the bricks and knocks him out with it, leaving the one with the cemented side laying on the ground.

Finnegan is taken home insensible, and when seized with a chill his wife warms his feet with a hot brick, which happens to be the gold one. When he awakes and finds it he clasps his wife to his breast and tells her for the first time of his sudden rise to wealth.

LOVE IS LAW (Three parts—June 22).—The cast: Wa-Ni-Ne-Ma (Adda Gleason); Chief E-Pa-Ni (B. W. Hopkins); Ni-a-wa-ca (Alan Forrest); Set-te-wa (C. E. Van Auken); Roscoe, an Indian trader (Melvin Mayo); Zi-Lan-Ni (W. J. Spencer); Chief Wal-pa (A. C. Hilts); E-to-no, the Indian girl (Evelyn Page). Written and directed by Melvin Mayo.

According to the custom of the Pueblo Indians, the Tribunal Oath is taken never to marry outside the tribe. On the reservation the chief ruled his tribe with an iron hand. His daughter, Wa-ni-ne-ma, meets by accident the son of the Hopi chief and named Set-te-wa. Their meeting is interrupted by the medicine man and his son, Ni-a-wa-ca. Ni-a-wa-ca, who is in love with Wa-ni-ne-ma, drives Set-te-wa off the reservation and Wa-ni-ne-ma is taken home. Shortly after the Hopi chief's son takes the Tribunal Oath and is sent to college. At the same time Wa-ni-ne-ma and Ni-a-wa-ca take their Tribunal Oaths and leave for college

In the year of their graduation Wa-ni-ne-ma and Set-te-wa have fallen in love. Ni-a-wa-ca hates Set-te-wa, and at a reception given at the college Ni-a-wa-ca picks a quarrel with Set-te-wa and Ni-a-wa-ca is soundly thrashed. Seeking revenge, he writes to the chief and tells him of the love between Wa-ni-ne-ma and Set-te-wa. On the eve of the big football game Set-te-wa proposes to Wa-ni-ne-ma and she accepts him. The big game is on, and in the midst of the play Wa-ni-ne-ma's father and Ni-a-wa-ca's father arrive at the stadium and force their way through the crowd. A quarrel starts between father and daughter. Set-te-wa comes up and is threatened with death if he pays attention to his daughter any more.

Wa-ni-ne-ma is taken back to the reservation, where Ni-a-wa-ca renews his love, but is spurned by the chief's daughter. Set-te-wa, longing for his country, returns to his tribe. Ni-a-wa-ca barters with the chief for the hand of his daughter and is accepted as a son-in-law.

At the Indian trading station Wa-ni-ne-ma accidentally meets her old lover and tells him of her father forcing her to marry Ni-a-wa-ca. He promises to help her, and they arrange for a secret meeting at the Kiva (Indian praying temple), and that night Ni-a-wa-ca goes to the Kiva. Shortly after Wa-ni-ne-ma comes. Ni-a-wa-ca sees her and hides, and is surprised to see Set-te-wa enter, followed by a young Indian girl who secretly loves him. The two lovers talk and lay their plans for an escape. They are about to leave when they are stopped by Ni-a-wa-ca. The two men start to struggle, and Ni-a-wa-ca raises a cry to his tribe. Set-te-wa is made a prisoner and Wa-ni-ne-ma is locked up. Set-te-wa is tried and sentenced to death the following morning after the wedding ceremony of Wa-ni-ne-ma. Wa-ni-ne-ma is released upon her promise to marry Ni-a-wa-ca.

In the meantime, while the struggle is in progress between Ni-awa-ca and Set-te-wa, the Indian girl who followed Set-te-wa to the Kiva has gone for help to the trading post. Wa-ni-ne-ma goes to the dwelling where her lover is confined and releases him, and as they are about to leave, Ni-a-wa-ca enters. They start to fight and continue to fight down the stairs. At the bottom Ni-a-wa-ca is killed. The tribe is aroused. It is closing in on Set-te-wa, when the Indian girl brings the rangers, who drive the tribe back, and Set-te-wa and Wa-ni-ne-ma make their escape.

PERSISTENCY (June 24).—The cast: Dorothy McLean (Octavia Handworth); John Hallet (Thurston Hall); Dorothy's Aunt (Florence Williams). Written by Thurston Hall. Directed by Percy Winter.

John Hallet, a well-to-do man about town, has an uncontrollable passion for associating with stage folk, and his escapades with them have occasioned much gossip. His sister, hoping to reform him by introducing him into her own set, invites him to a lawn party at her country home. Here he meets his heart's fate in the person of Dorothy McLean and makes love to her. She, knowing of his convivial habits, repulses him, but with characteristic persistency he continues his unwelcome attentions.

Finally, in despair, Dorothy escapes with her aunt to the seashore, only to be closely followed by John, where his assaults upon her heart become more persistent and her refusals more emphatic. His attempt to abduct her in a rolling chair causes him to run for his life from an angry crowd. Bribing the life savers, he plans a rescue from the waves, only to be the rescued one himself.

Dorothy and her aunt return to the city, he follows, and then it occurs to him that perhaps the better way to win the young lady's affections would be to call at her home and present his card. This he does that evening, dressed in his best, and he seems so different from the "fresh" individual she has known that she immediately capitulates and permits the inevitable embrace and kiss.

Alma Thorne, an unsophisticated southern girl, learns to love Jack Rodney, who, afflicted with tuberculosis, is sent south to a sanitarium in the hope that he will recover. As Rodney gains in strength he urges Alma to marry him Previously, Col. Ashton, an elderly friend of the Thorne family, has proposed to Alma and has been rejected.

Despite the objections of her friends, Alma remains steadfast in her determination to wed Jack Rodney, and the wedding day is set. Friends gather for the ceremony, and as the minister is about to say the words that will unite Jack and Alma in the bonds of holy matrimony, Louis, brother of Jack, appears. "This wedding can never take place," he says. As his younger brother swoons from the shock, the elder brother carries Jack away.

Later the boy dies, and Alma, grief-stricken, swears to be revenged upon the man who has stepped between her and the man she loved. Mrs. Thorne, Alma's mother, passes away, but before her death she gives Alma into the care of Colonel Ashton, and Alma marries him.

Years pass, and Alma Ashton, now a wealthy widow, still fosters thoughts of revenge on Louis Rodney. She meets Louis and exerts all her feminine wiles to capture him. At last she succeeds, and they are married. Following the ceremony, and when Rodney and his bride are left alone, the woman tells him who she is and of her vows of revenge, and recalls to him the time when he ruined her youthful love for his younger brother.

After he comes to understand her successful plan of vengeance he leaves her, retires to another room, and brings forth a revolver with a plan to end all, for he feels that he cannot live without the beautiful creature whom he has made his wife. But before he can perform the rash act the revolver slips from his trembling hands, falls upon the floor and explodes.

In an adjoining room Alma hears the explosion. She has horrid visions of having caused her husband to suicide. Too late comes a realization that she loves the man. She rushes into the room and finds Louis Rodney alive and well. He takes her into his arms.

'TAKING A CHANCE' (June 24).—The cast: Tom Manton (Tom Mix); Flo Saunders (Victoria Forde); William Saunders (Pat Chrisman); Henry Weir (Joe Ryan). Written and produced by Tom Mix.

Henry Weir, a crook, tries to sell Saunders an automobile, and Weir takes Flo out for a ride. Tom learns that Weir is wanted by the authorities. Meantime, Weir endeavors to make love to Flo, who escapes, meets Tom and tells him of Weir's actions. Tom chases Weir in his auto, rides alongside and jumps to the top of the automobile, where he is taken into town by Weir. When at the railroad station Weir jumps from the car and tries to escape, he is confronted by the cowboy.

Saunders has so much admiration for Tom that he gives his consent to the marriage of Tom and Flo.

BIOGRAPH.

A MISUNDERSTOOD BOY (Reissue—June 19).—The cast: The Girl (Lillian Gish); The Boy (Robert Harron); The Girl's Father (Lionel Barrymore); Her Mother (Kate Bruce).

Everything he did seemed to be misconstrued, except by the little lady he loved. The town roisters made fun of her and his love. That made trouble, and the chief vigilante believed him the cause of it all. So he was "in wrong" all around. The girl's father also sided with the opinion of the world and sent both the boy and girl away.

Mother was on a visit at the time, and therein the need of such a one at home was proved, for once back she sent the father out to bring them home again. The boy in the gold hills had been misunderstood again. Marauding merchants had left their victim on the mountain pass, and the boy, coming on the scene, was again accused, but the lie in the end destroyed itself.

THE REFORMERS; OR, THE LOST ART OF MINDING ONE'S BUSINESS (Two Parts—June 20).—The cast: The Girl (Mae Marsh); Her Brother (Robert Harron); Her Father (Charles H. Malles); Her Mother (Jennie Lee); The Brother's Friend (Walter Miller).

Behold in this film the uplifter, a peculiarity of the human species, quite convinced that all that is is wrong. Forth to the uplift he minds everybody's business but his own until that business is as clean, pure and spotless as himself. Verily in these later days is there no school of art named "minding one's business?"

KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURES.

AN OLD MAN'S FOLLY (Three Parts—June 16).—The cast: The Girl (Marguerite Nichols); Her Father (Daniel Gilfether); Her Lover (Les Willis); The Detective (Richard Johnson); The Adventuress (Phyllis Grey); Her Accomplice (Frank Erlanger). Directed by Reeves Eason.

On the night when the girl's engagement is announced, her mother misses a costly necklace. A private detective is called in. He discovers that the girl's father has given the necklace to an adventuress. He visits the adventuress and is held up by her companion, a crook, who suggests that they all blackmail the old man. The girl is kidnapped and taken to an empty house, where she is held prisoner. Her sweetheart gets on the trail, rescues her with the aid of the police, and they reach the detective's office just as her father is signing a check for blackmail. The detective gets his just deserts, and the matter is adjusted.

PAY DIRT (Five Parts—June 18).—The cast: The Easterner (Henry King); Kate Gardner (Marguerite Nichols); Peter Gardner (Gordon Sackville); Moll (Mollie McConnell); Dick Weed (Daniel Gilfether); Oby (Charles Dudley); Turner (Philo McCullough); Doris Wendell (Ruth White); Her Father (Bruce Smith). Directed by H. M. and W. D. Horkheimer.

While he digs for gold day by day, "The Easterner," a young miner, gambles by night. A woman of the camps, named Moll, takes an interest in him and tries to break him of the habit that is his ruin. He laughs at her, but after she saves his life he promises to quit playing. Kate Gardner, a girl of the West, loves him, and she in turn is loved by Bill Turner, a miner. Turner proves to her that the Easterner loves Doris Wendell, daughter of a wealthy land owner. She, with Moll, is instrumental in saving the Easterner's life when he is about to be lynched by a mob at the command of the jealous Turner.

Peter Gardner, her father, covets the Easterner's claim and bribes Dick Weed, the gambling house proprietor, to help him get the claim. They attempt to make him gamble, but he is true to his promise. Later he discovers that Moll is his mother, whose passion for gambling he has inherited. Oby, a half-wit, haunts the camp. Moll and her son try to live respectably after Doris has broken the engagement because the Easterner refuses to disown his mother.

But the passion for gambling proves too strong. Moll rushes out of the house to the Hall of Chance. Her son is inveigled by Weed and Gardner into betting his claim. As he loses, Oby snatches away the table cloth, jumbling the cards. Gardner, in a rage, strikes him down. His memory returns and he recognizes Gardner as the man who robbed him many years before, and shoots him. Dying, Gardner admits that Kate is Oby's daughter. Reunited with her father, she marries the Easterner.

THE ANCIENT BLOOD (Three Parts—June 23).—The cast: Nor (Virginia Norden); Lady Williamson (Ruth Lackaye); Margaret (Myrtle Reeves); Lucy Ralston (Alice Smith); Jennie (Mitchel Scanland); Jacques (Philo McCullough); Cedric Ralston (Neil Hardin); Lord Harry Ralston (Lake McKee); "Killer" Joe (Robyn Adair); Loco Ike (Frank Erlanger). Produced by Charles Bartlett.

Nor, a half breed girl, is beloved by Jacques, a French Canadian. Jacques and "Killer" Joe have a fight over her in "Killer" Joe's gambling hell, and Nor separates them.

Meanwhile, Cedric Ralston, the younger son, leaves home in England, his fiancee having broken her engagement with him to marry his elder brother, Lord Ralston. He goes to the Canadian Northwest and there meets Nor for the first time, while she is defending Loco Ike, accused for cattle stealing. He admires her greatly and takes side with her. Later, he discovers the real cattle thief, "Killer" Joe, and is shot by that gentleman. Nor discovers him and carries him to her cabin. Jacques is the only one who knows the truth and, though realizing Nor loves Cedric, he defends him.

Later, Nor and Cedric are married, and on the day of their wedding, Cedric hears of his brother's death and he goes to England, taking Nor. She is very unhappy and longs for her mountains and Jacques. Cedric falls in love again with his brother's widow Margaret.

At a ball one night, Nor overhears Margaret and her husband talking, hears his declaration of love and his resolve to have Margaret. Overjoyed, she goes to him and says she will leave him and he may divorce her. When he refuses she tells him she loves Jacques. In the end she returns to her mountains and to Jacques.

A COLLEGE BOOMERANG (June 18).—The cast: Jean (Edith Roberts); Betty (Marguerite McRae); Miss Preston (Inez Marcel); Prof. Grayson (Harry Benham). Written by Catherine Carr. Produced by Winthrop Kelley.

Jean, a young girl attending college, works her way through by making a few dollars attending the other girls as manicure, hairdresser, etc. She hears much of the coming engagement of David Grayson, a professor of chemistry in the college, and of his charms and good looks.

Grayson arrives and is attracted to Jean through sympathy. He notices she is snubbed by her companions. It being impossible for her to attend some of the classes, she gets behind in her studies. He offers to help her after hours, and the two meet surreptitiously at night in the library to study together. Grayson considers Jean in the light of a child whom he wishes to help, not realizing that his attentions may compromise her.

Betty Marshall, a wealthy girl and belle of the school, falls in love with Grayson, and, upon his gently but firmly repulsing her advances, and having seen Jean and Grayson together, she determines to eliminate Jean as a rival, causing her disgrace in the school. She accuses Jean of having stolen several articles of jewelry, having as a foundation the fact that Jean has access to her room in her capacity of hairdresser. Jean is unable to defend herself, but begs that she may remain at the school until the final mid-winter examinations are passed.

Betty plans to still further ruin Jean. One night she enters the laboratory, changes the chemicals at Jean's test table, knowing that if Jean uses a certain chemical it will cause an explosion. Jean has promised to meet Grayson in the laboratory for the last time. As she nears the laboratory she is amazed to hear a terrific explosion, and sees Betty sink to the ground. She rushes in and at the risk of her own life, rescues Betty, whose careless use of chemicals has caused the explosion. Betty is badly burned, but, when convalescent, she sends for Jean, and confesses that in her jealousy she, herself, was responsible for the disappearance of the jewels.

In asking Jean to forgive her, Betty tells her that she had acted on the principle that "all is fair in love and war," but had not counted on the intervention of fate to cure her of her folly. Thus Jean is completely exonerated, and her face is radiant with happiness as the Professor draws her to him and makes the announcement that she is soon to become his wife.

On returning from her honeymoon Edith, the wife of Tom Lovejoy, discovers a scented letter that her husband reads at the breakfast table without informing her of its contents. Edith reads the letter and is horrified when she discovers that a certain Lisette D'Auber requests Tom to come up to her apartment in the hotel in the afternoon unannounced, as she deems it advisable that they keep their secret to themselves.

Edith, heavily veiled, goes to the hotel that afternoon and while seated in the lobby sees her husband meet a foreign-looking woman of unquestionable attractiveness, together with a little girl about eight or nine years of age. Tom goes upstairs with Madam D'Auber and when the little girl is told to go away and play by herself she declares that she wishes she had some little girl to play with her. This gives Edith an idea and the next day she again sets out for the hotel, this time accompanied by her maid, Martha. Edith is now dressed up as a child of eight years of age. The maid steps up to the hotel counter and registers.

Meanwhile Edith finds little difficulty in becoming acquainted with Fanchon, Madam D'Auber's little girl. As soon as Edith has made sure of her husband's arrival she induces Fanchon to take her to her mother's apartment, where they inspect the various dolls and toys that belong to Fanchon. While pretending to play with the dolls Edith keeps an eye nervously on the inner room and ultimately hints to Fanchon that she would like to enter it. But Fanchon insists that they can't go in there because her mother has a gentleman caller. Edith now peeps through the keyhole, where she sees Tom sitting in close proximity to Madam D'Auber, who is smoothing down her husband's hair. But Edith doesn't know that Madam D'Auber is doing this preparatory to working on a miniature portrait of Tom, as the painting frame is not in Edith's angle of vision.

Unfortunately, Edith and Fanchon get so excited in their key-hole explorations that they fall against the door and tumble headlong into the next room. Tom catches a glimpse of the face of his wife and follows her as she is fleeing with Fanchon. In trying to escape Edith trips down the steps leading into the lobby, where she is assisted to a chair by a hotel clerk. Billy comes down stairs, but doesn't wish to acknowledge before the assembled hotel guests that the "seeming" child is really his wife. Edith, upon seeing Tom before her, asks the meaning of his presence in the hotel. Madam D'Auber arrives in the lobby and urges Tom to complete the sitting. Edith, not knowing what in the world she is referring to, seems utterly bewildered.

Finally Tom takes her by the hand and pulls her after him as he rushes up stairs. He drags her into Madam D'Auber's studio and shows her the partly finished miniature. The light of understanding breaks in upon Edith and everything ends happily.

Although Sonia Marask has been married to Petroff Marask for some years, she doesn't know that he holds Nihilistic meetings in the cellar of their home. M. Lazar, Chief of the Russian Secret Service, is one of Sonia's ardent admirers and jealous of Count Savanoff, a wealthy roue. Sonia has been playing one against the other, being clever enough to keep them both within limits, which they are anxious to exceed.

Lazar arrives at the Marask house shortly afterward and is having a most enjoyable tete-a-tete with Sonia in the drawing room when Count Savanoff is ushered in. When Marask comes in Lazar leaves in ill humor, bent on getting even with the Count. He learns from Marask's brother, one of his stool pigeons, that Marask is deeply involved in a Nihilistic conspiracy. The butler tells Lazar of the meetings in Marask's house, of the secret passage from the cellar and makes other incriminating revelations. Lazar now sees a way whereby Count Savanoff and Marask can be removed in order to give him a clear field for the possession of Sonia.

It so happens that on the very day on which Lazar has planned to carry out his scheme, Count Savanoff sends a big box of roses to Sonia with his card attached. Marask comes into the library and picks up the card, taking his wife to task for her flirtation. Lazar is announced and Sonia retires in order that Marask may have a private interview with him. Lazar tells Marask that his friend, Savanoff, has denounced him as a Nihilist. Having aroused Marask to a great pitch of fear and jealousy, Lazar gives him a vial of poison, advising him to act swiftly and secretly and assuring him that he may depend on his protection. The Count, at Marask's suggestion, is invited by Sonia to dine at their house that very evening, where Marask poisons him.

Marask and Sonia are placed under arrest and taken before the Lieutenant of Police for examination, after which Marask is led off to prison, while Sonia is brought before Lazar, who tells her that the charge against her and her husband may mean Siberia. After a while Lazar gets very offensive in his attentions and assures her that he will save them both if she is willing to become his mistress. Sonia scorns his offer and Lazar calls the guard and has her placed in close confinement to give her an opportunity to change her mind.

A month later Sonia is again brought before Lazar. It is apparent that Lazar has been drinking heavily, when Sonia is brought in. She hears one of the attendants who has been testing gold coins with a powerful acid tell Lazar to be careful with the bottle of acid. Lazar finds that Sonia is still unyielding and thereupon calls in several guards with knouts. As they are about to seize her, Sonia weakens and cries that she consents to sacrifice her honor rather than suffer further punishment. Lazar smiles cynically and sends the guards away.

As Lazar enfolds her in his arms, she reminds him that he must keep his promise to sign a release for herself and husband before she accedes to his wishes. She puts the pen in his hand. He signs the order and then lurches toward her to exact his payment. Sonia eludes him and he starts to snatch the release from her, she seizes the bottle off the table and throws the acid in his face.

Utterly blinded, Lazar staggers about the room. Sonia then hits him over the head with his own pistol and knocks him senseless. Then she rushes out of the door and shows the lieutenant in charge the order of release, cautioning him that the chief doesn't wish to be disturbed.

In quick order Marask is released, and, with the assistance of Nihilists, Marask and Sonia make their escape to the Russian border in an automobile, after a hot pursuit by the Russian police. Later they take passage on an ocean steamer, and in the final scene we see them on board in New York harbor.

THE HEART WRECKER (June 23).—The cast: Missy (Edith Roberts); David Harding (Harry Benham); Martin Spencer (Anthony Merlo); Aunt Matilda (Jane Courtney). Written by William Addison Lathrop. Directed by George Ridgwell.

Little happiness finds its way into Missy's life. In the little Vermont village where she works on the farm of her aunt, David Harding, a farmhand, is a worshipper at Missy's shrine. Martin Spencer, author of several successful novels, comes to the neighborhood for local color. He arranges for board with Aunt Matilda, who owns the farm on which Missy works.

Dave isn't tickled to death over the arrival of the newcomer, and makes up his mind to propose to Missy without delay for fear of losing her, but just as he is in the midst of his proposal Aunt Matilda calls the girl away and hustles her into the house. Missy is detailed to show Spencer the picturesque scenery of the neighborhood in order to enable him to infuse local color into his new novel. Spencer makes himself so agreeable to Missy that she soon forgets Dave. Dave tries again to propose to Missy, but she stalls him cleverly. One evening Spencer takes Missy out rowing. He makes ardent love to the girl, and when he finally takes her in his arms she makes but feeble resistance to his wooing. Missy, believing Spencer's protestations of love, yields to his passionate pleading.

After a month of happiness the girl one night sees Spencer, his traps in his hands, stealing across the porch to the road. She is dumbfounded and starts after him in her nightgown. Meanwhile Dave walks among the trees fighting his grief. As Missy catches up to her lover she asks him where he is going. Spencer tries at first to bluff her, but when she points to the traps in his hands, he throws off the mask and tells her that he is through with her. Missy flings herself upon him, exclaiming hysterically: "Martin, you must not go You cannot go!"

When Spencer insists on going she utters a shriek and falls in a faint. Dave starts as he hears her scream, while Spencer hurries away. Dave carries Missy into the house and when she revives he pleads with her to marry him. Dave is taken aback as the girl tells him what has happened. Aunt Matilda now slips into the room and begins to revile and reproach the girl, but Dave stops the aunt and rushes out of the door announcing that he intends to bring Spencer back.

On catching up with Spencer, Dave calmly looks his adversary in the eye and tells him that he must go back with him to do what's right. Spencer tries to brush Dave aside, but is knocked down by the farmer lad, and then reluctantly decides to return with him. As they reach the house a storm that has come up is raging fiercely. Missy scorns to speak to Spencer, and, turning from her, he approaches the open window, where he is struck by lightning. They all rush to him as he falls on the floor, and Dave, after feeling his heart, announces that he is dead.

There is no grief in Missy's face as she stands wild-eyed while her aunt reviles her for the illicit love affair. Dave steps to the girl's side. As the aunt puts her hand on Dave's arm, as though to stay him, he turns on her and shouts: "I reckon this is between Missy and me. God help any one who interferes." Then turning back to Missy he clasps her in his arms.

THE ROGUE WITH A HEART (June 25).—The cast: Rufe McCullough (Hobart Henley); Philip Duprey (Sydney Bracey); Marcus Duprey, his sister (Sydell Dowling). Written by Harry Dittmar. Produced by Robert F. Hill.

The agent of a lumber company is held up and robbed of the money for the payroll. One of the Royal Mounted Police manages to get on his trail. Rufe McCullough is the guilty man. The Mounted Policeman sees through his binoculars the figure of Rufe creeping through the underbrush. Upon his summons to halt, Rufe increases his gait. The Mounted Policeman fires and Rufe is hit, but, despite his wounds, he eludes the pursuer and vanishes in the woods.

About that time Philip Duprey, a shiftless young trapper, staggers home after a drunken carouse. His path crosses the trail of Rufe's flight and when the Mounted Policeman gallops up he is confused and follows the trail to a cabin. It is the home of Philip, in which he and his sister, Marcia, are dragging out a pitiful existence. His dissipation and shiftlessness have reduced them to hopeless poverty and starvation.

The policeman enters the cabin and tells Marica of his mission. Thinking that Philip may be guilty, Marcia declares that she is alone and the policeman leaves. Upstairs, Philip has heard the policeman say that somewhere in the surrounding country the thief is hiding with the stolen money. He decides to find the thief himself, rob him in turn, and appropriate the loot. Despite his sister's pleadings, Philip goes out to carry out his plan. While he is away Rufe sees the cabin and makes for it. Marcia lets him in. He tells her that his wound is due to an accident, and, noting her poverty-stricken condition, he supplies her with food and money from his pack.

During his brief stay, the two become attracted to each other, and when Philip, returning after his unsuccessful hunt for Rufe, is heard outside, and Rufe hastily confesses he is a fugitive from justice. Marcia doesn't hesitate to hide the outlaw before she lets in Philip. Philip goes to his bunk and Marcia is in a quandary. The Mounted Policeman, convinced that the criminal, after all, is in Duprey's cabin, returns. Marcia, seeing him ride up the trail, makes a desperate resolve.

Rufe has fainted in his hiding place. She removes the money he has stolen and places it on the person of her brother, handing him over to the officer of the law as the robber of the payroll. Philip, who does not understand the situation, voices his protests, but is dragged off to the barracks. He is brought before the paymaster, who confirms his innocence, and Philip is set free. Rufe, meanwhile, makes his escape, and, realizing the extent of Marcia's affection for him, and the sacrifice it has led her to make, he promises the girl to go straight before parted and the reunion of Philip and Marcia is silhouetted on the screen as the picture fades away.

RED FEATHER.

THE IRON HAND (Five Parts—May 29).—The cast: Jerry Simpson (E. Clark); Tim Noland (Hobart Bosworth); Connors (Jack Curtis); Slim (William V. Mong); Slim's wife (Grace George); Slim's baby (Frank Newberg); Mr. Winslow (W. Harris); Enid Winslow (Jane Novak). Produced by Ulysses Davis.

Jerry Simpson, a politician, spies upon Big Tim Noland, leader of a notorious gang, and tries to ingratiate himself in Tim's favor by offering him the job of lieutenant, hoping thus to swing a big majority of votes for the coming election. But Tim refuses. Simpson plans with Connors, chief of the detectives, to "get" Tim. Slim, who has been refused membership in the gang because of lack of nerve, is captured by Connors as he leaves the rendezvous of the gang and tries to obtain information from him. Tim notices that Slim keeps a cool head and admires his pluck, so he walks up and tells Connors to keep his hands off his friends.

Tim's gang start to pull a job, but is caught by Connors and his men, who, after a struggle, arrest Tim and Slim. They are sentenced to a year in the penitentiary. Slim becomes very despondent and Tim, feeling sorry for the boy, writes to Billy Massy, a saloon keeper, asking him to take care of Slim's wife, as he has money in the bank and will pay him when he is free. The day their sentences expires Connors calls on the warden and requests that he be allowed to talk with Tim. When Tim appears Connors tries to intimidate him and bully him, but Tim, after explaining that he intends to be on the square, loses his patience and, seeing that Connors will not let him alone, knocks him down. The detective orders the warden to arrest Tim. The warden refuses, saying that he tried to give a free man the third degree and deserved the punishment.

Tim goes with Slim to his room and finds Slim's wife dying, a neighbor attending to the child and the sick woman. After getting Tim and Slim to promise to bring the baby up on the square the wife dies. Tim tries hard to secure work for himself and Slim, but Connors and his men thwart them at every step. Some of the old gang meet the two men and urge them to go back to the old life, but Tim stands firm in his resolve to go straight, and will have nothing to do with them. Slim is a week character and decides to join them in spite of Tim's protests.

The following evening Slim does not come home and Tim decides to look for him. So placing the baby in the coal box, he starts out. Meeting the burly policeman, Tim pleads with him not to hound them any longer and the officer agrees to lay off. Slim is killed in a brawl and Connors and his men lay this crime upon Tim and he is arrested. The burly policeman, however, proves his innocence.

Jerry Simpson has become Alderman of the Seventh Ward and is holding a reception to welcome all his friends. He is having a discussion with Dr. Breevoort, who holds that there is no such thing as hereditary criminal instinct, Dr. Brevoort declaring that he is willing to prove his statements by adopting any child of criminal parents that Simpson will produce. During the evening Tim, having become desperate, calls on Simpson asking for work, explaining that he has Slim's baby to support. Simpson then recalls Dr. Brevoort's offer and tells Tim that the doctor will adopt the baby, which he does.

Fifteen years have passed and Tim, who has been aided by Simpson, has become a wealthy politician, is looking forward to having Slim's baby, Roy Brevoort, who has just attained his majority, to live with him, according to the agreement with the doctor when he allowed him to adopt the child. Roy is engaged to Enid Winslow, whose father is leader of the Purity League in opposition to Tim's party. When Winslow finds that Roy has gone to live with his enemy he declares the engagement broken. Roy goes to Tim with his trouble and Tim calls on Winslow, who is insulting to him. Tim loses his temper and knocks the man down, but on returning home he has a stroke of paralysis. Roy, calling on Enid, learns what Tim has done and is very angry, declaring that he will no longer remain under Tim's control.

Tim having a deep love for the boy, writes to him, enclosing a check for $25,000. Roy tears up the check. Winslow has won the election, but lost all his money on the stock market, and when he sees the torn check begs Roy to request him to loan him the money. Roy and Enid, in company with her father, find Tim at the seashore recuperating. When Roy makes known his errand Tim announces that Winslow will personally have to request the money. Winslow enters and asks Tim, offering as security a bunch of worthless stock. Tim laughs, but gives him a check. As the three disappear, Tim, broken-hearted, falls with another stroke. Tim, upon awakening, finds love and appreciation ever by his side in the hearts of the two young people.

THE MAN FROM NOWHERE (Five Parts—June 19).—The cast: James Herron (F. F. V.) (King Baggot); Betty Herron (Irene Hunt); Hon. Dudley Ward (Joseph W. Gerard); Ruth Ward, his daughter (Helen Marten); Larry Ward, his son (Johnny Walker); Antonio Gaudio (Joseph Granby); the prison warden (Frank Smith). Written by W. H. Clifford. Produced by Henry Otto.

After a two years' stay in Western mining camps James Herron returns to his Virginia home. Antonio Gaudio, a foreigner, has won the affections of Betty, Herron's sister. While Jim is playing cards Betty writes a letter addressed to her brother, in which she promises to write in a few days to explain her sudden departure. Arriving in the city, Jim tracks the eloping couple to a fashionable boarding house, where Gaudio his engaged two separate rooms, one for Betty and another for himself across the hall. Jim enters and listens at the door and overhears Gaudio trying to convince Betty that she need have no fear of scandal, as he intends to marry her the next day, while Betty insists on leaving the house, as they have not been pronounced man and wife. As Gaudio tries to prevent her Jim breaks into the room. Gaudio rushes toward the window and fires just as Betty runs into her brother's arms. The bullet hits Betty and she falls on the floor. Gaudio makes his escape, and Jim is placed under arrest.

Jim is brought up for trial and on the testimony of the maid, who works in the Herron home, that she heard the brother threaten to kill his sister if she did anything wrong in eloping, the prisoner is promptly convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. Three years later the Governor makes an inspection of the prison where Jim is serving his life sentence. The prisoners take advantage of the occasion and try to make their escape. Several of them make an attack on the Governor and Jim, seeing this, comes to the Governor's rescue and saves his life. As a reward for his bravery Jim is made a trusty. Ruth, the Governor's daughter, hears of his heroic action and, as a token of her regard for his bravery, she sends him a carrier pigeon to lighten the gloom of his imprisonment. While Jim is brooding in prison over a face he cannot forget, the man who murdered his sister decides to return to America, having spent the intervening three years abroad. He mingles with the smart set under the false title of Count Lorenz. The Count, as Gaudio is now known, is a notorious card sharp, and at one of the fashionable clubs he meets Larry, the Governor's "sporty" son, and cheats him out of all his ready cash at the card table. After that he gets him into his power by accepting promissory notes.

Larry learns that the Count is a cheat and decides to consult the prison warden, who is a friend of his. On returning to the warden's office Jim finds Larry in conversation with the warden. Presently the warden turns to Jim and says, "At our last prison show you pulled some clever card stunts for the prisoners' entertainment." Jim replied: "It has been years since I sat in a real game, but I am sure I can catch any sharper at his own trick." Jim learns that Larry is the brother of Ruth, who sent him the pigeon. Jim immediately manifests interest in him and turning to the warden suggests a plan of coming to Larry's rescue. Accordingly, under the pretext that he requires Jim to finish an important report he tells the guard that the prisoner is not to be returned to his cell, as he will remain in his apartment for the night. The warden dresses Jim up like a gentleman of leisure, and Larry takes Jim to his house. As he is introducing him to his sister, he hesitates in regard to his name, when Jim breaks in and says, "Just call me Barrs, the man from nowhere." Jim, Ruth and Larry drive in an automobile to the club, where a ball is in progress. During the ten minutes' ride Ruth decides that Mr. Barrs is quite the man after her ideal. While looking over the assemblage Jim sees the Count dancing in the crowd and immediately recognizes him as the man who shot his sister.

At the card table that night Jim catches the Count manipulating the cards and exposes him The Count grabs a sword from the wall and makes a lunge at Jim. Jim knocks the sword out of his hand, and, taking two swords of equal length from the wall, throws one to the Count with a warning to defend himself, denouncing him as the murderer of his sister. Although the Count is an expert fencer, Jim proves his master and the Count falls to the ground mortally wounded. He calls for a piece of note paper and signs a dying confession, in which he admits having killed Betty accidentally while trying to kill her brother, thus establishing Jim's innocence.

The Governor receives the confession and pardons Jim. Ruth learns of Jim's real name, and as the picture dissolves out there is a sympathetic understanding between Jim and Ruth that promises a bright future.

THE GRIP OF CRIME (June 20).—The cast: Giovano Marro (Thomas Jefferson); Santa Marro (Lena Baskette); Giordo Colombo (Burton Law); Lieutenant Giolito (Frank Newberg). Written by Calder Johnstone. Produced by George Cochrane.

Giovano Marro, an old Italian, earns his living as a knife grinder. With him lives his little granddaughter, Santa Marro, a child of about six years of age. They are poor and Santa does all of the housework, helping to eke out an existence by taking in boarders. Among the latter is Giordo Colombo, who is supposedly a day laborer, but who in reality is a member of a blackmailing society which preys upon the rich Italians of the vicinity. The police have been hot on the trail of this gang, but have been unsuccessful in getting a line on them. The head of the Italian detective squad is Lieutenant Giolito, a young man of keen mind and kind heart.

Giordo learns of the retirement from business of a rich Italian and he and his gang plan to blackmail him. He is afraid to write any more letters himself, as the police already have several samples of his handiwork, but have not been able to prove them to be his. He therefore thinks of a scheme to make another write the letters and act as the go-between, and hits upon the idea of making old Giovano do it. When the old man refuses Giordo tells him that he is already an accomplice of the gang in the eyes of the law, as he houses them. Still the old man remains firm, but when Giordo threatens to take him away from little Santa he agrees to write the letter.

It happens one day while Lieutenant Giolito is driving his police automobile through the streets that he knocks little Santa down. He takes her home and meets her grandfather. A friendship springs up between them. Being naturally fond of children, the police officer and the little girl become chums and she frequently visits him at the station house and he often calls upon her and her grandfather. Giordo meantime brings his plans to a head and the blackmailing letter having been sent to the rich merchant, the gang wait for his reply. The merchant goes with the letter to the police and he is referred to Lieutenant Giolito, who advises him to place the money they demand in a package and leave it in the spot they designate, but to mark the bills. This is done and he rests the case in the hands of the police.

Giovano is ordered by the gang to act as the go-between and bring the money back. He goes to the designated spot, finds the package of money, pockets it and starts away when he is arrested by Lieutenant Giolito and his detectives. Giovano admits his part in the crime, but is fearful of the result if he implicates the others and remains silent. He asks one favor, that he may see his little granddaughter. His request is granted and she is sent for. She begs to know why her grandfather is under arrest, but Lieutenant Gioloto tells her she would not understand. She becomes very angry and decries her friend as an enemy. This is too much for the lieutenant and he takes the child in his arms and explains that her grandfather is under arrest as a member of the "Mafia"—a terror known to all Italian children. She asks if it had anything to do with writing a letter and the lieutenant asks her what she means. She tells him that her grandfather did it "cause Giordo made him!"

Questioned further, she tells them that one night she overheard an argument between her grandfather and the Italians in which the old man refused to write a letter for them, and she heard them threaten him. She ran into the room, but was told that it was all a joke, and so she went back to bed. She then asks the lieutenant if the plot also had to do with getting a package of money from under a rock. This is the culminating evidence in favor of the old man and Giolito sends his men for Giordo, who is soon rounded up. Under a severe grilling he tells all he knows and he corroborates what the little girl has said. He is therefore set free as a State's witness. The gang are sent up and little Santa and the police lieutenant remain friends, he seeing to it that the old man and little girl want for nothing.

BISON.

THE GHOST OF THE JUNGLE (Two Parts—June 24).—The cast: Albert DeWitt (Rex de Rosselli); Anna, his daughter (Edythe Sterling); Drake, a hunter (Bud Chase); Egbert (T. D. Crittenden). Written by Allen Watt and Rex de Rosselli. Produced by Jay Hunt.

Albert DeWitt, a South African miner, has a daughter, Anna. Charles Egbert, a young prospector, passes the miner's home and meets Anna. In the course of time Egbert learns through the girl that the old man has quite a score of valuable rough diamonds. Egbert obtains the diamonds and runs away with them and Anna. The father is grief-stricken, and finally goes in search of his daughter.

Egbert and the girl become lost in the jungle. He builds a small hut for temporary shelter for them, for the girl has developed a fever which grows rapidly worse. Egbert, seeing she cannot live, deserts her. After days of horrible suffering, Anna dies.

A year passes. One day, while riding along the road at the foot of a cliff, a hunter and Egbert see what is apparently a wild man poised on the edge of the cliff, in the act of raising a huge rock to hurl down upon him. Just as the rock leaves his hands the ground upon which the wild man is standing gives away and he is pitched forward and falls to the bottom of the cliff. Though unconscious, the man still lives, so Drake picks him up and carries him away to his cabin.

The fall has restored the old man's memory, which for the past few years has been an utter blank. He tells his story to Drake and his partner. It is the story of the elopement of his daughter years ago. Into the face of Drake's partner comes a look of horrified terror as he stares at the face of the old man. We then get a flash of the old man searching for his beloved one. He is seen wandering through the jungle. Darkness overtakes him. Morning dawns. Through Worry and the terrors he has experienced the old man has lost his memory and his reason. The old man makes friends with a baby leopard, which, when grown, shares his prey with the old man, even as the old man shares with the leopard what food he may himself obtain. The old man tells how that day he had been roaming about in search of food, when suddenly far below him he saw a horse and rider. Instinctively he sought to kill them. He was about to hurl a rock down upon them, when—

Here the story fades back to the scene showing the old man lying unconscious at the foot of the cliff, of Drake hastening to aid him and of the old man regaining consciousness. As the old man finishes his story Egbert is seen to start with a look of guilty fear. Drake busies himself with the old man, while Egbert, casting fearful glances toward the old man, steals over to the corner of the room and reaches out his hand for the bag of diamonds in their hiding place. But just as he is about to touch it a vision fades in, showing Anna, the poor, deserted sick girl, dying of fever and thirst on the rude bed in the jungle hut. The vision fades away, leaving Egbert faint and sick with horror.

When the story is all told the old man lies back on the bed, weak and exhausted. As he lies there, there fades in a vision of Mary's spirit as it appeared when leaving her body in the little hut. She reaches out her arms toward her father and he weakly holds out his arms to her; then he dies. As he dies, his spirit is seen to leave his body and float toward the spirit of Anna.

Meanwhile the old man's pet leopard strikes a scent. He follows the trail down the hill; stops at the foot of the cliff where the old man had lain and finally goes to the cabin where Drake carried the old man, and then into the room where the still form is lying on the bed. The leopard jumps up onto the bed and lies down beside the body of his old comrade and friend.

Egbert leaves the cabin and stumbles aimlessly along. In the path ahead of him there appears the vision of Anna's spirit, seeming to lead him ever on and on. He comes to a stream and gets into a canoe which is lying near the shore. As he drifts idly down the stream, the spirit of Anna can be seen floating slowly ahead of him, leading him on. A scene fades in showing a waterfall, with ragged rocks below. Then it fades out and again is shown a scene on the stream, with Egbert drifting silently and aimlessly along in the little canoe. Next morning, with the break of dawn, an upturned canoe is found on the rocks below the waterfall, and with this scene the picture closes.

"THE SCARLET MARK" (Two Parts—June 21). The cast: Alison Reeves and Wanda Travers (Mary Fuller); Mrs. Vandergrift (Mrs. J. H. Brundage); Tom Moore (Antonio Merlo); Marcen (Joseph W. Girard); Jimmy (Matty Rupert). Adapted by Catherine Carr. Produced by Lucius J. Henderson.

Alison Reeves, a young heiress, is engaged to Tom Moore. In a luxuriously furnished partment two crooks, Marcen and Jakel, read in a newspaper an announcement that Miss Alison Reeves has retired from society owing to the death of her father. The article is accompanied by a picture of Miss Reeves, and the two crooks are impressed with its striking resemblance to Wanda, who is seated in another part of the room. In looking over the paper Marcen discovers an advertisement for a maid at the same address and he concocts a scheme to rob the Reeves establishment by having Wanda apply for the position. She secures the position.

Jimmy, a product of the slums, steals a bag of peanuts from a pushcart and, being pursued by a policeman, finds refuge upon the roof of an apartment next door to the residence of the Reeves family. Afraid of capture, Jimmy decides to remain in the safety zone and falls asleep. Next we see Mrs. Vandergrift, Alison's aunt, placing a pearl necklace, given her by her niece, under her pillow before retiring for the night. Jimmy awakens on the roof and in descending the fire escape he sees Wanda, who has been given permission to leave until the next morning, enter Mrs. Vandergrift's bedroom. He notes that Wanda removes the pearl necklace from under the pillow and also catches a glimpse of the scar on her forearm. Then he sees her take a handkerchief with the initial "W" plainly marked on it and drop it beside the bed. She then chloroforms Miss Reeves, and has Marcen and Jakel take the helpless heiress to an old hag in an East Side tenement house. The following morning the robbery in the Reeves household is attributed to the maid, who has disappeared, owing to the discovery of a handkerchief with the intial "W" marked in the corner.

Wanda, who is now impersonating Alison, declares that she is positive of the maid's guilt. She succeeds in deceiving Mrs. Vandergrift, but Alison's pet dog, Toto, growls at her and indicates that he, at least has not been deceived. Wanda, fearing the dog may eventually betray her, requests that Mrs. Vandergrift remove Toto. Presently Marcen arrives and Wanda explains that he is a new acquaintance. When they are alone Marcen questions Wanda as to her success. She gives him an assortment of jewelry she has stolen, which he hides under his coat as they hear some one coming. Tom is ushered in and Wanda's face is a blank as she doesn't know Alison's fiance, but she has sense enough to greet him cordially.

Marcen leaves and manifests jealousy as he looks back through the portieres and sees Wanda clasped in Tom's arms. After Tom's departure Marcen returns and accuses Wanda of being in love with Tom. Tom returns for his gloves and comes upon them just as Marcen is kissing Wanda. Tom accuses her of faithlessness and demands the return of their engagement ring. Professing to be too overcome to get the ring at once, Wanda promises to let him have it if he will return later, and Tom leaves in indignation. Wanda tells Marcen that the situation is growing serious as the ring is in Alison's safe, and that he must get the combination for her at once.

At the Childrens' Court, Jimmy is held for truancy and petty larceny and Tom, having offered to serve as a "big brother," is appointed to look after him. Jimmy takes Tom to the tenement house where he lives, which happens to be the very house where Alison is being held captive. Jimmy explains to his mother who Tom is and shows her a new suit that Tom has bought for him. Marcen enters the room in the tenement, where Alison is held. He dismisses the old hag in charge of the captive and demands of Alison the combination of the safe. She refuses and while his gaze is distracted she escapes through the window and happens to run into Jimmy's room, where she sees Tom. When Marcen follows her through the window he and Tom confront each other in amazement. Marcen insists that the girl is Miss Reeves' maid who stole the pearl necklace, and that he has just succeeded in trapping her. Jimmy tells about the scar on the maid's arm that he saw from the fire escape, and Alison, to prove that she is not the maid, bares her arms.

Later at the Reeves household they take Wanda by surprise, where Tom, after a while, draws the portieres aside. Then Alison enters and Wanda realizes that the game is up. She is placed under arrest. Thus the game, played for high stakes, terminates fatally for the crooks, for after their conviction, Marcen and Jakel are seen in prison clothes at work at the bench and elsewhere in the prison Wanda is scrubbing the floor. Tom places the engagement ring upon Alison's finger as the picture fades out.

THE ROSARY (June 23).—The opening scene shows a soldier holding a string of pearls with a cross in the center. As he kisses the cross the words of the song appear on the screen:

"The hours I spent with thee, dear heart,
Are as a string of pearls to me;
I count them over, every one apart,
My rosary, my rosary."

The soldier is seen bidding good-bye to his sweetheart. For the last time they embrace. The girl's mother weeps as she sees the stalwart youth leaving for the front. As the young officer mounts his horse and rides away the girl falls in a faint to the ground.

Again the words of the song appear among the leaves the trees above her:

"Each hour a pearl, each pearl a prayer,
To still a heart in absence wrung,
I tell each bead unto the end,
And there a cross is hung."

The months pass. The soldier is seen now at the campfire and now in battle. Always there appears before him the face of the girl he loves. And then one day he is wounded and taken to the hospital. The girl hears that he has been killed and, grief-stricken, she enters the convent. But her soldier sweetheart finally recovers after long months of fever and delirium. And when the war ends he returns—to find that the one he loved best has taken irrevocable religious vows.

THE FALL OF DEACON STILLWATERS (June 24).—The cast: Deacon Stillwaters (William Franey); Miss Crobar (Gale Henry); Elsie (Lillian Peacock); Jess McDuffy (Charles Conklin); McDonald (Milburn Moranti). Written by A. E. Bishop. Produced by Allen Curtis.

The Anti-Sin League elect Deacon Stillwaters as president. When the league learns of the disgraceful illegal prize fights that are going on they decide to take the matter into their own hands and appoint their honorable president to put a stop to the shameful outrages. Deacon Stillwaters is forced to go to Ramany Hall, where these terrible fights are held. There the deacon is received with a hearty and cordial welcome and finds Jess McDuffy, the champion a princely fellow. It is not long before he has the deacon interested in all the technicalities of the great science of prize fighting. And so enthused becomes the deacon that he is finally induced to get in the ring himself.

But it so happens that on this very night the police raid Ramany Hall. Many are caught, but the deacon, minus his coat and shirt, is among those who escape and take refuge in McGuire's cafe, one of the toughest joints in town and a place noted for its spicy cabaret girls. Now it also happens that on this same night Miss Crobar and other ladies of the Anti-Sin League have started a reform movement for chorus girls, and begin with the girls at McGuire's cafe. They are at this time waiting in the girls' dressing room for the girls to finish their wootchie-goo-wootch dance.

Elsie, the prettiest of the carbaret girls, greatly admires Stillwaters, for she adores prize fighters. She protects him from the police and the two become the best of friends. When Miss Crobar sees the deacon at McGuire's she thinks he has come to protect her, but she soon learns the horrible truth and hurries off in mortal agony from such vile people. The A. S. L. break up for want of encouragement and a president. Their once beloved president now becomes a regular fellow and is already planning his honeymoon with Elsie.

THE JAILBIRDS' LAST FLIGHT (June 21).—The cast: Jailbirds (Bill Armstrong and Gene Rogers); the Little Cop (Lucille Hutton); the Girl (Carmel Myers).

The two old flirts flirted just once too often, as is always the case. They did not know that the city wherein they dwelt employed female police and ran afoul one of them, a beauty. Of course, they quarreled over her. You could not blame them, for she was a beauty and seemed such easy prey.

Bill got the better of the argument to start with, but Gene called a real cop and falsified by stating that it was his sister that Bill was annoying and had him pinched. The judge was not feeling very well that morning and gave Bill five years for annoying the school children.

Gene, left alone on the field, thought he was having a great time flirting with the little girl. But all the time she was leading him into a trap. Gene, poor old man that he was, followed her headlong right into the police station, where he was nabbed and sentenced to a long term. He was shoved into the flirts' cell with Bill.

Right there the cops did wrong, for they fought like two wildcats. Bill was shoved through the wall and into the station, where the cops were playing cards. This angered them so they started in to administer a severe drubbing to Bill. In the mixup Bill got away and ran into the arsenal, where he lighted a cigarette and blew up the place.

DIRTY WORK IN A BEANERY (June 25).—The cast: The Head Waiter (Reggie Morris); the Chef (Dave Morris); the Boss (Gene Rogers); the Cashier (Gertie Selby).

The boss should have known better than to hire a pretty little maid for cashier and maintain two amorous Frenchmen under the same roof, but he did that very thing and thereby hangs a tale. The handsome head waiter loved her, and bought her flowers and fruit. The chef, who was jealous of the waiter, ate the fruit and deposited his own card amidst the beautiful flowers.

This caused a little trouble and the boss arrived just in time to get into the fray and receive a few missles on his bean. The chef was given a drubbing and sent along about his duties. But being of a warm-blooded nature, the drubbing stuck in his craw and he swore vengeance. When the boss ordered a nice steak for the fair cashier the chef thought he would get even by poisoning the steak, not knowing that it was for the cashier. There was some commotion when it was found that the fair cashier had received the steak. But she was saved from a horrible death by the timely action of the head waiter.

GOLD SEAL.

THE FALSE PART (Two parts—June 20).—The cast: Herbert Rawlinson (By Himself); Dorothy Moore (Agnes Vernon); Mrs. Moore (Mrs. Ethel Clark); J. Kenneth Simpson (Jack Holt). Scenario by Jack Wells and Pliny Horne. Produced by William Worthington.

This story deals with moving picture life, much of the locale being around Universal City. Herbert Rawlinson, played by himself, is introduced in his dressing room and is shown later doing the usual day's work on the stage. One of his many admirers, with her mother, visits the studio on this particular day. And, in her tour of the grounds, finds Rawlinson's set, where her admiration for her favorite is shown. Rawlinson also is impressed with the young lady.

Later the mother, becoming suspicious, happens on a photograph of Rawlinson in the daughter's desk and through worry over her daughter's infatuation chances a phone call to Rawlinson, which results in an agreement between the two to disillusionize the daughter. A plan is agreed upon and Rawlinson is to dine with the Moore family the following day. This takes place and Rawlinson on his arrival at the Moore home is greatly surprised to find the girl who so impressed him at the studio the day before.

Nevertheless he is forced by his agreement to carry out his idea and through ill manners,

WANTED—A HUSBAND (June 19).—The cast: The Husband (Joe Janecke); the Wife (Betty Compson); Lawyer (Neal Burns); His Girl (Ethel Lynn); the Uncle (Harry Rattenberry). Written by Al. E. Christie. Produced by Horace Davey.

The young husband is called from the city on business for a month. While he is gone Uncle telegraphs his niece, the wife, that he is visiting a certain hotel at the beach, where he wishes her to bring her husband, and if she meets with the uncle's approval he will leave them his entire fortune. If not he will cut her off. The wife is desperate, as she is anxious to secure the money. She decides to consult with her lawyer.

With offices adjoining the wife's lawyer is a young lawyer who has never had any clients. He has a sweetheart, but her mother refuses to consent to their marriage because he never has earned any money. When the wife finds that her attorney is out of town for a couple of weeks she talks to the young lawyer, explains the situation to him and finally secures his promise to act as the husband. He accordingly tells his sweetheart that he must go out of town for a few days, which does not meet with her approval, especially after some lady friend tells her that she has seen her sweetheart with another woman.

The wife and lawyer arrive at the hotel, meet the uncle, who is favorably impressed, and everything is working out nicely, although the lawyer is quite nervous. The girl, very much broken up over the lawyer's departure, decides to go to the beach with her mother and put up at the same hotel where the uncle and the others are stopping. The girl sees her sweetheart with the other woman, hears the uncle speak of him as the woman's husband and is nearly heart-broken.

Meanwhile the husband has been ordered home and finds the telegram. He immediately sets off for the beach. There is a grand scramble when all parties get together, the husband starting to shoot the young lawyer. After a long chase and much excitement the parties all get together, explanations follow and everything ends happily.

WHAT COULD THE POOR GIRL DO? (Two parts—June 23).—The cast: Jed (Eddie Lyons); Father (Harry Rattenberry); Mother (Stella Adams); Clarice (Billie Rhodes); Diamond Jack (Ed. Burns); Jerry (Lee Moran). Directed by Eddie Lyons.

Jed and his father and mother live on the farm. Father lets mother do all the work. She is busy churning one day when the churn wears out and Jed is sent by his father for a new churn. On the way he meets Clarice, the safe cracker, who has decided to give up her past life and seek honest employment. She tells her story to Jed and he takes her home with him. Mother puts her to work churning and it is not long before father and mother notice that Jed is becoming quite attached to the girl. In fact, they discover him in the act of giving her a ring.

The gang with whom Clarice had worked have decided to rob a safe and Diamond Dick, the leader, wants Clarice to help with the job, but the men return with the note saying that she is through with that kind of life. Jack sends the men to look for her. Jerry, known as the "Dirty Worker," who is addicted to the use of heliotrope perfume, and Jack finally discover Clarice at the farm house and tell her she must return with them. She begs for a few moments in which to decide. Meanwhile Jed has been again sent for the churn and has met the two crooks in their hansom cab. Jerry sprinkles some perfume on Jed. Father has become incensed at Jed's attentions to the girl and tells her she must leave. Jed overhears this and says he will go, too, which causes quite a commotion in the family circle.

As Clarice is preparing to leave the two crooks throw a blanket over her head and take her to the hansom cab. Jed pursues them in his auto, but they manage to elude him and by force take Clarice to the vault, compelling her to open the safe. This she finally does, but locks Jack in the vault. Jed has been captured by the band, bound with ropes and left with the box of dynamite in charge of one of the crooks. He manages to free himself after a battle with the crooks, dons his clothes and starts once more in pursuit of Clarice and arrives just in time to frighten the crooks away. Later, however, they capture both him and Clarice, take her back to the vault, compel her to open it, take the money and then lock Jed in the safe.

The gang take the money and Clarice to their rooms and there determine to brand Clarice. Meanwhile Jed is trying to escape from the vault. He finally lights the fuse of the dynamite, blows open the safe and makes his escape. He gets the police and they arrive just in time to prevent Clarice being branded and the crooks are captured. The bank rewards Jed and Clarice and they return to the "cows and chickens."

THE YOUNG SLEUTHS (June 22).—Frank is an inveterate reader of dime novels. The adventures of "Old Sleuth" afford him the greatest entertainment, and he often reads aloud to his sister, Irma. One morning, while Frank, Irma and the dog are enjoying the latest adventures of "Old Sleuth" mother calls and tells Frank and Irma to go to the store.

Frank puts down his novel with reluctance. On the way to the store Frank and Irma witness a daring bank robbery. They see the thief, with a mask over his face, backing out of the bank and then the cashier runs out with revolver in hand to notify the police. Frank and Irma hear the cashier tell the policeman the details of the robbery and they thereupon determine to capture the thief by following "Old Sleuth's" methods.

Irma cuts some hair from the dog's tail and disguises Frank with a moustache. While they are scouting around back alleys Frank sees the thief and he and Irma trail him into a cellar. Irma runs for a cop while Frank keeps watch. The cop catches the thief, but the latter's wife drives the cop off after she has turned over the money to him.

Later the crook sees the cop drinking and, bumping into him, manages to snatch back the packet of money. Then follows a merry chase, the crook finally escaping by jumping a fence. Irma and Frank are on the other side and both are much surprised when they see a hand poked under the fence with a roll of money in it. Frank grabs the money and takes it to his mother.

Meanwhile the cop sees the thief, and, jumping over the fence, subdues him. The crook points to the spot where he hid the money and is astounded when he finds it gone. Frank's mother comes up at this point, however, and returns the money to the officer. Next day Frank's mother receives a letter from the City National Bank enclosing $25 as a slight token of their appreciation of the service rendered by her children.

REAL ESTATERS (June 12).—The cast: Oscar (Claude Cooper); Conrad (Frank E. McNish); His Wife (Louise Emerald Bates); Real Estate Agent (Morgan Jones).

Oscar and Conrad had no intention of becoming "Real Estaters" when they strolled down the street, but a bright agent saw them and before they knew it they were owners of adjoining lots in "Beautiful Seaweed." And with the deeds went a guarantee that the land was "within two minutes of the railroad station," and that "there was running water on the premises," the agent agreeing to take back the purchase if he did not make good on these two points. When the buyers found that Seaweed was twenty-five miles from Flop Siding, the nearest railroad point, they objected, but the agent took them down there, and then drove them to the land in a racing auto within the time limit, although he had to break all the speed laws to do it. Then he showed them their lots, which were out beyond low-water mark. There was running water, all right, for water ran all over the place. Naturally Oscar and Conrad thrashed the agent, and then took him to court, but as he had made good on his promises the judge had to let him go, although he promised the complainants to "soak him" any time they could bring a legal action against him.

Fortunately for the victims, Conrad's wife was a woman of resource. She made the acquaintance of the real estate sharp, and in a few days induced him to go sailing with her. The boat was conveniently wrecked off Seaweed, and the woman aided the agent to shore, for he could not swim. She landed him on Conrad's "lot," but the owner was there and threatened to have him arrested as a trespasser. The like fate met them at Oscar's "land," and the agent saw a watery grave on one side and prison on the other. At the suggestion of the woman he bought back the property at a substantial advance, and then was surprised to see that his companion was going away with Oscar and Conrad. He questioned her, and was shocked when she replied: "I am going with my husband to help him spend that money." Then for the first time the sharper realized that he had been defeated at his own game and by a woman at that.

DOUGHNUTS (Conductor 786) (June 17).—The cast: Conductor 786 (Riley Chamberlin); His Wife (Gladys Leslie); Her Mother (Frances Keyes); Thief (Walter Hiers).

Conductor 786 is gifted with contentment and a dog. He succeeds in obtaining a vacation which he spends on the beach, where he makes the acquaintance of Dora and her mother, who accompany him to the hotel, where during his absence the landlord has hung out a sign which reads: "Henceforth No Dogs Will Be Permitted on Premises." He immediately strikes up a quarrel with the landlord, insisting that either his dog get in or his things come out. The landlord obliges him by throwing out his trunk through the window. At the suggestion of Dora's mother to get married, he immediately proposes to Dora, who accepts him. It is not long before they are married.

Dora is anything but a cook, and resorts to the cook book for advice. Conductor 786 breaks his teeth over her doughnuts, but forces down his meal in order not to hurt her feelings. A few weeks of this regime and Conductor 786 becomes sick. His pulse is abnormal and his tongue whiter than chalk. He decides that his is a case for the doctor. To the doctor he goes. Dora is too wise to eat her own cooking. She hands her portion to the dog, while she goes to a restaurant to enjoy a hearty meal. The dog no sooner finishes his share than he sets up a dismal howl and slinks off to the hospital for cats and dogs.

Conductor 786 in the meantime reaches the office of Dr. I. M. Sickening, but gets cold feet at the door. He is encouraged, however, by seeking a patient who is evidently bristling with health exit into the doctor's office. He decides to wait his turn on the stoop. A few moments later aforesaid patient issues from the office, all bandaged up, and limping along on crutches. Conductor 786 is about to make himself scarce when the doctor gets hold of him and forces him into his office. There he stretches him out on a block the sides of which are decorated with carpenter's tools, and after thumping him up, declares indifferently that his case was fatal but exceedingly interesting. He then mixes him a potion composed of three different kinds of poison and inserts a cherry in it for appetite's sake and a straw to facilitate absorption.

The Conductor watches the doctor make preparations to transfer him into the Life Hereafter, then decides that he is not as far gone as all that and dives head foremost through the window. He makes for home, where he tests his temperature by inserting a wall thermometer into his mouth. When he discovers that he has 107 degrees, he concludes that he is as good as dead and collapses on his bed. There he has a terrible dream. He sees himself at the gate of Heaven, to all intents and purposes as sweet an angel as ever was. Unfortunately, St. Peter is at the gate, and he insists that the conductor's ticket was good only for the subway. The devil, who has the doctor's face, immediately pounces upon him and insists on his taking the medicine in hell, which he has refused on earth. A struggle ensues in the course of which the Conductor awakes to find himself at sixes and sevens with the pillows. At this moment his wife rushes into the room with the news that a thief has invaded the kitchen. The Conductor goes forth to capture him, but finds the thief rendered absolutely helpless by the food he had taken from the pantry. An ambulance arrives to convey both the Conductor and the thief to the hospital, where they are placed in beds side by side.

Ultimately they, as well as the dog, recover. The thief is arrested, just as he is about to leave the hospital. Conductor 786 and his dog quit their respective sick beds and leave for home. They meet on the stoop, and there ensues a touching scene of reunion. Wifey is overjoyed at his return and makes him sit down at the dining table to partake of a celebration dinner. He and his dog try to make a get-away before it is too late, but are met at the door by a ponderous negress carrying savory dishes on her arms. It is the new cook wifey has engaged during his illness.

BEAUTY

PEDIGREES, PUPS AND PUSSIES (June 18).—The cast: Father (Orral Humphrey); Shapely (Lucille Ward); Mike (Joe Massey).

Father's rest is a sad affair. Cats and more of them habitate the back fence, and old boots, shoes and shoe brushes do not seem to keep them away. Even six shots from a revolver only move them for a bare instant, so father ties a pillow about his ears and endeavors to sleep in spite of meows. In the morning he is very irritable and his daughter, Shapely, inquires the cause. Father tells her the story and she persists in laughing. He reads the paper and comes across the advertisement of a dog fancier who lauds the watchful prowess of his canine wonders. Father decides to pay him a call.

Shapely, while trying to recover father's boots and other cat munition, kicks the ladder out from under her and is marooned on the roof. Mike, her lineman lover, working nearby on a pole, is called into play and rescues her. As a reward for his help she allows him to hold her hand and whisper sweet nothings.

Father has purchased a ferocious-looking bull pup with a long and loud pedigree. Father really purchased the pedigree and fondly reads it as he wanders homeward. Mike sees him coming and bids a hasty adieu to Shapely. Father arrives and shows her the dog and the pedigree, now certain that his rest will be undisturbed.

Later, realizing that a pedigreed dog should have a pedigreed master, father procures a "family tree" which becomes his delight. He drills Shapely in the history of her ancestors, but her mind runs to romance and not to lineage. She steals away and meets Mike. Mike has made friends with a wandering pup and fondly displays his find. Father, while looking for Shapely, discovers his pedigreed pup sound asleep, and his loud yelling will not awaken him. Then he sees Mike and interrupts his daughter's love affair. He firmly informs Mike that Shapely is of royal lineage and must not marry a commoner.

But things change, and that evening while father is admiring his family tree Morpheus bids him go to slumber, so he takes himself to his couch. Shapely lets Mike into the house, and Mike's little pup is also a welcome visitor. Shapely shows Mike the family tree and therein Mike discovers a pasted page telling of one of father's ancestors, one Robin Dair, who was hanged for horse stealing. And while they wonder, father is awakened by the piercing cries of many cats on the back roof, and gazing down into the yard sees his pedigreed pup still soundly sleeping. Father angrily rushes out and discovers Shapely and Mike together. But Mike's dog barks [illegible] at the cats, so father turns him loose. The dog gleefully rids the back roof of felines and father is expressive in his joy. Mike sees the opportunity for a killing and springs his request for Shapely's hand. Father again explains the matter of lineage, but when Mike hints that something on father's family tree is not very complimentary to his family, father looks about in wonder.

When father discovers the sad tidings he destroys his proof of lineage and gives his consent to the eager Mike, being content in having a dog in the family who is "on the job" and capable of coping with cats.

into the woods to drink the nectar from the babbling brook.

Likewise, when artists have their troubles and have not the money to see them through, they, too, stroll into the woods, there to find inspiration. This artist's party is surely in trouble as is evidenced by the few sandwiches and other things they carry. But the Lone Man in the party—there are three girls and himself—is the Jester of Joy and insists that they make the best of their worries. So the party breaks up to select locations for the sketchy tendencies. Nonette, the prettiest of the party, selects a lovable nook in the fastness of the shrubbery, and here she idly sketches and dreams. She is a pretty picture herself—with easel and brush posed in strict artist fashion—and this is the picture Van Deusen sees. He makes the fair one's acquaintance. But the Lone Man also has an interest in Nonette, and when he sees her listening to the chatter of the corpulent personage, his heart-strings tighten and he resolves to stop the fickle flirtation. But Nonette stops him with a hastily sketched note and the Lone Man reads the note and laughs, for he realizes that Nonette has an eye for business and her subterfuge is cultivating for them a client.

The Lone Man and the other girls stroll in on Van Deusen and Nonette. Introductions follow and the party sits down to luncheon. Billy notices the evident absence of goodies and realizes that the party must be in need of funds. Billy's sympathy gets the best of him and he gives a deposit on Nonette's sketch of the beautiful sunset. True, Billy's heart flutters a little when he gives Nonette his card and tells her that he will be pleased to hear from her.

Nonette and her friends arrive home, are accosted by the hard-hearted landlord who insists that they pay their rent or get out. So Billy's deposit goes to the landlord's pocket and the party is no better off than before. Realizing, however, that they can procure money from Van Deusen as soon as the sunset is finished, they all hastily work on it. They discover that there is no yellow paint with which to paint the sun and force in the yolk of an egg with a little chocolate for darkness. The sun is quickly painted and Van Deusen informed that his masterpiece is finished. To make things more realistic, Nonette is reclining on a couch when Van Deusen arrives, and her friends inform him that it is the result of over-work on the Sunset picture. Billy is sorry and pays many, many times the value of the picture, and leaves sadly but intent on righting the wrong.

He no sooner leaves the studio than everything is suppplanted with life. Billy arrives home, places his picture on a chair and goes to unburden himself to his friend next door. While he is being refreshed, his cat admiring the sunset, sniffs the sweet scent over the mountains and proceeds to lick the picture into shape. When Billy arrives home with his friend he cannot explain the disappearance of the sun, so he goes to the studio.

He arrives in the midst of the feasting and staggers as he sees Nonette on the Lone Man's lap. Billy loudly acclaims the fact that she has broken his heart, and likewise his pocketbook. But Nonete informs him that he had no call upon her inasmuch as the Lone Man was her poor artist husband, and her little scheme their salvation that they might continue to linger in Bohemia. Billy was flabbergasted and about to leave, but one of the little artist maids bids him linger, while the other captures his friend. Billy being a bit of a Bohemian himself, merely called it an "egg-spensive adventure" and lingers.

THANHOUSER

BROTHERS EQUAL (Two parts—June 13).—The cast: The Girl (Barbara Gilroy); Son of Retired Trader (Robert Vaughn); Another Son—Fisherman—(Thomas A. Curran); His Sweetheart (Gladys Dore); Retired Trader (Arthur Bauer).

Heartbroken at the death of his wife, the retired trader left his infant son in the care of relatives and returned to the sea ventures of his early life to seek solace in excitement and hazard. He never returned to his son in the North; he died in a remote land, whence word of his death was later sent to his executor in the United States.

The son grew to manhood and took up the cause of socialism. To practice his theories of "Brothers Equal in the Sight of God and Man," he bought an island in the tropics and, accompanied by his fiancee and her family, visited the beautiful spot.

Arrived at the island, the Socialist and his fiancee were delighted with the socialistic material they found in the native colored population, and here at once the socialist began to preach his doctrine. Meantime the sister of his fiancee encountered romance, for she was rescued from drowning by a handsome fisherman of the island.

The fisherman, however, was discovered to be the half-brother of the socialist, for it was to this island the trader had come on his ventures, had taken a native wife, and had died, leaving here also a son. But this son was a half-breed, and as such was no mate for the dainty Northern girl.

In the tropics love is elementary; the socialist soon found that in trying to restrain the fisherman's passion for the girl he had undertaken a tremendous task. He was staggered, too, by the fisherman's bitter statement that his own vaunted "Brothers Equal" was but a slogan and had no depth to reach a brother who was a black man.

The socialist staunchly stood by his principles so far as he was able. He made preparations to divide his estate with this other son of his father, but he made it a condition that the fisherman go away without again seeing the girl. The fisherman broke his promise and was discovered on the eve of eloping. To save them from such a union the socialist told the girl the bitter truth about her lover's parentage. Horrified, the girl repudiated her lover. Desperate at this, the fisherman attacked the socialist, but his onslaught was interrupted by an alarm of fire.

The fisherman rushed to the scene of the fire. There he gave his own life in exchange for that of his mother, whom he rescued from the flames. Dying, he turned his eyes on the socialist and asked to be remembered only as a "Brother Equal."

GAUMONT

THE CRIMINAL'S THUMB (Three parts—June 22).—The cast: John Denham (Alexander Gaden); Claire Kenwood (Lucille Taft); Robert Royce (John Reinhard); Kara Dalton (Iva Shepard); David Reed (Charles W. Travis); Tom Carroll (Henry W. Pemberton); Louise Darnton (Louise Byrd); Maggie (Matilde Baring); Joe Short (James Levering). Written by Lionel Barrymore and Wright Huntington. Directed by Edwin Middleton.

Seeing that her employer is falling in love with her, Claire Kenwood, a stenographer in the law office of John Denham, resigns. She is in love with Robert Royce, a rather weak young man who works for David Reed. Unfortunately for Claire, Royce is under the influence of Kara Dalton, an adventuress who is a cabaret singer. Kara finds it profitable to stand in with Tom Carroll, a gambler who wields some power in the underworld. Carroll has a spatulate thumb on one hand, differing from that on the other. This is recognized by criminologists as the "murderer's thumb." Medical authorities estimate that only one person in one hundred thousand has such a thumb. The bearer is a marked man.

Things go from bad to worse with Royce. Kara is getting all his money and continually demanding more. While with her one day, he drops a letter announcing that a wealthy customer, John Brewster, is coming to meet Mr. Reed. Kara turns the letter over to Carroll. As it says Brewster has never met Reed, Carroll decides that he will impersonate the customer in the hope that he can profit by the deception.

Just before Carroll appears at Reed's office, Royce robs the safe. The door of the safe happens to be open when Carroll calls after office hours. Reed catches him at it, and is astonished that his customer, Mr. Brewster, should be going through his strong box. Seeing that he has been detected, the gambler grapples with the aged merchant. The shock is too much for Mr. Reed. He succumbs to heart disease. Carroll takes what little money is left in the safe and gets safely away.

Royce is suspected. Despite the fact that Denham believes Royce had a hand in what the police believe to be a murder, the lawyer looks after the case for him because of his love for Claire. He even gets the money Royce had taken, and places it where there can be no suspicion of Royce's theft. The clerk, however, is arrested. Denham is able to show that the thumb marks on the lawyer's collar are not those of his client. It is then that suspicion points toward the owner of the spatulate thumb. Through Denham's efforts Royce is acquitted at the trial, and Carroll is brought to justice.

During all the trouble which the weak youth had brought on himself, Claire has been drawing closer and closer to Denham. At last she must choose between the two. Her first love has been weak, yet she feels that his experience and her love has now given him strength. She sorrowfully refuses the lawyer, to marry the man she can help.

CUB.

JERRY'S ELOPEMENT (June 23).—The cast: Jerry (George Ovey); Count (George George); Father (Jefferson Osborne); Mother (Janet Sully); Daughter (Claire Alexander); Sergeant (Louis FitzRoy); First Cop (Harry Jackson); Second Cop (Gordon MacGregor); First Henchman (Arthur Mund); Second Henchman (Ray Lincoln); First Butler (Robert Kenyon); Second Butler (Louis FitzRoy). Directed by Milton H. Fahrney.

Jerry, without position or wealth, finds an obstacle in his efforts to win the hand of a pretty daughter of a land owner, in the person of a French Count. The girl favors Jerry, but her father, to better his position in society, insists that she accept the Frenchman. Jerry is pleading his love when the nobleman arrives. Fearing the wrath of her father, the girl receives the foreigner.

Jerry argues with the Frenchman and the latter challenges him to fight, after slapping Jerry's face with his gloves and pulling his nose. The father is attracted by the noise of battle, and when Jerry sees the old man coming, he beats a retreat, followed by the girl. That night Jerry plants himself outside of the old man's home, writes a note, ties it to a brick and throws it through an open window. The brick strikes the father and lays him low.

The girl obtains and reads the note, which suggests they elope. She hurriedly prepares to escape from the house and join Jerry. The Count unexpectedly arrives on the scene, accompanied by two henchmen. They detect Jerry waiting and as the girl comes out to meet him, she is made a captive by the Count and his henchmen, who throw a robe over her head and carry her off. Jerry follows the abductors.

In the meantime the father has regained consciousness. He telephones the police and a search is made for the girl and Jerry. The girl has been carried to a lonely house and cast into a deserted room, to which Jerry later gains an entrance. He is discovered by the henchmen and the Count and is lured to a position over a trap door. While he is talking with the Count the trap is sprung. Jerry lands in the cellar below.

The police arrive at the house and one by one they are sent below to join Jerry. Jerry gains the confidence of the cops and they plan to get upstairs to save the girl and to capture the Count and his henchmen. They make their escape from the cellar and surprise the party upstairs. Just then the father arrives and Jerry is tempted to send him through the trap door but on second consideration decides to lead the father to his daughter and thereby gain his favor.

The reunion takes place and the police are about to depart when the Count again appears. Jerry springs the trap and the Count and his henchmen disappear. The father, realizing that the Count is of no account, turns to Jerry and places the hand of his daughter in that of her persistent suitor. Then the trio depart for the minister's house, while the Count and his henchmen are placed under arrest.

CENTAUR.

A SIREN OF THE JUNGLE (Two Parts—June 24).—The cast: Vida (Margaret Gibson); John Cameron (William Clifford); Jan Smitd, Vida's father (Frederick Montague); Tom Long (Claude Lampman); Jim Langdon (Harrish Ingraham). Directed by Charles Swickard.

Vida is the daughter of a Boer inn keeper; she is a siren and plays havoc with the hearts of the diamond miners, and others who frequent her father's tavern. She has scorned the advances of Tom Long, who, heart-broken, kills himself. His partner, John Cameron, a trapper of wild animals, is returning to the camp with his catch. Vida is warned not to tamper with him, as he has a rather bad record, having killed several men.

This information but inflames her coquettish heart, and when John Cameron, furious at learning of the death of his friend, comes to the inn to berate her, she immediately practices her wiles to capture him. Cameron resists her fascination successfully for some time, but soon is a slave to her wiles. He soon admits himself conquered, but warns her at the risk of her life not to trifle with him. Vida is mastered for the first time as Cameron has made her fear him.

Jim comes to the camp and Vida's fickle heart is finally awakened, and she finds herself in love. She persuades Jim to take her far away from her present surroundings, fearing that Cameron will kill her on his return from the hunt, finding her faithless to him. Jim Langdon takes her through the forest to a distant jungle. Here they live happily for three years, Vida becoming a noble woman devoted to her husband and her little child.

Cameron on finding Vida gone, allows every vicious instinct to dominate him and swears vengeance, but through the years that pass, his search for her has been unsuccessful. When on a trapping expedition in the interior, he encounters Vida's daughter, who has wandered from the house, and by a well-directed shot saves the child from an onrushing lion. Returning through the forest with the child, he meets Vida's husband frantically searching for his baby. Not knowing Jim and returning to the cabin with him, he sees through the window of the cabin Vida, praying at the empty crib of her child.

The old hatred is still in his heart and slowly he raises his rifle intent on carrying out his vow, but at this moment Vida takes the baby from her husband's arms and it forms a shield for her heart. When Jim and Vida leave the cabin to find and thank the savior of their baby, he is gone, and Vida never knows that her nemesis has passed.

MUSTANG.

THE SHERIFF OF PLUMAS (Two Parts—June 16).—The cast: Jess Martin (Charles Newton); Roy, His Son (William Stowell); Homes (Harvey Clark); Jim (Harry McCabe); White (Burr Ritchie); Eason (Ashton Dearholt); Mrs. Martin (Madeline Fordyce); May (Helen Rosson). Scenario written by Karl Coolidge. Directed by Warren Ellsworth.

Once known as a desperate safe cracker, Jess Martin has spent twenty years of reformation in the West and has become the sheriff of Plumas. He has a son, Roy, and it is the ambition of Martin and his wife that their son obtain a college education. Later they place the proposition before Roy, and he enthuses over the idea, especially as May agrees to wait for him until the four years of college are over.

But at the college Roy falls in with a fast set and, due to poker games, is soon deeply in debt. While at home his father and mother undergo every sacrifice for him. Roy's roommate is a student of criminology, and from him Roy learns something of the methods of detection by thumb prints. His poker debts also increase, and he is forced to write home for money, stating that he finds it necessary to take up a special law course, which is very expensive. By this time Martin's resources are deeply drained, and he is at a loss to figure where he can get the money. Mrs. Martin pleads with him, and he agrees to get the necessary funds somewhere.

The deputy sheriff brings in a tramp, and Martin recognizes the man to be a pal of his crook days. The tramp, Homes, forces Martin to release him. That night Martin enters the general merchandise store and has the safe opened when Homes, also out for robbing, enters. Homes forces Martin to divide the spoils with him, and more than ever Homes has a hold on him. At college Roy receives the money and also a letter from his mother stating how they are sacrificing for him. He is brought to his senses, and, packing up, hurriedly leaves for home. To his father he tells his whole story of life at college, and Martin realizes that his son has dissipated away the money for which he committed the crime.

A little later Roy obtains the position of deputy sheriff, acting under his father. While Homes tells Martin that he must aid him in one more robbery and that then he will leave the country. Martin is obliged to agree, and that night the express office is robbed. In the morning Roy is investigating the robbery when he finds a thumb print. This he takes a photograph of, and after it has been developed and printed he shows it to his father. His father takes it, and when Roy is handed the wet print back there appears an additional thumb print on it. A little study reveals to Roy that the two prints are similar, and he realizes that his own father must be the robber.

Martin again meets Homes, and Roy, who has followed his father, secretly watches them. Homes states that they must do one more job, and in a fury Martin knocks him down. Roy hurries to the scene, but before he arrives both men have drawn guns and both are dead. Others appear. All the money taken from the express office is found on Homes, Martin having refused to take any of it, and later Roy shows his mother a copy of the Plumas newspaper, which gives a glowing tribute to Martin, stating that he met his death in the performance of his duty.

VOGUE

DELINQUENT BRIDEGROOMS (June 18).—The cast, Orlando (Ben Turpin); Bill (Paddy McQuire); Rena (Rena Rogers); Her Sweetheart (Arthur Moon); Two Widowers (Jack Gaines and Ed Laurie); Two Widows (Louise Owens and Margaret Templeton).

Thompson and Brown are engaged to marry the Widows Moon and Dolan. For this purpose they hire two dress suits to be married in, and returning to Thompson's home they find the daughter, Rena Thompson, spooning with her sweetheart, who is ejected violently from the premises. To do this Thompson and Brown fought with the fury of tigers, and the result was that they spoiled their clothes. Thinking to remove a repugnant odor which the full dress had acquired, they hung them out on the line in the back yard for an airing.

Bungling Bill and Bloggie have employed the attention of a hard-working laborer who is emerging from a saloon with a can of beer. While the exponent of honest toil is directing Bill to a certain street he has asked about, Bloggie is inserting a hose in the beer, and drains it dry. To make it seem as heavy to the laborer he puts in a handy brick and allows Bill to have some beer while he keeps on talking to the laborer. While Bill is puffing like an engine to suck some beer through the hose, Bloggie tells the laborer what he is doing, and the laborer takes the brick from the can and hits Bill on the head with it, while Bloggie makes his escape.

Later this team passes the fence along the back yard of Thompson. They steal the clothes and leave their own regalias in place of the suits. Thompson and Brown see the theft and pursue them, but they steal an auto and make their getaway. While speeding in the auto they are arrested and brought to the station house. Unable to pay the fine, they are jailed, and the cop is then warned to look out for two desperate men who are heading for the town. The photo he shows the cop of the desperate men is that of Bloggie and Bill, and when later Thompson and Brown start for the widows in the clothes of Bill and Bloggie they are mistaken for the two men and arrested.

Locked in the next cell to that of Bill and Bloggie, the widow Moon sends her son to bail the husbands-to-be out. Thompson had telephoned them when he was arraigned and Moon told him he would bail them out if he (Thompson) would consent to his marrying Rena. Thompson refused, and Moon, to make good his bluff to the Sergeant, bails out Bloggie and Bill. Taking these two men to the widow's house, he hides them in the banquet room, and they eat up everything and steal the presents.

Meanwhile, Thompson and Brown have broken jail and are chased by the cops. They run to the widows' home, just as Bill and Bloggie have been discovered in their thefts.

From this on things happen with great rapidity, during which Moon kidnaps the minister and makes him marry Rena and himself. Just as the ceremony is over, Bill comes out of the window, followed by Bloggie and the cops, and then a chase ensues, during which the team of laugh provokers are forced to jump on a passing truck, and the cops are holding on to a rope attached to the truck. Bill cuts the rope and makes their escape, while at the widow's Thompson, Brown and the widows embrace.

MUTUAL MASTERPICTURE.

SOUL MATES (American—Five Parts—June 8).—This picture was originally scheduled for release on May 8 but was postponed until the above date. A story of the subject was printed on page 1376 of the issue for May 20.

THE INNER STRUGGLE (American—Five Parts—June 12).—Teh cast: Dr. Stephen Grant (Franklin Ritchie); Myra Hamilton (Winnifred Greenwood); Harry Elliot (Roy Stewart).

Dr. Grant, in charge of a leper colony in the far Pacific, had once loved a beautiful girl, Myra Hamilton. Then she met Harry Elliot, a dissipated young society man. Dared by the boys, Harry proposed to Myra. Grant warned her of Harry's character, but she would not listen.

Myra and Harry visit Grant's laboratory, where she learns of the vivisection experiment Grant was working on. She bitterly berated him for his cruelty to his canine subject. While Grant explained to her, Harry choloformed the dog. Grant, furious at this ruthless destruction of his months of labor, resolved that Harry would pay.

Myra announced her engagement to Harry a few nights later. Myra soon found that she had a hopeless task before her in trying to reform Harry. One day she overheard Grant remonstrate with him for his actions in causing her pain, and she began to appreciate his nobility. Again she saw Harry with a cabaret singer. Overwhelmed with grief, she determined to see Grant and obtain comfort from him.

Myra noticed that Harry was inclined to be jealous, and discussed with Grant a plan to bring him to his senses. Grant was to pay ardent court to Myra. Soon Harry began to notice Grant's attention to his wife. He found them together one day, and wild with rage, left a note stating that they would find his body at the country home.

Grant raced after Harry to the country house. Harry, with an oath, rose and struck him, and cursed Myra. Grant, bleeding, made his way to the telephone, called up Myra, and told her he would bring Harry back to her a man.

Grant then brought him to an insane asylum and showed him the ruin drink caused. After weeks of hard work Grant felt that Harry was ready for the test. He deliberately placed temptation in his way, but Harry conquered. And so Grant brought him back to Myra. She forgave him. Grant then quietly left. Soon Myra looked for him to thank him. He showed her a letter which stated that his appliaction as physician at the leper colony had been accepted, and he left at once. Sometime later Grant received a letter from Myra asking him to come back to her as Harry had died. His first impulse was to go, but when he realized his mission he burned the letter.

THE WASTED YEARS (Centaur—Five Parts—June 19.) The cast: In the prologue—Old Weatherby (Crane Wilbur); The Passerby (Joseph Habelton); the Policeman (M. D. Moran). The cast in the play of "Youth": Harry Weatherby, an orphan boy (Master George Harris); June, an orphan girl (Thelma Burns); Harry Weatherby, the youth (Crane Wilbur); June, the maiden (Mae Gaston); "Billie" (Jessie Burnett); Robert Leslie (John Oaker); Little Pal (Thelma Salter).

Old Weatherby, a broken down tramp, finds a friend in a passerby. With money given him by the good samaritan, Weatherby starts off to satisfy his hunger. He is attracted by some theater posters announcing the performance of the drama "Youth." The pangs of hunger urge him to buy food, but the play of "Youth" calls him and he spends his money to witness the play. It is the story of his own youth—of the years he wasted.

Harry and June were child sweethearts in an orphanage at Cedarville. They grow up together, Harry becoming a machinist in a village factory and June a milliner's apprentice As they grew older they planned to marry, but the young man was summoned to a big city where he was informed that he had inherited a vast amount of money, left him by his uncle. The fortune is turned over to the young man and he lingers among the white lights. The village physician is also in love with June, but she does not encourage his attentions and openly makes known that she is betrothed to Harry.

A desire to see a little of life takes a hold on Harry and he visits one of the roof gardens where Bohemians gather. "Billie," a woman of the world, and Robert Leslie, her friend, are attracted by the strange actions of the country boy. The woman plans to catch him in her net and Leslie helps to pave the way by bidding her a hasty good-night, to leave her to fascinate Harry.

Her charms set Harry's brain in a whirl. One night at the roof garden, Leslie "dares" Harry to marry "Billie," for such is the trap set by the two schemers. Hypnotized by the woman and his brain dull from wine, Harry consents and the party hurries to a Justice of the Peace and the ceremony takes place. Not until the next day does Harry realize what he has done.

In the mean time June's heart has wilted and she wonders for her lover. She goes to the city to seek him and there confronts Harry with the woman. June is heartbroken at the news of the wedding. June returns to the country and the young physician, still pleading his love for her, she marries him and they establish a happy home.

Gradually "Billie" extracts the wealth of her husband and so great is his love for her that he is blind to her sham love for him. Suddenly his eyes are opened when he finds his wife and Leslie scheming against him in his own home. A scene follows, Harry ordering Leslie from the house with a demand never to return and the woman then betrays her real attitude toward Harry. As Harry broods, his wife gathers her belongings together and elopes with Leslie, although it is the eve of her motherhood. Through a detective agency Harry tries to trace his wife and her would-be lover.

Four years have passed and Harry has used every means to find his wife and child without result. Leslie has sunken to the level of a common crook, deserted "Billie," who, heartbroken at her folly, passes to another world. The little daughter is left in a wretched condition in a dirty tenement room. The child goes out into the open in a drenching rain and looking for shelter climbs into an unoccupied automobile. Soon Harry enters the machine, discovers the child, and takes her home. That night, Leslie and some of his associates go out on a burglarizing expedition. Masked, Leslie climbs into the living room of Harry's apartment, a struggle follows and the mask is torn from his face. The little child is aroused by the noise and as she appears, Leslie makes known that it is Harry's own daughter. As the father clings to the child, Leslie steals away. The following day Harry resolves to return to Cedarville. As he and his little "Pal" near the town, Harry sees the scenes of his happy childhood. The swimming pool appeals to him and he attires himself in a bathing suit and plunges into the water.

A gypsy and his family come across the automobile belonging to Harry and likeswise the man's clothes. These the gypsy appropriates to his own use and leaving his wagon behind rides away with his family in style. When "Little Pal" and her father are ready to go they are forced to use the abandoned wagon and Harry attires himself in the clothes left by the gypsy. Reaching the town of Cedarville, the child has taken sick and Harry goes to the town doctor. He learns of the marriage of June and the physician and after getting medicine, starts off to lead the life of a gypsy. For months he and his daughter travel near the outskirts of the village until the child is suddenly taken very ill and dies. He takes the body back to the scene of his younger days and there makes a little grave.

The play of "Youth" is ended. The crowd leaves the theater and "Old Weatherby" remains unmoved. An usher shakes him and then draws back, realizing that the old man has passed away.

WHO'S GUILTY NO. 7.—TRUTH CRUSHED TO EARTH (Arrow—Two Parts—June 19).—Tom Blake, from the time he was a small boy, always got into trouble because he told the truth. As a youngster, instead of lying out of some small offense, he manfully told the truth—and was invariably punished for it. His instinctive desire for the truth was strong—but not strong enough to stand the repeated outrages visited on his young person for upholding it. It was, literally, beaten out of him, so that when he reached man's estate, and was confronted by a situation that demanded a withstanding moral fabric, he was not equal to it, and lied. The lie cost him dearly, for with it he lost a beautiful love and a good name and sought quickly the end of the weak and the outcast. "Who's Guilty?"

THE IRON CLAW, NO. 17—"THE VANISHING FAKER" (Two Parts—Feature Film Corp.—June 19).—Davy, Enoch Golden's secretary, who told Margery that he was the mysterious "Laughing Mask," and who was subsequently shown up as a rank pretender, is further discredited by Margery and her father and dismissed from the Golden household. Not, however, until he persuades Margery to accept a present of a dog from him for old times' sake.

Juggs, one of the Claw's henchmen, gets himself employed by a caterer arranging a lawn fete at the Golden's summer place. He then writes to the Claw telling him of a plan to dynamite a huge oak tree on the lawn, which tree will fall and kill every one in the pavilion. Margery's dog gets mixed up in some molasses, and in rolling over attaches the note, which is later found by Davy. Davy sees the danger, and rushing to the Golden party warns them all off the lawn just in time to escape the giant oak tree which is blasted as per schedule.

FROM KITCHEN MECHANIC TO MOVIE STAR; OR, ACHIEVING SUCCESS VIA THE NOODLE ROUTE (Cartoon Comedy—June 19).—The subject opens with Ammonia Emtydome, who is the maid of all work. When father gets his shirt back it is so full of holes he feels like a sponge.

Ammonia is supposed to serve dinner. Thus the madam of the house a la Goldberg: "By the time she brings dinner we'll either starve to death or die of old age." Well, Ammonia gets the B. R. (Bum's Rush) and would ordinarily starve. But not Ammonia. She gets hooked up with a guy who's taking a motion picture and who needs "a girl with a face like something that was started but never finished." He tells her, "You must first start posing as a hamburg steak. Just look perfectly natural."

And Ammonia leaps into fame. Her old mistress hasn't heard from her and imagines she has walked off a dock. Then "the poor, clumsy boob comes back"—fresh from her conquests in filmdom and flashing diamonds in all directions—and madam does a fadeout that would defy any ordinary bottle of smelling salts to bring her to.

JAPAN'S ANCIENT CAPITAL—NARA (On Same Reel as Foregoing).—Japan's ancient capital—Nara—located on the island of Nondo, and the first fixed capital of Japan, noted for its many beautiful temples and monasteries, is the subject of this film. It shows interesting and intimate views of the buildings, streets, public and private life of its residents and their religious and industrious occupations.

LUKE'S FATAL FLIVVER (Rolin Film Co.—June 19).—The film starts with a gentle pastoral scene of some fashionable folk spending a day in the country. Luke's party of fifteen (not counting the fat boy, who's at least half a dozen), are out in a two-seater "tin Lizzie." The parties get mixed, the lunch enters the combat as an added starter, and the show is on!

Here follows many ludicrous incidents, and the end of the film sees Luke at the helm of his bucking motor car with his select party of fifteen dragging along behind through the juicy mud of a swampy land to the title of "At the end of a perfect day!"

LUKE'S SOCIETY MIXUP (Rolin Film Co.—June 26).—This film shows Luke "batting" for a world-famed violinist, and, needless to say, his attempts at the high-brow stuff are a scream. You see, Luke is a second-rate mechanician on the country estate of some regular people. His long, unkempt hair has never appealed to them as anything but slovenly until, after arranging a party at which the great "Violinsky" will be the main attraction, they receive a note telling of the virtuoso's inability to attend, and suddenly see in Luke's matted locks the badge of genius and the one way out.

Luke hates to do it because, in the first place, he feels it lowers his professional dignity as "assistant wiper," and in the second place he doesn't know a G string from a clothes line. The first objection is forcibly overcome and the latter circumscribed by swathing his business hand in bandages.

Then Luke makes his debut. His uncouth actions are at first put down to genius, but they finally get to be just a bit, you know, and the laughs resulting from his contact with the punch-bowl and the society queens make a dizzy reel of action.

WHO'S GUILTY? TO. 8—BEYOND RECALL (Arrow—Two Parts—June 26).—The story tells of two young men, financially embarrassed, who decide to seek their fortunes in foreign lands. The sweetheart of John Leonard, Margaret, is imbued with a desire for professional laurels and tells John before he goes that she has accepted a position under the district attorney. John tells her that she will be an accomplice to a system of justice that is unsocial and in an angry dispute they part. The other man, Edwin Martel, finds it difficult to leave his sweetheart, Elsie, who becomes hysterical when she hears of his intended trip. Edwin has been seen entering Elsie's apartment, but was not seen leaving it, so that when he comes back

He is found there, and his only witness, John Leonard, has sailed. Because of his poverty he is railroaded to the electric chair, Margaret, until the last moment, helping the district attorney push the case against him. Then Leonard comes back, but it is too late. "Who's Guilty?"

THE IRON CLAW, NO. 8.—"THE GREEN-EYED GOD" (Two Parts—Feature Film Corp.—June 26).—The detectives employed by Enoch Golden to track down The Iron Claw and his enemy, The Laughing Mask, assure Golden that his discharged secretary is the wrong righter. Margery Golden does not believe this, but because of reports that The Laughing Mask, whom she loves, has been seen to kiss another girl, decides jealously to help track down her defender and settle the question of his identity once and for all.

Accordingly, a decoy note, supposed to be written by Logar and informing his henchman that Margery will be captured in a stone pit nearby, is placed where the Laughing Mask will find it. It is believed he will try to effect Margery's rescue and can be captured.

But the note falls into Legar's hands, and, although he knows it to be a trick, he decides to make capital of it and blow up the stone pit, which is mined. The Laughing Mask hears of this and ejects a rescue of the Golden party just as Legar sets off the fuse which wrecks the pit.

OUR LOBSTER SUPPLY (June 26).—This picture shows how, to compensate for the depletion of the lobster supply through wasteful fishing, the U. S. government maintains three lobster culture stations in Maine and Massachusetts, where almost 200,000,000 eggs are hatched each year.

An interesting view of the hatchery at Boothbay, Maine, is shown; then the details of lobster culture. First, we see the setting of the lobster pots. The lobsters, attracted by the bait, enter through funnels at the ends of the pot and cannot find their way out. Then the pots are hauled in, after remaining on the bottom for a day or more, and the lobsters are removed. About 10,000,000 lobsters, weighing about 15,000,000 pounds, are taken by this means each year.

How the egg-bearing lobsters are placed in a pound, where they are held until the eggs are well advanced; how the lobsters are removed to obtain the eggs, and how the eggs are finally hatched, are the subjects of this entertaining film.

PERAK—THE PROTECTED (On Same Reel as Foregoing).—This film shows the mineral and agricultural resources of Perak, the lives and habits of its natives (Malays and Chinese), its places of amusement, its athletic sports, and lastly the famous Tower of Ipok, which occupies a prominent place in the town and which has been cut in the solid rock.

Triangle Film Corp.

THE DIVIDEND (Ince—Five parts—June 18).—The cast: John Steele (William H. Thompson); Frank Steele (Charles Ray); Betty Price (Ethel Ullman); Maizie (Margaret Thompson).

John Steele, a capitalist, makes formal announcement as president of the great corporation of which he is the head, that the new year just starting will see the company earn the greatest dividend in its history. Then he virtually offers his entire life to the task of making good his boast. He neglects his wife, and when his son returns from college he has so little time to devote to the boy that the young man soon drifts into a life of shame and degradation. He is disowned by his father and soon takes up with evil companions who drag him lower and lower. The father, meanwhile, seeks to discharge his obligations to society by a generous contribution to a charitable organization that is erecting a mission for people of the slums. The fact that the very corporation of which Steele is the head will declare its great dividend on the year by crushing the people who are expected to take advantage of the mission, does not lessen the public acclaim with which Steele's princely gift is received.

The paths of Frank Steele, the rich man's son, and Betty Price, a girl of the slums who has been driven to the streets by the oppression of Steele, the elder, eventually cross, and they take up life together. With them are other companions of the underworld, one of whom attends the dedication of the mission upon its completion, and when words of praise are being said for Steele, the millionaire, the girl of the underworld arises and denounces him as the man responsible for the condition of herself and hundreds of others like her at that very minute.

Young Steele has long since ceased to make efforts to see his father and has surrendered body and soul to a life of the deepest degradation. With his companion, Betty, he becomes a drug fiend and his greatest struggle is to secure the money needed to supply them with opium. And then Betty, now a sodden, wretched, depraved woman of the streets, deserts Steele, and takes up with a thug who soon tires of her and casts her off. Deserted by the one creature to whom he might have clung, young Steele becomes a wanderer on the streets.

There is to be a big ball of one of the gangs a certain night. A rival gang plans an attack on that night. Just as the attacking gangsters reach the hall where the ball is in progress, young Steele shambles into sight. A fight starts between the two gangs and a stray bullet strikes young Steele. He is mortally wounded, and the police, who reach the scene almost immediately, are able to identify him and notify his father. The magnate has made good his boast that the company will pay its greatest dividend, but the price has been greater than he reckoned. His wife has gone; his boy lay wounded unto death. The aged man sends word to have his son brought to his home. The boy, just before he dies, forgives his father, but makes clear to him the enormous price he has paid for the record dividend.

AN INNOCENT MAGDALENE (Fine Arts—Five Parts—June 18).—The cast: Dorothy Raleigh (Lillian Gish); Colonel Raleigh (Spottiswoode Aitken); Forbes Stewart (Sam de Grasse); The Woman (Mary Alden); The Preacher (Seymour Hastings); Mammy (Jennie Lee); Old Joe (Wm. de Vaull).

Dorothy Raleigh is a high-spirited Southern beauty who has been brought up by her father, Col. Raleigh, an unreconstructed Kentuckian, to have nothing to do with the townspeople of the little village of Norwalk, just outside of Louisville. She has no other companions than the old negro servants, her animal pets and her books. One day there comes into her life by chance a young millionaire gambler named Forbes Stewart. He makes love to her and asks the Colonel for her hand. Indignant at his presumption, the Colonel orders him from the house. But the young people elope.

When Dorothy meets her husband's friends she is grievously disappointed. He determines, rather than cause her unhappiness, to change his mode of living, and give up his old friends. But a detective who knows something of his past, tries to blackmail him. His defiance leads to his arrest, and he is sentenced to a year in the penitentiary. Dorothy is loyal to him at first but when another woman enters her home and seemingly proves that she is Stewart's wife by an earlier marriage, she goes back to her father. The stern old man, however, has disowned her, and she is compelled to seek shelter in a cabin with her old negro mammy.

When Stewart is released from the penitentiary he hastens to his home to find his wife. Instead he finds this other woman, an old flame who has taken this method to win him back again. He repudiates her, however, and hurries to Norwalk to see the Colonel and demand Dorothy. The Colonel refuses to tell her whereabouts, but from an old servant Stewart learns the truth. Dorothy in the meantime has been led to believe her baby illegitimate, and the villagers, glad to see the proud name of the Raleighs dragged in the dust, make her life miserable. She is about to kill herself when Stewart arrives. The outcome reunite the lovers and brings a change in the heart of the father that is supremely satisfying.

THE APOSTLE OF VENGEANCE (Ince—Five parts—June 25).—The cast: David Hudson (William S. Hart); Mary McCoy (Nona Thomas); Tom McCoy (Joseph J. Dowling); "Marm" Hudson (Fanny Midgley); Willie Hudson (Jack Gilbert); Elsie Hudson (Marvel Safford).

David Hudson is a young minister, living in Vermont. He is the son of a family of Kentucky feudists. The mortal enemy of the Hudsons is the McCoys. At the very time the young minister is being honored by a call from a richer and more influential parish in the North his father is killed in a pitched battle between the Hudsons and McCoys. The same mail that brings the young minister word of his promotion, brings him a letter from home, telling him of the killing of his father and asking him to return and aid in the extermination of the McCoys.

"Dave" Hudson declines the call from the church in the North and goes back home, but not to murder but to preach the gospel. His family is so enraged at his refusal to take up arms against their enemy that they turn him from the house. He takes up his residence in a little mountain cabin and puts out handbills announcing he will preach the following Sunday on "Love Thy Neighbor."

Chance gives him the opportunity to rescue Mary McCoy, the favorite daughter of the Hudson's worst enemy, from a brute who has attacked her. A little later the oldest McCoy boy attacks little Elsie Hudson and hurls her from a bridge into the river, where she would have been drowned had not Dave seen her floating downstream and rescued her.

This attack of a McCoy on a defenseless girl is more than Dave can stand and he renounces for the moment his ministry and goes forth to kill the man who had attacked his sister with his bare hands. Straight to the McCoy house Dave makes his way and there learns that the elder McCoy, having wrung a confession from his son, had turned the boy out and disowned him. Dave turns back to the woods in search of the man he sought. A terrific storm breaks and at its height Dave begs the God he has served to bring the man he was after into his power. As though in answer to his prayer, young Hudson falls down an embankment and lands at the very feet of the man who has sworn to kill him. As Dave's hands close on the man's throat, his victim begs that his life be spared and makes his plea for "God's sake." The words strike Dave hard and he unloosens his grip on the man's throat.

Dave has returned to his preaching. He has allowed the man he sought to escape when he had him in his very grasp, but the effect had been better than as though he had killed him. A feeling of friendship sprang up between the families that had been enemies for twenty-five years. Dave eventually marries Mary McCoy and the oldest and bitterest enemies in the two families become friends.

A WILD GIRL OF THE SIERRAS (Fine Arts—Five parts—June 25).—The cast: The Wild Girl (Mae Marsh); Jim Hamilton (Wilfred Lucas); Mrs. Hamilton (Maizie Radford); Moll (Olga Grey); Bob Jordan (Robert Harron); A Westerner (James O'Shea). Directed by Paul Powell.

Fifteen years before the picture opens Jim Hamilton had gone with his wife and little three-year-old daughter into the wilds of the West to prospect for a mine. One day while he was away from the cabin, Indians swooped down on it and killed everyone but the little girl, who had been some distance away and who had fled, at the sound of the shooting, into the woods. When Hamilton returned he found his wife dead and his daughter gone. He returnd to the cities and became a professional gambler.

Hamilton remembers the old worthless mine one day and decides to try and sell it. He induces Bob Jordan, a wealthy young man, to accompany him to the mine with the idea of purchasing it. On the trip, which is made across the country, Jordan shoots at what appears to him to be a young deer. When he finally comes up to the object he finds it to be a strange wild little girl of rare beauty, but she is clothed in leaves of grass and she neither understands a word that is said to her nor can she speak.

Jordan nurses the little girl who he has wounded by his shot back to health and she becomes his devoted slave. She is shy and afraid of all other humans, however, and prefers the company of wild animals and birds. When Jordan inspects the old abandoned mine thoroughly he decides it is worthless and refuses to purchase it. Hamilton determines to get possession of the young man's money by robbing him at the point of a gun, but the little wild girl has hidden the money belt of Jordan as a prank and the gambler is frustrated.

Jordan, angered by the supposed loss of his money and by the knowledge that he had been picked as victim for an intended swindle, was unusually cross to the little wild girl and she decided to run away to the mountains again. When Jordan discovers she has fled he starts after her and finds her in the bear's cave where he had found her the first day. By treating her kindly, he wins back her confidence and she to show her gratitude to him restores his belt of money. The discomfited gambler returns to his old haunts, poorer than when he started, and Jordan starts back to his home with the little wild girl following at his heels.

METRO PICTURES CORP.

HIS GREAT TRIUMPH (Columbia Pictures Corp—Five Parts—May 22). The cast: "Buttsy" Gallagher (William Nigh); Michael Gallagher, his father (Julius D. Cowles); Judge Winters (Roy Applegate); Gus Ewing (R. A. Bresee); Robert Ewing, his son (Robert Elliott); Count Carl (Martin J. Faust); Detective Frank Cody (David Thompson); "Lefty Jake" (Victor de Linsky); "Frank the Mex" (Frank Montgomery); Peggy Winters (Marguerite Snow); Mrs. Maddern, her aunt (Cecelia Griffith); Florence Maddern, her cousin (Florence Vincent); "The Pest" (Citta Cameron). Written and directed by William Nigh.

"Buttsy" Gallagher is a harmless young product of the slums. In all his life he has never been of the slightest importance. His spirit is so submerged that he has almost forgotten how to get angry.

One night the gaiety going on in Judge Winters' home attracts him, and he crouches on the fire-escape to watch it. He becomes interested in the Judge, in his pretty daughter Peggy, in her cousin Flo, in Flo's admirer, the Count, and in Bob Ewing, a struggling young lawyer. Then he falls asleep on the fire-escape.

Peggy is fascinated with the Count and decides to cut Flo out, if she can. She consents to meet him in the drawing-room after the household is asleep. Scarcely are they concealed in the window niche when the house is burglarized. "Frank the Mex" and "Lefty Jake," securing their booty, pass through Flo's room, when Flo awakens and screams. A servant who runs to see what is wrong is killed, and the crooks escape through the window, where "Buttsy" is lying asleep. They roll him over into the room. "Buttsy" is arrested as the murderer.

"Buttsy" finds himself suddenly famous. Women send him flowers. Great men argue about his case. The people in his home alley decide that he has more in him than they thought. Peggy, who was hidden in the other window and who knows that he is not the murderer, does not dare speak for fear of injuring her reputation. Bob Ewing takes up the case. He is sure "Buttsy" is not guilty, and finally makes Peggy tell what she knows. Her father, Judge Winters, makes her marry the Count. "Buttsy" is given a new trial and is released under a five-year probationary sentence for having committed perjury. He has "confessed" to the murder, delighted at having so much attention.

Brought into prominence by "Buttsy's" trial, Bob is engaged by a firm of unprincipaled men to condemn and take over for a reservoir some land belonging to Judge Winters and some farmers in his old home town. The two crooks, "The Mex" and "Lefty," are hired, and bind and gag the Judge when he tries to fight the matter in the town council. Peggy and the Count, who follow, are about to meet the same fate, when "Buttsy" intervenes. He has left the city because it is not interested in him except as a criminal. The Judge accuses him of being mixed up in the conspiracy and his long-buried spark of anger flames forth. He puts up the fight of his life. He and the Count turn on the hoboes, and "The Mex," the slayer of the servant, is mortally wounded, confessing just before he dies.

Flo gives Bob a piece of her mind. She tells him exactly what she thinks of him for having turned traitor to her uncle's interests in such a cowardly fashion. She rouses the sleeping manhood within him. He goes to the council meeting and argues, not against the Judge, but for him, winning the case. Flo forgives him, and they are married. Peggy cannot help admiring the Count's valor when she sees him fighting the crooks, and thereafter the marriage is a real one. As for "Buttsy" he sees again the girl known in his tenement home as "The Pest." Now she is a lovely young woman. She has become a trained nurse and he asks her to be his own private nurse as long as he lives.

"THE SCARLET WOMAN" (Popular Plays and Players—Five Parts—May 29).—The cast: Thora Davis (Mme. Petrova); Hanlin Davis (Edward Martindel); Clinton Hastings (Arthur Hoops); Robert Blake (Eugene O'Brien); Paula Gordon (Frances Gordon). Written by Aaron Hoffman. Directed by Edward Lawrence.

Hanlin Davis, vice-president of a bank, has been gambling in stocks, and loses heavily. While in the act of robbing the bank he is surprised by another official, and Davis kills him. Davis is arrested and his wife goes to Hastings, the District Attorney, and makes a plea in his behalf. Hastings is a corrupt official and does not hesitate to make an improper proposal to Thora. He agrees to let her husband off with a light sentence after she accepts his demands.

When Davis is released from prison and learns of the sacrifice his wife has made he openly denounces her and turns her into the street. Then he gets a divorce. Ignored by all her friends and driven out of society, she is thrown upon her own resources and becomes known as "the scarlet woman," void of heart and conscience. The District Attorney becomes notorious for his association with the sporting element along Broadway, and is believed to be a graft taker. Robert Blake, a wealthy young man, institutes a reform investigation, and the District Attorney is exposed.

Disbarred and disgraced, Hastings decides to revenge himself upon Thora, whom he considers the cause of his downfall. He cultivates the friendship of Paula Gordon, an unscrupulous society woman, who is much in the company of Blake and holds his respect. Hastings has evidence of a crooked transaction in which Paula participated, and he threatens exposure unless she does his bidding. Through Paula, Thora is introduced to Blake. He is made to understand that she is a pure woman, and she is led to believe that he knows about her past. They fall in love and soon afterward are quietly married.

After the wedding Hastings confronts the couple and denounces Thora, telling Blake of her past and that she is the notorious "scarlet woman." Blake gives Hastings a beating, but hears Thora confess that he has told the truth. Before he can regain composure, following this blow, and speak to her, Thora is gone. She secures employment in a factory, hidden from her former friends. Paula now hopes to win Blake's love, but he remains steadfast in his love for his wife. Blake becomes a melancholy weakling in his deep sorrow. Paula goes to Thora and tells her she is wrecking his life; that if she would save him she must divorce him and openly return to her old life of the street and cafe. This Thora does. It proves the severest blow of all for Blake, and he is about to yield to Paula's persuasion to come to her when he learns the truth. He seeks out Thora, begs her to forgive him, as he long ago has forgiven her, and they are happily reunited.

"THE FLOWER OF NO MAN'S LAND" (Columbia Pictures Corp.—Five Parts—June 19.)—The cast: Echo, the Flower of No Man's Land (Viola Dana); Roy Talbot (Duncan McRae); Big Bill (Harry C. Brown); Kahoma, the Indian (Mitchell Lewis); Pedro, the Mexican (Fred Jones); Mrs. Talbot (Nellie G. Mitchell); the Talbot Child (Eldine Steuart); Potter, the Butler (Marcus Moriarty). Written and directed by John H. Collins.

Dan Barrett, a miner, is murdered in the heart of the Great American Desert by a Mexican named Pedro, in whose mine Barrett offered to take a half interest. Pedro escapes with the money, leaving Barrett's baby daughter, Echo, alone on the plains. She is rescued by Kahoma, an Indian, and brought up by him. The miners call her "The Flower of No Man's Land."

When Echo has become a winsome girl of seventeen a great change comes to her. Roy Talbot, a Metropolitan grand opera idol, suddenly loses his voice as the result of dissipation. Immediate rest is prescribed, and he goes West. His stage coach is overturned near the shack of Echo and Kahoma. He suffers a painful injury and Echo takes care of him. As he convalesces he is struck by the charm of the simple Western girl, and she is impressed by his evident importance and his polished manners. The two are married, to the deep sorrow of Big Bill, a kind-hearted miner who has always loved her.

Kahoma gives her the love arrow which, according to the custom of his tribe, goes to a bride, the gift of her nearest male relative. It was given Kahoma's girl bride by her father, a great chief, and Kahoma's heart is buried in her grave. Talbot suddenly finds that his voice has returned, and he and Echo hasten East. There Echo finds it difficult to accustom herself to the ways of polite society. Talbot, growing bored, soon shows her he is ashamed of her. He is secretly in love with Fifi, a woman of the fast set, for whom he is buying expensive jewelry. By mistake a pearl necklace is sent to the Talbot home and Echo opens the parcel, thinking it is for her. When it is left in Talbot's room, and he does not give it to her, her suspicions are aroused.

Accordingly, when a boy comes with a note which he merely says is from "a woman" she opens it. It is from Talbot's deserted wife, who is dying. She asks for aid for her child. Echo goes to her and, overcome though she is by the terrible discovery that she is not a wife, promises the real Mrs. Talbot that her child shall be cared for. She goes home, takes the love arrow and snaps it in two, places with it her wedding ring and the letter from Mrs. Talbot, puts on her simple Western clothes and leaves for the West and Kahomo. Her Indian foster-father nurses her broken spirit back to life, and after a visit of vengeance, in which he makes Talbot pay for his treachery, he leaves Big Bill to restore the smile of happiness to "The Flower of No Man's Land."

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS, INC.

THE THREE GODFATHERS (Five Parts—June 19).—The cast: Ruby Merrill (Stella Razeto); Bob Sangster (Harry Carey); Tim Gibbons (George Berrell); Bill Kearney (Frank Lanning); Rusty Connors (Joe Rickson); Pete Cushing (Hart Hoxie). Scenario written by Harvey Gates. Directed by E. J. Le Saint.

Three bandits, escaping from the scene of a bank robbery they have committed, are caught in a sand storm which serves to obliterate their trail, but works disaster in their immediate vicinity. A prospector strays from his traveling outfit and perishes in the storm. The three bandits come upon the "prairie schooner" just at the time the prospector's wife gives birth to a child and dies, leaving the infant in care of the bandits.

Miles away from any habitation, the methods employed by these hardy men to sustain life in the body of the new-born babe, and the tenderness in which they fulfill their strangely-imposed mission, constitutes a remarkable example of human kindness. When the three men are able to proceed toward the nearest settlement, two of them die as a result of wounds and privation.

One of the "three godfathers" manages to reach the settlement where he discovers the girl with whom he has fallen in love, just previous to robbing the bank. Here, too, he finds the sheriff awaiting his arrival. The bandit turns the child over to his girl, and submits himself to the authority of the sheriff while recovering from the effects of his well-nigh fatal experience on the desert.

Subsequently the bandit makes good his escape, taking with him the baby and the girl he loves. Once more on the desert, the bandit locates the loot where it has been buried. Then conscience overcomes his desire for freedom when he remembers that he has promised the mother to rear the baby boy in the path of rectitude.

Retracing his steps, the bandit surrenders to the sheriff, confesses his share in the bank robbery, and by a strange coincidence the baby is proven to be the sheriff's nephew. Then it is that the sheriff stretches his authority to the extent of giving to the bandit and his girl the reward that has been offered for the bank robbers, dead or alive, and the story ends with the apparent prospect of a happy and useful future for all concerned.

WORLD EQUITABLE.

"PERILS OF DIVORCE" (Brady—Five Parts—June 12).—The cast: Constance Graham (Edna Wallace Hopper); John Graham (Frank Sheridan); Mason Tegars (Macey Harlan); Alice Lorraine (Ruby Hoffman); Craig (Edwin August); Geraldine, at 8 (Joan Morgan); Geraldine, at 17 (Zoe Gregory). Directed by Edwin August.

John Graham, of settled and quiet disposition, is married to Constance, a girl of twenty. They have a little child, Geraldine, whom they idolize. Alice Lorraine, an adventuress, comes to visit the Grahams. One day John brings home the news that Mason Tegars is to open the estate adjoining theirs. Alice, quick to remember that which would hurt Constance, says, "An old sweetheart of yours, wasn't he, Constance?" Alice sees the jealous fire in John's eyes and she feels that she has the key to the situation—jealousy. That is what she must play upon—the jealousy of a middle-aged man with a young wife.

Mason Tegars arrives and visits the Grahams. Alice arranges to visit his home with Constance, but at the last moment Alice turns back on pretense of having forgotten something, allows Constance to go alone, and arrives a little later with John. When they arrive they find Tegars and Constance seriously chatting. Constance convinces John that there is nothing between Tegars and herself. Alice, however, by a clever ruse, arranges that, while out skating, Tegars should find Constance apart from the other members of the party, alone. She falls and seriously injures her ankle and Tegars carries her in his arms. Her hair dishevelled and clothes loosened, John, upon seeing them, hastily forms the conclusion that something of an unconventional nature occurred and tells Constance that a reconciliation is impossible.

Finding John obdurate, Constance goes back to the city and later learns that John is obtaining a divorce, alleging unfaithfulness. Constance is forced to work in cabarets, but, despite that, remains pure and noble. Once divorced, Alice has John at her mercy, and succeeds in having him marry her, after which she neglects the child and spends John's money recklessly and foolisnly. She has a younger lover with whom she is infatuated.

Some years have passed and Constance has gone down the ladder of youth and is dancing for a mere pittance. John is home and broods over the unfortunate state of his life, while Alice is planning an elopement with her young lover. One night a beautiful, unsophisticated young girl comes into the cafe where Constance is employed with one of the tough young customers. Constance is drawn to her and later learns from a friend that the young girl is the daughter of the wealthy old recluse John Graham, and that "he'd bet her father would go mad if he knew his carefully brought-up child was in a place of this calibre." Constance, realizing that it is her daughter, invites her to her dressing room and makes her identity known.

Mason meets Constance's friend at the club and is told the story. Realizing that Constance is the woman meant, he signifies his intention of telling John the truth. Mason tells him that Constance never yielded to his love and that she was a good woman when divorced and still is. John, convinced, goes to his wife and daughter, but she is cold toward him. He hopes to win her back in time and provides for her needs, but the hard life she has led begins to tell on her. She is taken sick and, although John and Geraldine give her every attention, she passes away.

to the Master, who promises him an antidote for the poison, provided he will perform a certain task. Dr. Alden is interested in thought photography and experiments upon Myra by placing a plate holder against her forehead. Varney is present and suggests that she think of him. She agrees to do this, but her thoughts persist in wandering. Meanwhile the Black Master orders the disobedient member of the band to apply for the position of gardener at the Maynard home. Successful in obtaining the situation, in his tiny room over the garage the new gardener prepares an instrument of death.

Returning from a walk with Myra and Alden, Varney recognizes the new gardener as a member of the Black Band and exchonges with him the "thumbs up" signal. Excusing herself, Myra runs upstairs to her room, and starts back in fear and surprise as a panel of glass is suddenly smashed in the window close to her head. The new gardener has already attempted to earn his life by shooting Myra from the window of his room. Alden stays late that evening, and, becoming suspicious of the new gardener, resolves to try thought photography upon him. Leaving the Maynard home late that night, Alden enters the gardener's room over the garage and takes his thought photograph.

Next morning the Black Master, learning that the gardener has so far bungled his task of exterminating Myra, gives Varney a more powerful telescope in order that the gardener may get the exact angle in aiming his next shot. Dr. Alden places a decoy mirror in Myra's room and arranges to have the house surrounded by the police.

A new telescopic arrangement is made ready for the new gardener with a switch operating the gun nearby; and as Myra enters her room and seats herself before her dressing table she has the appearance of sitting directly in front of the window. Again the new gardener shoots, breaking both mirrors. Entering the gardener's tiny room, Alden and the police find it empty. Varney inquires of Alden why he suspects the gardener, and is informed that it is because of the thought photograph, which shows a blurred likeness of the Black Master in his "thumbs up" attitude. Varney proceeds to drop the negative upon the floor.

The gardener, frenzied because of his double failure in attempting Myra's life, enters the lodge of the Black Order and steals what he thinks is the antidote; he collapses upon the steps of the Maynard home. Dying, he starts to divulge the hiding place of the Master, but expires before the message is completed.

SONNY BOY (June).—Author and producer, Tefft Johnson.

Mother tells Sonny Boy to stop on his way to school at Mammy's and tell her to send the laundry. Mammy has already sent Lily, her daughter, to deliver it. She meets Sonny Boy on the way, who delivers his message, and also asks Lily if she has ever gone to school and whether she can read or write, to which she says "No." She removes the clothes basket from her head and becomes interested in Sonny's school books. He tells her he will take her to school with him, and they start off, forgetting all about the basket of clothes.

On arriving at school he introduces her to teacher and explains that she can sing and dance, but she can't read or write. The teacher sits her next to Sonny Boy, which is the delight of the other kids, who throw spit balls and tease her. In the meantime several goats are inspecting the basket of clothes which has been forgotten.

At recess Sonny Boy divides his lunch with Lily. The bully of the school, seeing this, tells the boys in their presence, "That's his sweetheart." Sonny Boy resents it and a fight starts, with the bully getting the best of it until Lily comes to the rescue and cleans things up.

Teacher rushes out and stops the fight and sends Sonny Boy and Lily home. On their way down the road they remember the basket of clothes and start on the run. Arriving, they find the basket and clothes have been devoured by several goats which Sonny Boy drives away, and Lily is crying as if her heart would break. The are afraid to go home. So Sonny Boy suggests to hide in the barn until dark.

Mother, Daddy and Mammy are looking for the children, whom they have missed since morning. They hear Toto bark and see him trying to get into the barn door. After investigation they find the pair sound asleep.

Bing's Home Entertainer

Here's a little machine, simple in its construction, and easy of operation, for which there is a place in every home.

It projects motion picture film as perfectly in the home as is possible in the average theatre.

Light is provided by a baby arc, supplied with current from the ordinary electric light socket, controlled through a special rheostat.

The baby arc develops 800 candle power, with about six amperes of current. The rheostat supplied is suitable for 110, 150 or 220 volts.

Pictures projected are about 6 x 8 feet in size and splendid results are possible with a throw up to twenty-five feet.

Standard size film is used, making every film exchange in the country a constant source of supply for subjects. Reel boxes are of 1,000 feet capacity.

Set up and ready for use, the machine measures 31 inches long, 31 inches high, and 10 inches broad. The lamphouse is 10 by 6. Weight of machine, complete with arc and rheostat is 24 pounds. Packed for shipment, the weight is 55 pounds.

There is absolutely no fire risk — "Safety First" has been the watchword in construction.

Dublin, Ireland.—The Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial presents the first pictures in this country of the scenes of havoc wrought during the recent uprising of Irish rebels.

KERNEL NUTT'S MUSICAL SHIRT (June 19).—The cast: Kernel Nutt (Frank Daniels); Octavia (Alice Washburn); Nutt's Friend (Ed. Favor). Author, Mark Swan. Director, C. Jay Williams.

A musical shirt is somewhat of an innovation. When Nutt wakes up from his peaceful slumbers in a spaghetti restaurant he is rather surprised to find a fox trot—that is, the music of one—on his shirt front. An absent-minded female composer, getting an inspiration, and lacking paper, has transcribed her thoughts on Nutt's manly bosom. But then when Nutt awoke from his troubled dreams and walked off with the shirt her melody was lost. After playing it over a few times Nutt finds it a real "foot tickler," he just can't make his feet behave. The composer trails Nutt and demands her brain child. They arrive at the laundress' just in time to see the shirt, with its precious burden, wallowing in suds, but Rastus, "the fox trot kid," remembers the tune and plays it for them on the old mouth organ. All is harmonious once more and Nutt captures the heart of the composer. His shirt has been framed and now hangs in a conspicuous position in their home as a constant reminder of their romantic meeting.

"THE MAN BEHIND THE CURTAIN" (Vitagraph—Five Parts—June 19).—The cast: Edna Hall (Lillian Walker); Harry Leland (Evart Overton); Perkins (Templar Saxe); Mr. Gardner (William Dunn); Mr. Stanhope (John Costello). Written by Minnie Krakauer. Directed by Courtland J. Van Deusen.

Fate has not stopped being cruel to Edna Hall after orphaning her. She walks innocently into more tragedy when, thrown upon her own resources, she applies for employment at the Stanhope home. Little did she dream that her letter from Mrs. Stanhope would bring her across the threshold to find that lady stretched out dead, stabbed—and robbed of a priceless pearl ring. In his house, where she knows no one, further terror is hers when from behind a curtain stretches a sinister hand that drops a dagger. Edna is paralyzed at the sudden appearance of a man from behind the curtain. This man is kind but cynical. He declares it looks bad for Edna—all this—but he believes in her innocence. But, ah, can she prove it? He sagely doubts it. She had better fly while she is yet undiscovered. This poor Edna does, leaving behind certain clues.

Driven by the appearance of guilt, Edna goes far away, and is finally happy as a governess for another family. One day one of her little charges plays truant and drifts in the path of racing motorboats in a skiff, from which position the child is rescued by Harry Leland. Harry, although a young man of wealth, becomes enamored of the pretty governess and marries her. At the end of their true-love honeymoon he takes her to his home. With amazement she recognizes this as the house of the murder. With a shock she learns that Harry is Mrs. Stanhope's son by her first husband; with terror she realizes that she is recognized by Perkins, the butler.

Now begins a campaign of torture of the unhappy bride by Perkins. It culminates in the accidental discovery of his demands upon Edna for money, whereupon he exposes her to Harry as the woman who was in the house the day of Mrs. Stanhope's murder. Mr. Stanhope, just back from Europe, also recognizes Edna as the woman who passed hurriedly out of the house on that date as he entered it.

The broken-hearted young man, in loyalty to his mother's memory, is forced to turn his back upon her until she can prove her innocence. Edna is now practically an outcast.

She is spurred by hope, however, when she chances to see Mr. Gardner, the mysterious man who bade her flee from the house. Adopting the disguise of a street boy, Edna discovers much about him, and soon has him attentive to her under her proper guise. She bears his odious attentions while biding her time. In the meantime, Harry, still fast in love with her, sends a detective to find her and bring her back. This detective discovers her just as she has received the stolen ring of Mrs. Stanhope as a gift from Mr. Gardner. This detective she is at once able to put on the trail of Mr. Gardner. He is captured after he has lured the blackmailing Perkins into a burglary of his own house and killed him. Needless to say that Harry rejoices enthusiastically at the vindication of Edna.

"THE VALIANTS OF VIRGINIA" (Selig—Five Parts—June 26).—The cast: (Prologue) John Valiant (Arthur Shirley); Edward Sassoon (Edward J. Piel); Judith Fairfax (Virginia Kraft); Major Bristow (Guy Oliver); Tom Dandridge (Fred Carufel). John Valiant, age 5 (Billy Jacobs); John Valiant, age 25 (Arthur Shirley); Shirley Dandridge (Kathryn Williams); Katherine Fargo (Edith Johnson); Andrew Fargo (Al W. Filson); Jefferson (James Bradbury); Sedgwick (Harry Lonsdale). Directed by T. N. Heffron. Written by Hallie Erminie Rives.

In the moonlight of a Virginia evening the negro musicians play upon their stringed instruments as the First Families dance the Virginia quadrille. The guests at the ball are Edward Sassoon, Major Montagu Bristow, John Valiant, the last of the Valiants of Virginia; Tom Dandridge, and each pays court to Judith Fairfax.

Again there is southern hospitality, now a dinner, at Damory Court, the home of John Valiant. Valiant has invited Judith Fairfax, Dandridge, Major Bristow and Edward Sassoon to be his guests. Sassoon has become intoxicated and endeavors to take Judith into his arms. Later, in the library, Valiant challenges Sassoon to a duel. When the guests have left, Judith pleads with Valiant not to kill Sassoon, and Valiant promises that he will not harm him. But——

As the smoke drifts away, Edward Sassoon lies lifeless, shot through the heart. At Damory Court Valiant hands a letter to Major Bristow, asking him to deliver the missive to Judith Fairfax. "If you have not returned in a half hour I shall know the worst," he says. Bristow leaves with the letter. At the threshold of Judith's home he pauses. He is torn between loyalty to friend and a secret love for Judith, and he finally makes a decision—he replaces the letter in his pocket.

Five years have passed, and John Valiant has created a corporation of great financial strength in a distant city. A brief unhappy marriage has left Valiant with a motherless son. He lives only for his boy. Down in Virginia, Judith Fairfax accepts the heart and hand of Tom Dandridge. When she informs Major Bristow of her engagement fateful memories come to him. Judith Dandridge, with her infant daughter, Shirley, waves a fond farewell to her husband as he accompanies Major Bristow to the hunt. Dandridge never returns alive, for he was killed by the fall of his horse.

John Valiant, Jr., known as "Vanity" Valiant, twenty years later, is a popular sportsman and society leader. He is also vice-president of the Valiant Corporation, but never attends a meeting. He has won the love of Katherine, daughter of Andrew Fargo, and their engagement is announced at a function held at the Fargo home. Next morning the newspapers announce the possible collapse of the Valiant Corporation. Hearing the news, Valiant rushes to the corporation offices, which he finds surrounded by small investors who fear they will lose all their savings. Valiant, who has a private fortune of $3,000,000, determines to place it to the credit of the corporation. When Fargo hears of John Valiant's intention he orders his daughter to break her engagement.

John Valiant, Jr., in straitened circumstances, returns to his father. There he meets Shirley Dandridge, who has blossomed into young womanhood. They love each other at first sight. In the meantime, Katherine Fargo has not forgotten the dashing young Valiant, and when her father hears that the Valiant Corporation is again prosperous she accepts his advice and concludes to visit a friend in Virginia, in the same county in which Valiant lives. At a ball given at the Valiant home she meets Shirley Dandridge, who is now engaged to John Valiant. She gives Shirley her first intimation of the unwritten history concerning the duel of long ago. Shirley now believes that the father of the man she has promised to wed killed the man her mother loved and whose memory her mother cherishes. The girl resolves to sacrifice her love for Valiant, and tells him she cannot marry him.

Major Bristow is shot by Grief King, a negro. Before he dies he gives the old letter to Judith Dandridge. When Judith opens the letter she reads the words of John Valiant, Sr., written so long ago. "I kept my promise, Judith. Sassoon did not fall by my hand. His shot went wide. I did not fire. He turned his weapon and shot himself through the heart." John Valiant, following his father's footsteps, writes a note to Shirley telling her that he is going far away. Shirley reads the note, orders her horse saddled and speeds down the road to the railway station. John Valiant has boarded a train which is to carry him away from old Virginia and from the girl he loves. Just as the train is moving from the station Shirley arrives and calls to him. He springs from the train to her side.

Motion theater patrons who daily exclaim over the clearness of the pictures may not know that is stenciled in the film margin—but you do.

"EASTMAN"

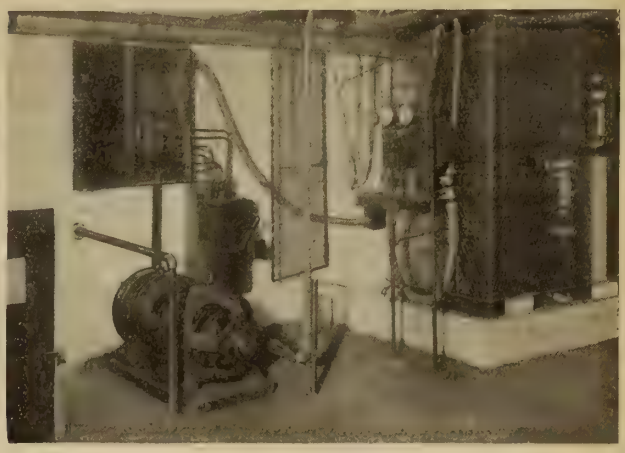
EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.



Westinghouse Motion Picture Equipment

enables you to produce clear, steady pictures which please your patrons.

This equipment is compact and easily installed.

There is nothing complicated in construction or operation.

It gives constant voltage over a wide range of load which is very important for "fading in" as it enables the operator to "warm up" his second arc without affecting the brilliancy of the first.

The services of Westinghouse engineers are available to assist in the solution of your problems.

Westinghouse Motion Picture Equipments were awarded a Medal of Honor, the highest award granted in this class, at the Panama Pacific International Exposition.

OUR FORESIGHT MEANT YOUR PROTECTION!!

Ten days after the outbreak of war we received the largest stock of French-made condensers ever shippedinto this country

That's why we are able to offer you now

THE KLEINE WHITE LABEL CONDENSER

at before-war-time prices. Foreign factories formerly engaged in the manufacture of optical goods for the entire world now devote their sole energies to war merchandise for their own countries, thus making possible the distribution of inferior, cheaply made and costly-in-the-long-run-domestic substitutes.

KLEINE WHITE LABEL CONDENSERS are ground from pure optical glass. They do not discolor—no green, pink or purple effects after a brief use. They are the only satisfactory condensers on the American market today. If you are not using them you are not obtaining maximum results from your projection equipment.

PRICES:

Plano Convex

6½, 7½, 8½, 9½ and 10½ inch E. F., 4½ inch diameter $1.25

The 1916 Convention Number of The Moving Picture World

¶ Pursuant to our custom for several years past, the only Special Number of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD will be published current with the National Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

¶ The Convention will be held in the Coliseum, Chicago, the week of July 10th. Our Convention Number will be dated July 15th.

¶ We respectfully suggest that prospective advertisers reserve their space now. All advertising copy must be in our hands by June 24th, marked plainly so that it will receive proper publication.

¶ Please note that in spite of the unusual advantages offered through this number, because of its increased circulation and intensified interest, the advertising rates remain the same.

17 MADISON AVENUE
NEW YORK CITY

We are six years old and proud of what we have accomplished since our first birthday.

We are particularly proud of this new home of Perfect Developing and Printing.

Magnificently built, elaborately equipped—it represents the best that human brains have invented, and money can buy, for moving picture production.

Efficiently operated on honor—scientifically managed—it gives you the supreme degree of film quality and absolute security.

We offer this laboratory, combined with multiple set studio, for your inspection and service.

Come and see for yourself why we are growing and how we have grown.
